VOLUME XIX, PART III.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD,

FIFTIETH CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION.

AUTHENTICATED
U.S. GOVERNMENT
INFORMATION
GPO

ing changes made by this bill in the existing law, especially in reference to the coinage. It would seem that all the small coinage of the country is intended to be recoined.

Mr. Hooper's attention was called especially to the coinage. Mr. HOLMAN also feared that all the small currency of the country was intended to be recoined, which would be a costly operation.

Mr. HOOPER, of Massachusetts. This bill makes no changes in the existing law in that regard. It does not require the recoinage of the small coins. On the contrary, I understand that the Secretary of the Treasury proposes to issue an order to stop the coinage of all the minor coins, as there is now a great abundance of them in the country. The salaries are not increased. They remain as they were.

That was satisfactory, and the bill, which was believed to be a substitute with all the objectionable features as to coinage and changes stricken out, was allowed to pass almost unanimously.

The record flatly contradicts Mr. SHERMAN'S assertion that the Hooper substitute, which passed, was ever discussed or considered, and proves my assertion that it was passed without members knowing what it contained. I might add that they were deceived in regard to its provisions.

On the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill the vote was 110 yeas to 13 nays. Not a word was said about striking down the silver dollar. Now, is it true that the bill finally passed, as stated the other day by the Senator from Ohio, because silver was worth 3½ per cent. more than gold, and therefore the silver dollar was sought to be reduced from 412½ grains to 383 grains? I have stated how the bill was passed, and nine-tenths of the members then in the House will prove what I say is true. Of course, the provision striking down the silver dollar and reducing its legal-tender quality was in it, but the members of the House, except a favored few, were kept in ignorance of the fact.

The bill went to the Senate, reaching there on the day of final adjournment for the session. I have the bill in my hand as it finally passed in conference. I received it this morning from the file clerk, together with the report of the committee of conference, with all the changes made after it reached the Senate, with marks showing what the conference agreed to. I do not care to read details. It would take too long. All the provisions of the House bill in regard to reducing the value of the silver dollar, because, as the Senator said, the old silver coin was worth 3 per cent. more than gold, which was the pretense on which he said they were acting, were stricken out, the old dollar was dropped, and a trade-dollar of 420 grains substituted.

Mr. SHERMAN. I will ask the Senator from Kentucky now to read in his speech the section of the bill in regard to coinage as it came from the House of Representatives, and then as it was proposed in the Senate. He has before him now the document which shows the proposition of the House of Representatives as it came to us. Let that be printed and then let the proposition of the Senator be printed side by side.

Mr. BECK. Here they are, sections 12, 14, and 15.

Mr. SHERMAN. I hope the Senator will have that done.

Mr. BECK. I will. With the consent of the Senate, I will have that done.

Mr. SHERMAN. Let them be read.

They are as follows:

The proposition in the House bill was:

"That the silver coins of the United States shall be a dollar, a half-dollar or fifty-cent piece, a quarter-dollar or twenty-five-cent piece, and a dime or ten-cent piece; and the weight of the dollar shall be 384 grains; the half-dollar, quarter-dollar, and the dime shall be, respectively, one-half, one-quarter, and one-tenth of the weight of said dollar; which coins shall be a legal tender, at their denominational value, for any amount not exceeding $5 in any one payment."

The Senate substitute, which was adopted, reads:

That the silver coins of the United States shall be a trade-dollar, a half-dollar or fifty-cent piece, a quarter-dollar or twenty-five-cent piece, a dime or ten-cent piece; and the weight of the trade-dollar shall be 420 grains troy, the weight of the half-dollar shall be 12½ grams; the quarter-dollar and the dime shall be, respectively, one-half and one-fifth of the weight of said half-dollar; and said coins shall be legal tender, at their nominal value, for any amount not exceeding $5 in any one payment.

Then follows—

SEC. 18. And be it further enacted, That no coins, either of gold, silver, or minor coinage, shall hereafter be issued from the mint other than those of the denominations, standards, and weights herein set forth.

Mr. BECK. The final change was made from 383 grains, as the House bill proposed, to a trade dollar of 420 grains, which was 7½ grains more valuable than the original standard silver dollar, whose legal-tender quality they were so eager to destroy.

Mr. SHERMAN. In other words, the dollar, not the dollar of the fathers, not the dollar of 412½ grains, but the token dollar of 385 grains, was provided for in the House bill.

Mr. BECK. Provided for by Mr. Hooper and one or two other men who denied that they were providing for it. The House never knew anything about it. Mr. Blaine proved that; Mr. KELLEY has shown that; Mr. Garfield, over and over again, proved that; and the RECORD shows that he was present in the House and taking part in the proceedings when it was done. That provision was inserted reducing the silver dollar from 412½ to 383 grains by a few men who denied that they were doing it. That is what I contend, and I think I have proved it. Of course they got it in, else the scheme would have failed.

Mr. SHERMAN. But what I wish is to have the proposition of the House printed, and then side by side the proposition of the Senate, which lay upon our table more than two months, and has been read over and over again.

Mr. BECK. What I complain of, and what I think I have proved, is that the House never knew what was in that bill. The bill was offered as a substitute for all former bills, and it was vouched for by Mr. Hooper, who presented it, that it had nothing to do with coinage. It was upon the faith of that statement the House allowed it to pass, and the House was deceived.

The Senate amendment is a curious commentary on what the Senator from Ohio the other day said about the old silver dollar being deliberately demonetized because it was more valuable than gold. When the bill came into his hands, as chairman of the committee he struck out the provision which the House bill contained reducing the dollar because of its overvaluation; he left no such dollar in the bill, but inserted another dollar altogether; one of 420 grains, or 7½ grains more silver than the original 412½ grains, which he said was worth 3½ per cent. more than gold; and the bill was sent back to the House, and, so far as I can find by searching the RECORD, the House was never told of the change. What occurred when it got back to the House? It was sent at once to a committee of conference. I turn to the RECORD again, part 2, third session Forty-second Congress, page 1189, under the heading "Mint laws:"

Mr. HOOPER, of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purpose of submitting a report of a committee of conference, which I ask the Clerk to read.

That was this report, which no man could by reading tell what it meant unless he had the bill carefully before him.

Signed by the conferees.

The report was adopted.

Mr. HOOPER, of Massachusetts, moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

That is all the House ever did know. The House was never told, so far as the RECORD shows, that I can find, that the Senate had changed the bill from a bill reducing the value of a silver doller to a bill creating a new dollar altogether, one of 420 grains instead of 383 grains.

When it came to the Senate the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] had charge of it, and it is headed again "Mint laws."

Mr. SHERMAN submitted the following report.

The report was concurred in, with not one word said about it, so that neither House had any opportunity, so far as these reports show, to know what they were doing.

I need not waste time in regard to what took place when the House bill reached the Senate. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] has shown very fully what took place there. If the Senator from Ohio is content with that statement I am. Mr. Casserly, of California, was in the Senate and other able and distinguished representatives of silver-producing States. Mr. Corbett, of Oregon, and others took part in the debate. Will any sane man believe that they deliberately consented ta strike down silver coinage? Mr. SHERMAN says they all did. I do not believe him. When the House bill was brought up by Mr. SHERMAN the RECORD shows that he used this language:

Mr. SHERMAN. I rise for the purpose of moving that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the Mint bill. I will state that this bill will not probably consume any more time than the time consumed in reading it. It passed the Senate two years ago after full debate. It was taken up again in the House during the present Congress, and passed there. It is a matter of vital interest to the Government, and I am informed by officers of the Government it is important it should pass promptly. The amendments reported by the Committee on Finance present the points of difference between the two Houses, and they can go to a committee of conference without having a controversy here in the Senate about them.

Again he said:

If the Senator will allow me, he will see that the preceding section provides for coin which is exactly interchangeable with the English shilling and the five-franc piece of France; that is, a five-franc piece of France will be the exact equivalent of a dollar of the United States in our silver coinage.

That was stricken out, and there was no such thing left in the bill.

And in order to show this wherever our silver coin shall float—and we are providing that it shall float all over the world—we propose to stamp upon it, instead of our eagle, which foreigners may not understand, and which they may not distinguish from a buzzard, or some other bird, the intrinsic fineness and weight of the coin. In this practical utilitarian age the officers of the Mint seemed to think it would be better to do that than to put the eagle on our silver coins. I must confess I do not think it is very important, but I think the Senator ought to be willing to defer in these matters to the practical knowledge of the officers who have charge of this branch of the Government service. I will say that Mr. Linderman, whom the Senator must know, has suggested this as being a convenient mode of promoting international coinage.

Did not every word of that indicate the continuance of silver coinage with full legal-tender quality as it had always had?

International coinage in a trade-dollar, with a legal-tender quality of only $5, and even that poor quality was stricken out in 1875, so as to make it simply merchandise. That was the coin the Senator from Ohio said was to float, and they were providing it should float all over the world, wherever our flag floated, and that it should be international coinage equivalent to the coins of other nations. Little wonder the Senator from Nevada said to him, "Whatever may be your construction of the meaning now, the words used then induced me to vote with you, because you made me believe that you were sending out a bona fide silver dollar as good as any in the world." The Senate so believed. The debate showed that Mr. Casserly announced that Nevada alone was then producing $20,000,000 of silver, and the question was, as to whether silver owners should pay the coinage charge of half a quarter, or one-eighth per cent.; nothing was suggested anywhere that the silver dollar was to be stricken down. The Senator from Ohio was as silent as the grave on that subject.

But that was not all. To show that whenever things are not done as they ought to be the track can be followed, and it will be in the same direction, the Revised Statutes were adopted shortly afterwards. When it is said that we had coined no silver dollars, practically, up to that time, that is not the fact. We had coined in the month of January, 1873, and in the first twelve days of February, 1873, nearly two million standard silver dollars of 412½ grains, nearly one-fourth of all we ever had coined. By the way, if Senators will turn to Dr. Linderman's work on "Money and Legal-Tender," which you will find in the Library, you will see we never had coined a gold dollar from the foundation of the Government until long after the discovery of gold in California, and that we had up to 1848 about as much silver as we had gold coin of all sorts. At the time we fought the war of 1812 and the war with Mexico, and acquired Louisiana, we were upon a silver basis, if that is worth suggesting. All our acquisitions were obtained with silver coin, the Mexican dollar being the legal tender, as well as other foreign coins, most of the time. The table furnished by Dr. Linderman shows it all, and the fact is proved by his tables that we had coined nearly two million standard dollars in less than six weeks before this act of 1873 was passed.

I think I can guess the reason why the bankers of Europe were pushing the act of 1873. The Rothschilds, who held our bonds, and the great bankers of the Rhine, at Frankfort and elsewhere, were, of course, all anxious for it to pass. Mr. Hooper and the other bankers knew why. How much the Senator from Ohio was allowed to know I can not state; but Dr. Linderman showed in November, 1872, that silver was falling, and falling rapidly; it had fallen from 3 per cent. premium down to par with gold when the act was passed demonetizing it, and that it was sure to fall still more rapidly. All their bonds were payable in it while it was being stricken down in their countries. Dr. Linderman tells the whole story in a report made the fall of 1872, after the bill had passed the House. He takes credit for the trade-dollar as having been first suggested in his report. He says we discovered very soon after the bill passed the House—as early as September or October, 1872—that Germany was going to sell her silver. The House had passed the bill, recollect, in May, 1872; it came to the Senate practically in December.

Dr. Linderman in his book states what he said in the fall of 1872:

> The amount of silver bullion annually produced from the mines of the United States has been increased during the last three years, and now amounts to about $30,000,000 per annum, exclusive of the gold it contains; and a further increase in this product being quite certain, the future value of silver as compared with gold is a matter of national importance.
>
> The fluctuations in the relative value of gold and silver during the last hundred years have not been very great, but several causes are now at work, all tending to an excess of supply over demand for silver, and its consequent depreciation. Among these causes may be stated the increasing production, its demonetization by the German Empire, and continued disuse in this country, except to a limited extent, as a part of the circulating medium.
>
> It has also been demonetized by Japan, while in some other countries silver coin has been wholly or partially expelled from circulation by paper money, the effect of which will be to bring to market as bullion large amounts hitherto used as coin. The amount of silver coin in the German Empire at the date of the enactment of the recent coinage law (December, 1871), which changed the standard from silver to gold, is estimated by competent authority at $350,000,000, being equal to five years' total production of the globe.
>
> Even if silver should be adopted by Germany for subsidiary coinage, not more than $50,000,000 will be required for that purpose, which will leave $300,000,000, or about 9,000 tons, to be disposed of as bullion. A market for this immense supply of silver can only be found in such of the European states as maintain the single standard of silver or the double standard of gold and silver, and in China and the Indies.
>
> The facts above stated indicate the gradual but eventually certain adoption of the gold standard and consequent demonetization of silver by all commercial countries. Not only is the tendency to adopt gold as the sole standard and measure of value, but to use paper money redeemable in gold as the bulk of the circulating medium.

Then he proceeds to show that gold would necessarily appreciate, which he said meant the same thing as depreciation of property by reason of silver being stricken down. I may refer to his table giving the amount of silver and gold we had then coined and the relation they bore to each other in 1873, showing that the pretense that silver was demonetized because it was either not a coin that the people wanted or because it was more valuable than gold is not true. It was stricken down because the great gold brokers, foreign and domestic, saw that gold was becoming more and more valuable every day, and silver would necessarily fall because of the action of Germany. The production of gold had fallen off in this country from $66,000,000 in 1856 to $32,000,000 in 1873. Silver production had gone up from less than $14,000,000 four years before to thirty-odd million dollars in 1873. That was the real cause of its being striken down in the interest of the bondholders and the bankers and the usurers of Europe and America.

But I started to speak of the fraud—and I use the word deliberately—the fraud committed by somebody in the Revised Statutes in demonetizing the silver coin then in existence. Recollect the act of 1873 did not do that. It left whatever coin had been coined as a legal tender for all debts. It only provided for coins in the future. The fraud in the Revised Statutes had to be perpetrated to consummate the act and to destroy the existing silver money. The Revised Statutes professed to be simply a compilation of existing laws, nothing more. They so state officially on their face. General Butler presented them. This is what he said, among other things:

> I desire to premise here that your committee felt it their bounden duty not to allow, so far as they could ascertain, any change of the law. This embodies the law as it is. The temptation, of course, was very great, where a law seemed to be imperfect, to perfect it by the alteration of words or phrases or to make some change; but that temptation has, so far as I know and believe, been resisted. We have not attempted to change the law in a single word or letter so as to make a different reading or different sense. All that has been done is to strike out the obsolete parts and to condense and consolidate and bring together statutes in pari materia, so that you have here, except in so far as it is human to err, the laws of the United States under which we now live. And it will be necessary, if the bill passes Congress, that it shall pass without any one undertaking to amend the law as it stands in this revision, because once beginning to amend the revision by altering the law from what it is will lead into an interminable sea, in which we shall never find soundings and which will never find a shore. But if there be any omission of any provision of law the theory of this revision is that that shall be supplied; and to that the committee desire to call the attention of the House.

Judge Poland followed, who had charge of the bill, perhaps was chairman, and said:

> As my friend from Massachusetts has said, the committee have endeavored to have this revision a perfect reflex of the existing national statutes. We felt aware that if anything was introduced by way of change into those statutes it would be impossible that the thing should ever be carried through the House. In the multitude of matters that come before Congress for consideration, if we undertake to perfect and amend the whole body of the national statutes there is an end of any expectation that the thing would ever be carried through either House of Congress, and therefore the committee have endeavored to eliminate from this everything that savors of change in the slightest degree of the existing statutes.

So the Revised Statutes were passed; and yet, coupling that with what was done in 1873 in regard to the silver dollar, is it strange that we find in those Revised Statutes all the silver coinage of the country that was a full legal tender for every dollar of debt, public and private, demonetized and not allowed to be a legal tender for more than $5 under and by virtue of the Revised Statutes? Whoever did it committed a fraud, a palpable fraud upon the country. As I said and repeat, it required such a provision in the Revised Statutes to destroy the existing silver coinage of the country. Whoever inserted it did it in the interest of the bondholders, willfully and fraudulently. Passing from that, the Senator from Ohio, as the Senator from Kansas said in the speech from which I read, declared that the striking down of silver coinage and the substituting of the gold unit was an American idea. I deny it, as the Senator from Kansas did, as every Senator has who spoke upon this subject. I ask Senators to read the report of Mr. Hunter, from which I would like to quote, made in 1853. He there shows that silver and gold, acting side by side and treated both alike, was the American idea. Gold, and gold alone, was the idea of the Senator from Ohio, but not of any other Senator or any other leading American that I know of.

Why do I say it was his idea? Because he went to Paris in 1867. I do not know whether he wrote the letter while in Paris or not, but at an international convention to which Mr. Ruggles was the American delegate, appointed by Mr. Seward, in 1867, in making his report in regard to the question what should be the unit of value—a question never brought up before for action in the United States, so far as I know, but suggested in a convention of European nations—Mr. Ruggles reports to Mr. Seward as follows:

> It was then stated to the Emperor that an eminent American statesman—Mr. SHERMAN, Senator from Ohio, chairman of the Finance Committee of the Senate of the United States, and recently in Paris—had written an important and interesting letter, expressing his opinion that the gold dollar of the United States ought to be and readily might be reduced by Congress, in weight and value, to correspond with the gold five-franc piece of France; that the letter was now before the international committee, having the question of uniform coin under special examination, to which letter, as being one of the best interpretations of the views of the American people, the attention of the public authorities of France was respectfully invited.

Mr. SHERMAN'S letter had not then been brought to the attention of the American people, so far as I know. I think he represented only himself.

> The Emperor then closed the audience, by repeating the assurances of his gratification that the important international measure in question was likely to receive active support from the United States.
>
> The letter of Mr. SHERMAN above referred to, dated the 18th of May, 1867, originally written in English, was presented in a French translation a few days after to the international committee in full session, when it was received with unusual interest and ordered by the committee to be printed in both languages. A copy is herewith transmitted for the information of the Department of State.

Further on, when they reached an agreement on the single gold unit, Mr. Ruggles took uncommon pleasure, he said, in giving great credit to his friend, the Senator from Ohio, as being the man chiefly instrumental in bringing about that result by the letter he had written and by the influence he had exerted. Mr. Ruggles says:

> The establishment of the single standard exclusively of gold is in truth the cardinal if not the all-important feature of the plan proposed by the conference, relieving the whole subject by a single stroke of the pen from the perplexity, and indeed the impossibility, of permanently unifying the multiplicity of silver coins scattered through the various nations of Europe. It is a matter of world-wide congratulation that on this vital point the delegates from the nineteen nations represented in the conference were unanimous, not excepting France itself, so strongly wedded by the national traditions to a double standard.

Then he goes on to state the controversy they had among themselves and how they finally got together, Great Britain and Sweden standing out alone in favor of their own moneys. He adds:

On all these questions the interests of monetary unification were materially advanced by the publication at Paris of the concise but admirable letter from Hon. JOHN SHERMAN, Senator in Congress from the State of Ohio, a copy of which has been already communicated to the Department of State, but which for more convenient reference is now transmitted herewith in duplicate, with its French translation. His opinions are unmistakably expressed in the following extracts: "As the gold franc piece is now in use by over sixty millions of people of several different nationalities, and is of convenient form and size, it may well be adopted by other nations as the common standard of value, leaving to each nation to regulate the divisions of this unit in silver coin or tokens. If this is done, France will surely abandon the impossible effort of making two standards of value."

He was for the one standard and thought France could be brought into it.

Gold coins will answer all the purposes of European commerce. A common gold standard will regulate silver coinage. In England many persons of influence and different chambers are earnestly in favor of the proposed change in the coinage. The change is so slight with them that an enlightened self-interest will soon induce them to make it, especially if we make the greater change in our coinage. We can easily adjust the reduction with the public creditors in the payment or conversion of their securities, while private creditors might be authorized to recover upon the old standard.

When Mr. Ruggles's report was made Mr. SHERMAN took it up and sought to carry its recommendations through Congress, and no doubt this is one of the things that he thought attracted so much public attention. During the Fortieth Congress, June 9, 1868, Mr. SHERMAN made a report to the Senate in which he recommended a single standard exclusively of gold, and in that report used the language which the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS] quoted in the speech which he made:

The single standard of gold is an American idea, yielded reluctantly by France and other countries, where silver is the chief standard of value.

At the close of his report he said:

These reasons induce your committee to earnestly urge the adoption by the United States of the general plan of the French conference.

He attempted to show that the sole legal standard of gold was the one object most to be desired, while he insisted most urgently in regard to public debts that it was dishonest and dishonorable to require the holders to take pay in a coin less valuable than the coin of the contract. He said if we reduce the metal in our coin, as our public debt is very large, we shall have to pay our creditors $90,000,000 in addition to the face of the bonds. That was a small matter, however, though he afterwards urged, as Secretary and Senator, earnestly and repeatedly, that the silver coin of the contract should be increased and paid to the bondholders. In his report he urged the gold unit, changing ours to the French standard, and providing for payment in addition to the bondholder. I will quote his language exactly:

As to public debts, the contract of loan is the only law that ought to affect the creditor until his debt is fully discharged.

Now, pay attention to this. I expect to read this again, because the act of July 14, 1870, made all public debts payable in the gold and silver coin of the standard value of that day, and every effort of Mr. SHERMAN or anybody else to increase the weight of the silver dollar, by any additional number of grains, simply seeks to impose a tax upon the people to the extent of the increase, in violation of the contract that he regarded as so sacred, when he sought to reduce gold. Perhaps poor debtors have not the same contract rights as rich creditors, especially when bondholders are the beneficiaries.

Mr. TELLER. What is the date of that?

Mr. BECK. June 9, 1868; it is Mr. SHERMAN'S report from the Finance Committee, on the relation of the coinage of gold and silver:

Does not a different principle prevail as to public debts? As to public debts, the contract of loan is the only law that ought to affect the creditor until his debt is fully discharged.

Note that. It ought to apply to the debtor as well; he has rights in all contracts as well as the creditor, in my opinion at least.

Congress—

Says Mr. SHERMAN—

as the authorized agent of the American people, is one party to the contract, and it may no more vary the contract by subsequent acts than any other debtor may vary his contract. As to the public creditor, no legislative power stands between him and the exact performance of his contract. Public faith holds the scales between him and the United States, and the penalties for a breach of this faith are far more severe and disastrous to the nation than courts, constables, and sheriffs can be to the private debtor. These penalties are national dishonor and inability to borrow money in case of war or public distress, and the ultimate result is the sure and speedy decline of national power and prestige. When changes in our coin were made in 1834 and 1853, the United States had no public debt of any significance, and the precedents then made do not apply to the present time. Now the public debt is so large that a change of 3½ per cent. in the value of our coin is a reduction of the public debt of $90,000,000. So much of this debt as exists in the form of legal-tender notes will be received and disbursed as money, and as its value for some time will be less than the new coin, no provision need be made for it; but for so much of the debt as is payable, principal or interest, in coin of a specific weight and value, provision ought to be made for its exact discharge in that coin or its equivalent in the new. Your committee, therefore, propose an amendment to that effect.

That quotation may be useful in the further discussion of some other points made from time to time by that distinguished gentleman. His proposition met with no favor as far as the history of American legislation publicly shows. Even Mr. Morgan, of New York, who was supposed to be the representative of Wall street, in every form opposed it, and made a minority report in which he said:

A change in our national coinage so grave as that proposed by the bill should be made only after the most mature deliberation. The circulating medium is a matter that directly concerns the affairs of every-day life, affecting not only the varied, intricate, and multiform interests of the people at home to the minutest detail, but the relations of the nation with all other countries as well. The United States has a peculiar interest in such a question. It is a principal producer of the precious metals, and its geographical position, most favorable in view of impending commercial changes, renders it wise that we should be in no haste to fetter ourselves by any new international regulation based on an order of things belonging essentially to the past.

Again he says:

The movement proposed in the bill appears to be in the wrong direction. The standard value of gold coin should be increased—brought up to our own, rather than lowered.

He gives many reasons for that. Again he says:

These two streams of the precious metals, poured into the current of commerce in full volume, will produce perturbations marked and important. Other countries will be affected, but the United States will feel the effect first and more directly than any other.

The Pacific Railway will open to us the trade of China, Japan, India, and other oriental countries, of whose prepossessions we must not lose sight. For years silver, for reasons not fully understood, has been the object of unusual demand among these Asiatic nations, and now forms the almost universal medium of circulation, absorbing rapidly the silver of coinage. The enormous proportion fixed between silver and gold by France, and which we are asked to copy, is denuding that country of the former metal. Our own monetary system, though less faulty, is not suitably adjusted in this respect. The silver dollar, for instance, a favorite coin of the native Indian and distant Asiatic, has well-nigh disappeared from domestic circulation to reappear among the Eastern peoples, with whom we more than ever seek close intimacy. As they prefer this piece we would do well to increase rather than discontinue its coinage, for we must not deprive ourselves of the advantages which its agency will afford, and "it would be useless to send dollars to Asia inferior in weight and value to its well-known Spanish and Mexican prototype."

So when Mr. SHERMAN and Mr. Ruggles managed to agree in regard to the single gold unit, and when Mr. SHERMAN presented it before the American Congress, it was met by a minority report from Mr. MORGAN and then dropped, it became just and proper for the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS] to remark as he did in the speech I have just read:

In a report made to the Senate June 9, 1868, to accompany "A bill in relation to the coinage of gold and silver," Mr. Sherman, now Secretary of the Treasury, said:

"The single standard of gold is an American idea, yielded reluctantly by France and other countries where silver is the chief standard of value."

No statement emanating from authority so respectable could well be more devoid of truth. The original American idea was a single standard of silver. Gold was an innovation, and in my judgment a grave mistake. The assertion of Senator SHERMAN that the single gold standard was an "American idea" is so singularly incorrect that it seems almost like a premeditated preliminary to the fatal error of 1873.

It seems as though the only pressure for that action, so far as I know, from any of the public men of the country was from the Senator from Ohio himself. He confounds the American idea with his own and assumes that they mean the same thing. Mr. President, the truth is, and there is no use denying it, that from the beginning of the war till now the moneyed men of this country and Europe and their advocates in and out of Congress and their supporters everywhere have sought persistently to make money out of the distress of this country. They have attempted, and generally succeeded, at all hazards, by means foul and fair, lawful and unlawful, to make themselves rich at the expense of the great mass of this people. The demonetization of our silver coin was but one step in that line, a step that was in perfect accord with all the other steps that had been taken and were afterwards taken, and the fraudulent act perpetrated in the Revised Statutes, whatever may be said of the motives of men, of the openness or secrecy of the act of 1873, consummating and making possible the benefits they expected to derive from the act of 1873, was another and the decisive step in the same direction. No man will ever avow that he knew who perpetrated the fraud in the Revised Statutes.

When legal-tender notes were first circulated war was made on them by all the bankers and money-changers from the beginning. That war was kept up, and kept up persistently, and by none more persistently than by the Senator from Ohio to the very end, and, indeed, to this day. When the greenback was first issued the combinations of bankers got together and determined that the greenback should be repudiated so far as they were concerned. They all agreed that it should be good enough for everybody but them; good enough for the soldiers, the sailors, the contractors, for everybody except the men who held the money-bags of the United States. That repudiation was consummated in the Senate of the United States—no doubt in the Finance Committee of the Senate of the United States, of which the Senator from Ohio was then a distinguished member. The gold interest on bonds paid for in greenbacks at par brought the first evils upon the country and placed and kept all the interests of the people under the money kings. For fear I may be charged with making statements that I can not substantiate I will read from a speech by Hon. WILLIAM D. KELLEY, quoting Mr. Stevens, who I suppose is at least respectable authority. Mr. KELLEY in his speech at Philadelphia said, speaking of the money that was issued when the Senate inserted the coin payment of interest on the bonds.

Mr. KELLEY said:

The House refused to concur, and appointed a committee of conference, with

Mr. Stevens as its chairman. They contested the matter until further contest was in vain. I remember the grand "Old Commoner"— with his hat in his hand and his cane under his arm, talking to myself and another, when he returned to the House after the final conference, and shedding bitter tears over the result. "Yes," said he, "we have had to yield; the Senate was stubborn. We did not yield until we found that the country must be lost or the banks be gratified, and we have sought to save the country in spite of the cupidity of its wealthier citizens." The bill went through, but not until he had expressed to the House and the country his fears.

Said Mr. KELLEY—

That crime perpetrated by the Senate of the United States, or that blunder worse than a crime, has cost the American people more than all the war would have cost had the House bill been adopted as originally passed. That crime or blunder called into existence the gold room of New York; it invited from all the money centers of the world their most voracious vampires to come and fatten upon the life-blood of the American people. It converted commerce into a mere system of gambling, and made such creatures as Jay Gould and Jim Fisk possible in American history. Do I speak too severely? If I do, I will summon a voice from the grave to temper my severity. I have here the Congressional Globe, in which I find the following remarks, made February 20, 1862, by Thaddeus Stevens, chairman of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Treasury-note bill. In submitting the report he said:

"Mr. Speaker, I have a very few words to say. I approach the subject with more depression of spirits than I ever before approached any question. No personal motive or feeling influences me—I hope not, at least. I have a melancholy foreboding that we are about to consummate a cunningly-devised scheme which will carry great injury and great loss to all classes of the people throughout this Union, except one. With my colleague, I believe that no act of legislation of this Government was ever hailed with as much delight throughout the whole length and breadth of this Union, by every class of people, without any exception, as the bill which we passed and sent to the Senate. Congratulations from all classes—merchants, traders, manufacturers, mechanics, and laborers—poured in upon us from all quarters. The boards of trade from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Chicago, and Milwaukee approved its provisions and urged its passage as it was. I have a dispatch from the Chamber of Commerce of Cincinnati, sent to the Secretary of the Treasury and by him to me, urging the speedy passage of the bill as it passed the House. It is true there was a doleful sound came up from the caverns of the bullion-brokers and from the saloons of the associated banks. Their cashiers and agents were soon on the ground, and persuaded the Senate, with but little deliberation to mangle and destroy what it had cost the House months to digest, consider, and pass. They fell upon the bill in hot haste, and so disfigured and deformed it that its very father would not know it. Instead of being a beneficent and invigorating measure, it is now positively mischievous. It has all the bad qualities which its enemies charged in the original bill, and none of its benefits. It now creates money, and by its very terms declares it a depreciated currency. It makes two classes of money—one for the banks and brokers, and another for the people. It discriminates between the rights of different classes of creditors, allowing the rich capitalists to demand gold, and compelling the ordinary lender of money on individual security to receive notes which the Government had purposely discredited."

Again, in still more emphatic terms, and almost in repetition, only stronger, he repeats that it was the conspiracy between European bankers and the rich men of America, through the Finance Committee of the Senate, which brought about that condition of things. They bankrupted the country and made themselves the richest men in the world.

What followed? I need not go over that history. You all know it. The usurers of the world bought the bonds of the United States with that very depreciated currency, averaging only about 50 cents to the dollar in gold, at the time. Of course they paid the greenbacks for them at par. One gold dollar bought two in paper; the paper dollar bought bonds at par, with 6 per cent. gold interest. Thus 12 per cent. was secured, and they called that patriotism! They next had all the currency of State banks legislated out of existence by a tax, so that their currency and theirs alone, as national bankers, should circulate over the land. The principal of their bonds was made expressly payable in greenbacks. Even Mr. SHERMAN admitted that in 1868, in a celebrated letter which has been read time and again, in which he denounced them as extortioners for claiming that the bonds should be paid in coin. Of course he was right, because each note had written on its back that "this note is a legal tender at its face value for all debts, public and private, except duties of imports and interest on the public debt." Yet in the face of that, when Congress met in March, 1869, it declared, and Mr. SHERMAN led the column in the assault on greenbacks, that the greenback should not be received in payment of the principal of the bonds, although it was written upon it that it should be, and that the bonds should all be paid in coin. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] very properly said the other day that the advantages the bondholders had received from Congressional legislation had added to their value 50 per cent. before the act of 1873 was passed.

To make a long story short, the advocates of the money power followed up and sought new advantages promptly. July 14, 1870, another act was passed, in which it was agreed that their bonds should be paid in gold and silver coin of the then standard value, which is the same as the standard silver dollar of to-day and the gold dollar of to-day. They required that stipulation to be inserted in face of all the contracts, and the bonds were exempted from all taxation, State, Federal, and municipal. No tax has since been paid by any holder of them to State, county, or city, or to the United States, no matter though the bondholder might be worth millions. Perhaps the Senator from Ohio was guarding his friends in that act from his proposed change in the gold unit. Ought they not to have stopped there? Had they not received benefactions enough to have satisfied any cormorant? They had degraded for their own benefit the currency issued by the Government to carry on the war and depreciated it for their own advantage, to the ruin of all others. They had become the sole bankers of the country that could furnish currency. They had declared that their own bonds should be paid in gold and silver coin in the face of an obligation written on the greenbacks with which they had bought the bonds; and then they had their bonds exempted from all taxation, State, Federal, and municipal.

All this time the distinguished Senator from Ohio was chairman of the Committee on Finance, and every one of those acts met his cordial approval, so far as I know, even if he did write in 1868 the letter which I believe I will again reproduce for the edification of the people, in which he said they were extortionists if they demanded anything else than greenbacks.

He said to his friend:

DEAR SIR: I was pleased to receive your letter. My personal interests are the same as yours; but, like you, I do not intend to be influenced by them. My construction of the law is the result of careful examination, and I feel quite sure an impartial court would affirm it, if the case could be tried before a court. I send you my views as fully stated in a speech. Your idea is, that we propose to repudiate or violate a promise when we offer to redeem the "principal" in legal-tenders.

I think the bondholder violates his promise when he refuses to take the same kind of money he paid for the bonds. If the case is to be tested by law, I am right; if it is to be tested by Jay Cooke's advertisements, I am wrong. I hate repudiation, or anything like it, but we ought not to be deterred from doing what is right by fear of undeserved epithets.

If under the law as it stands the holders of the five-twenties can only be paid in gold, then we are repudiators if we propose to pay otherwise. If the bondholder can legally demand only the kind of money he paid, then he is a repudiator and an extortioner to demand money more valuable than he gave.

Truly yours,

JOHN SHERMAN.

But greed is never satisfied. Not content with all these extortions, they had the law of 1873 passed striking down the silver coin. Why? Because Germany had united with England in doing so after she had extorted a thousand millions from France as a war indemnity. Silver was coming into use rapidly by the increasing product of our own mines. Thus the people would be able to pay their debts and discharge the public obligations of the country with it more easily than they could with gold. But, if the money kings could strike down silver, which was one-half of the world's money, in conjunction with England and Germany, they knew this would make them the richest men in the world and impoverish everybody else. After securing the act of 1873 they changed the Revised Statutes, in the face of the solemn pledges given that there was no change in them, so as to destroy the legal-tender quality of what there was of silver coin at the time, and about $2,000,000 of standard dollars had been coined in the six weeks preceding the passage of the act of 1873. Not content with that, it was not a year until we had a scramble in the other House, when the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. DAWES] was chairman of the committee, and Black Friday came, as we remember, in New York. The greenbacks cut quite an important figure at that time. The Committee on Finance of the Senate reported against legalizing an increase of some $5,000,000 or $10,000,000. But Black Friday, as I said, came in the mean time and an increase was made by executive order. I may not give the exact figures, but the increase was from $354,000,000 to $382,000,000—some $28,000,000 added to the greenback circulation by executive action. Several bills were introduced in the House of Representatives and the question was elaborately discussed as to how much should be allowed as the maximum of that currency. Mr. DAWES moved, as the RECORD will show, that the amount should be limited to $356,000,000. Mr. Ellis H. Roberts, another member of the Committee on Finance, moved to make it $382,000,000. I, then a member of the Committee on Finance, moved to make it $400,000,000, and after a long debate in the House it was made $400,000,000.

The bill came to the Senate, and was put into the hands of the Senator from Ohio. I think the committee reported $382,000,000. It was made $400,000,000 by a majority of the Senate, and it passed the Senate at $400,000,000. It was sent to the President, and because there were some other banking privileges in it he vetoed it; but it had passed both Houses, and a few months afterwards an act was passed fixing the limit at $382,000,000, and the President approved it.

Recollect they had silver quietly stricken down during this period. The Revised Statutes had been adjusted to that end fraudulently. No man will deny that the change in the compilation of the statutes was fraudulent; I repeat that with emphasis. The act of 1873 was, as I think I have shown, secret and unknown to a large majority of the Representatives of the States and people; the change in the Revised Statutes was a fraud, purposely committed to consummate the advantages the money power had gained by the other act. There is not a man in either House who will dare appear before the American people and say that he knew at the time that the Revised Statutes were altered so as to take away the legal-tender quality from the existing silver dollar. The Senator from Ohio will not admit that he knew anything about that. That change was secretly made, so secret that even the Senator from Ohio did not know it, I assume.

Yet it was done; and after it was done and the bankers and the money-changers were having everything their own way, the next great movement in their interest was to strike down the greenbacks, destroy their legal-tender quality; indeed, destroy them altogether. The Senator from Ohio labored in season and out of season to strike down everything but national-bank notes and gold. Silver had been effectually destroyed, as they assumed by prohibiting any more coinage, and no legal tender beyond $5; even the $5 legal-tender quality was taken away from the trade-dollar; the national banks, through their currency, were sought to be made omnipotent over the land.

That was the next move of the Senator from Ohio as chairman of the Finance Committee. Recollect every national-bank note is a legal tender to you, and to me, and to every contractor, and to every soldier, and to every sailor, and for every obligation of the Government except interest on the public debt and customs dues. Their bank notes were redeemable in lawful money. The greenback was assumed to be lawful money, whether it had a legal-tender quality or not. The banks would not take their own notes in discharge of the obligations due to them by the Government; but you and I and everybody else had to take them. With gold, and gold alone, with the greenback destroyed, with silver out of the way, who could get a dollar to pay his debts with unless he went to a national bank and paid whatever premium they saw fit to ask him? Nobody. That was the next great move on the boards, and the Senator from Ohio was the leading player.

Under his management the banks were to be made masters; that was the great struggle the Senator from Ohio was making all the time. Take the act about which he and others have boasted so much, the resumption act. I hope Senators will read it carefully. You will find it in volume 18 of the Statutes at Large, page 296. The second section allows gold to be coined free of charge. That was another move. They had paid one-eighth of 1 per cent., or perhaps one-fourth of 1 per cent., before that time. This was in 1875 recollect, while silver was still demonetized. They were to have thereafter all their bullion coined free. England had, they said, done the same thing. England, of course, to carry out her policy, had done just what Mr. SHERMAN and his friends were doing here, making gold, and gold alone, the standard, and the bondholder or the holder of consols who controlled the gold, and he alone, was master of the situation. England had provided by statute that for every standard ounce of gold offered to the Bank of England the bank should pay in their own notes, which could be converted into gold in a minute, £3 17*s.* 9*d.* They had thus fixed the value for gold so that it could not fluctuate. This statute had ours coined free of charge, and in the same statute they provided that all limitations should be taken away from national-bank notes; they should issue just as many as they pleased, a thousand millions if they wanted to. Let me read:

That section 5177 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, limiting the aggregate amount of circulating notes of national banking associations, be, and is hereby, repealed; and each existing banking association may increase its circulating notes in accordance with existing law without respect to said aggregate limit; and new banking associations may be organized in accordance with existing law without respect to said aggregate limit; and the provisions of law for the withdrawal and redistribution of national bank currency among the several States and Territories are hereby repealed.

That was another of their schemes. When the original banking act was passed the provision was to divide the currency allowed, about $350,000,000, among the States according to wealth and population. Kentucky had about the same population as Massachusetts, paying more taxes, not perhaps quite as rich in previously accumulated wealth according to the census, but needing money quite as much. Yet Massachusetts was allowed about $60,000,000 of national currency and Kentucky was allowed $7,000,000.

That same year I raised the question of a legal redistribution in the Ways and Means Committee. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. DAWES] agreed that I was right. We forced a redistribution. Fifty-five million dollars was to be taken from those banks in the East which had received it in violation of law, and which Mr. Knox had favored because of their loyalty—for that seemed to be one of the things that was necessary for national banking under him—and Congress ordered a redistribution. Then came the panacea. They did not want to give up the money. They had all the bonds, they had all the circulation, they said, "Oh, no; make banking free, make the circulation without limit," and they did so in order to keep the $55,000,000 that the law the year before had ordered them to give up. When they got that done, they said that the legal-tender notes should be reduced down to $300,000,000 before resumption day, which was January 1, 1879, and after that day they were all to be destroyed.

The resumption act provides:

And to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to prepare and provide for the redemption in this act authorized or required, he is authorized to use any surplus revenues, from time to time, in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and to issue, sell, and dispose of, at not less than par, in coin, either of the descriptions of bonds of the United States described in the act of Congress approved July 14, 1870, entitled "An act to authorize the refunding of the national debt," with like qualities, privileges, and exemptions, to the extent necessary to carry this act into full effect, and to use the proceeds thereof for the purposes aforesaid.

Every greenback was to be destroyed after January, 1879, and all but $300,000,000 before that date, by the act which the Senator from Ohio had passed. He would not say so distinctly at the time, that the greenback was to be absolutely destroyed. He did not like to speak out. That was one of the things that he was very particular about, but that he did intend to destroy all the greenbacks absolutely I suppose he will hardly deny himself, although I believe he said he changed his mind afterwards. Mr. Bayard, then a Senator from Delaware, was making a speech in the Senate of the United States on the 27th of January, 1880, when the question came up whether this resumption act necessarily destroyed the greenbacks and authorized the sale of bonds at any rate of interest that the Secretary of the Treasury might see fit in order to get the money to do it with. Mr. Bayard said:

During the debate which attended the passage of the resumption act the present Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Sherman, who had charge of the bill in this body, was asked by several Senators, myself among the number, whether by the redemption of the United States notes under that act they were finally to be retired and destroyed, and he declined to give any construction whatever to the law on that point.

Mr. EDMUNDS. May I ask the Senator if in his mind there is any doubt at all as to what the construction of that act was?

Mr. BAYARD. I was unable to say what its construction was.

Mr. Bayard became quite complimentary to the Senator from Ohio, as he will observe:

I was unable to say what its construction was. I thought it was a double-faced juggle intended to catch the votes of contractionists in one direction and of inflationists in the other. I said so at the time, and I withheld my vote, for I thought it was not treating a great subject with proper respect to legislate upon it in such a way. I therefore came to no construction. I was disposed to believe that with a Secretary favoring one view it would be made a means of contraction; under the other view, which it seems has been adopted by many, it would become a means solely of inflation, because there was no limit put upon the notes to be issued by the Government to the national banks, and there was no security that the Treasury notes retired nominally in the course of redemption would not be reissued again by the Treasury; and when the author of the bill—no, I will not say the author of the bill, for I have understood he was not the author of the bill, but he was the gentleman in charge of the bill—declined to say what was intended by it, and what its effect would be, I believed then that there was some snare, and that it was an improper way of dealing with the subject, and hence the measure was not fit really to be before the legislative body.

Mr. EDMUNDS. My apology for interrupting my honorable friend, to all of whose very interesting and satisfactory speech I am sorry I have not been able to listen on account of an engagement elsewhere, is that I thought it right it should appear in that connection that I voted for the act of 1875, because, on a careful examination, it was to my mind perfectly clear, no matter what the present Secretary of the Treasury chose to think about it or chose not to say about it, but on the bill itself that I was voting for, it was perfectly clear that the redemption that that act provided for, both before the 1st of January, 1879, and afterward, was a redemption which took out in point of law from existence all the United States notes that should come in in the methods provided by that act. And I am inclined to think that if my honorable friend would now examine the statute he would not have any doubt upon it at all.

Therefore I am justified in assuming that to be the object and intent of the resumption act. They had destroyed silver, and they now passed an act to destroy the legal tender. Everything was working as they desired, when the representatives of the States and people began to realize what was going on, and they stepped in and prevented these things from being done, first by restoring silver as a legal tender, and by the act of 1878, forbidding the reduction of the greenbacks below $346,000,000. Then the struggle began to take away their legal-tender quality; that was the next best thing for the bankers. Recollect, and I want Senators to examine for themselves, when the act rechartering the banks was passed all their notes were made redeemable in lawful money, not in legal-tender money. The word "legal tender" was never inserted once; it was kept out on purpose, so that the legal-tender quality should be striken down from these very notes and yet be of sufficient quality to redeem the national-bank circulation.

In view of what I read in regard to our solemn obligation to our public creditors in the report made by the Senator from Ohio, as to the public debt being such a sacred public obligation that the coin in which it was payable could not be changed, I wish to call attention to what he was told by the law officers of the Government when he insisted that the bonds should be paid in gold and in gold alone. He asked for an opinion from the then Attorney-General of the United States upon that subject, and he received it. April 27, 1877, Mr. SHERMAN wrote the following letter, which I have read before, asking Mr. Devens whether or not the bonds he was about to issue could be made payable in gold and gold alone, which he thought for many reasons might be desired:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., April 21, 1877.

SIR: I beg leave to call your attention to, and ask your opinion upon, the following questions growing out of the refunding act of July 14, 1870, to wit:

Can I stipulate in the body of the 4 per cent. bonds about to be issued that they shall be redeemable in coin of the present standard value; that is, the standard value at the date of their issue, or must it be the date of the law?

I submit a statement prepared by Hon. H. F. French, Assistant Secretary, having reference to the laws.

It may become important to the public interests to make the new bonds payable in coin of the present standard; that is, gold coin. Some doubts have been expressed upon whether previous bonds issued under acts passed prior to 1873 are not legally payable in silver coin. This question may become important, as any doubt upon the legal terms of a public security affects its value.

Very respectfully,

JOHN SHERMAN, Secretary.

Hon. CHARLES DEVENS,
Attorney-General.

Mr. Devens told him officially on the 26th of April, 1877, in answer to his question, that he regarded it as his bounden duty to recognize the fact that all obligations were payable in the coin of July 14, 1870, silver as well as gold, which every lawyer has recognized since, although it may be Jay Cooke's pronunciamientos and declarations have been paraded here once or twice and all sorts of sophistry flung in to make a show of equitable doubt. Mr. EDMUNDS, Mr. Matthews, Mr. Thurman, everybody, as well as Mr. Devens, has declared that the bonds of the United States can all be paid fairly, honorably, justly, in the lawful money that existed July 14, 1870, of the then standard value. Mr. Devens's letter is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, Washington, April 26, 1877.

SIR: In answer to your letter of the 21st instant, requesting my opinion upon the following question growing out of the refunding act of July 14, 1870, to wit, "Can I stipulate in the body of the 4 per cent. bonds about to be issued that they shall be redeemable in coin of the present value, that is, the standard value at the date of their issue, or must it be the date of the law?" I have the honor to reply:

The act provides for the issue of bonds "redeemable in coin of the present standard value." The word "present" undoubtedly refers as a matter of date to the time when the act was passed, and not to the time when the bonds were thereafter issued. It contemplated that a long period would elapse before it would finally be carried into effect, and that changes in the coinage of the country might occur during that period.

Whatever changes in the coinage should occur, these bonds were, however, to be redeemed in coin of the standard value as it existed at the date of the act. By this provision the holder was guarded against any depreciation that might take place in the value of the coin, and the Government would not be compelled to pay the additional value should the coinage be appreciated. All the bonds issued under the act were to stand alike, no matter what was the date when such bonds were issued. Each was to be redeemable in coin which was included in the authorized coinage of the country at the date referred to, it being of the standard value as it then existed. Since the law was passed no change has taken place in the standard value of the coin. It is understood that there has been a certain change in the coinage of the country, and that silver dollars have now ceased to exist practically as coin.

It has been further provided by the statute of February 12, 1873 (Revised Statutes, sections 3585, 3586), that "the silver coins of the United States shall be a legal tender at their nominal value for any amount not exceeding $5 in any one payment."

Notwithstanding this practical change in the coinage of the country and the passage of this act in regard to legal tenders, the form of bond to be issued by you should not be changed so far as the mode in which it is to be redeemed is concerned. It was not intended that this should be varied according to the changes which might be made in the coinage, because a definite rule was given by reference to the coin of a particular date. That which will pay the bonds heretofore issued under this act will pay the bonds which you may hereafter issue.

It can not be authoritatively said that the words "payable in coin" or "payable in gold" are equivalent to the words used by the statute. Even if this leaves open for discussion the question whether bonds issued under this act are or are not redeemable in silver coin of the character and standard which existed July 14, 1870, it is not a doubt which it is in your power to remedy by the use of words in the bond other than those which this statute provides.

While I comprehend the difficulty suggested in your letter and the convenience that there might be in removing any question upon this matter, I am, therefore, of opinion that it would not be safe to issue the bonds, except as redeemable in coin of the standard value of July 14, 1870.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHAS. DEVENS, Attorney-General.

Hon. JOHN SHERMAN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Although Mr. Sherman had received that opinion from the Attorney-General, and although every bond that was issued had written upon its face that it was so payable, five months after that opinion was received by him, on the 3d day of December, 1877, that distinguished gentleman, as Secretary of the Treasury, with the opinion of the Attorney-General in his hand, wrote this to Congress:

If, therefore, the public interests demand the issue of silver dollars—a subject hereafter discussed—

This was in 1877, recollect, when he was resisting it with all his might—

it is respectfully submitted to Congress that an express exception be made requiring that gold coin alone shall be paid for principal or interest on bonds issued to public creditors since February 12, 1873, the amount of which is $592,990,700. These bonds have entered into the markets of the world. If the market value of the silver in the new coin is less than the gold dollar, a forced payment in the new coin is a repudiation of a part of this debt.

That was his opinion and recommendation; that was what he desired to act upon in the face of an opinion from the Attorney-General, in the face of the written indorsement on the back of every bond that it was payable in coin of the standard value of July 14, 1870. Yet as Secretary of the Treasury he denounced the laws of his country, as construed by the Attorney-General, when they militated against the views that he entertained in the interest of the bondholders, and called the law repudiation of a part of the public debt; and he was so anxious to get clear of the silver dollar that in 1879, in his report as Secretary of the Treasury, he demanded that there should be no more than 50,000,000 silver dollars issued at the outside, saying that beyond that they could not be maintained. This is what he said; let me read it:

In the last annual report the Secretary stated—

He began very early—

"It would seem to be the best policy for the present to limit the aggregate issue of our silver dollars, based on the ratio of 16 to 1, to such sums as can clearly be maintained at par with gold, until the price of silver in the market shall assume a definite ratio to gold, when that ratio should be adopted and our coins made to conform to it; and the Secretary respectfully recommends that he be authorized to discontinue the coinage of the silver dollar when the amount outstanding shall exceed $50,000,000."

That was in the report of 1878. I read from the report of 1879. After quoting the recommendation in his report of 1878, which I have just read, he says:

He again respectfully calls the attention of Congress to the importance of further limiting the coinage of the silver dollar.

He demanded payment in gold alone in the face, as I have said, of his own declaration demanding that we should pay $90,000,000 to the public creditors because by the change of coin he proposed in 1868 the creditor would get over 3 per cent. less value. Now, in 1878 he wanted to pay the creditor in gold, and gold alone, on the bonds that he had issued, and denounced payment in silver as repudiation because it had depreciated 10, 15, or 20 per cent. by his own bad legislation. He cared nothing for the tax-payers or their rights; his sympathies were only aroused when the money was to go into certain rich people's pockets. That is one reason why I said to the Senator from Ohio the other day that while he may be the President of these United States his conduct in regard to the act of 1873, with all his great financial ability, exercised as it has been always in the interest of the money power, will not be a record he will be proud of when he comes before the people for their votes. I am done with that matter, and think I have made my promise good. Now as to my coin-certificate bill. The silver dollar! Mr. President, war has been made upon the silver dollar ever since its recoinage was ordered in 1878. I have more than once shown how absurd and how untrue all the predictions about the silver dollar driving gold out of the country have proved, and I need not repeat my former statements.

Every Secretary of the Treasury, all the bondholders everywhere, all the men who wanted to depreciate the price of property (and they have the world over since 1873 reduced the value of all the property of the people 35 per cent. by striking down half of the world's coinage—that I will prove before I sit down—by reports made after careful investigation) predicted the dire effects of remonetizing silver. Yet I can show that when gold was abundant, coming from Australia and California from 1850 to 1873, and silver was an equal partner, the property of the world increased in value 40 per cent., while from 1873, after we struck down silver and put all the money of the country and power over the property and products of the country into the hands of a few men, property has gone down 35 per cent. by this reverse action; yet those men will tell you that we should stop silver coinage, because that is the way to force the European nations to agree to use it. "Do not coin any more," they say, and you will ultimately put up the value of silver. What keeps it at even the point where it is? Simply American coinage; simply its scanty use by this great leading country in spite of the combinations of Europe, in spite of the efforts made here in 1873, and maintained even now. The people rose in their might and overrode the veto dictated by the able Secretary of the Treasury at the time President Hayes vetoed the bill of 1878. The then Secretary of the Treasury, now Senator from Ohio, was no doubt the inspiring cause of that veto of Mr. Hayes; but the American people had found out what had been done. Their representatives promptly passed the bill for recoinage overwhelmingly over the veto, and the bondholders commenced clamoring from that day on that we ought to stop it.

Those who urge this course say they are the friends of silver. What does England want us to do? Stop coining silver, of course. What does Germany want us to do? Of course they want us to stop coining silver. We are the great silver-producers of the world; the moment we stop our silver coinage down silver goes; that is what England wants for India; that is what they all want for their own colonies. That is what they want us to do, and we are told that will make them, after we break down our silver coinage and all our silver industries, return to silver coinage. Who ever heard of an army surrendering to the enemy on the battle-field at discretion as the best means of gaining a victory? What kind of a friend would you regard him who advised such a course? That is what they want; all the advocates of gold, at home and abroad, advise us to do nothing more and nothing less than surrender at discretion. Advice of that sort is simply humbug, or the baldest hypocrisy. A few plain facts upset all their speculations and gloomy predictions. Here they are:

When the act of 1873 was passed there were only $135,000,000 of gold in the United States. When the act of February 28, 1878, was passed there were $213,000,000. This is from the official statements of the Secretary of the Treasury. On the 1st of July last, at the close of the last fiscal year, we had $654,520,000 of gold; we had only coined $266,000,000 of silver, all told, since 1878.

The amount of gold that was added to our stock was $175,000,000 more of gold since 1878 than we have coined of silver since 1878. And yet we were told by the honorable Senator from Ohio, when Secretary of the Treasury, and it has been dinned into our ears ever since by all the doctrinaires that Gresham's law would make gold take wings and fly to more favored climes; that we would be on a silver basis every six months for the last eight years, and loss of credit at home and abroad would involve widespread ruin and national dishonor. I stand on the facts to disprove all their speculations; one fact is worth a thousand theories. One hundred and seventy-five million more of gold dollars have come to this country since we began to coin silver than we have coined of silver dollars, and in the year just closed the official report of the Director of the Mint shows that the surplus gold imported over gold exported was thirty-three and one-half millions.

The report further shows that the average annual product of gold in this country has been less than $33,000,000 for the last ten years, and that nearly $13,000,000 are used in the arts, in making watches, and the ten thousand things which it goes into leaving only $20,000,000 per annum, or $200,000,000 for the decade for use as coin, so that we have drawn from foreign countries under this system of silver coinage over $200,000,000 of gold in excess of all produced in this country. Does that look as though we are being ruined by silver or by Gresham's law? What else have we done? We have paid off every bond of the United States that can be paid. Since Cleveland's administration began we have reduced the national debt over $250,000,000—I think nearly $300,000,000, but certainly over $250,000,000. We have paid off $194,000,000 of 3 per cent. bonds. We have bought $27,000,000 or $28,000,000 of fours and four-and-a-halfs, besides other things, until now there is over $250,000,000 paid, and we have a surplus of over $300,000,000 on hand; one of the last official reports shows the net gold in the Treasury to be: gold, $202,000,000, supplemented by $44,500,000 in silver and $60,000,000 more of our money is deposited with the national banks to keep the money which the people have paid in needless taxes from being locked up in the Treasury.

Think of it! Over two hundred and fifty millions of debt have been paid off, over three hundred millions of surplus are on hand, two hundred and odd millions of gold, forty-four millions in silver, and sixty millions loaned out, and yet a struggle is being made every day to make the country believe that we are on the verge of ruin! We have only succeeded in keeping the bankers, and bondholders, and their representatives here from ruining the country. I have a paper in my hand showing that with all the pretense of England, of Germany, and of France, there is to-day more silver by twenty-five millions of dollars in the continental banks than they have gold. Here is a table showing what was in the Bank of France on the 9th of February, 1888, the banks of Austria, the banks of Germany, and the silver exceeds the gold in their banks alone, saying nothing of what is in the hands of the people, over £5,000,000 or $25,000,000. The table is as follows:

Table indicating the amount of bullion in the principal European banks February 9, 1888.

Banks of—	Gold.	Silver.	Total.
England	£21,629,758	.....	£21,629,758
France	44,359,768	£47,600,696	91,951,464
Germany	21,514,820	19,079,180	40,594,000
Austria-Hungary	6,910,000	14,578,000	21,488,000
Netherlands	4,300,000	8,200,000	12,500,000
National Belgium	2,783,000	1,392,000	4,175,000
National Italy	6,983,000	1,118,000	8,101,000
Total this week	108,471,346	91,967,876	200,439,222
Total previous week	107,410,104	91,541,213	198,951,317

Mr. President, I repeat that the bill which I introduced, and which was voted for by five out of the eleven members of the Finance Committee, to issue coin certificates instead of gold and silver certificates, is the first great step for this Congress to take in order to place the two metals in proper relation. Why should we have a silver certificate and a gold certificate except that the leading bankers of the country do not want to acknowledge that silver is equal to gold? Therefore, they want their own certificates in gold, and let others who are as subsidiary to them as they claim silver is to gold take silver certificates, so that a hue and cry can be raised whenever they choose to suggest that silver is to be merely a token metal and shall not have equal rights with their gold. This country will never assume the proper relation to its own money and its own coined metals until it does away with all discrimination between them. The national banks are forced to admit that they are failures now in furnishing currency for the use of the people. The country knows it. The whole system was wrong in principle from the beginning, and was gotten up for the purpose of making money for a few rich men. It worked well for a time in the way of safe and uniform circulation, but it never was run in the interest of the country.

The Senator from Alabama and the Senator from Texas will recollect—as they took active part in 1882 when we were rechartering those banks—that we by law forbade them from entering into any combination to discountenance or boycott silver certificates; we inserted a stringent provision in the law; yet they defied us, they formed alliances in defiance of us, and our own creatures, our fiscal agents, the national banking organizations, would not take silver or silver certificates over their counters, so that silver could not get into their clearing houses in any form. They overcertified checks to suit themselves, and laughed at us for thinking we could control them. Now they have contracted their currency about one hundred and sixty million in the last four years in the face of the growing wants of the country for more. When we have built 11,000 miles of railroad in the year just closed, when we needed $160,000,000 more of circulation than we did four years ago, they contracted $160,000,000 of theirs. Their excuse may be good, but what good does the excuse do the country. They say they did it because we required them to surrender the bonds which were the basis of their circulation; of course we did; we had to do so or allow the money to be locked up in the Treasury. Every 3 per cent. bond has been paid; twenty-seven or twenty-eight million of the fours and four-and-a-halfs have been paid; and they say they can not afford to pay the premium now asked for other bonds and take out new circulation.

I hold in my hand a table showing what they had in November, 1883, what they had in February, 1888, which shows that the bonds to secure circulation were reduced from $362,000,000 to $182,000,000, and there are $102,000,000 of greenbacks now locked up in the Treasury in order to guard these outstanding notes on which the bonds have been withdrawn.

The Secretary of the Treasury has been compelled to put in the hands of national banks over $60,000,000 for nothing, which is being loaned at interest to those from whom it was taken in order to keep the money from being locked up in the Treasury. In view of these facts I ask Senators what would have been the condition of this country if we had been left to the tender mercies and the policy of the Senator from Ohio and of the national bankers.

If the advice of men like the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] and his allies had been followed, and no resources to furnish currency had existed outside of the national bankers when they reduced their circulation one hundred and sixty million in the last four years, paying no attention to the wants of the people, I ask whether we would not have been bankrupt to-day? The despised silver dollar and the certificates based thereon has saved the country from ruin. When we treat silver and gold as equals before the law, as they should be treated, all will be well. The restoration of the legal-tender quality to the silver dollar was all there ever was of resumption, everything else was false pretense. Why should we be told now in the face of the movements of the world that we shall not put the two metals and the paper based on them on an equality? I have never believed that silver money has had fair play, but at the same time I have never believed that it ever had an enemy that has persistently done it as much harm as the distinguished Senator from Ohio. He has worked to degrade it from the time Mr. Ruggles made his report to Mr. Seward, and from the time that he sought to establish gold as the sole unit in 1868; from the time that he denounced all payments to bondholders except in gold as repudiation; from the persistent efforts he made everywhere to destroy all legal tender but gold. I do not say they were not honest efforts.

I have said often and I believe that he is, if not the ablest, one of the very ablest men whom I have ever seen in public life; and it is because of his great ability, differing as I do with him, that I regard his financial policy as dangerous, yes, ruinous to the best interests of the people of this country. I have made no charge against him of corruption or of anything wrong. I differ from him in policy and I oppose his measures, in defense of the best interests of the masses of the people as I understand them. I have no doubt that his great abilities have a powerful influence over masses of men in high places in this country, as they had in Paris when the gold unit was first sought to be established, and his known power aids strongly in keeping up and in giving encouragement to the movement that is now going on in Europe by the royal commission and otherwise to perpetuate the power of gold.

I have no doubt the present President of the United States, who had no means of knowing half as much about financial matters at home or abroad as the Senator from Ohio did, or as much as many people who have been in public life for a long while knew in regard to public matters, was alarmed when he came into the high position of Chief Magistrate of the Republic by the clamor that had been kept up through every administration and through every Secretary of the Treasury against silver, and that leading men of both parties in New York City endeavored to persuade him, and did convince him before he came here, that unless he did something promptly to stop the coinage of silver ruin would speedily follow. I have no doubt the President was alarmed; and I know that when he came here first he thought the advice so ably advanced by the Senator from Ohio and other Secretaries of the Treasury during former administrations was good. I made a speech at the first session under our Administration which gave positive offense to some distinguished gentlemen in New York and elsewhere. They regarded it as impertinence for an outside Western Senator to assume to dictate to Wall street. They thought it wonderful that any one should assume to know anything that they did not want to know. My speech was answered by many able men, and Mr. Horace White, of New York, was one of them. He admitted substantially that efforts were made to create a panic. This is what he said in a review he made of my speech. The same ideas were presented by Mr. Hewitt in a speech in the House of Representatives. I will read what Mr. Hewitt said first:

I have reason to know when the present Administration came into power its first and chiefest concern was to avoid the danger which had been predicted by the Republican Secretary in his official statement and in his private communications. The amount of gold in the Treasury on the 4th of March, 1885, was $126,000,000. This was a much smaller sum than had usually been held in the Treasury in gold since the redemption of specie payment. It was steadily running down. The public confidence was gone. The hoarding of gold had begun—not by the mass of the people, not in stockings, not in secret hiding-places, but by the masters of finance, the men whose business it is to handle millions and to prevent deterioration; they began to prepare for the hour of danger and the collapse which they thought was impending.

I know three of the greatest institutions in the city of New York—I shall not name them, lest it might possibly bring down upon them the condemnation of those who are prejudiced against banks—but I know three institutions in the city of New York which had accumulated more than $25,000,000 of gold as a preparation for the collapse they thought was coming.

Mr. Horace White, in reviewing my speech, said:

A sort of panic ensued in the money market, and it came to my knowledge that Governor Tilden was one of a considerable number of persons who, without any concert of action, had bought large amounts of sterling exchange in order to protect themselves against loss in case silver should become our monetary standard. Sterling exchange means gold in London. Why was Governor Tilden buying sterling exchange? Because, happening to have on hand a certain number of dollars worth 100 cents each in gold, and apprehending that if left in bank they would presently be worth only 90 or 80, or perhaps 75 cents each, he took the precaution to insure that they should continue to be worth 100 cents. He had only to write a few lines to his banker to insure this result. This was a typical case of the domineering "organizations of wealth" that Mr. BECK has conjured up.

Little wonder the President, then comparatively a new man in national politics, was staggered. These were the men, these were the organizations fortified in their assumption by all the predictions of the Senator from Ohio and other great leaders of both parties, that silver and silver alone would become our currency if we did not stop coining it, at once they urged it when we had less than $100,000,000; now, in the face of their failure the result of the efforts they made and combined in making is still to prevent the people of this country from recognizing gold and silver both as part of the money of the country. They have at last to admit that the national banks are a failure. They are no longer of any value as the fiscal agents of the people. Still they are here keeping up their hostility, and they meet as usual in convention denouncing silver, and demanding that it be demonetized as loudly as if they were important factors in supplying currency to the country. The national boards of trade that meet here in Washington unite with them in denouncing silver, and even now insist that it shall be demonetized, just as earnestly as if national-bank notes were being issued fully up to the wants of the people. The banks have bills before Congress now asking us to give them the right to increase the issue of their currency from 90 up to 100 or par on their bonds, as though they were going to be of any use to the country in furnishing the currency of the people any longer.

They are simply asking us to make their bonds move valuable so that we will have to pay them that much more premium when we buy them, as we now must do, in open market. That is the only use their bonds now are to them, except for the present, till we reduce taxation, they can deposit them and get dollar for dollar of circulation already existing which belongs to the people and loan it to the tax-payers who furnished it at 6, 8, or 10 per cent. interest. That condition of things, the President says in his message, is indefensible, and ought promptly to be remedied by Congress. He was obliged to resort to it as the best he could do under the circumstances. Turning for a moment to Mr. Atkinson's report, I have only to say that all the agents who go to Europe go there, not to help us, as far as I am able to observe, but to give aid and comfort to the men who are seeking to break us down. I have great respect for Mr. Edward Atkinson as a gentleman, a man of learning and of high integrity and ability. Mr. Edward Atkinson has made a report which has been laid on our tables in which he does not even pretend to notice the fact that a great committee under Lord Iddesleigh have looked into the question of the demonetization of silver, and that they have reported evidence showing that the depression of the world's business, the depreciation of property, and the prostration of commerce grow out of what the witnesses call the great conspiracy of 1873 between England, Germany, and the United States. Lord Iddesleigh was then a member of Parliament. I have the report.

There is no indication—

Says Mr. Atkinson—

that the subject of bimetallism has received any intelligent or serious consideration outside of a small circle in each country named, as a probable or possible remedy for the existing causes of alleged depression in trade.

When he said that he had before him the report of a commission which took volumes of testimony. It was perhaps the ablest committee that ever was raised in England. Its report was exhaustive upon all branches of business. That commission, which Mr. Atkinson does not deign to notice, made a report June 18, 1886, addressed to the Queen, saying, among other things:

In recent years the purchasing power of gold has increased, or, in other words, the prices of commodities in general, as measured by a gold standard, have fallen; and this appreciation of gold, taken in combination with other circumstances, has disturbed the relations between the two precious metals. An inconvenient depreciation of silver, as measured in gold, has for some time prevailed, and is still proceeding.

Without going into minute detail, we may point out that these changes result from a twofold set of causes. Not only has the supply of gold diminished, but the demand for it has increased. That is to say, the actual production of gold from the mines has declined, while the demand for it has been largely increased by its substitution for silver in the coinages of Germany and other countries; at the same time the supply of silver has been increased both by the somewhat larger produce of the mines and by the demonetized silver thrown on the market by Germany and Holland.

It seems unnecessary at this moment to refer in detail to the other changes in the monetary system of the world, such as the altered policy of the Latin Union, the resumption of cash payments on a gold basis by nations which had suspended them, and the increased absorption of gold in India. Questions may also arise as to the possibility of other circumstances having occurred which have affected the value of precious metals, such as, for example, any addition to or diminution of the quantities used for other than monetary purposes. All these subjects should have their proper weight given to them in the fuller and special inquiry which we recommend should be instituted.

Neither do we propose to enter upon the very important subject of the effect which the fluctuations in the value of the precious metals have upon the relations between the home and Indian governments in their large monetary transactions. That India has to receive her revenue in silver and to make her payments for a large portion of the interest on her debt, for the articles which she purchases, or for the services which she commands, in gold, and that a fall in the value of silver seriously disturbs her budget, is obvious and is not unnaturally disquieting. But it does not appear to us to be directly within the limits of our inquiry, though indirectly it may have a bearing on the trade of India, and we may have occasion to recur to it.

We have not thought it desirable to take any oral evidence specially directed to this question; but we append a series of questions which we circulated among a limited number of gentlemen, who, either from their practical experience or from their researches in the subject, appeared likely to be able to afford useful information or to express opinions of value. Many of those to whom we applied have been unable from various causes to draw up answers to the questions. We annex those which we have received, and we venture to think that they will afford valuable material for prosecuting further inquiry into the subject.

We are strongly of opinion that the question deserves early and separate examination from other points of view than that of our commission, and that apart from its general connection with the depression of trade it should be treated with reference to our currency as a whole, and to our monetary system at home and to its relations to our colonies, to India, and to foreign countries; and we humbly submit to Your Majesty that from the general anxiety expressed on the subject the necessity for such an inquiry is urgent, and that it would both save time and facilitate investigation if a special inquiry into the group of questions which relate to the currency were set on foot and were intrusted to such persons as might seem to Your Majesty the most proper to conduct it under an order of reference carefully prepared and drawn so as to include all branches of the subject.

All which we humbly submit for your Majesty's gracious consideration.

IDDESLEIGH.	W. H. HOULDSWORTH.
DUNRAVEN.	W. L. JACKSON.
G. SCLATER BOOTH.	GEO. A. JAMIESON.
JOHN AIRD.	N. LUBBOCK.
JAMES J. ALLPORT.	P. ALBERT MUNTZ.
THOS. BIRTWISTLE.	R. H. I. PALGRAVE.
LIONEL L. COHEN.	CHAS. M. PALMER.
JAMES P. CORRY.	WM. PEARCE.
DAVID DALE.	B. PRICE.
C. J. DRUMMOND.	SAMUEL STOREY.
W. FARRER ECROYD.	GEO. H. MURRAY, Secretary.
HENRY HUCKS GIBBS.

18TH JUNE, 1886.

Observe they call for a special committee on silver coinage. The royal commission was the result. And in the appendix which I have before me—I do not want to take time to read it; but I asked on one occasion that this testimony might be published and I borrowed from my friend, the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH], his copy, because I have cut off the testimony from my own copy which our minister to England was kind enough to send me—I have marked in red pencil so as not to swell the RECORD too much, but to give a clear idea of what all these gentlemen said that answered the questions propounded by Lord Iddesleigh's commission. Nine printed questions were put and were answered by twenty-seven leading men in England, presidents of banks, chambers of commerce, and with almost one accord they agreed that the restoration of silver to the coinage upon substantially the old basis was the only solution of the troubles now crushing the commerce of the world—there is no other—and they agree that it does not require an increase of value of metal in the silver coinage.

The restoration of it to a legal tender is all that is wanted. Some of them furnished valuable tables to show an average decline of 35 per cent. in values because of what they do not hesitate to call the great crime of the age when Germany and the United States in 1873 united with England to strike down legal-tender silver coins. They also show that up to that time as long as gold was being furnished in large amounts from Australia and California every business was prosperous and prosperity was the rule and not the exception, not only in England, France, and Germany, but in the United States, indeed all over the world, and that property values from 1850 to 1873 increased 40 per cent. in all civilized nations. There is so much of this testimony that ought to be scrutinized by Senators, of course I will not take time to read it, but I will ask leave to print what I have marked in red marks, and I shall upon some proper occasion ask the Senate to order the whole of it to be printed as a proper accompaniment to the views and opinions of Mr. Atkinson.

Mr. STEWART. Ask unanimous consent to print it.

Mr. BECK. There is too much of it to be made part of a speech [exhibiting]. I will insert as much of it as I think will illustrate and prove what I say about it.

APPENDIX C.

Questions on the subject of currency and prices, circulated by the royal commission on the depression of trade and industry.

1. Has there been, within a period which can be distinctly defined, a fall (i) in the gold prices, or (ii) in the silver prices, of commodities in countries where those metals are respectively the standards of value?
2. If so, has the fall extended uniformly to all commodities, or has it been confined to some particular class or classes of commodities?
3. Apart from any circumstances which have tended to lower the price of particular commodities, or of commodities generally, are there any circumstances which have enhanced the value of the metal used as the standard?
4. Have similar circumstances ever occurred before, and what results did they produce?
5. To what causes do you assign the fluctuations which have occurred in recent years in the ratio of the precious metals to one another?
6. Are there any indications that the development of the credit system, or other similar means of enconomizing the use of the precious metals, has tended to counteract or retard the fall of prices?
7. What circumstances, apart from an appreciation of the metal used as the standard, have tended to bring about a fall of prices generally?
8. How is trade affected by alterations (i) in the value of the metal used as the standard, and (ii) in the value of the precious metals inter se, especially in the case of trade between gold-using and silver-using countries?
9. What is the effect of the present relations of gold and silver upon the internal and external trade of India, and upon prices in that country?

LIST OF ANSWERS RECEIVED.

	Page.
I. Mr. Robert Barclay, 1 Dickinson street, Manchester	382
II. Mr. J. W. Birch, director of the Bank of England	393
III. Mr. Hammond Chubb, secretary to the Bank of England	394

Page.
IV. Mr. M. W. Collet, deputy governor of the Bank of England..... 395
V. Mr. J. P. Currie, governor of the Bank of England..... 396
VI. Mr. A. Del Mar, mining engineer, London and San Francisco..... 396
VII. Mr. Clarmont J. Daniell, Bengal civil service..... 397
VIII. Mr. Moreton Frewen, 18 Chapel street, London..... 399
IX. Mr. H. R. Grenfell, director of the Bank of England..... 402
X. Mr. S. O. Gray, chief accountant of the Bank of England..... 403
XI. Glasgow Chamber of Commerce..... 404
XII. Mr. Luke Hansard, 68 Lombard street, London..... 405
XIII. Sir Hector Hay, Throgmorton avenue, London..... 414
XIV. Mr. W. Jackson, Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China..... 415
XV. Mr. J. N. Keynes, Cambridge..... 415
XVI. Mr. D. Larnach..... 417
XVII. Mr. Edward Langley, Charlcombe, Bath..... 417
XVIII. Rt. Hon. Sir Louis Mallet, C. B., late under secretary of state for India..... 419
XIX. Professor Marshall, Cambridge..... 421
XX. Mr. F. May, chief cashier Bank of England..... 424
XXI. Mr. Samuel Montague, M. P..... 424
XXII. Professor J. Shield Nicholson,, Edinburgh..... 425
XXIII. Mr. J. H. Norman, 121 Highbury, New Park, N..... 426
XXIV. Mr. R. H. Patterson, Wingate Road, Hammersmith..... 427
XXV. Mr. Prideaux Selby, Bank of Australasia, Threadneedle street, E. C..... 427
XXVI. Mr. Samuel Smith, M. P., Delahay street, Westminster..... 428
XXVII. Mr. Paul F. Tidman, Leadenhall street, C. C..... 431

I. Mr. Robert Barclay says:

1 DICKINSON STREET, Manchester, May 5, 1886.

MY LORD: I have much pleasure in replying to the questions you have submitted on behalf of the royal commission on the repression of trade.

* * * * * * *

3. Yes. The closing of the mints of France and the Latin Union destroyed the par of value between gold and silver, which the free mintage of these metals at the fixed ratio of 15½ to 1 had maintained as long as these mints were open to silver as fully as gold, was practically international money; but since then gold has been regarded by all the European nations and also by America as the only standard of value for international purposes, and the increased work thus thrown upon it as a store of value has led to its enhancement.

* * * * * * *

Improved credit appliances facilitate the transference of value, but when property of any kind is parted with for money it is something that may, if wished, be a permanent possession that is sought, and credit as an aid to money in this sense can not be expanded, except in due proportion to the metallic money on which it is supposed to give an absolute lien, just as a banker's obligation must be in due proportion to his reserve.

7. Apart from monetary causes there have been many other things at work tending to cheapen production, say, new inventions, scientific discoveries, and new applications of chemistry, an increased use of labor-saving machines, and the higher speeding of machinery, rendered possible by the greater mathematical perfection and accuracy of its construction; but all these causes combined would not, I think, account for, perhaps, more than, say, a sixth or a fifth of the actual difference which is seen.

8. The appreciation in the value of the monetary metal, gold, upon which our English values are based, has had and can not but have, a most serious effect upon trade. It means declining prices for commodities, and when prices are continuously declining all enterprise is banished from trade. The trader must work with the barest possible stock, as everything held over becomes dear as compared with the price at which it could be replaced. The whole fabric of trade is built up on credit and time contracts, and stability of the money basis on which it rests is all-important. Transactions entered into in the hope of profit may result in loss if prices, from an appreciation of the monetary measure, fall before the transactions can be completed. An enterprise requiring the investment of capital may offer strong inducement for entering upon it; but when the question is considered, How will the property to be acquired be affected by the decline of prices going on? the risk of loss in this respect counterbalances the inducement.

* * * * * * *

The fact of India being upon a silver basis has, I think, so far been in many respects an advantage to her. Her internal trade has not suffered from the decline in prices which has been so disastrous in Europe, and the divergence of the relative value of gold and silver has had no practical effect upon the welfare of the great body of her people. The development of her external trade has also so far not been seriously impeded, rupee values of European articles laid down in India not having risen with the fall in silver, gold prices having conformed to the standard of India and not rupee prices to the gold standard of Europe. The lower European value of the rupee has also helped to stimulate her exports. On the other hand, the exchange difficulty makes it impossible for India to borrow in her own currency, and the disadvantage she suffers in this respect in very great not only as regards the carrying out of public works, but in many ways in which the outflow of British capital would both enrich India and benefit England.

III. Mr. Hammond Chubb said:

3. The circumstances which led to the enhancement of the value of the meta (gold) used as a standard were those connected with the substitution of gold for silver by Germany and other countries. To these must be added the increased use of gold in the Unifed States, a diminution in its production, and the growing requirements due to increased population.

* * * * * * *

But if, as seems to be inferred by the question, it is admitted that a fall is due to the appreciation of gold—and I entirely concur in such an opinion—it is difficult to estimate what proportion of the fall is due to that cause. If it is admitted not only that gold has appreciated, but continues to appreciate, then prices not only have fallen, but continue to fall; and but for this permanent cause of depression it is possible that the other causes put forward to account for a fall in prices would have only a limited operation and take rank amongst the ever varying incidents of a healthy competition.

* * * * * * *

But the effect upon trade is, no doubt, that of a tendency to its contraction; and capital, which would have been used to stimulate trade, will, by preference, be invested in securities yielding a fixed interest in gold, though the payment of this interest be to the disadvantage of those, chiefly governments and other public bodies, who have contracted such arrangements.

The modes in which the results of falling prices due to an appreciating standard would be manifested would vary with the trades affected, but the operation of the principle would be continuous, and not the less hurtful that it is not generally apparent.

* * * * * * *

If it be the case that produce can be grown in India at the same cost in silver as that which has long prevailed and be sold in England for gold, which, at present, commands more rupees than formerly, this would be to the advantage of India, and lead to increased exports.

And, again, if the cost of labor in India has not increased, it might lead, in certain cases where practicable, to the amount realized by such exports being used for the establishment of factories in India, rather than to the purchase here of manufactured goods. If the present relations of silver and gold were final, this condition would probably be modified in course of time as prices rose in India; but if the present ratio between the two metals widens more rapidly than prices rise in India, an advantage would continue to accrue to India, as against gold-using countries. This leaves out of view the loss by exchange incurred by the government of India through its indebtedness to England.

IV. Mr. M. W. Collet says:

3. This question I assume to mean whether the standard itself as a measure of value has altered, and, if so, what has caused the alteration? Whatever the answer, it does not admit of exact proof, but by inference it is to be assumed that the abstraction of gold in large quantities for coinage purposes by Germany, Italy, and other States and Treasury reserves in the United States, the increased application of it for ornamental and artistic purposes beyond former requirements, together with the simultaneous decrease in the annual production of this metal, must have rendered it relatively more valuable; and this view is consistent with the fall in prices noted in the answer to the first question.

* * * * * * *

VI. Mr. Alexander Del Mar says:

This fall of prices has been ascribed by some persons to "overproduction;" but apart from the consideration that if overproduction, including the precious metals, were general it could have no effect upon prices, and if not general it would rectify itself by the shifting of industries and avocations in a briefer space of time than thirteen years, it is to be remarked that previous to 1873, when the forces of production were as great and the actual production of commodities per capita of population was not less than it is now, there was no complaint or pretext of overproduction.

The true cause has been—here I speak as a practical miner and producer of gold, well acquainted with the conditions surrounding its production and use generally—the true cause has been the dwindling product of the gold placers of California and Australia, and the utter inability of quartz mining as a whole to put gold on the markets of the world at the lower equivalent, in commodities and services, at which it was previously put by the placer mining. This dwindling product of gold, suddenly and enormously aggravated by the demonetization of silver in Germany and the subsequent suspension of free coinage for silver in France, the United States, and other countries, has been, in my opinion, the true cause of the recent fall in the prices of commodities.

Your commission asks if similar circumstances ever occurred before. Yes; they occurred after a similar failure of the Roman mines, an event which precipitated the disruption of the Western Empire, and was followed by the tremendous consequences so ably depicted in Sir Archibald Alison's "Essays;" they occurred after the dismemberment of Charlemagne's empire, an event which occasioned the secret hoarding of the vast quantities of gold and silver which that monarch had captured in Saxony and Hungary, and had made into money; and they occurred again during the eighteenth century, when the plunder of America and the Orient was quite over, and the metallic product of Spanish America, although it continually increased under the cruel stimulus of the lash, yet it failed to increase fast enough to supply a rapidly-growing Europe with the materials for money. In the latter instance the evil effects of diminishing moneys manifested themselves in every country of the European world, including America; in each of them it was due to the failure of the supplies of the precious metals to keep pace with loss, wear and tear, and increasing demand to sustain prices; in nearly all of them it was followed by similar consequences; a continued and uneven fall of prices, industrial distress, social disorders, turbulence, anarchy, revolution, wars, and the dissolution of empires.

* * * * * * *

From what I have seen of gold and silver mining during the past thirty years, I should say that in the long run it probably costs as much effort to find and bring to grass-roots a pound of silver as a pound of gold, and that in all newly-opened countries gold would even be cheaper than silver, because in such countries the former is always to be found on the surface, whilst the latter is hidden away in the uncertain convolutions of volcanic rocks.

* * * * * * *

Among those who admit the entire amenability of the ratio to legislation there are some who deem it necessary at the present time to procure an international concert of action on the subject. With the highest respect for those who advocate this policy, it seems to me unnecessarily cautious and timid. It did not require a concert of the nations to break down the ratio, and it needs no concert to restore it. Either one of the four leading nations can do it, for each of these has enough gold to exchange for all the silver that will probably be offered to its mints. But foremost among nations in its large control of the precious metals stands England, whose financial investments in foreign countries and whose widespread commerce have conferred upon her the hegemony of the commercial world. She can certainly afford to permit one-fourth of her £100,000,000 of gold to flow out in exchange for £25,000,000 of silver, which is far more than the combined world will be likely to offer to her mints during several years. This sum, coined upon the same terms as gold into full legal-tender money—first, and in order to discourage counterfeiting, at the so-called market ratio of 20, and afterwards recoined at the American ratio of 16 or the French and German ratio of 15½—would not only yield England a handsome profit, but, what is far more important, it would arrest the present depression of trade and avert from impending disaster England's commercial interests in India.

VII. Mr. Claremont J. Daniell says:

The statistics of imports and exports of gold treasure which the government of India compiles show that in a little more than fifty years India has imported, and not re-exported, gold to the value of £127,000,000 sterling. To this must be added the gold treasure which India had continued to absorb during more than two thousand years, the amount of which may be inferred from historical records extending from very ancient times to the present century. I consider that I estimate the gold treasure existing in India in 1835 (when our statistics of imports and exports of treasure began to be compiled) at a low figure in putting it at £100,000,000 more.

It is sufficient to notice the extent of this absorption of gold by India since 1835 for the purposes of the question (£127,000,000).

This drain of the precious metals to India arises from peculiarities in the commercial productions of that country and in the condition and habits of the people. The country produces commodities which are to a great extent superfluous to the wants of the mass of its people, while at the same time these are readily sold to Western nations. This circumstance enables the people of India to export these commodities without any enhancement of the price of articles necessary to their own existence resulting from this exportation.

This is a condition of very great influence on the development of an export trade.

The simple habits of the people of India; immemorial custom which precludes them from the use of many commodities of secondary necessity, convenience, or luxury; and the variety of the natural productions which the soil of the country supplies, exempt the people from the necessity of importing more than a limited number of commodities of foreign manufacture for their own use. Hence it follows that the exports of Indian productions generally exceed in value the imports of goods from foreign countries, and the balance has to be paid directly or indirectly in treasure.

I say so much, by way of explaining why I believe that this drain of treasure from the West into India is likely to continue—it has been going on for the last five years at the rate of £4,700,000 a year—and also in order to show that what has been going on in India has probably (I know no reason why I should not say certainly) been going on in other parts of Asia, e. g., China, where similar climatic, industrial, and social conditions are found to exist. If this is the case, the appreciation of gold in the West must be largely due to this cause, and the proper remedy appears to me to consist in the remonetizing of gold in India, where the metal used from the most ancient times as money has, in British India at least, been discarded from that employment since 1835.

* * * * * * *

I assign the fluctuations which have occurred in recent years in the ratio of the precious metals to one another to the following causes: (1) The great yield of silver from the mines in North America between 1870 and 1880. (2) The partial disuse of silver as money by Germany, France, and the United States of America during the same period. (3) The drain of gold into India between 1870 and 1885. During those fifteen years India has withdrawn from use as money in the West a gold treasure valued at £38,250,000 and upwards, and has not used it as money herself.

Thus, while the supply of silver from the mines increased, the demand for it, owing to its exclusion from its proper field of employment as money, fell off, and measured by the gold standard its value necessarily declined. At the same time gold became appreciated both by reason of part of the supply being absorbed and rendered useless as money by India, and from the circumstance that upon the gold currencies of the West was thrown the work not only which they formerly carried on, but in addition a great part of the work which the silver currencies of the same regions had hitherto been used to transact.

The relation which one of the precious metals bears to the other as money is ascertained by the quantity of the same commodity which a given amount of each of them will suffice to buy in the same market. If gold and silver are coined and circulated without restriction of quantity in any country, and, say, an ounce of gold money will buy fifteen and one-half times as much of any commodity as an ounce of silver money, then the relation of gold to silver money in that country stands at 1 to 15½. But if, as has happened in Europe since 1870, restriction is placed on the free coinage and circulation of silver money, its real value in gold money can never be ascertained, because its purchasing power, in consequence of the restriction placed upon its use as money, is deprived of all freedom of action. Had gold and silver money been allowed to circulate freely throughout Europe and North America, and had India been using gold money since 1870, a fixation of value between gold and silver money exactly corresponding with that educed by the competitions of commerce would probably have been arrived at long since. As the case stands, the owners of silver, seeking every opportunity to sell their commodity at a profit, have been obliged to offer it for sale, sometimes at one price and sometimes at another, and the price of silver has necessarily been subject to similar fluctuations as against gold that other articles are liable to, which take their value from gold in a falling market.

* * * * * * *

The purchasing power of the standard money depends on the proportion which the quantity of it in circulation bears to the amount of the merchandise which it serves to exchange one kind with another kind.

This view of the case is not affected by the use of the credit contrivances (checks, promissory notes, etc.) with the view of minimising the employment of metallic money, because their efficiency ultimately rests upon the stock of metallic standard money in use in the country. If that stock increases while the commodities brought to market do not increase, prices will rise, and vice versa.

If the standard money of any nation or group of nations is required to do more work than it was required to do before, the effect on trade is the same as if the quantity of goods under exchange had increased while the amount of money available to effect the exchanges had remained stationary. Prices in that case would fall.

* * * * * * *

If, on the other hand, the State decides to use both kinds of money on equal terms, that is, so to regulate its currency system that the silver and gold coin in use shall always exchange at their natural value in one another, which would be the rate elicited by the competitions of commerce, the supply of coin of both kinds will exactly correspond with the requirements of commerce and always be fully sufficient for the exchanges of goods, however numerous they may be. The currency, whether of gold or silver, will always be kept at full supply, because no one will hesitate to put his gold or silver metal into circulation, under the conviction that neither can ever become undervalued and that he can in no circumstances lose by doing so.

* * * * * * *

9. The relation of value between gold and silver has altered in favor of gold by from 20 to 25 per cent. during the last fifteen years, and in India, where silver alone is used as legal-tender money, the value of silver money, as against commodities, has not depreciated to an extent at all approaching that figure. It follows that traders in gold-using countries can obtain in India, say, 20 per cent. more of the silver money of that country with a given value of gold than was possible fifteen years ago, and with it buy a correspondingly larger amount of the productions of India. This state of things provides a wide margin to cover the risks of trade and the chances of profit, and is one among other causes which accounts for the great increase in the export trade of India to gold-using countries which has occurred during the last few years.

* * * * * * *

This consideration must also not be lost sight of, that, as above stated, India has, during the last fifty years, absorbed gold treasure to the value of £127,000,000 sterling. This treasure can only have come into the country directly or indirectly as payment for the productions of India, whether sold in India or abroad; it has not gone into circulation as money, and its withdrawal from use as money has had an enormous influence in preventing that rise of prices which would have taken place in India if it had gone to swell the volume of the currency.

* * * * * * *

VIII. Mr. Moreton Frewen says:

Since 1873 (from which time Germany commenced to take great masses of gold to enable her to effect a change from a silver to a gold standard) there has been a general fall of prices, which Mulhall estimates (History of Prices, page 1) at the amount of the difference between 135 and 84. The average of prices is lower now than in 1850, at which time Newmarch remarks that prices had been falling steadily since 1809 on account of an increasing scarcity in the supply of the precious metals. "Between 1809 and 1849 prices fell in the ratio of 100 to 41." (Jevons.)

I think it is safe to say that in gold-standard countries there has been a general average decline of prices since 1874 of 35 per cent. Now, as to silver-standard countries there is a valuable chapter (16) in Fawcett's Political Economy which appears to have been written within two years of the professor's death. The select committee on Indian finance which sat in 1874 established the fact that while for eight years previous to 1867 the net annual import of silver into India was at the rate of £15,000,000 sterling, the expansion of the currency there which resulted from this importation of £120,000,000 sterling of silver, had caused a rise of all prices, which rise was estimated to be from 30 to 40 per cent. Now, since 1873, when the (gold) price of silver began to fall rapidly, there has been no such rise of prices in India as we should have naturally looked for, but, on the contrary, the Economist has been at some pains to point out, while there has been a great fall of silver in terms of gold, there has also been even a slight rise in the value of silver measured by its power to purchase Eastern commodities.

This, it seems to me, is the great interest that England has in the "silver question." For it is clear that if silver in Asia is worth at the rate of 60*d.* an ounce to buy everything Indian, it is not coming to Manchester if it can help it, where it is only worth 46*d.* To recapitulate, it is interesting to observe that prices in India between 1860 and 1870 rose rapidly without the price of silver falling below 60½*d.* the ounce, but whereas since 1873 silver has been continuously falling from 60½*d.* to 46*d.*, yet so far from silver losing its value at home, in the East it is slightly more valuable—will buy a little more wheat, cotton, or labor than before. If a man saw both sides of a balance scale go down at the same time he would hardly witness a more puzzling phenomenon.

* * * * * * *

There are a number of circumstances that have combined to enhance the value of gold; chief among these an enormous increase in demand, while pari passu a great diminution in supply. Increased demand may be classed under two heads: The increased demand in gold-standard countries, the result of increased population, and increased production of commodities; for example, the amount of gold and silver current in the United States is about £3 per head of population to measure an annual production of wealth estimated by Mr. Atkinson (Distribution of Products) at £2,000,000,000 sterling. The population of the United States is doubling every twenty-five years; hence the United States twenty-five years hence, her population and production doubled, will cæteris paribus require more currency. I will not hazard an opinion as to the amount of coin per capita needed to insure a healthy system of currency. France, however, with almost £9 per capita, showed by the rapidity of the payment of her war indemnity to Germany the benefit of a full and well distributed currency at a time of crisis.

But it is more important to draw attention to the increased area of the demand for gold.

Since 1873 Germany has taken over £80,000,000 sterling of gold.

Since 1878 the United States has taken more than £80,000,000; Italy has taken £16,000,000 (Grenfell); besides which in the last ten years India has taken £40,000,000 of gold. These extraordinary demands have averaged more than £20,000,000 a year, or more than £1,000,000 more than the entire annual output of the earth; the while also that some £12,000,000 is being annually absorbed by the arts and manufactures (Soetbeer).

No wonder that since 1877 England has lost gold from currency to the amount of £25,000,000, or about one-quarter of her entire stock. In M. de Laveley's words, "Gold, like water, if spread over a larger surface lowers in level at its original basin."

* * * * * * *

4. Is it the intention of question 4 to discover what has been the result in times past of a diminished product of the precious metals? If so, it is of interest that Alison (History of Europe) says that the fall of the Roman Empire was brought about by a violent contraction of the circulating medium, resulting from the failure of the mines in Spain and in Greece, the burden of debt was increased and the general conditions of human industry paralyzed.

The two greatest events that have occurred in the history of mankind have been directly brought about by a successive contraction and expansion of the circulating medium of society. The fall of the Roman Empire, so long ascribed in ignorance to slavery, heathenism, and moral corruption, was in reality brought about by a decline in the silver and gold mines of Spain and Greece.

* * * * * * *

And as if Providence had intended to reveal in the clearest manner the influence of this mighty agent on human affairs, the resurrection of mankind from the ruin which those causes had produced was owing to a directly opposite set of agencies being put in operation. Columbus led the way in the career of renovation; when he spread his sails across the Atlantic he bore mankind and its fortunes in his bark. * * * The annual supply of the precious metals for the use of the globe was tripled; before a century had expired the prices of every species of produce were quadrupled. The weight of debt and taxes insensibly wore off under the influence of that prodigious increase; in the renovation of industry the relations of society were changed, the weight of feudalism cast off, the rights of man established. Among the many concurring causes which conspired to bring about this mighty consummation, the most important, though hitherto the least observed, was the discovery of Mexico and Peru.

* * * * * * *

If the circulating medium of the globe had remained stationary or declining, as it was from 1815 to 1849, from the effect of South American revolution and English legislation, the necessary result must have been that it would have become altogether inadequate to the wants of man; and not only would industry have been everywhere cramped, but the price of produce would have universally and constantly fallen. Money would have every day become more valuable; all other articles measured in money less so; debt and taxes would have been constantly increasing in weight and oppression. The fate which crushed Rome in ancient, and has all but crushed Great Britain in modern times, would have been that of the whole family of mankind. All these evils have been entirely obviated, and the opposite set of blessings introduced by the opening of the great reserve treasures of nature in California and Australia. * * * Before half a century has elapsed the prices of every article will be tripled, enterprise proportionally encouraged, industry vivified, debts and taxes lessened.—Alison.

After the fall of Rome no considerable mines were discovered and prices fell steadily for a thousand years, till Columbus sailed to America. From 1539 to 1800, for near three hundred years after the discovery of America had resulted in a tenfold increase in the annual output of gold and silver, prices rose steadily; then after 1816, silver having been demonetized and specie payments resumed in England, prices steadily fell till there was a price crisis like the present, which extended and intensified just as now, till the Californian discoveries in 1849. The effect of those great discoveries did not make any very considerable impression on the great volume of the precious metals till 1854, after which year prices rose steadily and every branch of industry was stimulated.

It is evident that "demand" created by legislation—in other words, the prerogative of "legal tender"—is the great factor in determining the value of the precious metals. This is particularly true of silver, because the percentage of the annual output of silver which is absorbed in the arts is quite inconsiderable. Thus the tax paid on manufactured silver in England in 1875 (I can not lay my hands on any later returns of silver consumed in the arts) showed that the entire home manufacture was less than £200,000.

It seems that legislation can fix and keep steady the ratio of one metal to the other, provided the area of operation be sufficiently wide. But if either metal be proscribed by legislation it is certain that their ratios must fluctuate wildly.

If legislation the world over decreed to-morrow that silver should be demonetized, and should be sold as mere merchandise for what it would fetch, it might be that area railings would be made of silver! Certainly the price would fall toward 1*s.* per ounce. The value of gold also would be enormously depressed if that metal were universally demonetized.

* * * * * * *

A fall of prices is itself a contraction of credit. To take a very simple instance, suppose I bought through a broker and on credit cotton futures, or wheat, or a railroad stock at 100, I should pay up a margin of 10, the broker or his banker lending me the other 90; now, if prices fell from 100 to 95, the broker would require a further margin; in other words, owing to the fall of prices my credit with my broker is contracted, and a further demand arises for sovereigns. If, on the contrary, the price instead of falling rose to 110, the broker would allow me to buy a second hundred shares of stock, and on account of the rise in the price of the first hundred he would not require me to advance the ten sovereigns margin on the second transaction. And this illustration holds good for all kinds of credit transactions, including the credit any wholesale dealer gives to any retail dealer.

* * * * * * *

Trade may be expected to stagnate when prices are declining, but to be brisk when prices are rising. Falling prices can not fail to check industry and enterprise; if a man with £10,000 to invest believes that because values are still falling he will be able to buy a farm, a ship, or a mill twelve months hence for much less gold than at the present time, he will prefer to leave this £10,000 at his bank idle, even though the bank rate is only 1 per cent. Suppose such a one had invested at the higher prices of 1874, if he sold out now he would find that his ten thousand had shrunk to £6,500 (assuming that the average fall of prices in twelve years has been 35 per cent.). And this seems to be the present position; intending investors are waiting year after year for the fall of prices to be complete. When, on the other hand, the tendency of prices is upwards, then enterprise and investment is brisk. The investor prefers to buy a farm to-day rather than to pay the higher price that he anticipates will be asked six months hence.

* * * * * * *

Until 1873 the 1 to 15½ "par of exchange" between the nations that used gold and those that used silver had never been impaired; but in the last twelve years we have had perpetual fluctuations, and at the present moment no English merchant trading with the East has any idea when he makes a forward contract whether, owing to a further fall in the exchange rate of silver, the transaction may not involve him in heavy losses. Ask any Manchester merchant what would be the condition of his trade with his best customers, India and China, if silver suddenly fell 6*d.*, and he will tell you that half the mills in Lancashire would be closed; and yet it has lately depended upon the mere accident of foreign legislation that this did not happen; if the clamor of the Eastern cities—in other words, of the creditor community—had prevailed and silver coinage had been suspended in the United States, then the silver ounce would have fallen at least 3*d*. It is, indeed, the opinion of those most competent to judge that this suggested suspension must inevitably have been followed by the demonetization of silver in the United States, and thereafter also in France,

* * * * * * *

Hence it happens that a wheat speculator who used to buy 10 rupees with his sovereign can now buy 13, and each of the 13 buys as much wheat (say a bushel) as did each of his previous 10 rupees. In other words, the fall of silver has brought about a decline in the price of wheat represented by the difference between 13 and 10. And if, owing to legislation in Washington or Paris, silver is to be still further depressed and the rupee falls to 1*s.*, I see no reason why that rupee should at all depreciate in India, and if it does not, then the fall in wheat in Mark Lane will be represented by the difference between 20 and 10, because the sovereign will buy 20 rupees instead of as before 10. Keeping in view the fact that silver retains its value in the East, although it has by law been deprived of its value in the West, it follows that by reason of the absence of all tariff regulations in England our farmers are at the mercy of foreign monetary legislation at Washington or Berlin. If Sir James Caird can foretell what will be the price of the silver ounce in the twentieth century, he can tell approximately what will be the area of wheat cultivation in England, in Dakota, or the Punjaub. With the rupee at 1*s.* no wheat could come forward from America or Russia, and we might expect a further fall in the prices of maize and raw cotton, and it has been this consideration that has influenced recent legislation at Washington.

IX. Mr. H. R. Grenfell says:

Trade is affected by alterations in the value of the "metal used as a standard" in proportion to the indebtedness of those carrying on various trades or callings connected with production. If no one was indebted in fixed sums of the standard metal it would not matter in the long run whether the counters were red counters with a 6 marked on them or blue counters with a 1; but where indebted producers have made specific contracts to pay in nothing but red counters the relation between these counters and productions is altered, and the debtors have to pay the result of perhaps two years' labor instead of one. Agricultural producers are indebted all over the world, and have always been so since the day when Adam brought a store of apples and damsons out of Paradise to keep him alive while he dug for the next year's crop, and they are being ruined by this alteration in the amount of existing counters.

X. Mr. S. O. Gray says:

1. It would appear that during the period since 1873 there has been a fall in the price of most commodities alike, but different in degree, in countries using gold or silver or both metals as a standard of value.

* * * * * * *

3. There has been an increased demand for gold for the purposes of coinage by countries, Germany, Italy, and others, that have during the period mentioned above adopted a gold standard, and simultaneously the production of the metal has fallen off. For silver, on the other hand, the demand for the purposes of coinage in Europe and for the manufacture of plate has materially deminished, while the available supply has been increased both by a larger production of fresh metal and by the demonetization and conversion into bullion if considerable amounts of previously existing silver coin.

XI. Glasgow Chamber of Commerce, by Mr. William H. Hill, secretary, says:

3. Since 1873 about two hundred millions of gold have been required to supply Germany, Italy, and the United States with a new gold currency. This absorption of the metal occurred concurrently with its lessened production. In 1851–'52 the annual production throughout the world had risen to about thirty-six millions sterling, but it is now less than twenty millions. Assuming that ten millions are needed for the arts and manufactures, it follows that twenty years' net supply of the metal was absorbed by the two hundred millions, leaving nothing available for replenishing (repairing) the waste on a greatly enlarged currency, or for the purpose of meeting the wants of an increasing population, growing wealth, and consequent enlargement of business transactions.

4. The directors have no personal knowledge of the previous occurrence of such circumstances.

5. As respects silver, there has been an increased supply with a diminished use; as regards gold, there has been a diminished supply with an increased use. These results are due to the closure of the mints of the Latin Union for indiscriminate coinage of both metals at a fixed ratio; to the action of Germany in demonetizing her silver currency; and to the effect that the large stocks of silver held in America and Europe have on the market.

XII. Mr. Luke Hansard says:

It appears to me that "the value of the metal used as the standard" must necessarily be measured by "the prices of commodities generally." In this country the standard is gold, and the value of gold is what it will purchase in commodities generally. If a general fall of prices is admitted, it follows that there is an appreciation of the metal in which those prices are expressed. The expressions "fall in prices" and "appreciation of gold" are, in my opinion, synonymous, and it only leads to confusion of ideas in speaking of the two expressions as distinct and arising from separate causes. I have frequently heard it stated in discussions, and have read in print, that the "fall in prices" is caused "by an appreciation of gold." This appears to me an error, for the two phrases mean really one and the same thing. If you have a fall in prices you have an appreciation of gold, and if you have an appreciation of gold you have a fall in prices. In fact the two expressions are exchangeable terms for the purposes of the present subject.

XIII. Sir Hector Hay says:

The specious argument that it is for the advantage of the working classes that all their requirements should be as cheap as possible is misleading, because a universal cheapness implies that the article or commodity which gives the means of living to each class of workers is cheap also, the consequence of which must be low wages or less employment, generally the latter, as is shown by the present state of the labor market and the large number of the unemployed.

It is no benefit to a working man that all he wants is very cheap if he has no wages wherewith to purchase it, and for the community it is better that all should be employed at moderate wages than that some should receive higher wages and the rest none.

Low prices invariably bring depression of trade and lack of employment, and high prices prosperity to all classes with the exception of annuitants, who are after all but a comparatively small section of the people.

* * * * * * *

Another disastrous effect is that the Indian government, having to draw some fifteen millions per annum from India, have had to submit to an enormous loss by exchange, beginning in 1874 with about one million and increasing every year till it amounts now to nearly four millions a year. It has been said that this loss is only apparent, or, in other words, a mere matter of account, but this idea ignores the fact that this loss by exchange must be covered by increasing the amount of taxation in India, and therefore some thirty millions sterling have, during the last thirteen years, been wrung from the tax-payers more than would have been necessary had the rupee remained at its nominal value of about 1*s.* 10½*d*. Taking this into consideration it will be apparent that India has lost much more by taxation than she has gained by the low price of silver.

The whole question of the ratio between gold and silver lies in a nut-shell. In England, and practically in Europe generally, gold only is the measure of value; in the East silver is the measure. In order to enable trade between the East and West to be conducted with reasonable confidence there must be a standard of conversion, that is, a fixed ratio of gold to silver.

If this is admitted it is difficult to see how it can be denied that the most advantageous ratio would be 15½ to 1, simply for this reason, that it would cause less inconvenience than any other, for practically all the silver money existing in the world (except merely the subsidiary coins) has been coined on or close to that basis.

To adopt any other ratio would necessitate the recoinage of hundreds of millions or the circulation of the present coins at a changed valuation, whereas the restoration of the old bimetallic basis of 15½ to 1 would affect only the few millions of silver which remain at present in the shape of bars, and the future production, say eighteen to twenty millions a year.

Such a measure as this by agreement among the principal nations, most of whom are more than willing to adopt it, would most certainly restore to the trade of the world that elasticity which of late years it has entirely lost.

XIV. Mr. W. Jackson says:

Trade is affected by an appreciation of the metal used as the standard, by handicapping the producing classes to the benefit of the moneyed classes.

By rendering the trade between gold and silver using countries uncertain, and thus speculative.

The appreciation of gold in relation to silver has, in my opinion, tended to stimulate the exports of India, while the imports into India have also shown an increase, owing to the fall in prices in the gold countries. The internal trade of India has developed by the greater exports and imports, and industries have received an impetus which will probably lead to the establishment of manufactories on a large scale. Silver is, however, being imported into India in excess of the average of former years, and if this continues a rise in the prices of commodities in India seems inevitable, which must in time react prejudicially upon the export trade of India.

* * * * * * *

XV. Mr. J. N. Keynes says:

There has not, I believe, been a corresponding fall in silver prices in countries where silver is the standard of value. Still, notwithstanding the depreciation of silver, prices appear to have fallen rather than to have risen in India within the last ten or fifteen years. This points to the conclusion that the depreciation of silver is a depreciation relatively to gold only, and not relatively to commodities in general, but rather the reverse.

* * * * * * *

The point that remains to be mentioned is perhaps of greater importance than any of the preceding. Traders in a large way of business are accustomed to work to some extent with borrowed capital. Upon the sum borrowed interest has to be paid in money, and ultimately the capital itself may have to be refunded in money. It is clear that if money, measured in commodities, has an enhanced value, the burden of debts is increased, and with falling prices fixed preference charges mean diminished profits. Thus lenders gain at the expense of borrowers, and, what is pertinent to the present discussion, they gain at the expense of those who are taking an active part in trade, and upon whose individual effort the success of large enterprises frequently depends. Trade is the more depressed and demoralized because it is those who have the greatest business capacity who naturally employ, in addition to their own capital, the capital of others. Similar remarks apply to fixed charges of any kind.

* * * * * * *

The internal trade of a gold-using country is not sensibly affected by an alteration in the value of the precious metals inter se, but it is otherwise with trade between gold-using and silver-using countries. Frequent alterations in the gold price of silver obviously introduce an additional element of speculation into all dealings between such countries. If a trader in a gold-using country is selling commodities in a silver-using country, his profits depend not merely on the silver price which his goods will fetch, but also on the gold price of silver when he receives payment. Fluctuations, therefore, in the relative value of the precious metals tend by their effect on the foreign exchanges to disorganize and render uncertain the trade between countries which have respectively a gold and a silver standard. A permanent alteration, however, when once established, will only affect the nominal exchanges between the countries.

XVI. Mr. D. Larnach says:

4. I recollect perfectly that prior to the discovery of gold in 1849-'50 in California, and in 1851 in Australia, trade was depressed all over the world. Those discoveries gave a wonderful impetus to trade, which would have been much more felt in England but for the Crimean war.

XVII. Mr. Edward Langley says:

Taking wheat as perhaps the best illustration of an article of universal production and universal consumption the facts are beyond dispute. Wheat has fallen to a price in gold-using countries that renders it barely remunerative, or even unremunerative. In India the fall is estimated by Mr. Prinsep at 17 per cent.

3. The following are some of the circumstances that have enhanced the value of gold:

Reduced production, which is a natural cause; increase of population, which is also a natural cause. But the circumstance that has caused the greatest enhancement in the value of gold is one that is not natural, but has been the attempt by Germany to convert her single silver currency to that of single gold, as by so doing Germany has stimulated other nations to do likewise; such, for instance, as France; who within the last twelve months alone has increased her stock of gold by £12,000,000 (increased since this was written to £16,000,000, or, say, to £56,000,000 in all from £46,000,000 twelve months ago, more than equal to the year's production). This action of France is still proceeding in full force, and can hardly fail to have a still further serious effect on the purchasing power of gold. Then the action of the United States in resuming specie payments mainly in gold. Also of Italy of the same character, as well as the continued absorption of gold by Germany, which is clearly still in operation, notwithstanding that she has suspended all sales of silver. Then again, India is a large absorber of gold, a circumstance that can not be looked upon except with anxiety, as indicating a preference for that metal rather than for silver, her standard of value. Australia and New Zealand also produce not only less gold, but practically absorb more, largely the result of their great borrowings in England, and indications are not wanting that those countries may draw gold from England, instances of which, though isolated, have actually occurred.

Then, again, the market which exists in London for the issue of foreign loans tends to enhance the value of gold, as such issues are generally followed by an export of gold to the countries issuing such loans. * * *

Nothing can restore the profitable character of the enormous trade of England with silver-using countries but a restoration of the ratio that prevailed between 1803 and 1876, when the bimetallic law of France during all that time acted as a regulator to the mercantile machine that was working between England and her silver-using customers. Whatever the merits are that are claimed for the single gold standard, it is utterly unsuited to a manufacturing nation like England, whose existence depends very largely on the profitable trade she can carry on with nations that have a currency composed of a silver metal. This argument has been maintained by what is known as the bimetallic school, and ten years of experience only go to confirm their assertions. There is not an article that is produced in India, and that is also produced in England, the continent of Europe, and in the United States, that is not subject to a protection bonus in India in the shape of the extent of the variation of the ratio between the precious metals.

* * * * * * *

The effect of the cessation of a fixed ratio between gold and silver has been a continuance of the fall in the value of silver, measured in gold, until at the present moment a rupee, the intrinsic value of which at 5*s.* the ounce for silver is close on 1*s.* 6*d.* in gold, can now be bought at under 1*s.* 6*d.*, or a fall in its value of more than 20 per cent., and therefore at the present moment 1*s.* 6*d.* will buy in India more wheat than 2*s.* could have bought before the demonetization of silver took place, or, say, about thirteen years ago. This gives the purchaser of Indian wheat an export bonus amounting to the reduced cost of the rupee, and thus enables Indian-grown wheat to compete with English wheat under a bonus of more than 20 per cent. over and above the cost of production. This is bad enough, but the position is made worse by the appreciation of the rupee in India itself.

* * * * * * *

This, of course, secures cheap food, but at the cost of the destruction of the agricultural interests not only in England but also in Europe and the United States. This is the reason why wheat is 30*s.* per quarter, with the prospect of a lower price should silver fall lower. The same argument applies to cotton in the United States, which is now selling at less than 5*d.* a pound, a price, I under stand, which in America it can not be produced to pay.

On the other hand, the same fall in the ratio of silver to gold operates in the opposite direction against Lancashire cotton manufactures. Cotton goods may sell in India at the same prices as heretofore in rupees, but when a manufacturer proceeds to bring the proceeds of his goods back to England, in other words, so soon as he attempts to convert the rupees into gold, as he must do to complete the transaction, he is confronted by the same 20 per cent. depreciation in the price of silver as a charge against the operation. He is thus compelled either to ask a higher price, that is to say, more rupees in India, to counteract the 20 per cent. loss by the depreciation in silver, or he must reduce the cost of production in England by paying less wages and less cost for his cotton. Experience shows that he can not get higher prices for his goods in India, where this fact stimulates native manufacturers, and thus he is driven to reduce the cost of manufacture in England, and thus the reduction in the ratio of value between silver and gold falls directly on the English artisan and the American producer."

XXV. Mr. Prideaux Selby says:

In its relation to commodities, silver has changed much less than gold, as is proved by the comparative stability of prices in silver-standard countries, and by this stability has proved itself, for the time, the more reliable standard of value of the two.

The fall in prices has, I believe, been much retarded by developments of the credit system, and would be intensely accentuated by any check to credit.

From my point of view the phrases used are but different ways of expressing the same fact, "appreciation of the metal used as the standard" means simply, as shown above, "a fall of prices generally."

* * * * * * *

XXVI. Mr. Samuel Smith, M. P., says:

Speaking broadly, I believe the question to be this: Up till 1873 the gold and silver bullion produced in the world flowed into Europe and was coined equally into money and performed exactly the same functions; since 1873 silver has virtually been excluded from the mints of the great commercial nations of Europe, and the gold supply has also greatly fallen off. The necessary result is that instead of that steady replenishment of the currencies which the growing needs of commerce require there is a diminution of supply, causing contraction and a fall of prices.

The result is analogous to that which took place after the resumption of specie payments was decided on in 1816, which produced many years of falling prices and great depression and suffering among the masses of the people.

* * * * * * *

Trade is very greatly and injuriously affected by a sudden alteration in the standard of value, especially when the alteration is, as now, towards increased value.

It arises in this way: Trade is largely carried on by borrowed capital, or, in other words, by the use of credit in some shape or another; the vast banking deposits are mostly lent to traders; a very great deal of the invested capital of this country is lent upon mortgage of trading property, such as ships, factories, warehouses, etc. A prudent trader usually considers it safe to trade considerably beyond his floating capital, and to borrow, say, 50 per cent., on the security of his plant or fixed capital. Now, the constant decline of prices the last few years has virtually swept away his own portion of the capital, and only left him enough to pay the loans and mortgages; for instance, a ship or a factory built at a cost of £20,000, of which £10,000 was borrowed, is now worth only £12,000, or 40 per cent. less, and so the mortgage now represents five-sixths of the value instead of half, the trader's interest having sunk to £2,000 in place of £10,000; probably, if trade is unprofitable, he fails to pay the interest, and the mortgage is foreclosed, and the property is forced off at just sufficient to cover the loan, and he is ruined.

I have no doubt that this process exactly describes the condition of vast numbers of the traders of this country, and of other countries having a gold standard. A great portion of the commercial capital of this country has silently passed into the hands of the mortgagees and bondholders who have neither "toiled nor spun"; the discouragement this state of things produces is intense; after it has gone on for several years a kind of hopelessness oppresses the commercial community, all enterprise comes to a standstill, many works are closed, labor is thrown out of employment, and great distress is felt both among laborers and the humbler middle class; indeed, it strikes higher than this, for multitudes of people who were once prosperous traders have now become dependent on charity. I know many such myself; indeed, but a small portion of those who were prosperous ten or fifteen years ago are well off now.

* * * * * * *

It is a foolish reply to this that the aggregate wealth of the nation is not changed because it is only a transfer from one class to another; one might as well say that the craft of the pick-pocket or card-sharper is innocuous because it only transfers wealth from one pocket to another. The prosperity of the nation depends upon the just distribution of wealth and the security of industry; nothing affects it more vitally than unjust alienation.

* * * * * * *

One more point I would add. This appreciation of gold, with its corresponding decline of trade, throws the finances of all gold-using countries into confusion; it leads to deficits and increased duties, and makes foreign tariffs more and more protective. India suffers in a somewhat different way, for she has to remit £15,000,000 in gold to England annually and is now losing £4,000,000 a year in exchange, and may in course of time lose £5,000,000 or £6,000,000 and find it almost impossible to carry out the railway extensions resolved upon, owing to the danger of borrowing in gold and the impossibility of borrowing in silver.

These extracts illustrate the views of all, or nearly all, who testified.

It is shown that there were meetings held in Liverpool, in Glasgow, in Manchester, and among the leading chambers of commerce, leading men everywhere taking part, and by large majorities reports were made favoring the restoration of silver to its old-time honored relation, yet our commissioner did not think it worth while to say anything about them. I was not astonished at it; they were not his productions, and of course he thought they were of no value. I insert some of them by way of illustration of the feeling existing in Europe in regard to silver.

Hon. George Walker, consul-general at Paris, sent to Secretary Bayard, August 20, 1885, a letter in regard to coinage, from which I read the following extract:

The parliamentary inquiry in England, which has just been initiated by the appointment of a royal commission, distinctly recognizes that the discord at present existing between the precious metals is one of the alleged causes of industrial and commercial distress. The appointment of Mr. Gibbs, one of the ablest English defenders of the bimetallic system, and of Sir Louis Mallet, who, with Lord Reay (now governor of Bombay), represented the Indian office in the international conference of 1881, to lead the inquiry on this subject, gives assurance that the investigation will be intelligent and thorough, and that all the facts which are believed to establish the impossibility of conducting the commerce of the world on a gold basis will be brought out in their true relations.

The chambers of commerce of Manchester, Birmingham, Liverpool, and Glasgow, four of the largest towns in the United Kingdom, have adopted resolutions calling on their members in Parliament to support this branch of the general investigation; and it is very clearly indicated in the debates of the meetings at which these resolutions were passed, that an intelligent majority in those great commercial centers has reached the conclusion that the silver question is largely responsible for the existing distress, and I think I am justified in saying that they believe that bimetallism, to be established by international treaty, is the only sufficient monetary remedy.

* * * * * * *

With the adhesion of Great Britain, the adoption of international bimetallism would be very simple. Without that adhesion, it would be equally practicable, safe, and effective if the system were accepted by Germany. Of this there is much reason to hope, inasmuch as the prevailing sentiment of that country is unmistakably in favor of the restoration of silver to full monetary functions. In Germany the learned body has taken the lead in this direction, and it has been followed by all the industrial classes, agricultural and manufacturing, and by the leading commercial houses in Hamburg and elsewhere. It is also asserted that a majority of the national parliament has reached a similar conviction, and may, at an early day, be persuaded to act.

On the 8th day of July, 1866, the following is given of a meeting of the British and Colonial Chambers of Commerce, in which, by a majority of 28 to 15, they decided in favor of recoining their silver money:

The silver question—An animated discussion by English bankers in London—They resolve that to remonetize silver means greater prosperity.

LONDON, July 8.

An important meeting of the British and Colonial Chambers of Commerce was held yesterday, at which there was an animated discussion of the silver question and its bearings upon the commerce of India, Australia, and Great Britain. Mr. Henry H. Gibbs, ex-governor of the Bank of England, opened the proceedings by a strong speech, showing the world-wide importance of restoring the monetary value of silver. Sir Robert W. Fowler, M. P., the London banker and ex-lord mayor, opposed the idea in a speech which was feeble in comparison with that of Mr. Gibbs, and was followed by two Indian members.

Both of these contended that the effect of the depreciation of silver must be finally the ruin of the wheat and cotton industries of America, and the development of India as the chief wheat and cotton exporter of the world. They, therefore, protested against England's aiding America to restore the value of silver at the expense of the interests of India.

Mr. Paul F. Irdman, an East India merchant, argued that England had other interests besides those of India, which stood sorely in need of the restoration of silver, and trusted that Mr. Gibbs's ideas would be adopted by the meeting.

Mr. Crump, of the London Times, denounced the agitation of the silver question as the work of the silver miners of Nevada, and their allies, the Washington ring.

Mr. Moreton Frewen opposed Mr. Crump in a strong speech in behalf of the farmers in the West and the planters in the South of America, and a resolution was passed by a vote, 28 to 15, amid great excitement, declaring that the remonetization of silver would relieve the depression under which trade is now staggering. The meeting is regarded as highly important, and its influence upon the coming silver demonstration in Lancashire must necessarily be very strong.

I may as well add:

A year ago last June at a meeting of the British and Colonial Chamber of Commerce held in London, Sir Robert Fowler, member of Parliament and ex-lord mayor, is reported to have said "that the effect of the depreciation of silver must finally be the ruin of the wheat and cotton industries of America, and be the development of India as the chief wheat and cotton exporter of the world.

And also a high authority at home:

In the report of our Silver Commission made in 1877, Governor Boutwell, late Secretary of the Treasury (volume 1, page 138), says:

"It is no doubt true that the demonetization of either metal adds to the purchasing power of the metal retained for use, by diminishing the price of every article of merchandise, while it increases the burden of debts both public and private."

The result of this mass of intelligent testimony may be stated briefly as proving that so long as England alone maintained gold as the single standard there was no contraction of the circulating medium in the world's commercial transactions, and consequently no depression in trade because of a contracted currency. France acted as the great clearing-house of the nations, but when the United States and Germany struck down their silver coinage in 1873 France, drained as she had been of $1,000,000,000 of gold by Germany shortly before, could no longer maintain her gold and silver coins on equal terms with free coinage, and had to protect herself against the combined attack of England, Germany, and the United States as best she could.

It also proves that the result of the withdrawal of silver as an equal factor with gold has been to reduce the value of all the past accumulations and present products of labor from 30 to 35 per cent. since 1873, by appreciating the value or purchasing power of gold to that extent, as they all agree that the appreciation of gold and depreciation of property mean the same thing, being only a different way of stating the same proposition. They further agree that the annual product of gold is almost, if not entirely, absorbed in the arts and uses to which it is applied outside of coinage and by absorption in India and other silver-using countries, whose exports exceed their imports, and, when so absorbed, it never again appears as part of the world's coinage. They assume as a proposition too plain for argument, that the effort to destroy one-half of the world's circulating medium and force the remaining half to perform the functions of both metals largely increased the burden of all the obligations of the debtor class by requiring 35 per cent. more of the property they hold or labor to produce to be sold to pay their debts than was needed when gold and silver were both legal-tender money at fixed rates, as they were when most of the present large obligations were contracted.

It did not require any evidence to prove what they all assumed as a necessary sequence of the facts they furnished, that steadily-falling values contract trade and production of every description to the limits of absolute necessity, as no man can buy, borrow, or spend money to produce anything which he knows will be worth 10 per cent. less when his obligations mature than it is at the time he buys or produces it. Of course, money is apparently abundant. When these conditions exist nobody dares borrow it, no matter how low the rate of interest. Labor suffers perhaps more than all else by enforced idleness and inability to change as production dwindles.

India alone, of all the possessions of Great Britain, has, as a country, profited by the rapacity of the gold-worshipers. England, in 1835, prohibited the coinage of gold coin in that country, while she granted the colonial government the right to coin silver without limit. Since that time the official tables which I hold in my hand show that the silver coinage of India has amounted to over $1,500,000,000.

As soon as the report and testimony taken by Lord Iddesleigh's committee appeared some very distinguished gentleman who did not sign his name, but his paper is evidently semi-official, took up the silver question in an elaborate article and with great ability he showed that all that was needed for England to crush out the export of agricultural products by the United States was to induce the United States to stop the coinage of silver to keep down the price of it, and that India would soon supply England with all the cotton goods, with all the hemp products, with all the wheat, with all the tobacco she wanted, and the United States would be broken down, but above all he pleaded that England must never consent to restore legal-tender silver to her own coinage, as that would simply be building up the United States at the expense of England's leading colony.

One of the gentlemen who testified before Lord Iddesleigh's commission, Mr. Moreton Frewen, a very intelligent man, who I met once in the Northwest, sent me a copy of that pamphlet, which is entitled "The Silver Question, or Sacrifice of India," accompanied by a letter, in which he said, among other things:

A study of this pamphlet will, however, demonstrate the special difficulties by which England is beset. One part of the Empire, in which gold alone is legal tender, is evidently suffering severely from the rapid appreciation of the standard; another immense portion of the empire, in which the standard silver is depreciating, is as clearly gaining, and this gain, while partly at the expense of British agriculture, is more particularly at the expense of the United States.

If England now supports any legislation which restores to silver its old value and the old "par of exchange," then the wheat exports of British India will cease and also the cotton industry of India, now expanding so immensely, may be paralyzed. The sole object of the writer of the "Sacrifice of India" is to protest against any legislation in England which, by restoring to silver the prerogative of legal tender, may keep silver steady at its former price, and thus secure to the United States the control of the export trades in cotton and wheat, a control which now promises to pass to India.

In this pamphlet the writer goes on to show—and I may take the liberty to make some extracts from it—after showing the increase of India's trade in wheat and other things and the immense increase of her exports and imports, which I laid before the Senate the other day, and therefore need not repeat. He says:

I trust I have succeeded in making clear the effect of low exchange upon the Indian wheat export. Other articles of Indian produce which enter into competition with gold-using countries would similarly suffer by a rise in exchange and in the same proportion, for since that difference or loss could not be made up out of reductions in the cost of transport or out of traders' profits (these being already lowered to a minimum), it would have to come out of the pockets of the cultivators. With articles such as indigo, or jute, or shellac, which are comparative monopolies of Indian production, and tea, which is produced only in silver countries, the benefit derived from low exchange—is in the cheapening of the selling cost, and the consequent extending of consumption. A return of exchange to the old ratio would increase the cost of tea in London by about 25 per cent. Thus consumption would be checked, and consequently also the production in India and China. The disturbance thus created would in course of time be adjusted by the ordinary law of supply and demand, but at the cost of the producing country.

That is, cheap silver—

Another important benefit conferred upon India by low exchange, but which is little noticed by the Government, is the encouragement to her local manufactures, of which the two most important, although there are many others, are the jute and cotton manufactures. In these, besides an enormously extended consumption of both these manufactures within the country itself, their exports have increased as follows:

Cotton yarn, 1880-'81, 26,901,346 pounds; 1885-'86, 78,238,471 pounds; cotton print goods, 1880-'81, 3),424,032 yards; 1885-'86, 51,574,372 yards; jute, 1880-'81, 45,354,044 bags; 1885-'86, 82,774,207 bags.

In these industries alone, as already noticed, about one hundred millions of rupees are invested, and many thousands of well-paid operatives are happily employed. The effect of raising exchange to the old ratio would be to interfere with these industries, but more particularly with the cotton.

Then he adds, in substance: "Take care how you restore this silver coinage and bring back our old rival, the United States, into this trade. You are not only protecting India, but you men in England are the principal beneficiaries. You have increased our taxes threefold, you are making us support the Indian army of the Queen, you have pensioned your hungry sons, otherwise unprovided for, upon us as a legacy of the old East India Company, and you are demanding all these tributes and subsidies in gold, so that while we have increased in prosperity very largely you are, in fact, getting the lion's share out of us at last." Therefore by every appeal, in every form, the effort is to get England to stand by her single gold standard. I have thought that the Royal Commission now in session will do it, although very many of the best men in that country desire that it shall be otherwise.

I hope the American Congress will show by equalizing our own coins and their uses that we do not intend to pander to them. The Director of the Mint, Mr. Kimball, sent me a letter the other day when he saw that I was looking into this subject. He said that the royal commission is being made to believe from the arguments before it that silver is produced so cheaply in this country that if its coinage is restored we can furnish it at less than 1*s.* 8*d.* (38 cents) to the dollar, their leading statistician is so declaring, and that the royal commission has in a preliminary report given great weight to it. Mr. Kimball says this in his letter:

Your remarks in the Senate on the report of the royal commission suggests sending you a copy of a blank recently prepared by me.

I did not know he was going to write to me.

I beg you to observe the note at the foot of the page. Mr. Atkinson told me that he found great disinclination toward any change in the status of silver in Great Britain on account of the prevalence of the idea that silver is, or can be, produced at about half of the present bullion value, and that indeed it would be "shoveled" out in unprecedented volume if the status be improved. This impression seems to mainly rest upon the preposterous estimates of Professor Austin, of the Royal Mint, whose testimony was taken by the commission, and with an exhibit of detailed statements, to be found in the appendix, which claims to be based on a technical analysis of industrial cost. Nothing could be more misleading. Yet I notice that more importance attaches to this testimony than to anything else brought forward during the whole proceedings. Several English writers have since based arguments upon it.

I may say that no American technical authority has ever ventured to put forth a general estimate of cost of production in the case of the precious metals, the truth being, as pointed out by me in my Report on Production, 1885, page 26, that their cost as well as the supply, is to be considered subsidiary to a large extent to the production and reduction of miscellaneous ores, their part in the value of which is none the less an integral one. A large part of the produce of both metals corresponds to the aggregate of small products, which bear a small, but widely varying, proportion to their cost. Estimated as in the case of any other staple, the cost of silver is believed by most men acquainted with our mineral industries to be some multiple of its value.

While a few ventures yield a rich profit, a majority of gold and silver mining ventures fail to pay any interest on outlay, though in the aggregate contributing the larger part of the silver produced in the world. This is a curious fact, and due mainly to the fascination which the search for the precious metals has for a large class in all countries where a few examples of successful operations are to be found. I may take some occasion to follow out the methods of Professor Austen, whereby he has reached so false a conclusion. I allude to his assumptions of cost of production, to the arbitrary way in which he has excluded all but successful ventures. If the silver market had alone the product of these to depend upon, it would be in sad straits indeed.

Truly yours,

J. P. KIMBALL.

He furnishes the note which he is going to send out, and perhaps has sent out now, to leading men of the country to get information to contradict this report.

The note appended to the printed questions to which he calls my attention reads as follows:

The Director of the Mint hopes to be able to deduce some approximate estimate of the cost of producing silver under different circumstances, in order to meet certain obviously erroneous statements before the present "royal commission appointed to inquire into the recent changes in the relative values of the precious metals." (London.) This cost has been represented in testimony before that commission as low as 1*s.* 8*d.*

I referred a while ago to what the national banks were doing. I happen to have in my hand a letter, which I intended to read, and may perhaps as well do it now, from a very distinguished gentleman, Hon. Edwards Pierrepont, dated November 22, 1887, in which he calls my attention to the action of these gentlemen; and as he agrees precisely with my opinion about it, I will read what he says:

No. 103 FIFTH AVENUE, November 22, 1887.

Hon. JAMES B. BECK, United States Senator:

MY DEAR SIR: What your letter says about coin-notes I have read with interest; but judging from the report of the bankers' convention held at Pittsburgh last month, I think that you will see a renewed effort to suspend silver coinage indefinitely. On page 60 of the report is the following:

"The British Government has appointed a royal commission to investigate the silver question, which has made a preliminary report adverse to the double standard. As the assent of England has been recognized by the most eminent bimetallists as essential to any effectual agreement upon the silver question, the committee recommend that this association delay action for the present, and await the final report of the royal commission to Parliament and the action of Parliament thereon. * * * The committee further recommends that the coinage of silver dollars by the United States, under the act of February, 1878, be suspended until the points at issue of the silver question be settled by international agreement."

These distinguished bankers are waiting until they can get an adverse report from England, which they are encouraging by every means in their power. The moment they get it then the hue and cry will be raised again with redoubled energy that we are keeping dishonored money in circulation after the world has decided against it. When they have done all they can to bring about the result they will claim that we can do nothing. What Congress has to do to thwart their schemes is to take some honest step forward and show the world that we intend to hold on to what we have and to progress steadily and not retrograde at the dictation of any power, foreign or domestic. Mr. Pierrepont adds:

This means an indefinite suspension of silver coinage, and nothing else. It is well known that the "final," like the preliminary, report will be "adverse to the double standard." Many honest men have been duped into the belief that by suspending our silver coinage we can force England into an international agreement about silver.

The smiling contempt with which the ruling class in England receives this suggestion is not complimentary to our intelligence. The suspension of our silver coinage is exactly what they want. Such suspension, they imagine, would largely increase the purchasing power of their gold; however fallacious this view may prove in the long run, they now entertain it, and it will take many years to change them. It is well understood in Great Britain that if Congress will once suspend the coinage of silver, the gold forces of England and America combined can prevent its restoration.

Some tell us that we ought to stop the coinage of silver, because they say that the intrinsic value of the silver dollar is worth less by 30 per cent. than the gold dollar. This is an entire mistake. In 1851 the silver dollar of the exact weight and fineness as now was at a premium of 3.42 per cent. above the gold dollar, and for a period of forty years next prior to 1873 it was continuously at a premium; and in 1851 the gold of the world, in proportion to silver, was far less than it is to-day.

Was the intrinsic value of 100 cents of silver in 1851 3.42 per cent. more than the intrinsic value of 100 cents of gold? The legal value of a five-pound Bank of England note is five gold sovereigns—the legal value of a ten-dollar greenback is a gold eagle. But the intrinsic value of the English bank-note and the American greenback together is nothing; their only value is a value imposed by law, a fiat value, there is nothing intrinsic about it. By far the chief value of all coins is fiat value.

All the gloomy predictions about the coinage of silver in our country have proved false. We need not distress ourselves about the royal commission or the action of the British Parliament on the silver question. If the continental governments which coined silver prior to 1873 would restore its coinage, there can be no reasonable doubt that the silver dollar would be quite equal to the gold dollar in the whole of continental Europe, as it now is in every corner of the United States.

But for the silver, what would have been our condition this last summer, with the national-bank notes reduced from three hundred and fifty-six millions to one hundred and sixty-five millions, and one hundred and ninety-four millions locked in the Treasury? In any country whose currency is reduced to gold, it is always easy for a few rich operators to "corner" the currency, throw down the price of stocks, wheat, cotton, and other commodities, and force those who have bills falling due to sacrifice their property to escape bankruptcy. The member of Congress who shall vote to suspend the coinage and "await the report of the royal commission," will be a bold man or an idiot. Is it possible that this great and powerful nation, quite the richest in the world, can not devise a financial system suited to its conditions, instead of waiting in dazed bewilderment for the action of a British Parliament?

I am, ever, faithfully yours,

EDWARDS PIERREPONT.

To show why I have no confidence in our late commissioner on the silver question, I will add that Mr. Atkinson is a doctrinaire; he is an able man and beyond doubt a man of integrity, but Mr. Atkinson is not the man whom anybody who knows him would select as a friend of silver money. He testified before the commission of which the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES] was chairman.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from Kentucky will permit me to say, as he has alluded to an eminent constituent of mine, that the present Administration did send him to Europe on precisely that errand.

Mr. BECK. I know it did, and that is what I do not like.

Mr. HOAR. I understood the Senator to say that nobody ever sent Mr. Atkinson on any such errand.

Mr. BECK. No. We have made blunders.

Mr. HOAR. You did say so.

Mr. BECK. I read the resolution some time ago—perhaps the Senator was not in—of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY], reciting that Mr. Atkinson had been sent, but that we do not propose to send him or any one else any more on such missions. I propose to favor that resolution mainly because we have not sent the kind of men who were likely to do the most good. There are gold worshippers in the Democratic party, I am sorry to say, as well as in the Republican party. We are not strictly divided as parties on that line, there are some Senators who stand by me very earnestly on this question on the other side of this Chamber in sustaining our silver coinage and in giving it equal rights, I am happy to say.

Mr. Atkinson was asked the following questions by the silver commission in 1876 and answered them in this way.

After insisting that there were causes which made silver no longer fit to be a legal tender, he said, in answer to questions:

Q. 7. Are these causes temporary or permanent?

A. No positive answer can be made to this question. It is certain that silver has been recently subject to such great fluctuations that it is for the time being a most unfit substance for a standard of value.

Q. 8. Would the relative value of gold and silver be affected by the remonetization of the latter in this country, coupled with the resumption of specie payments?

A. The temporary increase of demand for silver would, I doubt not, increase its value in relation to gold, but only temporarily, and its ultimate relation to gold would be determined by the cost of production and the general demand for it in the world. If the question implies the resumption of specie payments in silver, as a full legal tender, I think it implies an impossibility. The resumption of specie payments depends upon confidence being restored. To make an unlimited tender of this metal, at its old weight, would be so bad a breach of faith, and would imply such want of perception in regard to the needs of the time, as to destroy what little confidence there is now existing, and defeat the attempt itself.

Q. 9. Which standard, the single gold or the double standard of gold and silver, is best calculated to facilitate a return to specie payments?

A. I think resumption will be retarded and not facilitated by any present alteration in the relation of gold and silver coins to each other, and that the silver coinage should remain a token coinage, carefully restricted to the actual demands of the country for tokens, and be as strictly limited as was the amount of fractional paper currency.

Q. 10. If the double standard is adopted, what relation of value should be fixed between gold and silver?

A. That which is changing from week to week, or from day to day, can not be fixed by any statute. I think no change should be made at present in the relation of the weight in our coins, nor should any change be attempted until the value of silver is fixed more than it is now. Then there will be a basis for legislation as to the weight each coin should contain.

Q. 11. If the United States should establish the double standard, would it have a tendency to confirm France, Italy, and Belgium and the other nations of the Latin Union, Austria, Russia, Holland, Mexico, Asia, and South America in their present policy of employing silver as an unlimited legal tender?

A. I do not think the example of the United States will affect intelligent statesmen anywhere. I think we have blundered too much in the last ten years to have our example copied by any intelligent nation, until at least ten more years have expired, in which we have shown our fitness to teach.

If Senators will read the whole of the testimony of Mr. Atkinson, they will find that he was not only bitterly opposed to the restoration of silver to any position above mere subsidiary tokens, but he showed scant respect for the intelligence of those who differed from him. I confess, therefore, to being astonished at his selection as the agent of the United States by the Secretary of State to induce England and other nations to aid us in restoring gold and silver as joint factors or units of value; and I was not astonished that he ignored all the testimony taken before the Iddesleigh commission, which was in direct opposition to the views he has expressed before our Congressional joint committee.

That is not the kind of a man I should send to Europe to take care of silver. But waiving all that and believing that the first thing for Congress to do is to assert our own rights and to let England, France, and Germany, and the bondholders of America, the bankers, and everybody else know that when we put out our coin, or any paper based upon it, that it is as good as any other coin or any other paper, and that we have not one coin for the rich and another for the poor, that gold and silver recognized by us at the standard value of July 14, 1870, in which all bonds are payable, is good enough for anybody, and that we intend to stand upon it and maintain it with all our power, and as every prediction up to this time in regard to what would happen if we attempted to do so has been falsified, we have a right to assume that the thirty-odd million dollars of gold coming in this year more than we exported, $174,000,000 having come since we began coining silver more than we have coined of silver with the effort made in 1880 to deposit gold and get silver certificates, when men deposited $80,000,000 of gold for them until they were stopped by the Treasury Department, if they do not deposit it now no harm can be done. They are not obliged to do it.

We have surplus enough belonging to the people on which we can issue coin certificates, backed by the coin in the Treasury, whenever we please, because the coin is in our own hands and will never be demanded if we have it on hand. I do not see how anybody can object to that, except those who want to keep up a distinction and make a discrimination between the two metals and hold out to England and her Royal Commission that we are still undetermined, and if they will only struggle a little longer to maintain her single standard that we will give way to her and abandon our silver coin as hopeless.

I have thus imperfectly stated the object of the bill. I shall endeavor to argue its merits more clearly and show our need for it when it comes up for a vote. I know I have to give way to the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] to call up what is known as the undervaluation bill which has the right of way, but at some very early day I will call up this bill and I will try to press it to a vote, and I will see whether the Senate of the United States will agree with me in believing that it is a step in the right direction. Our present gold certificates are of no sort of use as circulation. More than half of them are in denominations of $10,000 and over, so we are simply insurers of rich men's gold without pay; that of course they want, as they want all else. They are not currency in any sense.

In the mean time I will say now that I agree with the Senator from Delaware that there is no use in begging England, or Germany, or France, or any other country any more. We are able to stand by ourselves and maintain a policy of our own, and I am not sure, in view of what is going on in the world, that we ought not to coin silver up to the maximum limit instead of the minimum. That, however, is a question which may be discussed hereafter.

Gentlemen talk about compulsory coinage. Why, Mr. President, the present law is simply a limitation upon a pre-existing right that all men could avail themselves of until the limitation was put on it, and as all holders of gold bullion get gold coin now free of charge. We had to require that silver should be coined to the amount of at least $2,000,000 per month, because if we had not required it it would not have been coined at all. How many dollars do you think would have been coined under the administration of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] if he had not been required by law to coin at least $2,000,000 of silver per month? How many millions a month would have been coined under the administration of any Secretary of the Treasury from that day to this? Not a dollar. They have been begging us all the time to stop it, and then call silver coinage compulsory. There is free coinage of gold without a penny cost.

England by statute requires the Bank of England to pay for bullion, in bank notes which may be immediately exchanged for gold, £3 17*s.* 9*d.* for each standard ounce of gold that is offered, thus furnishing a market to everybody, we are inviting them all to coin their gold free. When men produce silver we call it repudiated, depreciated stuff, token money, and everything else that is vile. Unless we had required something to be done, nothing, I repeat, would have done, and yet that is charged as being compulsory coinage.

I am not sure that we can maintain free coinage of silver by ourselves. I am not clear about that. That is a question for discussion. But whatever we do put out as money we ought to maintain as equal to any money that we put out, and when we say that gold and silver shall stand upon an equality by our law, Congress having the power to coin money and regulate the value thereof, and the States having no right to make any thing a legal tender but gold and silver coin, either metal, coined by Congress the value of which has been thus regulated, when it is once in the hands of the people Congress must see that every particle of gold and silver is made equal for all uses; and if we treat it as such ourselves we shall maintain it against the world as we can do, and the moment we do that then the nations of Europe will follow our example.

I meant to read some other papers, but I have talked very much too long. I can show by official statistics that Austria can hardly keep her debts afloat; Russia is substantially bankrupt; Germany, with a great army, is staggering; France, perhaps, is more in debt than any of them. England confesses the depreciation of all values of 35 per cent. since 1873 until she, too, is staggering and her gold is leaving her. They are all using more silver to-day than gold in their ordinary transactions, and in spite of all their protests they will have to come back to it as a full legal tender; and when they do the double standard using both metals, will not be more than enough to meet the growing wants and needs of commerce and the growing wants of people whose needs are becoming greater as they are becoming richer and their commerce is becoming more extended.

I beg pardon of the Senate for having detained it so long.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, as a matter of course I shall not undertake to reply to the argument of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BECK] upon the silver question, but I wish now, before the subject passesfrom the attention of the Senate, to briefly reply to one or two matters of a personal character which the Senator from Kentucky feels himself justified in lugging into this controversy. I say "lugging" because this debate is but an addendum to the debate had the other day when the Senator from Kentucky started off against a bill intended to grant pensions to certain disabled soldiers of the Union Army. He extended from that point until he got upon the tariff, very naturally, perhaps; he thinks so at least, because every road leads to the tariff with him. When the tariff got to be a little tiresome he commenced talking about trusts and said that the great trusts were caused by the tariff. I ventured in a mild-mannered way to suggest to him a doubt whether trusts were caused by the tariff; whether trusts did not exist in domestic as well as foreign productions, and he answered promptly that the tariff was the great cause of all. I named to him the whisky trust, the oil trust, the cotton-seed trust, and other trusts of that kind, and wanted to know how they grew out of the tariff. Thereupon the Senator changed his ground and got onto the silver question, and then he commenced assailing me for the coinage act, and said I had been responsible for the coinage act of 1873. He spoke of it as having been secretly passed, surreptitiously done, etc., that I did it, that I knew it.

I was very indifferent to the previous part of his speech, but I felt a little sensitive that I was charged with having the management or custody of any bill whatever that was not openly and manfully discussed, and, although my opinions often differ with those of the Senator from Kentucky, I believe that he is as sincere and honest in his opinions as I am in mine. When the heat was over he should have withdrawn his imputation. He will never find me dodging responsibility, or evading or concealing a measure, in whole or in part, as long as I live; and in reply, I think I convinced the Senate that I did not in this case. And now, Mr. President, his answer, nearly three hours long, is "lame and impotent" to the last degree. How does he answer? By going to the public records and showing by them whether or not the law was put through the Senate in a secret and suppressed and indefinite way? Not at all. The records are the evidence of our acts here; but instead of going to them, he quotes speeches which have been made on the stump, one by yourself, sir, [Mr. INGALLS in the chair], which he grossly misapplies. He cites what several gentlemen say they did not know.

He quotes from a speech made by Mr. KELLEY, of Pennsylvania, and other members of the House of Representatives, and a speech made by my friend from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON], not one of them bearing upon the question as to whether the bill under my charge was openly and manfully presented and discussed; and now, thank fortune, I am able from the original records of the Senate to show that that bill was more openly discussed, was more fully considered than any bill pending in Congress. It was submitted in every possible form to public opinion inside and outside of Congress, as is shown by the original records here upon my table.

What was the coinage act of 1873? Was it a bill of my devising? No, I never saw it until it was sent to me here, in a letter dated April 25, 1870, addressed to me as chairman of the Committee on Finance, from Mr. Boutwell, the Secretary of the Treasury. It was a long bill containing many sections that I had never before seen. With that bill came a history of the bill; that it had been prepared nearly a year before that time. At a time when we hopefully looked for the resumption of specie payments, then faintly in the glimmering distance, Mr. Linderman, not a man of my politics at all, but a leading Democrat, who had held for a long time the office of Superintendent of the Mint at Philadelphia, and Mr. Knox, Comptroller of the Currency, framed a bill to codify or include in one law all the coinage acts of the United States which were then in force. The bill was sent to us with a formal letter and it was printed. Here is the printed letter:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 25, 1870.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a bill revising the laws relative to the mint, assay offices, and coinage of the United States, and accompanying report. The bill has been prepared under the supervision of John Jay Knox, Deputy Comptroller of the Currency, and its passage is recommended in the form presented. It includes, in a condensed form, all the important legislation upon the coinage, not now obsolete, since the first Mint was established, in 1792; and the report gives a concise statement of the various amendments proposed to existing laws and the necessity for the change recommended. There has been no revision of the laws pertaining to the Mint and coinage since 1837, and it is believed that the passage of the inclosed bill will conduce greatly to the efficiency and economy of this important branch of the Government service.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. S. BOUTWELL,
Secretary of the Treasury.

The report and the bill were referred to the Committee on Finance April 28, 1870, and printed, and 500 additional copies printed for the use of the Treasury Department.

The report says:

The method adopted in the preparation of the bill was first to arrange in as concise a form as possible the laws now in existence upon these subjects, with such additional sections and suggestions as seemed valuable. Having accomplished this, the bill as thus prepared was printed upon paper with wide margin, and in this form transmitted to the different mints and assay offices, to the First Comptroller, the Treasurer, the Solicitor, the First Auditor, and to such other gentlemen as are known to be intelligent upon metallurgical and numismatical subjects, with the request that the printed bill should be returned with such notes and suggestions as experience and education should dictate. In this way the views of more than thirty gentlemen who are conversant with the manipulation of metals, the manufacture of coinage, the execution of the present laws relative thereto, the method of keeping accounts, and of making returns to the Department, have been obtained with but little expense to the Department and little inconvenience to correspondents. Having received these suggestions, the present bill has been framed, and is believed to comprise within the compass of eight or ten pages of the Revised Statutes every important provision contained in more than sixty different enactments upon the Mint, assay offices, and coinage of the United States, which are the result of nearly eighty years of legislation upon these subjects.

The Senator says that the silver dollar was surreptitiously and secretly suppressed by the operation of this bill. It did not become a law until three years afterwards, and, as I will show; it was printed thirteen different times, over and over again debated, and the debates upon the bill in the Senate occupied sixty-eight columns of the Globe, and in the House seventy-eight columns of the Globe, probably ten times as many columns devoted to it as the Senator's speech will make, and that is a long standard for debate. It was debated day after day. The first proposition submitted to us was the discontinuing the coinage of the silver dollar. The report of Mr. Knox called special attention to the discontinuance of the silver dollar as a standard, as may be seen from the following paragraph on page 11:

SILVER DOLLAR—ITS DISCONTINUANCE AS A STANDARD.

The coinage of the silver-dollar piece, the history of which is here given, is discontinued in the proposed bill. It is by law the dollar unit, and, assuming the value of gold to be fifteen and one-half times that of silver, being about the mean ratio for the past six years, is worth in gold a premium of about 3 per cent. (its value being 103.12) and intrinsically more than 7 per cent. premium in our other silver coin, its value thus being 107.42. The present laws consequently authorize both a gold-dollar unit and a silver-dollar unit, differing from each other in intrinsic value. The present gold-dollar piece is made the dollar unit in the proposed bill, and the silver-dollar piece is discontinued. If, however, such a coin is authorized, it should be issued only as a commercial dollar, not as a standard unit of account, and of the exact value of the Mexican dollar, which is the favorite for circulation in China and Japan and other Oriental countries.

This original bill and report were sent, as I have stated, to all the leading specialists familiar with this subject, to the officers of the mints all over the country, to the leading bankers of the country, and to members of Congress, inviting their criticism. In the first bill that was thus sent there was this section, which I will read:

That of the silver coins the weight of the dollar shall be 384 grains (now 412½ grains), the weight of the half-dollar or piece of 50 cents shall be 192 grains; and that the quarter-dollar and dime and half-dime shall be, respectively, one-half and one-fifth and one-tenth of the weight of said half-dollar. That the silver coin issued in conformity with the above sections shall be a legal tender in any one payment of debts for all sums not exceeding $5, except duties on imports.

That was substantially the form in which that section appeared in the last bill sent by the House here in the spring of 1872, two years afterwards, and that particular section which abolished, as you say, or dropped the silver dollar, was in the bill during all its history from the beginning to the end. The dollar proposed by Mr. Knox, instead of the old dollar of 412½ grains, was a dollar of 384 grains, or just the exact equivalent of two of the minor half-dollars, and reduced the dollar by their proposition to a minor, a subsidiary coin, and he specially called attention to this by saying the dollar was "now 412½ grains," and proposed to make the new coin a legal tender for only $5. That was the proposition.

Mr. DAWES. Just what the fractional currency was.

Mr. SHERMAN. Just what the fractional currency was. So in the original bill the old dollar was displaced and in its place was put a minor coin equal to two half-dollars coined under the old act of 1834. That was the proposition, and it was sent to California and other gold and silver regions.

It was objected in California that the dollar proposed would not answer commercial exchanges, that they wanted a dollar even larger than the old silver dollar of 412½ grains, that they wanted a convenient coin into which silver, then being mined largely in that region of country, might be put for exportation. It was said if we would give them a coin of 420 grains, it would be worth about 3 grains more than the Mexican dollar, and that such a coin as that would fill the channels of commerce and enable them to export silver, at that time only valuable to be exported, not used by the people of our country, because we were then using paper and fractional currency entirely.

During this time the officers of the San Francisco branch mint made the following suggestion:

Would not the proposed change in the weight of the silver dollar disturb the relative value of all our coinage, affect our commercial conventions, and possibly impair the validity of contracts running through a long period? Might not the dollar be retained as a measure of value, but the coinage of the piece for circulation be discontinued?

Mr. E. B. Elliot, of the Treasury Department, gave a complete history of the silver dollar and suggested—

The issue of a commercial dollar of nine-tenths fineness, and containing of pure silver just 25 grams, in place of the then existing silver dollar of 412½ grains; the proposed silver dollar being almost the exact equivalent of the silver contained in the older Spanish-Mexican pillared dollar, established in 1704 by proclamation of Queen Anne as a legal tender of payment and accepted as par of exchange for the British colonies of North America at the rate of 54 pence sterling to the dollar, or four and four-ninths dollars to the pound sterling.

Mr. Robert Patterson, of Philadelphia, long an officer of the Mint and an expert, recommended that this dollar of 385 grains be stricken out, and there is here a petition from the California Legislature—I had it in my hand a few moments ago; it is on the Secretary's desk—in which they ask Congress formally to raise the standard of silver and not to use this diminished dollar of 385 grains.

In consequence of this diversity of opinion among experts the Comptroller of the Currency dropped out the silver dollar entirely, said nothing about it, made no provision for it, but instead of that told us that if not omitted entirely a dollar ought to be inserted, as demanded by the Pacific Coast, for commercial purposes, containing 420 grains.

Mr. President, from the beginning, from April, 1870, until the passage of the law on February 27, 1873, the provision discontinuing the old silver dollar of 412½ grains stood in that proposed law, printed here over and over again by both Houses through nearly three sessions of Congress, and yet members of Congress are quoted, forsooth, as saying that they never saw it! Whose fault was it?

Why, Mr. President, I have here the last print of the bill. Here it is, with the old-time appearance of decayed bills, folded away for good. Here it is in the very last print of the bill. Look at the history of it, and see whether there was anything secret about it. Here is the bill:

May 29, 1872.—In the Senate of the United States.
Read twice and referred to the Committee on Finance.
December 16, 1872.—Reported by Mr. SHERMAN with amendments, namely: "Strike out the parts in brackets and insert the parts printed in italics."

Then follows:

January 7, 1873.—Mr. SHERMAN, from the Committee on Finance, reported additional amendments; which were ordered to be printed with the bill.

Then, two or three weeks afterwards, I do not know exactly when, although the date can be easily had, I called up the bill for consideration. Here it was, printed in double-leaded type.

I will read what I asked the Senator from Kentucky to put in his remarks, but I will put it in mine. Here is the proposition of the House. I have already read the proposition as it came to us originally. The proposition of the House was:

That the silver coins of the United States shall be a dollar, a half-dollar or fifty-cent piece, a quarter-dollar or twenty-five-cent piece, and a dime or ten-cent piece; and the weight of the dollar shall be 384 grains; the half-dollar, quarter-dollar, and the dime shall be, respectively, one-half, one-quarter, and one-tenth of the weight of said dollar; which coins shall be a legal tender, at their denominational value, for any amount not exceeding $5 in any one payment.

That is substantially as it stood at the beginning of this controversy, and yet the Senator says it was secretly, surreptitiously inserted.

The Senate, on the other hand, in deference to the demands made from the Pacific Coast, where the great body of the silver bullion was produced, offered, instead of that, this proposition (and it is now the law), to strike out what I have read and insert:

That the silver coins of the United States shall be a trade-dollar, a half-dollar or fifty-cent piece, a quarter-dollar or twenty-five-cent piece, a dime or ten-cent piece; and the weight of the trade-dollar shall be 420 grains troy, the weight of the half-dollar shall be 12½ grams; the quarter-dollar and the dime shall be, respectively, one-half and one-fifth of the weight of said half-dollar; and said coins shall be legal tender, at their nominal value, for any amount not exceeding $5 in any one payment.

The following section was contained in all the different bills and the coinage act of 1873:

SEC. 18. And be it further enacted, That no coins, either of gold, silver, or minor coinage, shall hereafter be issued from the Mint other than those of the denominations, standards, and weights herein set forth.

The amendment of the Senate converted the grains of the old half-dollar into the grams of the French. Instead of taking the diminished minor dollar proposed by the House, not the old dollar of the fathers that the Senator has been talking about, but the dollar of 384 grains, we struck that out and put in the trade-dollar of 420 grains, and then we adapted the minor coins exactly to the French gram, so that two half-dollars would be precisely equal to 5 francs in the French currency. That was done by common consent. It only amounted to a change of one-half of 1 per cent., 12½ grams being, I believe, the equivalent of about 193 instead of 192 grains. The precise fraction I will not pretend to state, but that was all.

Here was a proposition printed which lay upon that table for three months. Yes, the bill came over to us in the session before. It lay over through a vacation and was then taken up, and after some days, probably with considerable debate upon other questions, this proposition was put and carried almost nem. con.

Can any Senator say that he did not see this bill? No, Senators; no man would plead the baby act in that way. I never would. I did see it. I did see that the original proposition of the House was to convert the silver dollar into a minor coin, and I did not believe in that. I did believe that it was better to have a coin according to the desire of the California people; to give them a coin of commerce, a trade-dollar into which they might convert their silver bullion, mined from the American mines, to be exported in the best form for the Oriental markets.

That is what I thought; and every Senator and Member had the same opportunity to see it, and no doubt did see it. But there is one thing which, it seems, some did not see, and the Senator from Kentucky did not and does not seem to know, and that is, the difference between seeing what is past and what is to come in the future. We did not see into the future, and it is not given to man to see into the future. We did not know that while we were acting here upon the official statement that a silver dollar was worth over 3 per cent. more than a gold dollar, by changes of production and other causes that position would be reversed. If any man had then said to me that within twenty years, yea, within fifteen years after that time the silver dollar would only be worth 70 cents on the dollar, I would have thought him crazy. All there is about it is that we did not foresee the great change in the value of silver bullion.

But when any one in the light of these facts will say of the members of that Senate or the members of that House, that they sought to do anything by indirection or by secrecy, he does injustice to himself; he can not do injustice to me, because the records are there, and the Senator has seen them.

Now, Mr. President, let us go a little further. I answered promptly to the Senator from Kentucky, and made this statement, not so clear as I have now made it, because I have the documents before me. He brings a collateral witness to prove that after all I was a secret conspirator, because at one time or another I proposed to make gold the single standard. There again he misrepresents my position. I did not make or propose to make it the single standard. I proposed to make gold an international coin, and to so change the coinage and the gold coins of all the peoples of the world that one would be easily converted into the other.

As these coins now exist, a franc is worth less than one-fifth of a dollar, and yet the dollar only passes for five francs, and the loss falls upon our people. So a pound sterling is not worth $5, and yet in common account we call the pound sterling $5. It has been the desire of scientists for more than a hundred years, commencing with Newton when he was director of the mint in England, that this difficulty of exchanges among peoples should be abolished, and it was the common sentiment of all the men who met in Paris, of all the nations, you may say, of Europe and Asia, that this difference should be in some way or other got rid of, so that the traveler might start in America and cross two oceans, traverse the world, with one American coin of unchangeable value.

What was the proposition? The proposition was that we should take the franc, which was the lowest standard or unit of value, as the unit, and then change our gold coins so as to make 5 francs of French coin exactly equal in size, in material, in shape, in form, to the five-franc gold piece. But as gold coins could not be readily issued in such small sums, it was proposed that we should take what is called the international, a gold coin of 25 francs, as a standard, and we recommended that the United States should make the half-eagle a coin of the exact commercial equivalent of 25 francs, and that England should make her pound sterling conform to this standard, so that 5 francs should be equal to $1 and $5 would be equal to £1. Austria, then greater even than Germany, was to make her 10 florins equal to 25 francs. So we should have an international coin of commerce which would go over the world.

Mr. President, that was the proposition. I was there, a citizen of the United States and a member of this body. I was not a member per se of what is called the Paris conference, but I was invited. I went there. They published what was said in different languages. They gave me no special compliment in publishing what I wrote in two languages as if it was an extraordinary thing. All the proceedings were published in two languages. I read them, and after reading them all and finding a concurring opinion that what they meant to do was a good thing to do, I wrote the letter, not one word of which I now withdraw; not one word of which, fairly interpreted under the circumstances which then surrounded me, would bear the meaning that is now suggested. The Senator from Kentucky uses this letter, which I will ask to have put in the RECORD. It is not very long, not one-half as long as some of the schedules attached to the speech of my friend from Kentucky.

What we intended to do is plain and manifest. The Senator introduces this to prove what? That I was wrong in seeking to get an international coin? No; that was not it, but in some way or other that I wanted to conspire against silver; that it was silver I was striking at. Why at that time the silver dollar was worth over 3 per cent. above par. It was shortly before that time that Chevalier proposed to demonetize gold, and take the better metal, as he called it, silver, as the single standard. It was because silver had been practically abandoned for circulation, and every country in modern Europe and our own had been compelled to lower the standard of our coins in silver in order to prevent their exportation.

Does the Senator from Kentucky know that Tom Benton and the men of 1834 and 1837 who met this difficulty in the first place demonetized silver, and from that time to this we have been practically upon the unit of gold coin? Although nominally in law the silver dollar stood as the unit of value, yet in fact and in practice gold was the only standard of value. But the silver was coined freely into what are called minor coins, 50 cents and 25 cents, and there was 7 per cent. less silver put in them, so that they would not be exported. The whole object of this demonetization of silver was to prevent the silver dollar from being exported, as it always was exported, because it was worth more in the mints of Europe than in our own.

One difficulty grew out of the difference between our ratio in this country and that in Europe. In France it was 15½ ounces of silver to one of gold. In our country it was 16 ounces of silver to one of gold. The result was, as we undervalued silver according to the market value, our silver dollar, whenever coined, went abroad, and therefore for forty or fifty years there was none of it coined, although any man had a right to carry silver bullion to the Mint and have it coined. Therefore, so far from intending any reproach or dishonor or depreciation of silver, we were trying to meet a difficulty entirely outside of the scope of that controversy between the two ratios.

The Senator from Kentucky must take notice that I say this letter, which I will ask to have printed in this place in my remarks, expressed my opinion better and more carefully than I could do now in anything that I would say.

The letter referred to is as follows:

HOTEL JARDIN DES TUILERIES, May 18, 1867.

MY DEAR SIR: Your note of yesterday, inquiring whether Congress would probably in future coinage make our gold dollar conform in value to the gold five-franc piece, has been received.

There has been so little discussion in Congress upon the subject that I can not base my opinion upon anything said or done there.

The subject has, however, excited the attention of several important commercial bodies in the United States, and the time is now so favorable that I feel quite sure that Congress will adopt any practical measure that will secure to the commercial world a uniform standard of value and exchange.

The only question will be, how this can be accomplished.

The treaty of December 23, 1865, between France, Italy, Belgium, and Switzerland, and the probable acquiescence in that treaty by Prussia, has laid the foundation for such a standard. If Great Britain will reduce the value of her sovereign two pence, and the United States will reduce the value of her dollar something over three cents, we then have a coinage in the franc, dollar, and sovereign, easily computed, and which will readily pass in all countries—the dollar as five francs, and the sovereign as twenty-five francs.

This will put an end to the loss and intricacies of exchange and discount.

Our gold dollar is certainly as good a unit of value as the franc; and so the English think of their pound sterling. These coins are now exchangeable only at a considerable loss, and this exchange is a profit only to brokers and bankers. Surely each commercial nation should be willing to yield a little to secure a gold coin of equal value, weight, and diameter, from whatever mint it may have been issued.

As the gold five-franc piece is now in use by over sixty millions of people of several different nationalities, and is of convenient form and size, it may well be adopted by other nations as the common standard of value, leaving to each nation to regulate the divisions of this unit in silver coin or tokens.

If this is done, France will surely abandon the impossible effort of making two standards of value. Gold coins will answer all the purposes of European commerce. A common gold standard will regulate silver coinage, of which the United States will furnish the greater part, especially for the Chinese trade.

I have thought a good deal of how the object you propose may be most readily accomplished. It is clear that the United States can not become a party to the treaty referred to. They could not agree upon the silver standard; nor could we limit the amount of our coinage as proposed by the treaty. The United States is so large in extent, is so sparsely populated, and the price of labor is so much higher than in Europe, that we require more currency per capita. We now produce the larger part of the gold and silver of the world, and can not limit our coinage, except by the wants of our people and the demands of commerce.

Congress alone can change the value of our coin. I see no object in negotiating with other powers on the subject. As coin is not now in general circulation with us, we can readily fix by law the size, weight, and measure of future issues. It is not worth while to negotiate about that which we can do without negotiation, and we do not wish to limit ourselves by treaty restrictions.

In England many persons of influence and different chambers of commerce are earnestly in favor of the proposed change in their coinage. The change is so slight with them that an enlightened self-interest will soon induce them to make it, especially if we make the greater change in our coinage. We will have some difficulty in adjusting existing contracts with the new dollar; but as contracts are now based upon the fluctuating value of paper money, even the reduced dollar in coin will be of more purchasable value than our currency.

We can easily adjust the reduction with the public creditors in the payment or conversion of their securities, while private creditors might be authorized to recover upon the old standard. All these are matters of detail to which I hope the commission will direct their attention.

And now, my dear sir, allow me to say in conclusion, that I heartily sympathize with you and others in your efforts to secure the adoption of the metrical system of weights and measures.

The tendency of the age is to break down all needless restrictions upon social and commercial intercourse. Nations are now as much akin to each other as provinces were of old. Prejudices disappear by contact. People of different nations learn to respect each other as they find that their differences are the effect of social and local custom not founded upon good reasons. I trust that the industrial commission will enable the world to compute the value of all productions by the same standard, to measure by the same yard or meter, and weigh by the same scales.

Such a result would be of greater value than the usual employments of diplomatists and statesmen.

I am, very truly, yours,

JOHN SHERMAN.

SAMUEL B. RUGGLES, Esq.

Mr. SHERMAN. There I stand, and would to God this day that a spirit might exist among the nations of the world that we should agree not only upon a ratio between silver and gold, but that we should agree upon a coin which, bearing the image of every nation according to its own devices, should be of equal and exact weight, value, and metal, travel over the world, and be the supreme standard of value among the nations.

The Senator from Kentucky says he does not know how the plan for an international coin was dropped out. He seems to think there was something suspicious about it. I can tell him. He need not have explored ancient history to have found it. It is true when this question came before the Committee on Finance we substantially agreed, with the single exception of Senator Morgan, of New York. He thought it might derange affairs in New York, the profits of exchange, the effect upon existing contracts, and perhaps it would; and he presented some difficulties in reducing our coins down to the standard proposed by the French ratio.

It would have created some trouble, but still the Senate would have passed it without much debate, and Senators around me were continually complaining of me for not bringing up that bill. The reason why it was not brought up was because Great Britain took ground against it, though her representatives had given a qualified assent. They said they would not change their pound sterling to conform to the proposed coin, because, in the first place, it was a matter of pride; in the next place, it would disturb the value of the shilling and farthing; that it would disturb the current of their money in the smaller payments of human life; that it would disturb to a slight degree the value of the farthing. When England had thus refused to enter into this international union, this international coin, as it may be called, it was found not to be feasible to proceed any further in the matter.

Then soon came on the war between France and Germany, and then these two nations were in no condition to negotiate with each other about coinage or anything else. This was the reason why this great effort at reform failed, for which Mr. Ruggles is fairly entitled to credit by the people of the United States. It was because England, from her exclusive pride and supreme selfishness, would not enter into this arrangement, and it fell dead. But I hope the time may come yet, in the lifetime of some of us at least, when this idea, so honorable to all the nations represented in that conference, so useful to mankind at large, so beneficial to every one who travels or trades, to every one who emigrates or migrates, will be finally adopted by the common consent of the great nations of the world. So much for that.

Now, what else is there that I care to answer in the speech of the Senator from Kentucky? He said we insisted upon paying our bonds in coin. So we did, and I thank God we did. If we had not paid our bonds in coin during the war, or promised to pay them in coin, what would have become of our credit? Even as it was, with the interest fairly secured by revenues collected in coin, our bonds went at one time in the markets of the world at about 40 cents on the dollar. Suppose we had not supported our credit, and maintained the standard that we had proclaimed, that we would not only pay the principal but the interest in gold? In the direst times of the war we bought coin and paid untold premiums almost to get it, in order to pay the public creditor. But that was to sustain the public credit and maintain the public faith.

The Senator said some harsh words—he will find them when he looks over his remarks, if he does so—about the men of business during the war, that they were grabbers, seeking something more than they deserved. My countrymen, it required patriotism, heroism, courage, and hope to take the bonds of the United States during that fearful war. All of you know how severely at times we were pressed, and how dangerously our credit was affected, and yet without that strong anchor of coin interest our bonds would have disappeared like the Confederate bonds into thin air, dishonored and unsung.

But, sir, thanks to the courage of the people of the United States, they stood by that policy, and by that means we are able now to legislate for a restored and advanced country of untarnished credit and to borrow money at a less rate than any country in the world.

Let us go a little further to illustrate the wisdom of the financial policy of the Senate. Senators may now be forgetful of one fact which I will state, not for the purpose of criticising any one—perhaps it may be new to the Senator from Kentucky, and yet he was here at the time it was done. When it became necessary to refund the public debt, after the first five-twenties had matured, everybody demanded a refunding act to lessen the burden of our debt. It was a very difficult thing to do. The Senate of the United States, after more care and deliberation than, so far as I know, it has ever bestowed on any bill, finally reported a bill to fund the public debt, to aid in the resumption of specie payments, and to advance the public credit.

On the 3d day of February, 1870, I was directed by the Committee on Finance to report Senate bill No. 380, "to authorize the refunding and consolidation of the national debt, to extend banking facilities, and to establish fixed specie payments." The Congressional Globe shows that this bill received the most careful consideration. Its first form is printed on page 1587, Congressional Globe, part 2, second session Forty-first Congress.

The first section authorizes the issue of four hundred million of bonds redeemable in coin at the pleasure of the United States at any time after ten years, bearing interest at 5 per cent.

The second section authorizes the issue of bonds to the amount of $400,000,000, redeemable at the pleasure of the Government at any time after fifteen years, and bearing interest at 4½ per cent.

The third section authorizes the issue of $400,000,000 of bonds, redeemable at any time after twenty years, and bearing interest at the rate of 4 per cent.

The proceeds of all these bonds were to be applied to the redemption of 5-20 and 10-40 bonds and other obligations of the United States then outstanding.

It will be perceived that this bill provided for the issue of securities all of which were redeemable within twenty years and two-thirds of which were redeemable within fifteen years; so that if the bill as reported by the Committee on Finance had become the law no such difficulty as we now labor under would exist, but four hundred millions of these bonds would be within reach of the Government at this moment, and the four hundred millions would be due within two years.

The bill passed the Senate in substantially the form reported from the Committee on Finance by the large vote of 33 to 10, and was perhaps the most carefully prepared of any of the financial measures of the Government. In opening the debate I called the attention of the Senate to the great advantage the Government had derived from making its bonds redeemable at brief periods like the 5-20 bonds, the 10-40 bonds, and the Treasury notes. I also called attention to the fact that the same principle of maintaining the right to redeem had been ingrafted in the bill then before the Senate, that the duration of the bonds was divided into three periods of ten, fifteen, and twenty years, during which time, by the gradual application of the surplus revenue, the whole debt might be paid. This was the bill sent by the Senate to the House of Representatives, and if it had been adopted by the House there would be no trouble now about the application of the surplus revenue, but by common consent it would be used in the speedy extinction of the public debt.

The bill was sent to the House of Representatives on the 11th of March, 1870, and there seems to have slept for nearly three months without any action on the part of the House.

On the 6th day of June, 1870, the Committee on Ways and Means reported House bill 2167, covering the same subject-matters as were contained in the Senate bill. The consideration of this bill was commenced by sections on the 30th of June, 1870. The material part of the first section of this bill is as follows:

That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to issue, in a sum or sums not exceeding in the aggregate $1,000,000,000 coupon or registered bonds of the United States, in such form as he may prescribe, and of denomination of $50 or some multiple of that sum, redeemable in coin of the present standard value at the pleasure of the United States after thirty years from the date of their issue, and bearing interest payable semi-annually in such coin at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum.

Thus it will be perceived that instead of the three series of bonds provided by the Senate, the House proposed to authorize the issue of $1,000,000,000, redeemable in coin after thirty years from the date of their issue, with 4 per cent.; and this difference in the description of the bonds was the chief difference between the proposition of the House and the Senate. To emphasize this difference I will read what was said by the chairman of the House committee reporting the bill:

It is a proposition to refund a portion of the public debt of the country at a very much lower rate of interest. It is a propos tion that $1,000,000,000 of that debt shall take the form of bonds, upon which the United States will agree to pay only 4 per cent. per annum. But in order to make those bonds acceptable to capitalists at home and abroad, further provision is made that the bonds themselves shall have a longer time to run, not merely for thirty years, but that they shall only be redeemable after thirty years; thus giving them, without the objections, the advantages which in a great degree attach to a perpetual loan.

This bill, with a very limited debate, passed the House on the 1st of July, 1870, and then immediately was offered as a substitute for the Senate bill and was adopted.

Those two rival propositions, differing mainly upon the question of the character of the bonds to be issued, were sent to a committee of conference composed on the part of the Senate of Messrs. SHERMAN, Sumner, and Davis. It appears that the chief controversy in the conference was as to the description of funding bonds to be provided for. After many meetings it was finally agreed that the bonds authorized should be $200,000,000 5 per cent. bonds, $300,000,000 4½ per cent. bonds of the character described in the Senate bill, and $1,000,000,000 of 4 per cent. bonds, as described in the House bill. In other words, it was a compromise which, like many other compromises, was in its results an injury of great magnitude, but it was an honest difference of opinion between the Senate and the House, in which, tested by the march of time, the Senate was right and the House was wrong. But it is perfectly manifest that without this concession by the Senate to the House the bill could not have passed, and even with this concession the first report of the committee of conference was disagreed to by the House because of certain provisions requiring the national banks to provide the new bonds as the basis of banking, as circulation. This disagreement by the House compelled a second committee of conference, in which the contested banking section was stricken out and the bill agreed to as it now stands on the statute-books.

And thus thirty-year securities now at a premium of more than 25 per cent. were forced into the law by the determined action of the House. Where the Senator from Kentucky stood on this question, or other gentlemen who now make complaint, I have not stopped to inquire, because I wish to make no personal issue. No doubt the members were honest in their convictions that long 4 per cent. bonds were best for the Government, better than the issue of short bonds bearing 4½ or 5 per cent. interest, but certain it is that the then House of Representatives is responsible for the terms of these bonds, and that I at least am free from this blame, if there be any, and am rather entitled to the credit, whatever it may be, of forming a better estimate as to what was best for the interests of the people of the United States.

Every man now who can see backwards can see what a terrible mistake that was. It makes a difference of one or two hundred millions of dollars. But does any man reproach those in public life who honestly believed that the time would never come when the Government of the United States could borrow money at less than 4 per cent.? They thought so, and I never would reproach them. I do not mention a name; I will not quote their language, because they were as hot as I was in insisting on other terms and conditions.

Mr. President, these are the three things about which I have been arraigned, and a kind of personal attack has been made upon me. The Senator talked about resumption. I do not want to say anything about resumption. Who does not feel that that great work of courage, not only in Congress but in the Departments and among the people, was one of the proud triumphs of our age and generation? I have no apologies to make for it.

As to the silver question, I am perfectly willing to debate it. I am not opposed to silver. I wish to God I could add more than 30 per cent. to the value of every grain of silver in the mines and in the world. The interest of our country is to have both gold and silver. You never can keep them at the present ratio except by doing one of two things, and that the Senator from Kentucky wants to break down. You must maintain the silver dollar at the gold standard by receiving them as gold and hoarding them when they are not readily taken by the people. If you would force the silver dollars now in the Treasury out among the people, you would break down their credit so that they would fall more and more. You therefore have either to maintain them at the gold standard by redeeming them at par with gold or you have got to put more silver in them to make them equal in market value to gold. I do not want to precipitate this question, and do not care to discuss it. The arguments are old. I do not care to have them repeated and printed at every session.

Whenever I can see the way clear, by general consent of the people interested in this product, with the consent of Colorado and Nevada and California, to take any steps to deal with the silver question, I am willing to do it. I think the time may come when we can make the silver production in our country the basis for coin certificates; but then we must buy it at market value; we must not take it at an artificial value. But after all the efforts of our silver friends, by these fierce attempts to get their money into circulation, silver has gone down steadily under this process. I should like to see it advanced, and I believe I can see my way clear to measures which if agreed to by them—reasonable in their character—would bring up silver nearer to its old standard.

When finally a fair ratio is fixed by the commercial nations of the relative value of silver and gold in the world, all we can do is to adopt that ratio and base our action upon it. This Senate and this nation are powerful in many things, but they have not the power to fix the value in anything. You may hold a thing up to a standard of value by receiving it and redeeming it, but you can not make the value of a plate or a bar of iron or a grain of wheat. That is beyond the power of man. It must be fixed by the general market value among commercial nations. I do not intend to be led off into that discussion. Whenever the time comes when a bill of this kind, such as the Senator has introduced, shall be taken up and discussed in an orderly way, so that we can present our views to each other, not in the presence of a captivating audience, not for the purpose of filling the tomes of our RECORD, but for legitimate debate to convince each other as to what is best for our country, I shall be present with my friend from Kentucky prepared to consider the question.

ADDITIONAL REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. PALMER. I desire to make a report out of order. I report amendments from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry to the bill (S. 2083) to provide for the establishment of a Bureau of Animal Industry, and to facilitate the exportation of live-stock and their products, to extirpate contagious pleuro-pneumonia and other diseases among domestic animals, and for other purposes, and move that they be printed with the original bill. This will supersede the motion that I made yesterday, and I ask the reference of the motion to print the bill and amendments be made to the Committee on Printing.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be so referred.

Mr. BLAIR. I present a report from the Committee on Pensions on the bill (S. 373) for the relief of women enrolled as Army nurses, etc., proposing an amendment to the bill, which is already on the Calendar. I ask the Secretary to note a correction in the Calendar entry. The bill is reported with an amendment and not "without amendment," as stated on the Calendar.

Mr. BLAIR, from the Committee on Education and Labor, to whom was referred the bill (S. 405) providing for the adjustment of accounts of laborers, workmen, and mechanics arising under the eight-hour law, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

REPORT OF CAPT. EUGENE GRIFFIN.

Mr. DAWES submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and are hereby, directed to communicate to the Senate a copy of the report of Capt. Eugene Griffin to Maj. William Ludlow, late one of said commissioners, on the subject of electricity as a motor power for street cars, made in January last, and of all papers connected therewith.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 2017) to incorporate the Rock Creek Railway Company of the District of Columbia was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The bill (H. R. 5373) to change the location of a certain alley in the city of Washington was read twice by its title.

Mr. VANCE. I desire to have that bill lie on the table, with a view of substituting it for a bill already reported in this body.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Senator desires to substitute this for the bill on the Calendar, that can be done, and the Senate bill indefinitely postponed.

Mr. VANCE. The Senate bill is in precisely the same words as the House bill. It is the bill (S. 1519) to change the location of a certain alley in the city of Washington. I move that it be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The House bill 5373 having been read twice, will be substituted on the Calendar for the bill just disposed of.

The bill (H. R. 4601) to amend the naval record of Nicholas Leuschen, Peter Leuschen, and Loth Possum was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The bill (H. R. 5617) to provide for the leasing of premises for the Washington city post-office was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

The bill (H. R. 6591) for the relief of S. Dillinger & Sons was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

The bill (H. R. 8309) to secure for the District of Columbia a compilation of the laws of said District was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

VALUATION OF IMPORTED MERCHANDISE.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that the regular order be laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The unfinished business will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (S. 977) to regulate the importation of foreign merchandise and to secure uniformity in the classification and valuation thereof, and for other purposes.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to say one word respecting this bill. I give notice that to-morrow morning, after the morning business shall have been concluded, I will ask the Senate to proceed with the consideration of the pending bill, hoping that we may conclude its consideration to-morrow. I now move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 3 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, March 14, 1888, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, March 13, 1888.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. J. H. CUTHBERT D. D., of Washington, D. C.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

SIGNAL CORPS.

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief Signal Officer, a draught and recommending the passage of a bill to make enlisted men of the Signal Corps responsible for public property; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

FORT MEADE, DAK.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Secretary of War of appropriation for purchase of land near Fort Meade, Dak., for the purpose of obtaining a water supply; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

HOT SPRINGS, ARK.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House the joint resolution (H. Res. 117) to enable the Secretary of the Interior to utilize the hot water now running to waste on the permanent reservation at Hot Springs, Ark., and for other purposes, with Senate amendments; and a message from the Senate that it insisted upon its amendments to the joint resolution, agreed to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. TELLER, Mr. PADDOCK, and Mr. WALTHALL to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. MORGAN for ten days, on account of sickness in his family.

REPRINT OF BILL.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House the following request:

Mr. STEELE, from the Committee on Military Affairs, states that the bill (H. R. 6106) for the relief of certain volunteer soldiers is exhausted, and to accommodate members asks that a reprint of said bill be ordered.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

WASHINGTON CITY POST-OFFICE.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 5617) to provide for the lease of premises for the Washington city post-office, and that the bill be now put upon its passage.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster-General be empowered to lease suitable premises in the city of Washington for the purposes of the Washington city post-office.

Mr. RANDALL. I think there ought to be some statement in reference to the necessity for that.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. Let the report be read.

The report (by Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois) was read, as follows:

The Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads reports back the bill (H. R. 5617) to empower the Postmaster-General to lease suitable premises in the city of Washington for the purposes of the city post-office, and recommends its passage.

Under the present law buildings for post-offices of the first and second classes, except within the District of Columbia, can be leased by the Department in the name of the United States for such term of years as may be agreed upon. These leases are usually made for a term of five years, although the Department has no power to bind the United States for a longer term than the period of the appropriation.

Within the District of Columbia, however, the act of March 3, 1877, does not permit a contract to be made for the rental of any building to be used for the purposes of the Government until an appropriation therefor shall have been made in terms by Congress. The present bill simply brings the rental of buildings in the District of Columbia under the law applicable to leasing of buildings for post-offices. The present condition of the city post-office renders this necessary.

In the opinion of your committee the Washington city post-office, though conveniently located, is in a building insufficient and unsuitable for its proper requirements. The building is not owned by the Government and no continuing lease of it exists. Since the beginning of the present fiscal year the proprietor of this building has demanded double the rent previously paid. As the Department has no authority to lease suitable buildings, the post-office is continuing in this building under the demand for double the rent formerly paid, although the payment of the increase asked for has been refused.

To relieve the present embarrassment the committee recommends the passage of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. PEEL. With the understanding that if the bill provokes discussion it shall be withdrawn, I will not object.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

By unanimous consent, the Committee on Appropriations was discharged from the further consideration of the communication from the Secretary of the Treasury in relation to hand and steam presses in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and it was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

FIRE-PROOF BUILDING AT SPRINGFIELD ARMORY.

Mr. ROCKWELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 5639) to provide for the erection of a fire-proof workshop at the Springfield Armory, and that it be now put upon its passage. Yesterday the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. STONE], through a misunderstanding, objected to the consideration of the bill, but he is now willing to withdraw the objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. BLAND. I shall not object to the consideration of the bill; but, as I said yesterday, if it is to be considered I want to debate it. I am not willing that these bills for the construction of public buildings shall pass without discussion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. PEEL. If the bill is to be debated, I shall have to object.

Mr. ROCKWELL. I trust the gentleman will not object. Two bills from the other side of the House have been passed this morning, and there is no objection at all to this bill. It is not for the erection of a post-office or court building, and it will not take more than three minutes to dispose of it.

Mr. PEEL. I understand the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] to say that there will be discussion of the bill.

Mr. BLAND. I stated yesterday that I did not propose to stand here and object to every such bill, but I do intend that they shall not pass without discussion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. PEEL. I object.

S. DILLINGER & SONS.

Mr. McCULLOGH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 6591) for the relief of S. Dillinger & Sons.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to pay to S. Dillinger & Sons, of Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $511.20; the same being money paid for stamps for distilled spirits on the 17th day of June, 1881, which said spirits were destroyed by fire on the same day before said stamps were received at the distillery.

The report (by Mr. McCULLOGH) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6591) for the relief of S. Dillinger & Sons, have had the same under consideration, and respectfully report as follows:

On the 16th day of June, 1881, S. Dillinger & Sons, then engaged in the business of distilling grain, purchased from the collector of internal revenue for the Twenty-second Pennsylvania district revenue stamps of the value of $396.90 for eleven packages of distilled spirits. On the morning of the 17th, before these stamps were attached, the packages for which they were bought were destroyed by fire. Application was made to the Treasury Department for repayment of the money, and the purchased stamps were submitted with the other papers, and are now in the Department. To this application the Commissioner of Internal Revenue made the following response:

"TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
"Washington, May 22, 1882.

"SIR: The claims of S. Dillinger & Sons, for the refunding of $208.80 and $188.10, respectively, taxes paid on spirits alleged to have been destroyed by fire, have been rejected by the honorable Secretary of the Treasury. The money in payment for the stamps was received by the collector June 16, 1881, and the spirits were destroyed June 17, 1881.

"The Secretary decides 'that under section 3295 (Rev. Stat.) payment for stamps is held * * * to be a payment of the tax, and that section 3221 (Rev. Stat.) authorizes relief by abatement only in case of loss before payment, or by refunding only in case of the collection of the tax after the destruction, and this case does not come under either category.'

"The Secretary adds that 'the claimants must apply to Congress for relief, and can take their claims there with the emphatic recommendation of this Department.'

"Respectfully,

"GREEN B. RAUM, Commissioner."

In view of the facts stated, the committee recommend the passage of the bill, with an amendment, by striking out the words "five hundred and eleven dollars and twenty cents," in the sixth and seventh lines, and inserting "three hundred and ninety-six dollars and ninety cents." The amount stated in the bill includes interest. The amount proposed to be inserted is the actual sum paid for the stamps, without interest.

The amendment reported by the Committee on Claims was agreed to.

There being no objection, the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McCULLOGH moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

NICKOLAS LEUSCHEN AND OTHERS.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take up and consider at this time the bill (H. R. 4601) to amend the naval record of Nickolas Leuschen, Peter Leuschen, etc. The bill involves no appropriation of money. It is simply designed to rectify the record of three enlisted men of the United States Navy during the war.

The bill was read, as follows:

Whereas Nickolas Leuschen, Peter Leuschen, and Loth Possum, citizens of the United States and residents of Erie, Pa., did, on the 13th day of July, A. D. 1864, enlist at Erie, Pa., as volunteers in the United States Navy for three years or during the war; and

Whereas they were taken to Buffalo, in the State of New York, and there, without their knowledge or consent, sold as substitutes, so that their names now appear on the records of the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting as substitutes, credited as such to the Thirtieth Congressional district, in the State of New York, instead of as volunteers from the Twenty-seventh Congressional district, in the State of Pennsylvania; and

Whereas they were honorably discharged at the expiration of their three years of service: Therefore,

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause the names of Nickolas Leuschen, Peter Leuschen, and Loth Possum to be entered on the appropriate records of the Navy Department as volunteers, enlisted in the United States Navy July 13, 1864, at Erie, Pa., and to cause them to be credited to the Twenty-seventh Congressional district of the State of Pennsylvania.

SEC. 2. That they are hereby restored to the standing and to all the rights, privileges, advantages, immunities, and emoluments, past, present, and prospective now enjoyed or to be hereafter enjoyed by volunteer soldiers and sailors of the United States.

The report (by Mr. WISE) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4601) to correct the naval record of Nickolas Leuschen, Peter Leuschen, and Loth Possum, report as follows:

That the petition of Nickolas Leuschen, Peter Leuschen, and Loth Possum represents that they enlisted at Erie, Pa., on the 13th day of July, 1864, as volunteers in the United States Navy for three years or during the war. Several days after their enlistment they were examined by Inspecting Surgeon Charles Justice and mustered into the service by James Cummins, both of whom are now living at Erie, Pa. Subsequently they were put aboard the United States receiving-ship North Carolina, then lying at the Brooklyn navy-yard.

About the 20th of September of the same year they were transferred to the United States transport Kensington, when, for the first time, they discovered that they had been sold as substitutes, which deprived them of their rights and standing in the naval service of the United States as volunteers. They reported the discovery at once to the commander of the North Carolina, who advised them to do nothing and remain silent until the Kensington had reached her destination, when he assured them justice would be done them.

Since that time they have made repeated efforts to secure from the Government that recognition which they considered due to them as volunteers; but all their efforts have thus far failed. The Navy Department records show that they were enlisted as substitutes and not as volunteers, and the Department has no authority to correct those records.

The following is an extract from a letter from Hon. William C. Whitney, Secretary of the Navy, under date of February 14, 1888:

"In reply I have the honor to state that the records of the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting show that Nickolas Leuschen, Peter Leuschen, and Loth Possum were enlisted in July, 1864, at Buffalo, N. Y., for three years, as substitutes, and that they were credited as such to the Thirtieth Congressional district of New York. The names of the persons for whom they became substitutes were not reported to the bureau in connection with their enlistment, and no information appears upon the records of the Department in relation to the alleged deception practiced in their cases, whereby they were enlisted as substitutes instead of volunteers. * * * That, as the names of the persons for whom they became substitutes were not reported to the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting, the Department is inclined to give due weight to their statements concerning the manner in which their enlistment was procured, and to regard their claims as deserving of favorable consideration."

A number of citizens of Erie, Pa., where the brothers Leuschen reside, certify that they are personally acquainted with them and know them to be men of excellent character and undoubted integrity. Strong Vincent Post, No. 67, and Robert Wainright Scott Post, No. 464, Department of Pennsylvania, Grand Army of the Republic, unite in asking that the records of their service be made to conform to the facts.

The statements contained in the petition have been corroborated by representations made by Hon. W. L. Scott, member of Congress from Erie (Pa.) district, who knows the parties named in the bill and was conversant with the facts at the time of their enlistment, and the injustice done them. He also knows them to be men of character and integrity.

With the petition, the substance of which has been given above, the affidavits of William Taylor and Charles Justice were filed. The former was the officer who enlisted Nickolas and Peter Leuschen and Loth Possum, and the latter was the inspecting surgeon who examined and passed them. Copies of these affidavits are appended.

The committee are satisfied that these men were the victims of a foul conspiracy, and recommend the passage of the bill.

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA, Erie County, ss:

Personally appeared before me, an alderman, ex officio justice of the peace in and for the city of Erie, Pa., Charles Justice, who, being duly sworn according to law, deposeth and saith that his home is at Erie, Pa.; that he is personally acquainted with Nickolas and Peter Leuschen and Loth Possum, and that he knew them in 1864; that in July, 1864, he was inspecting surgeon at the naval rendezvous at Buffalo, N. Y.; that in that capacity he examined and passed Nickolas and Peter Leuschen and Loth Possum; that at that time he knew that said N. and P. Leuschen and L. Possum had enlisted in the United States naval service as volunteers, and that a fraud was being perpetrated upon them at Buffalo, N. Y., and that when he attempted to protest and expostulate he was commanded by his superiors to attend strictly to his own business.

CHARLES JUSTICE.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 13th day of February, 1888.

[SEAL.] DANIEL McMAHON, Alderman.

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA,
Erie County, ss:

Personally appeared before me, an alderman, ex officio justice of the peace in and for the city of Erie, Pa., William Taylor, who, being duly sworn according to law, deposeth and saith that his home is at Erie, Pa.; that he is well acquainted with Nickolas and Peter Leuschen and Loth Possum, and that he knew them in the year 1864; that in the year 1864 he, said William Taylor, was the United States enlisting officer at Erie, Pa., and that in that capacity he enlisted Nickolas and Peter Leuschen and Loth Possum, in the month of July, 1864, as volunteers for the naval service of the United States.

WILLIAM TAYLOR.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 13th day of February, 1888.

[SEAL.] DANIEL McMAHON, Alderman.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. PEEL. If it is understood that the bill will be withdrawn if it provokes discussion I shall not object.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. SCOTT moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. PEEL. Regular order.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take up and consider at this time the bill which I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. PEEL] demands the regular order.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. This bill will take but a moment. It simply grants a right of way through a military reservation. It will not lead to debate.

Mr. PEEL. It would take half an hour to read a right-of-way bill.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. Oh, no.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Speaker, I shall be compelled to demand the regular order. This day has been assigned for business reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs, and if we let it be frittered away in this manner we shall not get anything done.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is demanded. The regular order is the call of committees for reports.

REGULAR MEETINGS OF CONGRESS.

Mr. OATES, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back adversely the bill (H. R. 1290) to fix the times for the regular meetings of Congress; which was referred to the House Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

Mr. OATES. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ADAMS] desires to file the views of a minority of the committee on this bill. I ask that leave be given for that purpose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the absence of objection, that leave will be granted.

JOHN W. MEARS.

Mr. CASWELL, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3235) to restore to John W. Mears a fine improperly imposed on him; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MERCHANTS' NATIONAL BANK OF POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

Mr. BACON, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, reported as a substitute for House bill 932 a bill (H. R. 8464) for the relief of the Merchants' National Bank of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

House bill 932 was, by unanimous consent, laid on the table.

COINAGE OF DOUBLE EAGLES, ETC.

Mr. BLAND, from the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 7409) limiting the coinage of double eagles and discontinuing the coinage of certain United States coins; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC DEFENSE.

Mr. CUTCHEON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported, in lieu of House bills 1555 and 4297, a bill (H. R. 8465) to provide for the public defense; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. SAYERS. I desire to reserve all points of order on this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That reservation will be noted.

House bills 1555 and 4297, in lieu of which House bill 8465 was reported, were, by unanimous consent, laid on the table.

SALE OF GOVERNMENT PROPERTY, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Mr. MAISH, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 6145) authorizing and directing the sale of certain property belonging to the United States situate in Pittsburgh, Pa.; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PAY OF ENSIGNS, UNITED STATES NAVY.

Mr. WISE, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 4465) to regulate the pay of ensigns of the United States Navy; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. HERBERT. I ask leave to file the views of a minority of the Committee on Naval Affairs upon this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the absence of objection, leave will be granted.

SALE OF LAND IN HOUSTON, TEX.

Mr. LAFFOON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5690) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to sell block of land 108 in the city of Houston, Tex.; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADMISSION OF NEW STATES.

Mr. SPRINGER, from the Committee on the Territories, reported back, in lieu of House bills 1276, 1955, 4430, and 4431, a bill (H. R. 8466) to enable the people of Dakota, Montana, Washington, and New Mexico to form constitutions and State governments, and to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

House bills 1276, 1955, 4430, and 4431 were, by unanimous consent, laid on the table.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to ask leave that a minority of the Committee on Territories may file, to be printed in connection with the report of the committee, their views on the bill just referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. STRUBLE. I expect, on behalf of a minority of the committee, to file their views during the day.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the absence of objection, leave to file the views of the minority will be granted.

APPRAISER'S WAREHOUSE, CHICAGO.

Mr. DIBBLE, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported, in lieu of House bills 4938 and 4941, a bill (H. R. 8467) to further provide for an appraiser's warehouse at Chicago, Ill.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

The bills H. R. 4938 and H. R. 4941 were ordered to be laid on the table.

PUBLIC BUILDING, FORT WORTH, TEX.

Mr. BANKHEAD, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 1875) for the erection of a public building at Fort Worth, Tex.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, GALESBURGH, ILL.

Mr. POST, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 7038) for the erection of a public building at the city of Galesburgh, Ill.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, DAVENPORT, IOWA.

Mr. POST also, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported, as a substitute for House bill 7044, a bill (H. R. 8468) for the erection of a public building at Davenport, Iowa; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

The bill H. R. 7044 was ordered to be laid on the table.

CYRENIUS G. STRYKER.

Mr. PIDCOCK, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5234) granting a pension to Cyrenius G. Stryker; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ALETTA V. QUICK.

Mr. PIDCOCK also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 7181) granting a pension to Aletta V. Quick; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

GEORGE E. OLIPHANT.

Mr. MATSON, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 2167) for the relief of George E. Oliphant; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN E. SMITH.

Mr. MATSON also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 130) granting a pension to John E. Smith; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PETER CLARK, JR.

Mr. MORRILL, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6971) to pension Peter Clark, jr.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

HANNAH VARQUISON.

Mr. MORRILL also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 431) granting a pension to Hannah Varquison; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

WILLIAM J. MILLER.

Mr. MORRILL also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 4519) to grant a pension to William J. Miller; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ISAAC DILLEY.

Mr. MORRILL also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 7171) to restore to the pension-roll the name of Isaac Dilley; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JULIET G. HOWE.

Mr. MORRILL also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 8117) granting a pension to Mrs. Juliet G. Howe; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENT OF THE PENSION LAWS.

Mr. MORRILL also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 4953) to amend paragraph 3 of section 4693 of the Revised Statutes, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Mr. MORRILL also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with adverse recommendations bills of the following titles; which were severally ordered to be laid on the table, and the accompanying reports printed, namely:

A bill (H. R. 5950) to increase the pension of John Smith; and

A bill (H. R. 3184) granting a pension to John P. Schmitz.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with adverse recommendations bills of the following titles; which were laid upon the table, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. 2415) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary A. Bailey; and

A bill (H. R. 4108) granting a pension to Lucinda Belcher.

NELLIE PALFREY GOODWIN.

Mr. GALLINGER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 7913) granting a pension to Nellie Palfrey Goodwin; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ABBIE R. BROWN.

Mr. GALLINGER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 7642) granting a pension to Abbie R. Brown; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the acacompnying report, ordered to be printed.

HANNAH H. GRANT.

Mr. GALLINGER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 7466) granting a pension to Hannah H. Grant; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CHARLES F. WARD.

Mr. GALLINGER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 6520) to increase the pension of Charles F. Ward; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the amendments and accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MRS. MERCY KNIGHT.

Mr. GALLINGER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 2413) granting a pension to Mrs. Mercy Knight; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

FRANK LEWIS.

Mr. GALLINGER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 7574) granting a pension to Frank Lewis; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ALOURED H. GREGORY.

Mr. GALLINGER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 5311) granting a pension to Aloured H. Gregory; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the amendments and accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ALPHEUS DYER.

Mr. GALLINGER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 4891) granting a pension to Alpheus Dyer; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

EPHRAIM REYNOLDS.

Mr. GALLINGER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 809) granting a pension to Ephraim Reynolds; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JESSE H. STRICKLAND.

Mr. GALLINGER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with amendments the bill (S. 381) for the relief of Jesse H. Strickland; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the amendments and accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ELIZABETH TWIGG.

Mr. SPOONER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 5847) granting a pension to Elizabeth Twigg; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

HENRY B. VERY.

Mr. SPOONER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (S. 173) granting a pension to Henry B. Very; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MRS. ARABELLA CODDINGTON.

Mr. SPOONER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (S. 293) granting a pension to Mrs. Arabella Coddington; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

HENRY STAFFORD.

Mr. SPOONER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (S. 679) granting a pension to Henry Stafford; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JAMES M. M'KUHAN.

Mr. HUNTER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 6576) for the relief of James M. McKuhan; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JAMES L. ALSIP.

Mr. HUNTER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 6575) for the relief of James L. Alsip; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN WITHAM.

Mr. HUNTER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 6845) granting a pension to John Witham; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MILTON JUDD.

Mr. HUNTER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 3712) increasing the pension of Milton Judd; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MARY O'NEILL.

Mr. FRENCH, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 3745) granting a pension to Mary O'Neill; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ELIZABETH BURR.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 488) granting a pension to Elizabeth Burr; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

DOLLY BLAZER.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio, also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 3959) granting a pension to Dolly Blazer; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

LIZZIE WRIGHT OWEN.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio, also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (S. 42) granting a pension to Lizzie Wright Owen; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHANNA LOEWINGER.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio, also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (S. 739) granting a pension to Johanna Loewinger; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BERRY DAY.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio, also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (S. 737) granting a pension to Berry Day; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ELIZA DOUGLASS.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio, also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (S. 339) granting a pension to Eliza Douglass; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CHARLES F. ALLGOWER.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio, also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (S. 334) granting an increase of pension to Charles F. Allgower; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

REUBEN BROWNMILLER.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio, also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (S. 333) granting a pension to Reuben Brownmiller; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN KALBFLEISCH.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio, also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (S. 331) granting a pension to John Kalbfleisch; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

C. R. THOMAS.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio, also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported with amendments the bill (S. 335) granting an increase of pension to C. R. Thomas; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ENOS J. SEARLES.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio, also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported with an amendment the bill (S. 738) granting a pension to the guardian of Enos J. Searles, of Clermont, Ohio; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MARY E. JOHNSON.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio, also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported with an amendment a bill (S. 337) granting a pension to Mary E. Johnson; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MANON VANGORDON.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio, also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with an amendment the bill (S. 330) granting a pension to Manon Vangordon; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

DEPENDENT PARENTS' PENSIONS.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with an amendment the bill (H. R. 1688) relating to claims for pensions by dependent parents; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CLARISSA G. GREEN.

Mr. SAWYER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 8266) for the relief of Mrs. Clarissa G. Green; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

LYDIA A. HICKS.

Mr. SAWYER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 8260) granting a pension to Lydia A. Hicks; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORT.

Mr. SAWYER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back adversely the bill (S. 824) granting a pension to John Geibel; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, with an adverse recommendation.

CASPAR SEIBEL.

Mr. YODER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 3922) to place the name of Caspar Seibel on the pension-roll; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JACOB BEHR.

Mr. YODER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 4864) to place the name of Jacob Behr on the pension-roll; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MARY M. SWEET.

Mr. YODER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 955) granting a pension to Mary M. Sweet; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JAMES R. PORTER.

Mr. YODER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6552) to increase the pension of James R. Porter; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

REBECCA E. SHOEMAKER.

Mr. YODER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6990) to place the name of Rebecca E. Shoemaker on the pension-roll; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN GERMAN.

Mr. LANE, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3504) for the relief of John German; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

DAVID JOHNSON.

Mr. LANE also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5363) granting a pension to David Johnson; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN E. LEWIS.

Mr. LANE also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 7665) granting a pension to John E. Lewis; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JULIA TRIGGS.

Mr. LANE also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5752) for the relief of Julia Triggs; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MARGARET M. HATCH.

Mr. LANE also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5751) for the relief of Margaret M. Hatch; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MARTHA GRAY.

Mr. LANE also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 2071) for the relief of Martha Gray; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CYNTHIA J. LEROY.

Mr. LANE also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 7891) for the relief of Cynthia J. Leroy; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

WILLIAM RICHARDSON.

Mr. LANE also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (S. 1638) granting a pension to William Richardson; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MARY H. NICHOLSON.

Mr. CHIPMAN, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 6317) for the relief of Mary H. Nicholson; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

HENRY L. POTTER.

Mr. CHIPMAN also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 7857) to increase the pension of Henry L. Potter; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN TAYLOR.

Mr. CHIPMAN also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 2656) to increase the pension of John Taylor; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calender, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ELISHA GRISWOLD.

Mr. CHIPMAN also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (S. 835) for the relief of Elisha Griswold; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHANNA ECKHARDT.

Mr. BLISS, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 2116) granting a pension to Johanna Eckhardt; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

LEWIS DAVIS.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5903) for the relief of Lewis Davis, a soldier of the war of 1812; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORT.

Mr. BLISS also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back adversely the petition of Thomas Shackelford to be placed on the pension-roll; which was laid on the table, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

W. A. LEMASTER.

Mr. HENDERSON, of North Carolina, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (S. 647) for the relief of W. A. Lemaster; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

GEORGE KINCAID.

Mr. FINLEY, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 7719) granting an increase of pension to George Kincaid; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

WILLIAM COMPTON.

Mr. FINLEY also, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6574) for the relief of William Compton; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

M. M. GIBSON.

Mr. LANHAM, from the Committee on Claims, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 8012) for the relief of M. M. Gibson; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN M. HIGGS.

Mr. LANHAM also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 8102) for the relief of John M. Higgs; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed

C. L. WILSON.

Mr. LANHAM also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 7232) for the relief of C. L. Wilson; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

STATE NATIONAL BANK OF NEW ORLEANS.

Mr. SHAW, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3715) for the relief of the State National Bank of New Orleans, formerly Louisiana State Bank; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

COMMISSIONS DUE OWNERS OF PRIVATE DIES.

Mr. SHAW also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 1268) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury and the proper accounting officers to restate, settle, and pay to the owners of private dies the balance of commissions due them; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report ordered, to be printed.

M. C. MORDECAI.

Mr. SHAW also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5405) for the relief of M. C. Mordecai; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN FINN.

Mr. MANSUR, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 2573) for the relief of John Finn; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES OF JAMES HALE.

Mr. MANSUR also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 7363) for the relief of the legal representatives of James Hale; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN T. JOHNSTON.

Mr. MANSUR also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6298) for the relief of John T. Johnston; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MICHAEL PIGGOTT.

Mr. MANSUR also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back adversely the bill (H. R. 5362) for the relief of Michael Piggott; which was laid on the table.

He also, from the same committee, reported a bill (H. R. 8469) for the relief of Michael Pigott; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

NEWTON M'COY.

Mr. MANSUR also, from the Committee on Claims, reported a bill (H. R. 8470) for the relief of Newton McCoy; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JAMES OBRION.

Mr. KERR, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6602) for the relief of James Obrion; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

WILLIAM DOLTON.

Mr. McCULLOGH, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 914) referring the claim of William Dolton to the Court of Claims; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

R. G. HUSTON & CO.

Mr. McCULLOGH also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 4702) for the relief of R. G. Huston & Co.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JACOB KERN.

Mr. McCULLOGH also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 7176) for the relief of Jacob Kern; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CAPT. J. W. KOUNTZ.

Mr. McCULLOGH also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 2865) for the relief of Capt. J. W. Kountz; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CHARLES MURPHY.

Mr. McCULLOGH also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 2042) for the relief of Charles Murphy; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

THOMAS P. MORGAN, JR.

Mr. BOWDEN, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill, H. R. 3743, for the relief of Thomas P. Morgan, jr.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

The bill H. R. 3743 was ordered to be laid on the table.

JENNIE D. RICE.

Mr. LAIDLAW, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3722) for the relief of Jennie D. Rice; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ELIZABETH MULVEHILL.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 8002) for the relief of Elizabeth Mulvehill; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

WILLIAM LAVERY.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky, also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 610) for the relief of William Lavery; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ST. JOSEPH'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, MISSOURI.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky, also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 5426) for the relief of St. Joseph's Commercial College, at St. Joseph, Mo.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

W. H. BOYD.

Mr. BROWER, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5888) for the relief of W. H. Boyd; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MRS. A. SHIRLEY.

Mr. BROWER also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 8133) for the relief of Mrs. A. Shirley; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOSEPH B. M'CLINTOCK.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 8313) for the relief of Joseph B. McClintock; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

SEVENTH REGIMENT TENNESSEE INFANTRY.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin, also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 1068) for the relief of the officers and soldiers of the Seventh Regiment Tennessee Infantry; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

SAMUEL HOWARD.

Mr. WILKINSON, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 7809) for the relief of Samuel Howard; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORT.

Mr. CROUSE, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back adversely the bill (H. R. 455) for the relief of Albert D. Spalter; which was ordered to be laid on the table and the accompanying report printed.

SARAH M. LARIMER.

Mr. WILLIAMS, from the Select Committee on Indian Depredation Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 777) to compensate Mrs. Sarah M. Larimer for important services rendered the military authorities, in 1864, at Bear Creek Station, Wyoming, and for loss of property taken by Sioux Indians; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

EXTRA PAY TO CERTAIN VOLUNTEERS.

Mr. STEELE, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 1398) allowing extra pay to certain volunteer officers of the late war; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MIAMI INDIANS, INDIANA.

Mr. COBB, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported back with adverse recommendation the bill (H. R. 2099) to reimburse the Miami Indians of Indiana for moneys improperly taken from them; which, with the adverse report, was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. NELSON asked and obtained leave to file the views of the minority, to accompany the report of the committee on said bill.

PUBLIC BUILDING, PUEBLO, COLO.

Mr. BANKHEAD, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 1264) for the erection of a public building at Pueblo, Colo.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

LIFE-SAVING STATIONS.

Mr. TARSNEY, from the Committee on Commerce, reported, as a substitute for the bill (H. R. 6684) establishing additional life-saving stations on the Atlantic coast of the United States, a bill (H. R. 8505) establishing a life-saving station on the Atlantic coast, between Indian River Inlet, Delaware, and Ocean City, Md.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

The bill H. R. 6684 was laid on the table.

SECTION 4414, REVISED STATUTES.

Mr. TARSNEY also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 5640) to amend section 4414 of the Revised Statutes of the United States; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the amendments and accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ANDREW S. CORE.

Mr. BLISS, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 4148) for the relief of Andrew S. Core; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the amendments and accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

G. B. HORWITZ.

Mr. TURNER, of Georgia, from the Committee on Ways and Means, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 2429) for the relief of G. B. Horwitz; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

SUBDIVISION OF LAND IN THE DISTRICT.

Mr. HEARD, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 3329) to regulate the subdivision of land within the District of Columbia; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

RECORDS OF THE REBELLION.

Mr. HOOKER. I am instructed by the unanimous action of the Committee on Military Affairs to report back with a favorable recommendation the resolution which I send to the desk; and I ask for its present consideration.

The resolution, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs on March 5, on motion of Mr. GROSVENOR, was read, as follows:

Whereas the House of Representatives did, on the 12th day of January, 1888, request the Secretary of War to inform the House whether, among other things, there had been any departure in the compilation of the Records of the War of the Rebellion as now carried on from the plan adopted when the work of compilation was in charge of the late Lieut. Col. R. N. Scott, "either in the arrangement or the subject-matter to be published;" to which, on February 14, 1888, the Secretary of War replied, upon the authority of the compiler, Lieut. Col. H. M. Lazelle, that there had been no change, but that in both the arrangement and the subject-matter to be published the former "instructions and requirements have been rigidly observed;" and

Whereas there is now good reason for the belief that unofficial matter, which contradicts the real official history of the transaction to which it relates, has been adopted as official and inserted in volume 20, part 2, of the Records of the War of the Rebellion: Therefore,

Resolved, That the Committee on Military Affairs be, and it is hereby, instructed to ascertain whether unofficial matter has been introduced into the said volume of the War Records; and if so introduced, under what circumstances and by whose authority it was done, and to report all the facts in the case to the House of Representatives.

Mr. REED. Will the gentleman from Mississippi give some explanation as to this?

Mr. HOOKER. This is a resolution which was introduced by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR]. The committee can not make the investigation until the resolution is adopted, and that is the recommendation of the committee.

The resolution was adopted.

Mr. HOOKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

INVESTIGATION OF TRUSTS.

Mr. BUCHANAN. On behalf of the chairman of the Committee on Manufactures, who is necessarily absent, I desire to offer the resolution which I send to the desk, and which by the vote of the committee he was instructed to offer, and to ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Manufactures be authorized to have printed such documents and testimony taken before it as it may deem necessary in connection with the investigation ordered to be made by the said committee during the present Congress.

The resolution was adopted.

Mr. BUCHANAN moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. COGSWELL, by unanimous consent, obtained indefinite leave of absence on account of sickness.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. LANDES, by unanimous consent, obtained leave to extend in the RECORD his remarks on Senate bill 418.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will now call the committees for one hour for the consideration of bills.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the consideration hour be dispensed with.

Mr. WILKINS. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is made. The hour begins at twenty minutes past 1 o'clock. The call rests with the Committee on Pacific Railroads.

Mr. WILKINS. I withdraw my objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. DINGLEY. I renew the objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. DINGLEY] renews the objection. The call is with the Committee on Pacific Railroads.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Pacific Railroads be passed for this day, with the privilege of taking up its business again when called.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

BUSINESS FROM THE COMMITTEE ON LABOR.

Mr. TARSNEY (when the Committee on Labor was called) submitted the following resolution:

Resolved, That Tuesday and Wednesday, March 20 and 21, immediately after the reading of the Journal, and also Wednesday, April 18, and Wednesday, May 16, be set apart for the consideration of labor bills, and that all speeches be limited to fifteen minutes; not to interfere with revenue or appropriation bills.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suppose this resolution is submitted for reference.

Mr. TARSNEY. I would be very glad to have it passed upon at this time; but if that can not be done, let it go to the Committee on Rules.

Mr. WILKINS. Let it be referred to the Committee on Rules.

There was no objection, and the resolution was so referred.

Mr. TARSNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask on behalf of the Committee on Labor that that committee be permitted to retain its place in the call. I make this request because the chairman of the committee is absent from the city—weather-bound in Philadelphia.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

MILITIA OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. MCADOO (when the Committee on the Militia was called). Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Committee on the Militia, I call up for present consideration the bill (H. R. 4961) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the more effectual organization of the militia of the District of Columbia," passed March 3, 1803. The bill does not make any appropriation of money, and I ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House under the five-minute rule.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 4961) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the more effectual organization of the militia of the District of Columbia," passed March 3, 1803.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MCADOO], that this bill be considered in the House under the five-minute rule?

Mr. PEEL. Regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This is the regular order, in the opinion of the Chair, during this hour. Does the gentleman from Arkansas object to the mode of consideration proposed by the gentleman from New Jersey?

Mr. PEEL. No, sir.

There was no objection, and the request of Mr. MCADOO was agreed to.

Mr. MCADOO. I now move to dispense with the first reading of the bill. I will then make a brief statement of its provisions, and also ask to have the report read.

The motion to dispense with the first reading of the bill was agreed to.

The report (by Mr. MCADOO) was read, as follows:

The Committee on the Militia, to whom was referred for consideration House bill 4961, to provide for the organization of the militia of the District of Columbia, having considered the same, beg leave to report as follows:

All measures relating to the militia are important. The militia are the popular and constitutional military defenders of the Republic. The founders of the Republic, jealous of a large standing army, made special constitutional provision for the militia. The citizen soldiery of the country have ever been on the side of liberty, and while defending just laws, preserving peace, and defending against foreign invasion, have never been the instruments of tyrants nor the destroyers of free States. This bill places the militia of the District of Columbia on the same footing as those of the several States.

The existing militia law for the District of Columbia was enacted in 1803. When that law was enacted the enrolled militia, which included every citizen between eighteen and forty-five years of age, was the essential and recognized military reserve of the country, and the law for the District of Columbia, like the laws of all the States, was framed with a view to instructing and utilizing it. As the population of the country increased, the necessity of requiring active duty from the whole body of the enrolled militia decreased and became well-nigh impracticable, and the States successively repealed the old militia laws and substituted laws recognizing and providing for volunteer militia. In the District of Columbia the old law still remains in existence, though its provisions have been utterly disregarded for many years, and the law has become not only obsolete, but impracticable.

It being an axiom, recognized in the Constitution of our country, that a well-regulated militia is necessary to the security of a republic, it would seem proper that at the capital of the Republic the militia should be made a model organization, and that the necessary legislation should be enacted to repeal these obsolete laws. The fact that the militia of the District of Columbia might be, in case of need, a protection for the enormous amount of public property accumulated here, and in any and every crisis the first defenders of the capital, makes it proper and desirable that the Government should extend to the militia of the District the same aid and encouragement that is extended by the States to their local organizations.

Although the proposed bill is long and apparently elaborate, it contains only the usual and necessary provisions that are included in the militia codes of nearly all the States. The bill carries with it no appropriation of money. Expenditures, other than issues from the regular stores of the Army, it is provided shall be estimated for in the annual estimate of appropriations for the District of Columbia, and thereby will be at all times within the control of Congress.

The bill has been examined and approved by the War Department, is urged by the existing militia organizations of the District, and the committee report back the bill with amendments, striking out section 63, adding a section to repeal the old law, and amending the title, and recommend that the bill as thus amended do pass.

Mr. MCADOO. Mr. Speaker, I will briefly explain the amendment. The sixty-third section of the bill excused from jury duty certain honorary members of the militia of the District of Columbia. It provided as follows:

That each company of the National Guard shall be entitled to enroll not exceeding twenty honorary members, who, upon the payment into the treasury of said company of not less than $25 annually, shall be exempt from active militia duty and jury duty, upon the exhibition of a receipt for such payment, for one year from the date thereof.

The committee thought this provision unwise, because we should have our very best citizens in the jury-box; and no one, by the simple payment of $25 per annum, should secure exemption from the performance of this important function of a citizen.

I now reserve the residue of my time, and ask that the bill be read by paragraphs for amendment.

The Clerk, proceeding to read the bill by sections for amendment, read down to and including section 63, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That every able-bodied male citizen resident within the District of Columbia, of the age of eighteen years and under the age of forty-five years, excepting persons exempted by section 2, and idiots, lunatics, common drunkards, vagabonds, paupers, and persons convicted of any infamous crime, shall be enrolled in the militia. Persons so convicted after enrollment shall forthwith be disenrolled; and in all cases of doubt respecting the age of a person enrolled, the burden of proof shall be upon him.

SEC. 2. That in addition to the persons exempted from enrollment in the militia by the general laws of the United States, the following persons shall also be exempted from enrollment in the militia of the District of Columbia, namely: Officers of the government of the District of Columbia; judges and officers of the courts of the District of Columbia; officers who have held commissions in the regular or volunteer Army or Navy of the United States; officers who have served for a period of five years in the militia of the District of Columbia or of any State of the United States; ministers of the gospel; practicing physicians; conductors and engine-drivers of railroad trains; members of the paid police and fire department.

SEC. 3. That the commissioners of the District of Columbia shall provide for the enrollment of the militia, and for this purpose may require the assessors of taxes, at the same time they are engaged in taking the assessment of valuation of real and personal property, to make a list of persons liable to enrollment; and such record shall be deemed a sufficient notification to all persons whose names are thus recorded that they have been enrolled in the militia. Immediately after the completion of each enrollment they shall furnish the commanding general of the militia with a copy of the same.

SEC. 4. That the enrolled militia shall not be subject to any duty except when called into the service of the United States, or to aid the civil authorities in the execution of the laws or suppression of riots.

SEC. 5. That whenever it shall be necessary to call out any portion of the enrolled militia the commander-in-chief shall order out, by draft or otherwise, or accept as volunteers as many as required. Every member of the enrolled militia who volunteers, or who is ordered out or drafted under the provisions of this act, who does not appear at the time and place designated, may be arrested by order of the commanding general and be tried and punished by a court-martial. The portion of the enrolled militia ordered out or accepted shall be mustered into service for such period as may be required, and the commanding general may assign them to existing organizations of the active militia, or may organize them as the exigencies of the occasion may require.

SEC. 6. That the President of the United States shall be the commander-in-chief of the militia of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 7. That there shall be appointed and commissioned by the President of the United States a commanding general of the militia of the District of Columbia, with the rank of brigadier-general, who shall hold office until his successor is appointed and qualified, but may be removed at any time by the President.

SEC. 8. That the staff of the militia of the District of Columbia shall be appointed and commissioned by the President, and hold office until their successors are appointed and qualified, but may be removed at any time by the President. It shall consist of one adjutant-general, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel; one inspector-general, one quartermaster-general, one commissary-general, one chief of ordnance, one chief engineer, one surgeon-general, one judge-advocate-general, and one inspector-general of rifle practice, each with the rank of major, and four aides-de-camp, each with the rank of captain. The commanding general may appoint a non-commmissioned staff of the militia, to consist of one sergeant-major, one quartermaster-sergeant, one commissary-sergeant, one ordnance-sergeant, two staff-sergeants, one hospital-steward, one color-sergeant, and one sergeant-bugler.

SEC. 9. That the President may assign an officer of the Army to act as adjutant-general of the militia of the District of Columbia, who, while so assigned, shall be commissioned as such and be subject to the orders of the commanding general and the provisions of this act: Provided, however, That the officer so assigned shall receive no other pay or emolument than that to which his rank in the Army entitles him when on detached service.

THE ACTIVE MILITIA; ITS ORGANIZATION.

SEC. 10. That the active militia shall be composed of volunteers, and shall be designated the National Guard of the District of Columbia; and in case the militia of the District of Columbia are called into the service of the United States, or required for the suppression of riots, or to aid civil officers in the execution of the laws, shall be the first to be ordered into service.

SEC. 11. That in time of peace the National Guard shall consist of not more than thirty-six companies of infantry, which shall be arranged by the commanding general into such regiments, battalions, and unattached companies as he may deem expedient; one battery of light artillery; one troop of cavalry; one signal corps; one ambulance corps; one engineer corps; one band of music, and one corps of field musicians.

SEC. 12. That regiments of infantry shall consist of three battalions, and to each regiment there shall be one colonel and one lieutenant-colonel, and a staff to consist of one surgeon, one adjutant, one quartermaster, one inspector of rifle practice, and one chaplain, each with the rank of captain; and a non-commissioned staff, consisting of one sergeant-major, one quartermaster-sergeant, one commissary-sergeant, and one hospital-steward.

SEC. 13. That battalions of infantry shall consist of four companies; and to each battalion there shall be one major; and a staff consisting of one surgeon, one adjutant, one quartermaster, and one inspector of rifle practice, each with the rank of first lieutenant; and a non-commissioned staff, consisting of one sergeant-major, one quartermaster-sergeant, and one hospital-steward.

SEC. 14. That to each company of infantry there shall be one captain, one first lieutenant, one second lieutenant, one first sergeant, four sergeants, one corporal to each ten privates, and not more than eighty-seven privates; and the minimum number of enlisted men shall be forty.

SEC. 15. That to the troop of cavalry there shall be one captain, one first lieutenant, one second lieutenant, one first sergeant, one quartermaster-sergeant, five sergeants, eight corporals, two trumpeters, and not more than eighty-three privates; and the minimum number of enlisted men shall be forty.

SEC. 16. That the battery of light artillery shall have not less than four nor more than six guns. To four guns there shall be one captain, two first lieutenants, one second lieutenant, one first sergeant, one quartermaster-sergeant, five sergeants, eight corporals, two buglers, and not more than eighty-two privates; and the minimum number of enlisted men shall be fifty-seven. To more than four guns there shall be, for each additional gun, one sergeant, two corporals, and not more than twenty nor less than ten privates; for two additional guns there shall be one additional second lieutenant.

SEC. 17. That to each signal corps, ambulance corps, and engineer corps there shall be one first lieutenant, two sergeants, two corporals, and not more than thirty-two nor less than fourteen privates.

SEC. 18. That the band of music shall consist of one chief musician, two sergeants, two corporals, and thirty-two privates; and the corps of field music, of one principal musician, two sergeants, two corporals, and thirty-two privates. The chief musician, principal musician, and other non-commissioned officers of the band and field music shall be appointed by the commanding general.

SEC. 19. That when any company of the National Guard shall, for a period of not less than ninety days, contain less than the minimum number of enlisted men prescribed by this act, or, upon a duly ordered inspection, shall be found to have fallen below a proper standard of efficiency, the commanding general may either disband such company or consolidate it with any other company of the National Guard, and grant an honorable discharge to the supernumerary officers and non-commissioned officers produced by such consolidation. Officers and enlisted men discharged by reason of such disbanding or consolidation and at any time thereafter re-entering the service shall have allowed to them, as part of their term of service, the time already served.

ELECTION, APPOINTMENT, AND DISCHARGE OF COMMISSIONED OFFICERS.

SEC. 20. That all officers shall be commissioned by the President of the United States. In time of peace, or when not in the service of the United States, they shall previously be elected or appointed as herein provided. No person commissioned as an officer shall assume such rank, or enter upon the duties of the office to which he may be commissioned, until he has accepted such commission and taken such oath or affirmation as may be prescribed.

SEC. 21. That the staff officers of a regiment or battalion shall be appointed by the permanent commander thereof.

SEC. 22. That field officers of regiments or battalions shall be appointed by the commanding general. Captain and lieutenants of companies shall be elected by the written votes of the enlisted men of the respective companies.

SEC. 23. That elections of officers shall be ordered and held under such regulations as may be prescribed by the commanding general.

SEC. 24. That every person accepting an election or appointment as an officer shall appear before an examining board, to be appointed by the commanding general, which board shall examine said officer as to his military and other qualifications. If any officer shall fail to appear before the board of examination within thirty days after being notified, or shall fail to pass a satisfactory examination, the fact shall be certified by the board to the commanding general, who shall thereupon declare the election or appointment of such officer null and void. If in the opinion of the board such officer is competent, and otherwise qualified, they shall certify the fact to the commanding general, who shall thereupon recommend him to the President for commission.

SEC. 25. That a commissioned officer may be honorably discharged—

Upon tender of resignation;

Upon disbandment of the organization to which he belongs;

Upon report of a board of examination, or for failure to appear before such board when ordered.

He may be dismissed upon the sentence of a court-martial; conviction in a court of justice of an infamous offense.

THE APPOINTMENT AND REDUCTION OF NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS.

SEC. 26. That non-commissioned staff officers shall be appointed by the permanent commander of the organization to which they belong; and permanent commanders of battalions shall appoint the non-commissioned officers of companies, upon the written nomination of the respective captains; but they may withhold such appointment if, in their judgment, there be proper cause; non-commissioned officers of unattached companies shall be appointed by their respective captains. The permanent commander of any battalion or unattached company may reduce to the ranks any company non-commissioned officers of his command.

ENLISTMENT AND DISCHARGE OF SOLDIERS.

SEC. 27. Enlistment in the National Guard shall be for the term of three years; Provided, however, That any soldier who may have received an honorable discharge, by reason of the expiration of his term of service, may, within thirty days thereafter, re-enlist for a term of one, two, or three years, to date from the expiration of his previous term. All terms of service, except in case of re-enlistment, shall commence at noon on the day of enlistment, and expire at noon on the day of discharge.

SEC. 28. Every person enlisting in the National Guard shall sign an enlistment paper which shall contain an oath of allegiance to the United States. The requisites and regulations for enlistment and the form of enlistment paper and oath for enlisting men shall be prescribed by the commanding general.

SEC. 29. That no enlisted man shall be honorably discharged before the expiration of his term of service, except by order of the commanding general, and for the following reasons:

Upon his own application, approved by the commanding officer of his company, and by superior commanders;

Upon removal from the District;

Upon disability, established by certificate of a medical officer;

To accept promotion by commission;

Whenever, in the opinion of the commanding general, the interest of the service demands such discharge.

SEC. 30. That enlisted men shall be dishonorably discharged by order of the commanding general:

To carry out the sentence of a court-martial;

Upon conviction of felony in a civil court;

Upon expulsion from his company, in accordance with its by-laws or regulations;

Upon discovery of re-enlistment after previous dishonorable discharge.

SEC. 31. That every soldier discharged from the service of the District shall be furnished with a certificate of such discharge, which shall state clearly the reasons therefor. Dishonorable discharges will have the word "dishonorable" written or printed diagonally across their faces, in large characters, with red ink, and the re-enlistment clause will be erased by a line.

ARMS, UNIFORMS, AND EQUIPMENTS.

SEC. 32. That the uniforms, arms, and equipments of the National Guard shall be the same as prescribed and furnished to the Army of the United States. Every organization of the National Guard shall be provided with such ordnance and ordnance stores, clothing, camp and garrison equipage, quartermaster's stores, medical supplies, and other military stores as may be necessary for the proper training and instruction of the force and for the proper performance of the duties required under this act. Such property shall be issued from the stores and supplies appropriated for the use of the Army, upon the approval and by the direction of the Secretary of War, to the commanding general upon his requisitions for the same. The property so issued shall remain and continue to be the property of the United States and shall be accounted for by the commanding general at such times, in manner, and on such forms as the Secretary of War may require.

SEC. 33. That the commanding general may transfer all public property received by him for the use of the National Guard under the provisions of this act to the several departmental officers of the general staff, and may make and prescribe regulations for its issue by them and for its care and preservation by the officers or soldiers to whom issued.

SEC. 34. That every officer receiving public property for military use shall be accountable for the articles so received by him, and shall make returns of such property at such times, in such manner, and on such forms as may be prescribed. He shall be liable to trial by court-martial for neglect of duty, and also to make good to the United States the value of all such property defaced, injured, destroyed, or lost, by any neglect or default on his part, to be recovered in an action of tort, or by any other action at law, to be instituted by the judge-advocate-general of the militia at the order of the commanding general. All money received on account of loss or damages shall be paid in the Treasury of the United States, and shall be accounted for by the commanding general in his returns to the Secretary of War.

SEC. 35. That any officer or soldier who shall sell, dispose of, pawn or pledge, willfully destroy or injure, or retain after proper demand made, any public property issued under the provisions of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by imprisonment for not exceeding two months, or by a fine not exceeding $100, or by both; and it is hereby made the duty of the judge of the police court of the District of Columbia, upon information filed or complaint made under oath, to issue process for the arrest of the offender, and to cause him to be brought before the police court to be dealt with according to the provisions of this section.

SEC. 36. That until an officer, or his legal representative, shall have received notice that the property accounts of such officer have been examined and found correct, the liability of such officer, or of his estate, for public property for which he is or may have been responsible shall be in no way affected by resignation, discharge, change in official position, or death. Upon the death or desertion of an officer responsible for public property his immediate commander shall at once cause the property for which such officer was responsible to be collected, and a correct inventory made by actual count and examination; which inventory shall be forwarded to the commanding general, in order that any deficiency may be made good from the estate of the deceased or deserting officer; compensation for such deficiency may be recovered in the manner provided in section 34.

SEC. 37. That property issued or provided under the provisions of this act which becomes unfit for use, and is condemned as unserviceable shall be reported by the commanding general to the Secretary of War, and shall be disposed of as may be directed by him.

SEC. 38. That any organization of the active militia may, with the approval of the commanding general, and at its own expense, adopt any other uniform than that issued to it; but such uniform shall not be worn when such organization is on duty under the orders of the commanding general except by his permission.

SEC. 39. That organizations of the National Guard shall have the right to own and keep personal property, which shall belong to and be under the control of the active members thereof; and the commanding officer of any organization may recover for its use any debts or effects belonging to it, or damages for injury to such property; action for such recovery to be brought, in the name of such commanding officer, before any justice of the peace, with the right of appeal to the supreme court of the District of Columbia, or before the supreme court of the District of Columbia; and no suit or complaint pending in his name shall be abated by his ceasing to be commanding officer of the organization; but, upon the motion of the commander succeeding him, such commander shall be admitted to prosecute the suit or complaint in like manner and with like effect as if it had been originally commenced by him.

SEC. 40. That the quartermaster-general of the militia shall provide, by rental or otherwise, such armories for the National Guard as may be allowed and directed by the commanding general. He shall also provide each organization with such lockers, closets, gun-racks, and cases or desks as may be necessary for the care, preservation, and safe-keeping of the arms, equipments, uniforms, records, and other military property in their possession. He shall also provide suitable rooms for the offices of the commanding general and staff, for the keeping of books, the transaction of business, and the instruction of officers, and also suitable places for the storage and safe-keeping of public property.

MILITARY DUTIES.

SEC. 41. That any drill, parade, encampment, or duty that is required, ordered, or authorized to be performed under the provisions of this act shall be deemed to be a military duty, and while on such duty every officer and enlisted man of the National Guard shall be subject to the lawful orders of his superior officers, and for any military offense may be put and kept under arrest or under guard for a time not extending beyond the term of service for which he is then ordered.

SEC. 42. That the commanding general shall prescribe such stated drills and parades as he may deem necessary for the instruction of the National Guard, and may order out any portion of the National Guard for such drills, inspections, parades, escort, or other duties, as he may deem proper. The commanding officer of any regiment, battalion, or company may also assemble his command, or any part thereof, in the evening for drill, instruction, or other business, as he may deem expedient; but no parade shall be performed by any regiment, battalion, company, or part thereof without the permission of the commanding general.

SEC. 43. That an annual inspection and muster of each organization of the National Guard, and an inspection of their armories and of public property in their possession, shall be made at such times and places as the commanding general may order and direct.

SEC. 44. That the National Guard shall perform not less than six consecutive days of camp duty in each year, at such time as may be ordered by the commanding general; and the quartermaster-general of the militia, subject to the approval of the commanding general, shall provide, by rental or otherwise, a suitable camp ground for the annual encampment of the militia, make the necessary provisions thereon for the encampment, and provide necessary transportation to and from the same for baggage and supplies.

SEC. 45. The National Guard shall have the use of the drill grounds and rifle-range at the Washington Barracks, subject to the approval of the Secretary of War, and the commanding general of the militia shall provide such additional targets and accessories as may be necessary for the use of the militia.

SEC. 46. That when there is in the District of Columbia a tumult, riot, mob, or a body of men acting together by force with attempt to commit a felony or to offer violence to persons or property, or by force and violence to break and resist the laws, or when such tumult, riot, or mob is threatened, it shall be lawful for the commissioners of the District of Columbia, or for the United States marshal for the District of Columbia, to call on the commander-in-chief to aid them in suppressing such violence and enforcing the laws; the commander-in-chief shall thereupon order out so much and such portion of the militia as he may deem necessary to suppress the same, and no member thereof who shall be thus ordered out by proper authority for any such duty shall be liable to civil or criminal prosecution for any act done in the discharge of his military duty.

SEC. 47. That no officer or soldier of the National Guard, when ordered on duty to aid the civil authorities, or when ordered into the service of the United States, in obedience to the call or order of the President, shall be excused from such duty except upon the certificate of the surgeon of his command of physical disability, such certificate to be presented to the commanding general in case of an officer, or to his company commander in case of a soldier. If such officer or soldier fail to furnish such excuse he shall be tried and punished by a court-martial. For absence from any other military duty required or ordered under the provisions of this act the penalty shall be such as may be prescribed by the commanding general, or the by-laws of the organization to which the officer or soldier belongs.

SEC. 48. That United States forces or troops, or any portion of the militia, parading, or performing any duty according to law, shall have the right of way in any street or highway through which they may pass: Provided, That the carriage of the United States mails, the legitimate functions of the police, and the progress and operations of fire-engines and fire departments shall not be interfered with thereby.

SEC. 49. That every commanding officer, when on duty, may ascertain and fix necessary bounds and limits to his parade or encampment. Whoever intrudes within the limits of the parade or encampment after being forbidden, or whoever shall interrupt, molest, or obstruct any officer or soldier while on duty, may be put and kept under guard until the parade, encampment, or duty be concluded; and the commanding officer may turn over such person to any police officer, and said police officer is required to detain him in custody for examination or trial before the police court, and the judge thereof may punish such offense by a fine not exceeding $25.

SEC. 50. That all officers and employés of the United States and of the District of Columbia who are members of the National Guard shall be entitled to leave of absence from their respective duties, without loss of pay or time, on all days of any parade or encampment ordered or authorized under the provisions of this act.

MILITARY COURTS.

SEC. 51. Courts of inquiry, to consist of not more than three officers, may be ordered by the commanding general, for the purpose of investigating the conduct of any officer, either at his own request or on a complaint or charge of conduct unbecoming an officer. Such court of inquiry shall report the evidence adduced, a statement of facts, and an opinion thereon, when required, to the commanding general, who may, in his discretion, thereupon order a court-martial for the trial of the officer whose conduct has been inquired into.

SEC. 52. That general courts-martial for the trial of commissioned officers or enlisted men shall be ordered by the commanding general at such times as the interests of the service may require, and shall consist of not less than five nor more than thirteen officers, and a judge-advocate, none of whom shall be of less rank than the accused, when it can be avoided.

SEC. 53. That for the trial of enlisted men for all minor offenses the commanding officer of each battalion and unattached company shall, at such times as may be necessary, appoint courts-martial. Such battalion and company courts-martial shall consist, for a batalion, of one officer, whose rank is not below that of captain; and for a company, of a lieutenant. Such courts shall have power, subject to the approval of the officer ordering the court, to sentence to be reprimanded by said officer in battalion or company orders; or, in case of a company non-commissioned officer, to be reduced to the ranks, or to pay such fines as may be imposed and allowed by the regulations or by-laws of the organization to which the accused belongs; and such court may, with the approval of the commanding general, sentence to be reprimanded in general orders or to be dishonorably discharged.

SEC. 54. That the president of a general court-martial or court of inquiry, and the officer constituting a battalion or company court-martial, shall have power to administer the usual oath to witnesses, and may issue summons for all witnesses whose attendance at such court may, in his opinion, be necessary, and any officer or soldier failing to serve such summons, and any witness failing to appear and testify when so summoned, shall be liable to trial by court-martial.

SEC. 55. That in all courts-martial and courts of inquiry the arraignment of the accused, the proceedings, trial, and record shall in all respects conform as nearly as practicable to the regulations for the same in the Army of the United States.

EXPENSES AND ALLOWANCES.

SEC. 56. That there shall be allowed for the general expenses of the militia such sums as may be necessary for the rental and furnishing of offices for headquarters, stationery, postage, printing and issuing orders, advertising orders, providing necessary blanks for the use of the militia, the cost of storing, caring for, and issuing all public property, and such other contingent expenses, not herein specially provided for, as may be estimated and appropriated for; the accounts for which shall be certified to by the officer receiving the service or property charged for, approved by the commanding general, and paid in the manner provided in section 60.

SEC. 57. That during the annual encampment, and on every duty or parade ordered by the commanding general, there shall be allowed and paid for each day of service: To each member of the regularly enlisted band, $4; to each member of the regularly enlisted corps of field music, $2; to the chief musician, $8, and to the principal musician $6. In event there is no enlisted band or field music, or not a sufficient number of either, the commanding general may authorize the employment of such as he may deem necessary for the occasion. The payments for bands of music and drum corps shall be made in the manner provided in section 60.

SEC. 58. That during the annual encampment, and on every duty or parade ordered by the commanding general, there may be employed such number of horses as the commanding general may authorize for the use of the battery of light artillery, the troop of cavalry, the ambulance corps, the signal corps, and the non-commissioned general staff, the cost of which shall be paid in the manner provided in section 60.

SEC. 59. That during the annual encampment, or when ordered on duty to aid the civil authorities, the National Guard shall be furnished with subsistence stores, of the kind, quality, and amount allowed and prescribed by the Army. Such stores shall be issued from the stores and supplies appropriated for the use of the Army, upon the approval and by the direction of the Secretary of War, to the commanding general upon his requisitions for the same.

SEC. 60. That the commanding general shall annually transmit to the commissioners of the District of Columbia an estimate of the amount of money required for the next ensuing fiscal year to pay the expenses authorized by this act, and the said commissioners shall include the same in their annual estimates of appropriations for the District; and all money appropriated to pay the expenses authorized by this act shall be disbursed by the commissioners of the District of Columbia, upon vouchers duly certified and approved by the commanding general, and accounted for by them in the same manner as all other moneys appropriated for the expenses of the District.

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

SEC. 61. That companies, battalions, or regiments may adopt constitutional articles of agreement or by-laws, subject to the approval of the commander-in-chief, for the government of matters relating to the civic affairs of their respective organizations, the regulation of fines for non-performance of duty, and the determination of causes upon which excuses from fines may be based: Provided, however, That such articles or rules shall not be repugnant to law or the regulations for the government of the militia: And provided further, That the articles or rules adopted by any company or battalion shall not be repugnant to the articles or rules adopted for the general government of the regiment or battalion to which it belongs. Certified copies of such articles or rules, with like copies of all alterations, as finally approved by the commanding general, shall be deposited in the office of the Adjutant-General.

SEC. 62. That no officer shall be liable to jury duty; and any officer or soldier who shall have served continuously and faithfully for nine years in the National Guard shall be exempt for life thereafter from jury duty.

SEC. 63. That each company of the National Guard shall be entitled to enroll not exceeding twenty honorary members, who, upon the payment into the treasury of such company of not less than $25 annually, shall be exempted from active military duty and jury duty, upon the exhibition of a receipt for such payment, for one year from the date thereof.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HOLMAN). To the section just read the committee report an amendment, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out the whole of section 63.

Mr. MCADOO. I move concurrence in this amendment of the committee.

Mr. BLOUNT. I understand that this bill is now being read for the first time, for information only—not for the purpose of amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is being read by sections for amendment.

Mr. BLOUNT. I did not so understand.

Mr. MCADOO. The first reading was dispensed with by order of the House.

Mr. OATES. I would like to make an inquiry. If I understand correctly the bill as read, it proposes to exempt members of this militia force from jury duty.

Mr. MCADOO. The bill, as the committee propose to amend it, will exempt from such duty the active members of this National Guard.

Mr. OATES. Does the gentleman think it a wise policy to excuse from jury duty some of our best citizens? I submit we ought to have the largest possible body of good citizens from whom to select juries.

Mr. MCADOO. That was the idea of the committee in the amendment which has been read, and which proposes to strike out section 63. That section proposed to exempt from jury duty honorary members of this National Guard—men who may become honorary members by paying $25 a year. The committee thought this provision should be struck out, adopting the view suggested by the gentleman that it is desirable to secure the services of our best citizens as jurors.

Mr. BLOUNT. I would like to ask the gentleman from New Jersey what duty the regular members of this National Guard perform. How much service is required of them that they should be exempt from jury duty?

Mr. MCADOO. Well, it is the custom in all the States——

Mr. BLOUNT. Not all of them.

Mr. MCADOO. So far as I know, it is the custom in most of the States to grant an exemption of this kind. The bill follows the usual course in this matter. In many of our cities volunteer firemen as well as volunteer members of the militia force are exempted from jury duty.

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not profess to be familiar with the legislation of all the States, but, taking this matter on its face, I can see no occasion for exempting these gentlemen from jury duty. They are required to go into encampment for six days in the year, but beyond that there is no requirement of service at all so far as I can see.

Mr. MCADOO. We must offer some inducement to get men to enroll themselves in the active militia. Of course every citizen of the United States is theoretically a part of the militia; but as an inducement to active participation in militia duty something of this kind is required. These men do duties other than those performed by the ordinary citizen. They attend drills; they are liable to incur penalties for disobedience of orders; they give up a part of the privileges and liberties which the ordinary citizen enjoys, and it has been thought fair to give them, in compensation for this, an exemption from jury duty.

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not see that these men "give up" much of their "liberties."

Mr. MCADOO. Well, if the gentleman wishes to offer an amendment, I do not know that I shall oppose it.

Mr. BLOUNT. I had supposed the bill was being read merely for information, and that it would afterward be taken up for consideration by paragraphs.

Mr. MCADOO. The first reading of the bill, as I have stated, was dispensed with.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The pending section is open to amendment.

Mr. BLOUNT. Well, I move to amend by striking out section 62.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That section has been passed, but if there be no objection the House will return to it.

Mr. MCADOO. I offer no objection. I am willing to leave this question to the House.

Mr. BLOUNT. So far as I understand this bill from the reading (and I have been following it as read by the Clerk, although I supposed it would be again read for amendment), no duty is required of members of this National Guard except the election of a number of officers and service for six days each year in an encampment.

Mr. HOVEY. And that they should regard as an honor.

Mr. BLOUNT. As the gentleman suggests, they ought to regard that as an honor. I have no doubt that participation in these exercises is a great recreation to them; and I do not see why, because of six days' service annually in an encampment, these men, after a period of nine years, should be exempted from jury duty in the District. That is the effect of the provision; and I think it ought to be stricken out.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. Speaker, I think we ought to consider this question deliberately before determining to strike out this entire paragraph. Perhaps it might be sufficient to modify it. We all know that General Ordway is making an effort to improve the militia system of this District. We all know that the general spirit of the people favors an improvement of the militia system of the whole country. New York, Pennsylvania, and many other States in the North, and nearly all of the States of the South, are bringing their volunteer soldiery up to a very high standard, and I for one am proud of it. The superior excellence in drill and discipline and the spirit displayed by the citizen soldiers of the country in this city last May must have been most gratifying to the patriotic pride of every American. It was certainly pleasing to Alabamians to see a company from their State bear off the honors awarded to them by impartial and able judges, who declared them to be superior to any other similar organization on the continent.

Mr. BLOUNT. Will the gentleman permit a remark? He suggests that the section may be modified. Now, a part of the section is in this language:

Any officer or soldier who shall have served continuously and faithfully for nine years in the National Guard shall be exempted for life thereafter from jury duty.

Does not the gentleman think it would be a sufficient concession if we strike out what I have just read and retain the first part of this section, which provides that—

No officer or soldier shall be liable to jury duty.

I have no objection to modifying my amendment so as to have that effect.

Mr. WHEELER. That would be better than to strike out the entire paragraph.

Mr. STEELE. That will be all right.

Mr. WHEELER. I think there ought to be some compensation for a long period of service in this militia, but I do not contend that being on the rolls for nine years should exempt a citizen of the District from jury duty for life. I think I am correct in stating that every State in the Union now exempts its volunteer soldiery from jury duty, and it is just and right that it should be done. They perform actual work, and must be devoted to the task of preparation to fit themselves for service in the field should the honor of the country be assailed.

Mr. BLOUNT. There is no service, except serving in the encampment for six days every year.

Mr. WHEELER. Why, sir, these men perform a great deal of service, such as attending at their armories and drilling night after night. The efforts of the officers in charge of this militia force should be regarded by the House with some consideration.

Mr. BLOUNT. We do not require any such duty as the gentleman has just referred to; it is a mere voluntary matter with these men.

Mr. WHEELER. The gentleman should know that in order to have a respectable volunteer militia, it is necessary that the men be compelled to drill a great deal, and they actually do so. We could not have an efficient militia system without it.

There is no place more proper to commence the inauguration of a good militia system than the District of Columbia. It has been commenced, and it ought to be encouraged, and we should make some concession to men who serve for a long period. The bill says nine years. It might be twelve or fifteen, or more; but there should be some adequate recognition of a long period of service. That is all I have to say.

Mr. BLOUNT. So far as drilling is concerned, there is no trouble. If anything, they drill too much. This bill proposes, as I understand it, to prohibit drilling on the part of members of volunteer organizations in this District.

Mr. MCADOO. I do not so understand. On the contrary, I understand the volunteer organizations in this District are in favor of it.

Mr. BLOUNT. That does not appear in the bill.

Mr. MCADOO. It does not prohibit any one from drilling.

Mr. BLOUNT. The bill provides—

That it shall be a misdemeanor for any body of men, other than the regularly organized militia and the troops of the United States, except such independent military organizations as are now in existence, to associate themselves together as a military company or organization, or meet for drill with arms, or parade in public with arms, without the permission of the commanding general.

Mr. MCADOO. This bill takes in every military organization in the District of Columbia and makes it a part of the militia.

Mr. BLOUNT. Yes, and you provide there shall be nothing else in the District but this militia.

Mr. MCADOO. Volunteer organizations are all included.

Mr. BLOUNT. Perhaps their officers expect to get the offices provided for in this bill.

Mr. MCADOO. If the gentleman wishes to modify the amendment, I accept it.

Mr. BLOUNT. I move to strike out in section 62, after the word "duty," the following words:

And any officer or soldier who shall have served continuously and faithfully for nine years in the National Guard shall be exempt for life thereafter from jury duty.

So it will read:

That no officer or soldier shall be liable to jury duty.

Mr. RICHARDSON. What is the amendment?

Mr. BLOUNT. It exempts them from jury duty while they are in active service.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HOLMAN in the chair). The morning hour has expired, and the bill goes over until the next morning hour.

GENERAL G. CLUSERÉT.

Mr. COX. I move, by unanimous consent, to call up for present consideration a bill (H. R. 474) for the relief of General G. Cluserét.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, upon vouchers duly approved by the Secretary of State, the sum of $500, to be immediately available, to pay General G. Cluserét for services rendered to the Department of State in carrying out a circular instruction of that Department of May 23, 1880, relative to statistical information in the Turkish dominions.

Mr. STEELE. Let the report of the committee be read.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Let the gentleman from New York make a statement.

Mr. COX. It simply reimburses General Cluserét for money he actually expended.

Mr. STEELE. I will withdraw the demand for the reading of the report.

Mr. COX. It can be printed in the RECORD. The bill gives General Cluserét the money he expended under the orders of the consul-general at Constantinople or the State Department. The State Department recommends it. The late minister to Constantinople knows it is right. [Laughter and applause.]

The report of the committee is as follows:

The Committee on Foreign Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 474) for the relief of General G. Cluserét, make the following report, to wit:

In obedience to Department circular of May 23, 1880, to the United States consul-general at Constantinople, the claimant was employed by said consul-general for the collection of statistics and the making of a report on "cotton fabrics and yarns imported into Turkey."

These statistics, owing to the condition of Turkey at the time, were very difficult to procure.

The consul-general in his dispatch of August 24, 1880, acknowledges his obligation to the American Eastern Agency, represented by General Cluserét, who devoted much time and labor to the subject. The consul recognized the report to be as full and clear as possible.

Owing to the difficulty in obtaining the necessary data the fund at the command of the consul-general was not sufficient to meet the expenses incurred.

No payment was ever made by Mr. Heap, nor by the Government, to General Cluserét for his work.

The report of General Cluserét is to be found in the Consular Report No. 12, for October, 1881, entitled "Cotton-Goods Trade of the World, and the share of the United States therein."

Although there was no special contract made with General Cluserét, the Department of State thinks that it would be hardly just that he should have incurred any expense in obtaining valuable information for an officer of the Government without having the amount thereof at least returned to him.

Owing to the failure of the Department to grant the consul-general permission to apply the fund to his credit for such work, General Cluserét failed to obtain any compensation.

Your committee think General Cluserét has an equitable claim upon the Government for a reasonable sum, and they report a bill for $500, which is simply the amount he expended, not counting his time and labor in preparing the information.

This view of the case is taken by the Department of State in the paper hereto annexed.

Perhaps General Cluserét would not have made this request were he not impoverished at the end of a long and honorable career as a soldier, during which he served in our own Army. The committee also refer to the statements of General Cluserét for the details of his service.

Application was made by Hon. Horace Maynard, while minister to Turkey, for compensation, and also through Hon. Roscoe Conkling, Senator from New York, but nothing was ever done.

The value of this work will be appreciated when it is known that General Cluserét is an accomplished writer in many languages and has fully earned the small sum which, in his old age and indigence, has been appropriated by the bill.

The correspondence is hereto appended.

"DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, December 13, 1887.

"MY DEAR SIR: In reply to your letter of the 4th instant, touching the claim of General G. Cluserét, who rendered valuable assistance to Mr. Heap in connection with the Department's circular of May 23, 1880, I herewith transmit copies of the following correspondence upon the subject:

"1. Mr. Cox to Mr. Bayard, No. 105, January 19, 1886, with inclosure;

"2. Mr. Bayard to Mr. Cox, No. 86, of February 19, 1886; and

"3. Mr. Bayard to Mr. Belmont, February 19, 1886, with inclosure.

"Adding that the letter to Mr. Belmont covers a proposed bill appropriating $500 for the relief of General Cluserét.

"I am, my dear sir, very respectfully yours,

"T. F. BAYARD.

"Hon. S. S. COX, M. C.,
"House of Representatives."

"[Inclosure 105.]

"CONSTANTINOPLE, January 17, 1886.

"DEAR SIR: When Mr. Maynard was United States plenipotentiary minister here I forwarded, through Mr. Heap, a memoir and collection of samples of every cotton goods employed in the Turkish Empire.

"That work was very difficult, long, and expensive. I was obliged to correspond with every villager from Persia to Herzegovina, give bakshish for every information and pay for every sample, several hundred in number. You know that in this country nothing can be accomplished without bakshish. For each sample I was obliged to pay one yard and transportation.

"I completed three collections and memoirs, including every information not only on cotton trade but also its manufacturing. I added statistics of import and export, etc. One was directed to the State Department, one to the New York Chamber of Commerce, and the third to that of Boston or Philadelphia, I don't recollect exactly which one. These two last were delivered by our friend, Colonel Dugane, of New York.

"This work was undertaken in order to answer a questionary by the State Department to Mr. Heap, who did not think possible to give it a satisfactory solution. So in point of fact, having volunteered my services without them being requested officially, I have no legal right to claim from the Treasury the refunding of my expenses.

"Still I have spent, besides my time and labor, nearly $500. Twice Mr. Maynard applied to the State Department for some compensation; so did R. Conkling, of New York, but to no purpose. If you, sir, through Congress, can obtain the refunding of a part, whatever it might be, of my disbursing, you will oblige me very much. Although perhaps not strictly correct in a financial point of view, I think that transaction perfectly equitable, for my work has been utilized not only by the State Department but by the chambers of commerce.

"Very respectfully,

"GENERAL G. CLUSERÉT.

"Hon. S. S. COX,
"Plenipotentiary Minister of the United States of America."

"DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, February 19, 1886.

"SIR: I have received your No. 105 of the 19th ultimo, relative to the equitable claim of General G. Cluserét, in connection with his service to Mr. Heap, consul-general at Constantinople, in carrying out a circular instruction of this Department of May 23, 1880.

"At present I can only express the Department's regret that General Cluserét should not have been paid at the time, and that it has no appropriation available at this late date from which to recompense him for the valuable information furnished. In order, if possible, to compensate General Cluserét for his services, I have inclosed to Hon. Perry Belmont, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives, a copy of your dispatch, with a letter of explanation, a copy of which I herewith transmit, recommending the appropriation of $500, to be paid to General Cluserét.

"I am, sir, your obedient servant,

"T. F. BAYARD.

"SAMUEL S. COX,
"Constantinople."

"UNITED STATES LEGATION, Constantinople, January 19, 1886.

"SIR. I knew a soldier in our civil war named General Cluserét. He lives here now, after military service with the Turks. He is a writer and economist, as well as soldier. He is now old and destitute. I called to see him at his room in the suburbs of this city. I found him endeavoring to get some warmth over a mangal. His condition excited sympathy.

"He has an equitable claim for services rendered in the preparation of certain statistics, in response to a call of the Department. I requested him to put it on paper. I inclose you a reply of his letter, with a view to have you regard it, even at this late day, in a favorable light, and with the further object of an appropriation and payment, if you think it possible.

"I am endeavoring to aid him personally by purchasing some of his pictures, but he is, or should be, an object of justice, as well as benevolence.

"I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

"S. S. COX.

"Hon. T. F. BAYARD,
"Secretary of State, Washington, D. C."

"DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, February 19, 1886.

"SIR: I have the honor to inclose for the consideration of your committee a copy of a dispatch from Mr. S. S. Cox, the minister of the United States at Constantinople, No. 105, of the 19th ultimo, relative to the petition of General G. Cluserét for relief in connection with his services to Mr. G. H. Heap, consul-general of the United States at Constantinople, in carrying out a circular instruction of this Department in 1880.

"General Cluserét's petition is correct as to the character of the information furnished, but I have been unable to find any record in the Department of his claim having been previously brought to its attention as he asserts.

"The facts appear to be these:

"Mr. Heap with his dispatch No. 96 of August 24, 1880, furnished a report on cotton fabrics and yarns imported into Turkey, in obedience to the Department's circular of May 23, 1880.

"A portion of his dispatch is as follows:

"'For the information contained in this report I am chiefly indebted to the "American Eastern Agency," represented by General Cluserét, who has devoted much time and labor on the subject, and I believe that the answers to the subject will be found as full and clear as possible.'

"Mr. Heap also asked permission to expend the fund at his command for obtaining information for consular reports to meet the expenses incurred in making this one after explaining how very difficult it was to obtain the necessary data. His dispatch does not say that he intended to recompense Genereal Cluserét for his trouble, or give any idea of how the money was to be applied.

"At any rate, no special acknowledgment was ever made of Mr. Heap's dispatch, although the report, a very full and valuable one, was published in the consular report, No. 12, October, 1881, entitled 'Cotton-Goods Trade of the World, and the share of the United States therein.'

"It is apparent from his petition that General Cluserét did not, when furnishing the information, expect to be compensated. Even now he says, 'in point of fact, having volunteered my services without their being requested officially, I have no legal right to claim from the Treasury the refunding of my expenses.'

"It seems hardly just, however, that General Cluserét should have incurred any expenses in obtaining this valuable information for an officer of this Government without having the amount thereof at least returned to him. But the failure of the Department to grant Mr. Heap permission to apply the fund to his credit for such work to the best advantage necessarily prevented him from offering to compensate General Cluserét, even if it was his intention to do so.

"Under these circumstances the Department is disposed to agree with Mr. Cox that General Cluserét has an equitable claim upon this Government for the services rendered to it as explained, and entertains the hope that some measure for the petitioner's relief at this late date, to the extent at least of the $500 which he expended, besides his time and labor in preparing the information, may find equal favor with your committee and secure its co-operation in obtaining the passage of the necessary bill for General Cluserét's relief.

"A draught of a bill to meet the case is herewith transmitted for the consideration of your committee, and it is respectfully suggested that you authorize some member thereof to introduce it in the House, should the judgment of the committee be favorably disposed in the premises.

"I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

"T. F. BAYARD.

"Hon. PERRY BELMONT,
"Chairman Committee on Foreign Affairs,
"House of Representatives."

There was no objection, and the bill was taken up and ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. COX moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

UNITED PEORIAS AND MIAMIES.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House resumes the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8074) providing for the allotment of land in severalty to United Peorias and Miamies in Indian Territory. At the adjournment on Saturday the question under consideration was the substitute for section 4 moved by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PERKINS].

Mr. PERKINS. As I said at the time, I moved that substitute at the request of the representatives of these Indians. At their request I again move to modify that substitute so as to insert, after the word "Indian," the words "not a member of the tribe;" so it will read:

Any adult members of the United Peoria and Miami tribes of Indians shall have authority, under the provisions of this act, to sell or dispose of, to any Indian not a member of the tribe, etc.

I also moved to modify it by striking out the word "become" and substituting the word "be;" so it will read:

Or forfeiture so long as the title to the same shall remain in the original patentee or be the property of any other Indians, etc.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection to the proposed modifications of the substitute.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think the word "purchase," where it is used in the first clause of the proposed amendment, is not properly there, and should be stricken out.

Mr. PERKINS. If the gentleman will read that provision of the amendment in connection with the remainder of it, he will agree that it is the proper word.

Mr. HOLMAN. I have no objection to the use of the word "inheritance" in that connection; but the word "purchase," as used in the substitute, should be omitted. I ask the Clerk to read that portion of the amendment again.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the lands so patented shall remain free from execution, levy, taxation, compulsory sale, or forfeiture so long as the title to the same shall remain in the original patentees or become the property of any other Indians by inheritance, purchase, or otherwise, etc.

Mr. HOLMAN. Now I hope the word "inheritance" will be allowed to remain, but the word "purchase" ought to be stricken out.

Mr. PERKINS. I think it should not be stricken out in consequence of what follows; and I believe that, in connection with the amendment I offered a short time ago, the gentleman will not object. I ask the Clerk to read the remainder of the proposed amendment.

The proposed substitute was read at length.

Mr. COBB. Mr. Speaker, I move to amend that amendment by striking out the words in the second line of the amendment, "in fee-simple," and in the third line the word "forever." I should like to be heard upon this amendment before a vote is taken upon it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kansas has an amendment already pending to the amendment.

Mr. PERKINS. I think we had better have a vote first on the amendment suggested by myself. Let the gentleman's amendment be pending.

Mr. COBB. Before that I want to be heard for a moment.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I think, rather than consume the time, I will accept the amendment of the gentleman from Alabama, so that we can get on with the bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the gentleman will not do that unless there is some explanation of the object to be accomplished by the amendment.

Mr. PERKINS. Very well; then I shall wait to hear the reasons the gentleman may have for offering the amendment.

Mr. COBB. I desire to say, Mr. Speaker, that I am opposed to the amendment offered by my colleague on the committee, and shall vote against it. I think that the original section of the bill for which the amendment is offered as a substitute is better. This original section conforms to the general policy of the Government with reference to the Indians, and especially the policy of the Government as declared in the act of 1887, approved February the 8th of that year. This policy is, that the Government of the United States shall hold lands for the Indians for a certain period of time, and then that the lands may go to them in severalty, they receiving a fee-simple title.

Pervading this policy is the expectation that the Indians will attain the qualifications necessary to enable them, properly, to be trusted with the lands in fee, and to enable them to reach that status which will make it safe for them to become citizens of the United States. I repeat and urge what I said on Saturday in regard to this matter.

The provisions of this amendment seek to force upon these people the rights and privileges and duties of citizenship without regard to their qualifications. Therefore, believing, as I do, that this is not a wise policy, although it may be recommended by the Indian Department, and although it may be urged by those who seem to have particular regard for the Indians, I can not give to it the assent of my judgment. I can not consent that it will be well for the Indians to withdraw from them the guardianship of the United States. This guardianship—this superintending care—will be withdrawn whenever they are settled in severalty upon their lands and are made citizens of the United States. Such will be the necessary and inevitable result of such provisions as are contained in the proposed amendment.

Now, what will be the effect of this policy? These men are settled upon lands allotted to them, and are forced, we will assume, under the operation of this bill, to take them in severalty. Suppose the Indians do not care to take the lands in severalty—and this is no unreasonable supposition—and abandon them? They are then without support or guardianship, and what is to become of them? But my limited time will not permit me to press this point.

I have another objection to the amendment. I take it to be wise when we are legislating for these people that our legislation should be without doubt as to its meaning—that the terms in which it is framed should be clear and unambiguous.

Now, to any legal mind the inconsistencies contained in this amendment will readily appear. If the words "in fee-simple and forever" are not stricken out, the result is, you have a provision here under the operation of which——

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. NELSON. I rise to oppose the amendment and yield my time to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. COBB. I thank the gentleman for his courtesy. I was about to point out an inconsistency in the provisions of the amendment. If the words are left in the amendment providing that these lands shall be given in fee-simple to these several Indians, the result is a patent issuing from the Government of the United States which, as we all know, is simply equivalent to a deed, containing these provisions: first, a conveyance in fee-simple and forever of a tract of land. Following that, in the same deed, conditions and limitations and restrictions are imposed.

Now, what is the result? Let us consider for a moment what would be the result when the patent is presented for construction by the judicial department of the Government. One of these Indians with his patent in his hand makes a sale. There is an interference or an attempted interference with his vendee and he appeals to the courts. He says, "I have got a fee-simple title to this land; there is no restriction to the sale of the land on the part of these patentees." And why? Because of the operation of the provision of law that, where there are two inconsistent provisions in a deed the first holds and the latter is a nullity. The first provision in a deed, the last in a will—that is the universal rule.

Now here is a deed which says upon its face and in its first clause, that "the Government of the United States conveys in fee-simple forever a tract of land to the patentees." Following in the same instrument are restrictions and limitations, not upon the sale only—and I call the attention of the lawyers in the House to that—but restrictions and limitations upon the title itself.

Such is the deed, first, words of conveyance in fee-simple forever; then restrictions and limitations upon the title itself. Now, what is the result? The patentee has the absolute, unqualified, fee-simple title.

And yet, Mr. Speaker, it is not pretended that that is the policy to be pursued with regard to these Indians.

Upon both of these grounds I am opposed to this amendment. There are two classes of men who are operating with regard to these Indians, and who, unwittingly it may be, are driving them to their destruction. One class are the philanthropists, who believe they are doing wisely when they attempt to put the Indians on an equal footing as to the rights of property and the rights of citizenship with the civilized white man. The other class are those, in my opinion, who are not actuated by these philanthropic motives. They do not care what becomes of the Indian. They think that he is doomed, and the quicker he is extirpated from this continent the better. But seeing the operations and effect of the policy prescribed and urged by these men who are really seeking his benefit——

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. NELSON. I move to strike out the last word, and yield five minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. COBB].

Mr. COBB. I do not want to take up too much of the time of the House.

Several MEMBERS. Go on.

I am, Mr. Speaker, pleading for the Indian; pleading for the adoption of the policy which will protect him; because I sincerely believe that this nation owes him a duty that it ought to fulfill.

Now, I say that these two classes of whom I am speaking, the one the honest philanthropic men—perhaps impractical—who are seeking to promote the welfare of the Indian, the other caring nothing for his destiny, or, it may be, believing it to be settled, but wise enough to see that the policy urged by the first will hasten his destruction, have joined in demanding the same course. We see both parties urging that the Indian be made a citizen and be assigned his land in severalty and given a fee-simple title.

Now, put him in that position and how long will he hold his land? How long will he hold his 160 or 240 acres of land if you give him a title in fee? The result will be that these adventurous and enterprising men of whom we have heard so much, and of whom my friend from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] spoke so eloquently on Saturday as pressing him on all sides, will speedily acquire his lands.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. Is the Indian allowed to alienate it by this bill?

Mr. COBB. Yes, sir; that is my construction. The amendment, as I have attempted to show, is inconsistent in its provisions. The first provision gives him a title in fee. The other, as it appears to me, provides restrictions and limitations, which, however, will not take away the power of alienation; and when he alienates his title, where is he?

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. He becomes a pauper and a little worse than that.

Mr. HOOKER. He comes back on the Government for support and the Government will have to sustain him.

Mr. COBB. One of two results will inevitably follow; either the Indian will become a pauper and die of starvation, or else he will put himself in a condition to demand of the Government a reversal of its policy. If he does not starve he will make himself so troublesome to the Government that a reversal of this policy will inevitably follow. And in thus pursuing a shifting policy the Government retards rather than advances the advancement of the Indian.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to explain briefly to the House what, in my judgment, is the effect of this substitute, and in that connection I shall give the House a little history in addition to what was given in the debate on Saturday. As I then explained, there are fifty-eight of these Miami Indians and one hundred and forty-four of the Peorias and those associated with them. They occupy a reservation in the Indian Territory of 50,300 acres. They have also some remaining lands in Kansas of those which have been given to them heretofore under treaty, which lands they are not occupying. There are some three or four or five sections, in the aggregate, scattered over two counties in my State, and by the provisions of this bill the Indians are authorized to sell those lands, as they are substantially authorized to do under existing law. But the Indians come to Congress, as they have come for years, asking that the lands which they occupy in the Indian Territory shall be given to them in severalty.

A division of the reservation will give to each man, woman, and child 220 acres and a trifle more. Now, they ask that, as to all of these lands given them in excess of the 160-acre allotments, they may be authorized to sell them to other Indians who are not so fortunately situated as themselves. That is all there is of this amendment. These Indians say that, as to the 160 acres each, they are willing that the usual condition shall be put into their patents, that the lands shall not be alienable for twenty-five years, and that they are to be exempt for that time. That is the effect of the general allotment bill; that is the effect of almost every allotment bill that Congress has given its attention to. They say that as to the 160 acres of land given to each of these men, these women, these children, they are willing that that condition shall be made; but as to the excess over and above the 160 acres, they ask that adult members of the tribe shall have the right, if they choose, to sell those lands to other Indians, with the consent and approval of the Secretary of the Interior. They say that some of them may not need 220 acres of land. They say there are other Indians in the country not so fortunately situated as they are, and they simply ask that, as adults, they may have the right given them to sell to other Indians the excess of these lands over 160 acres. That is all they ask. Now, is there anything unreasonable in that?

Should any man, actuated by sentiment or by a desire to promote the welfare and well-being of these Indians, stand upon this floor and oppose this substitute? These Indians, as I read from the report of the Indian agent on Saturday, are as competent to look after their own interests as any like number of men in any community in the country. They would like to have these lands given to them absolutely, without restriction; but knowing the sentiment of some members of Congress and the sentiment prevailing in many parts of the country, they are willing that the 160 acres allotted to each shall be subject to the usual condition in allotment bills making the land inalienable. As to the excess, however, they ask to be permitted to sell it to other Indians, and to Indians only, with the consent and approval of the Secretary of the Interior.

I move the previous question on the pending section and amendment.

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope the gentleman will not cut off debate in that way. This is the gentleman's own bill, which was referred to the committee.

Mr. PERKINS. How much time does the gentleman want?

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not know exactly; not long.

Mr. PERKINS. I will withdraw for the present the demand for the previous question. I did not know that there was any disposition to continue the discussion.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Speaker, the Government of the United States, whenever it suits its purposes, claims to be the especial guardian of the Indian. Treaty obligations are set aside, and the Government assumes paternal care of the Indian and undertakes to do what is best for him.

Mr. FULLER. It does not always do it, though.

Mr. BLOUNT. My friend suggests that the Government does not always do it. I am surprised at him! [Laughter.] Then again, Mr. Speaker, when measures come into the House purporting to be for the benefit of these wards of ours, we are gravely told by persons urging them that "the Indians want them." Now, sir, I have never been one of those who have inclined to the opinion that our policy should be to provide for the ownership of Indian lands in severalty.

Such, however, has come to be, with some qualification, the policy of the Government. I believe that up to this time alienation has not been allowed until the expiration of a period of twenty-five years. The proposition of my friend from Kansas [Mr. PERKINS] is now to limit this period to twenty years. It is proposed that the Indian may sell a part of his lands to any other Indian. With the assent of the Secretary of the Interior, an Indian receiving land under this allotment may convey a portion to any other Indian who is not so fortunately situated as himself. What sort of a title is there to be in such a case?

Mr. PERKINS. Perhaps the gentleman may not be aware that we have never passed an allotment bill allowing to an Indian so large a quantity of land in severalty as is proposed to be given by this bill, and that is one reason why the bill authorizes under certain conditions a sale of the excess over 160 acres.

Mr. BLOUNT. Under this bill as it came to the House with the recommendation of the Committee on Indian Affairs there were to be so many hundred acres allotted to these Indians; but before we have reached the conclusion of the bill the gentleman from Kansas comes in with a proposition that we take away one-half of this land, and he suggests that in doing this we do more for the Indians than we have ever done before. Sir, I wish to say we have done nothing for the Indians in reference to this matter, either in this bill or in any other. There has been on the part of some of our people a spirit of agrarianism with reference to the lands of the Indians. Wherever there have been valuable Indian lands there has been pressure in this House, pressure from the Departments, pressure everywhere, for treaty stipulations or for legislation, the effect of which has simply been to rob the Indians, and this proposition giving to them a certain amount of land in severalty does practically nothing for their benefit. The result of this measure, in my opinion, will be that these lands will be frittered away. It does not appear that even on the portion of lands now proposed to be allowed houses are to be constructed and supplies furnished for the purpose of enabling the Indians to carry on their farms. As to the sum of money for which an Indian may sell a portion of his land to some other Indian, that is likely to be frittered away.

The inducement held out for the passage of this bill is that the Indian wants it. Yes, the cupidity of the Indian destroys his judgment. Inspired by his cupidity, he is doubtless pleased with the provision of the bill allowing him to sell a portion of this land and devote the proceeds to any purpose, however silly.

Mr. HERBERT. Will the gentleman allow a question?

Mr. BLOUNT. Certainly.

Mr. HERBERT. Is it not the opinion of the gentleman that the provision limiting the sale to another Indian would prove nugatory? Might not the Indian to whom the land would be transferred act as an agent for some other person? There is not even a limitation that the land shall be sold only to other Indians for the purpose of settlement and cultivation.

Mr. BLOUNT. I can come to no other conclusion than that which has been reached by my friend from Alabama [Mr. HERBERT].

Mr. HERBERT. The provision practically gives the Indian no protection at all.

Mr. BLOUNT. We are told that the Indian is in favor of this provision giving him a part of the land in absolute fee. Sir, any gentleman who has taken occasion to observe the course of affairs in reference to our Indian treaties——

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Speaker, are we not proceeding under the five-minute rule? The first reading of the bill, I believe, was dispensed with.

Mr. PERKINS. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] if he desires a little more time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COX). The gentleman from Kansas yields to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT].

Mr. BLOUNT. Any gentleman who has taken occasion to look into the expenditures for negotiating Indian treaties on the part of this great Government of the United States—any gentleman who calls to mind the various baubles which have been used to attract the Indian's fancy and to operate as an inducement for the negotiation of these treaties—ought to feel the blush of shame come to his cheek. I can not but think that the money which these Indians are expected to realize from the sale of a portion of these lands is operating upon the Indians as a temptation in the same way as did the baubles which have been used for the purpose of negotiating treaties.

If we are to give these allotment lands to the Indians, let us give them absolutely, without any division. Let us try the Indian for a time in this matter. Let us not be in great haste to exhaust what little treasure we have left him. I trust, Mr. Speaker, that the amendment will not be agreed to.

Mr. PERKINS. I move the previous question on the section and pending amendment.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE rose.

Mr. PERKINS. As the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], who is a member of the committee and who has only come into the Hall within the last few minutes, would like to be heard, I will withdraw for the present the call for the previous question.

Mr. HOOKER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I understand we are considering this bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole under the five-minute rule. If that is the fact, will it not be proper that the bill be considered afterward by the House itself?

Mr. PERKINS. This bill was not in the Committee of the Whole, but was on the House Calendar.

Mr. HOOKER. But it is now being considered, as I understand, in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. PERKINS. Oh, no; this bill was not on the Union Calendar. It makes no appropriation. It was upon the House Calendar.

Mr. HOOKER. Was not the motion made to consider it in the House as in Committee of the Whole?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This bill was on the House Calendar; it makes no appropriation. The question now pending is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Kansas to the substitute.

Mr. PERKINS. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE].

Mr. BLOUNT. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry. Does the Chair hold that a bill providing for parting with the title to Indian lands which are under the control of the Government does not require under the rules to be considered in the Committee of the Whole? I am quite sure it has been held otherwise frequently.

Mr. PEEL. This bill does not make any appropriation of Government property; it simply provides for the division of Indian lands among the Indians.

Mr. BLOUNT. But it provides for parting with the control of the Government over these lands; and it has always been held that the rules require such a bill to be considered in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. NELSON. In reference to the point of order of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] allow me to say——

Mr. BLOUNT. I have not made a point of order, only a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. NELSON. I want to suggest to the gentleman from Geoegia and to the Chair that whatever might have been the ruling in the first instance the point has been waived, because we have gone on and considered the bill in the House.

Mr. BLOUNT. So I understand, hence I did not raise a question of order, and I did not expect that any ruling now upon a case not actually presenting itself would be treated anything like a determined opinion of the Chair.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE].

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I did not know, Mr. Speaker, that I would add anything to what I said the other day; but I do desire to emphasize my objection to this amendment.

It has been stated repeatedly on this floor that these Indians are quite as capable of holding property, and of managing it, as white people. If this be true, then there is no reason why any restriction should be put upon the fee which they take in their lands, or upon their right to control their allotments under the bill; but I doubt, as I have before intimated, whether it is safe to follow the advice and direction of those from whom this amendment emanates, although they claim to be delegates of the Indians interested. It seems to me it ought to be apparent to any gentleman reflecting on this subject for a moment, that there must be, from the very nature of things, a wide difference in the business capacity of the different members of these tribes, and in their ability to manage property. It may be that all these Indians are capable of looking after their own interests, but I do not believe they or any other Indians have at this time reached such a high state of development, attained such a degree of civilization as to make it safe to intrust them with the power to dispose of their land.

I believe the inevitable effect of this amendment will be that all the lands to which the members of the tribe are entitled over and above 160 acres, amounting to something over 100 acres each, will soon pass into the hands of the stronger, shrewder, more capable members of the tribe, who, like these delegates now here, have been sharpened by their intercourse with the world and who have a great advantage over other members of the tribe in their superior business knowledge.

I believe it to be entirely proper for me to say that I submitted this amendment, and especially this portion of the amendment, to the judgment of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs yesterday morning, and he expressed himself as being wholly and irreconcilably opposed to the proposition. He believed it to be entirely unsafe, and thought it ought not to be adopted as part of the bill.

With that statement I will leave the matter with the House. If they see fit to place in the hands of these Indians the entire control of the disposal of their lands, the responsibility will be with them and not with me.

Mr. PERKINS. I wish to suggest to the gentleman from Wisconsin that since his interview with the Commissioner of Indian Affairs we have modified the amendment, at the request of the representatives of these Indians, to limit the excess of lands to be sold to other Indians or to other tribes. That limitation was not in the amendment when the gentleman showed it to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. With that amendment it may have the approval of the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I do not see how that obviates the objection. They may dispose of their lands to other Indians or to Indians of other tribes.

Mr. HERBERT. That would not prevent these Indians selling their lands to Indians of other tribes.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. It seems to me the bill is absolutely worthless in that regard.

Mr. HOOKER. I see it is provided in section 11—

That it is distinctly understood that no person or persons who have heretofore been attached to either of said tribes, and who have withdrawn from either of said tribes and become citizens of the United States, and been paid their fair share of the funds set apart for them and their families, shall have, or be permitted to have, any part or interest in and to any portion of the land or money allotted or paid to the said Peoria or Miami Indians under the provisions of this act.

I see, too, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PERKINS] has introduced a bill—

To provide for a revision of a distribution of the "invested and other common property" of the Confederated Peoria, Kaskaskia, Wea, and Piankeshaw Indians, made under the treaty of 1867, and for other purposes.

Mr. PERKINS. I am going to offer that as an amendment.

Mr. HOOKER. What I wish to inquire about is this: How do you provide for the protection of these Indians who, under the treaty of 1867, became citizens of the United States?

Mr. PERKINS. The gentleman from Mississippi, I will say, is mistaken in one particular. The bill he has before him has not been reported by the committee, although it has been introduced and is before them. It has not received their favorable consideration yet. However, by consent of parties interested, I am going to move that bill as an amendment in the proper place to accomplish the objects sought to be accomplished therein.

Mr. HOOKER. To whom do you refer when you speak of "parties interested?"

Mr. PERKINS. The citizen Indians and the delegates here speaking for the Indians in the Indian Territory. By consent they have agreed upon that as an amendment and given it to me, which I will offer at the proper time.

I now demand the previous question upon the substitute and the pending amendments to this section.

The previous question was ordered.

The amendments to the proposed substitute were severally read and concurred in; there being, on a division—ayes 51, noes 34.

The question recurred upon the adoption of the substitute for the section as amended.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let the substitute be read now as it has been amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

That upon the approval of the allotments provided for in this act by the Secretary of the Interior he shall cause patents to issue therefor in the name of the allottees, their heirs and assigns. Said patents shall contain and recite the following exemption clause: "That the lands so patented shall remain free from execution, levy, taxation, sale, or forfeiture so long as the title shall remain in the original patentee or be the property of any other Indians by inheritance, purchase, or otherwise;" also, the following restricting clause: "That 160 acres of said lands so allotted shall remain inalienable for a period of twenty years from the date of patents;" and if any conveyance shall be made of lands herein made inalienable by this act, or any contract made touching the same before the expiration of the time mentioned and provided by this act, it shall be absolutely null and void. Any adult members of the United Peoria and Miami tribes of Indians shall have authority, under the provisions of this act, to sell or dispose of to any Indian not a member of the tribe any part or parcel of land for himself or herself of the amount over and above the 160 acres of the allotments as hereinbefore made by this act. That the sale of any part or parcel of said allotments of lands shall not be made for a less sum than $1.25 per acre: Provided, That all sales of lands under this act made by the adult members of the said Peoria and Miami tribes of Indians while the Indian Territory remains under its present form of government shall be subject to approval by the Secretary of the Interior under and by the same rules and regulations governing the sales of Miami Indian allotted lands in Kansas, and the deed shall be recorded in the office of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and the deed after approval and recording shall be returned to the grantor named in the deed.

The question was taken on the adoption of the substitute; and on a division there were—ayes 41, nays 40.

Mr. BLOUNT. Let us have tellers.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman make the point that no quorum has voted?

Mr. BLOUNT. I do make it.

Mr. BLOUNT and Mr. PERKINS were appointed tellers.

Mr. NELSON. I hope the gentleman from Georgia will not insist upon that point, as we have quite an amount of business from the committee to get through with, and there are several other sections to this bill.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Speaker, at the request of gentlemen in charge of the Indian bills I withdraw the point of no quorum.

So (no further count being demanded) the substitute was adopted.

Section 5 of the bill was read.

The first paragraph of section 6 was read, as follows:

SEC. 6. That the unallotted lands of the Miami Indians in Kansas, including the school-sections, shall be disposed of in the following manner, to wit:

That each bona fide settler occupying any portion of said lands at the date of the passage of this act, and having made valuable improvements thereon, or the heirs-at-law of such, who is a citizen of the United States, or who has declared his intention to become such, shall be entitled, at any time within one year from the passage of this act, to purchase the land so occupied and improved by him, not to exceed 160 acres in each case, according to the Government survey, at the appraised value thereof, as heretofore ascertained by the Secretary of the Interior, in accordance with the provisions of the act of March 3, 1873, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe. And such persons who are entitled to purchase said lands as aforesaid shall be permitted to make payment therefor in cash in three equal annual installments, the first installment to be payable on the day of the entry of the land, and the remaining two installments annually thereafter, with interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum from the date of entry.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the gentleman from Kansas when this appraisement was made?

Mr. PERKINS. Under the act of 1873.

Mr. HOLMAN. I know it was under that act, but I mean when was it made?

Mr. PERKINS. Soon after the passage of the act.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suggest to my friend from Kansas the propriety of striking out these words in the twelfth and thirteenth lines, "as heretofore ascertained;" so that it will read:

According to the Government survey, at the appraised value thereof, etc.

Certainly these lands ought not to be sold now on an appraisement made as far back as 1873. They ought to be sold, of course, at their actual present value. I therefore think it would be wise to strike out these words and insert "to be ascertained by the Secretary of the Interior under the provisions of the act of 1873."

Mr. PERKINS. I do not know that I have any objection to that amendment myself, only that I would like to suggest to the gentleman from Indiana the condition of these lands, and then if he desires to offer the amendment, of course it will be for the House to act upon it.

I will state to him that there are small quantities of these lands, little detached, jagged pieces, which have not been heretofore sold, possibly 20 acres in one place, 40 acres in another, and so on, in most cases very poor lands, lying along on the headwaters of the Marais de Cygnes River in my State; and, as a new appraisement would necessarily involve some expenditure and delay, they would like to avoid, not only the expense, but the circumlocution of the Interior Department that such an appraisement would involve. I thought that, as the lands had been appraised once and they were generally insignificant in value, there could be little question as to the interests of the present owners being guarded, and that they may be sold under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, the minimum price being fixed by the bill. Under these circumstances, I do not think the gentleman will insist upon the amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. If we were disposing of lands under the legislation of a State for the benefit of white people, we would be careful to see that there was a just appraisement and not an appraisement made ten or twelve years previously. Manifestly a sale under such circumstances might be very unfair and unjust, and hence I offer the amendment I have suggested.

The Clerk read the proposed amendment, as follows:

Amend line 12 of section 6 by striking out the words "as heretofore" and inserting "to be hereafter;" making it read: "not to exceed 160 acres in each case, according to the Government survey, at the appraised value thereof, to be hereafter ascertained by the Secretary of the Interior."

The amendment was adopted.

The Clerk read the concluding paragraph of section 6, as follows:

And the net proceeds of the sales of said lands, after defraying the expenses of the sale, shall belong to said Miami Indians, and shall be disposed of as now provided by law.

Mr. HOOKER. I ask the gentleman who has charge of this bill what is the effect of these closing words of the section which the Clerk has just finished reading, what Miami Indians are referred to, and what provision of law? Do you include the citizens as well?

Mr. PERKINS. No, sir; but the citizens will be included by the amendments we will offer, to which I called attention a short time ago.

The Clerk read section 7, as follows:

SEC. 7. That the Peoria and Miami Indians shall be paid separately all such sums of money as may be due each of said tribes, in manner as hereinafter provided; and so much of that portion of the act of March 3, 1873, as relates to the consolidation of said tribal funds of said Peoria and Miami Indians is hereby repealed.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the gentleman from Kansas will inform the House as to the state of the funds of these consolidated tribes; how much money they have here in trust for them, and how much is paid them annually for interest.

Mr. PERKINS. The Peorias have about $77,300 as a trust fund; in addition they have about $20,000 as a school fund. The Miamies have not as much, but I have been unable to learn, without visiting the Indian Office, just how much. When the same question was asked me on Saturday I had intended to visit the Indian Office to get this information, but I have been so busy that I have not been able to do so; but the amount paid to the Miamies is much less than that paid to the Peorias.

Mr. HOLMAN. Then it may be assumed that about $150,000 are held for the benefit of both tribes?

Mr. PERKINS. Substantially that.

Mr. HOLMAN. And except as to the $20,000 of the school fund of the Peorias and whatever may be the amount of the school fund of the Miamies, it is proposed to distribute the balance among the tribe?

Mr. PERKINS. Yes. The bill distributes the common fund so that they may use it for making their homes in the Territory and for their general good.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think many of those Indians would use that money prudently, but there are some of them who would not, and I should be very glad to inquire whether the tribes by any action of theirs or their council, as I believe they have a common council acting for both tribes, have expressed any wish that this fund should be distributed.

Mr. PERKINS. I will say that this provision has been in every bill which has been introduced at the instance and suggestion of these Indians. For several years they have approved every measure of this kind in their councils and by petitions to Congress, and they have sent delegation after delegation to urge on Congress the passage of the bill, and I will say in addition the Indian Office recommends the adoption of this section with others. I have a letter in my desk from the Indian Office approving it.

Mr. HOLMAN. These Indians have here representing them some intelligent men. I have seen two of them; one of them is a white man, I believe. The other tells me he is the great grandson of Richardville, who, I understand, was half Indian and half French. These Indians are getting remote from the original stock.

Mr. PERKINS. That is true of nearly all the tribes.

Mr. HOLMAN. Does my friend from Kansas believe it is safe policy to pay over to these two hundred Indians at least $120,000 when they are getting along reasonably well as it is? Is it safe to put this money at peril in their hands? Does our experience in reference to these Indians justify that line of policy? Does the Commissioner of Indian Affairs recommend it?

Mr. PERKINS. He does. This entire bill was submitted to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior, and every paragraph of it received the sanction of that Department. The committee amended the bill so as to conform to every suggestion of the Indian Office.

Mr. HOLMAN. I apprehend we are following a line of policy, and have done so ever since we commenced the allotment system, that will make the remnants of the aboriginal tribes landless and hopelessly impoverished.

Mr. PERKINS. As to the minors, that fund is not given to them; but guardians are to be appointed and bonds given, and they are to care for this fund as guardians for their wards, as is the case in most of our States. Then I will say the Committee on Indian Affairs in the preparation of the annual appropriation bill, upon the recommendation of the Indian Office, has provided for the distribution of trust funds in other cases to Indian tribes.

Mr. NELSON. I call the attention of the gentleman from Indiana to the proviso at the end of section 8:

Provided, That the shares of all minors entitled under this act shall be retained one year from the passage of this act, to purchase the land so occupied and improved by him.

In other words, it is held in the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is all safe enough as to the minors, but it is unsafe in my judgment as to a large proportion of those who are adults and who would receive this money. I think that two influences which have been mentioned by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. COBB] are working to the injury of the Indians; upon the one side the influence of mistaken humanitarians, people who believe that the Indians are to be benefited by being placed upon the same footing with white men, and who measure their capacity for managing their affairs by the intelligence of the white man; upon the other the everlastingly aggressive spirit of the white man, which impels him to reach out for at least all that he can fairly acquire.

These two forces are working together, and their influence produces a result which is very different from the former policy of our Government, and, Mr. Speaker, I can not but deplore the existence of this new Indian policy. I do not indulge the slightest hope that the Indian will be benefited by it. On the contrary, I think that our generation will have the misfortune of undoing what our fathers sought to do for the Indian. The messages of President Jackson and his predecessors breathe a very different spirit from the measures that are carried through Congress here year after year. Our fathers sought to save the remnants of these brave people, and they set apart for them reservations solemnly dedicated to their use forever, in language as strong as the human mind could express. But the present policy is to reach out and take possession of those Indian lands. Thirty-nine million acres of their lands have already been taken by bills which have passed this House within a brief period, and those lands are to be thrown open for settlement by white men.

We can not complain, perhaps, with regard to the lands that are situated away from the Indian Territory, because they are required for white occupation, and because the Indians are paid a reasonably fair price for them; but as to the lands in the Indian Territory I must protest against the policy which has been recently instituted, and which is pressed so urgently and aggressively upon the House, the policy of opening up that Territory to white settlement in defiance of solemn treaties made with the Indians in former years. We commence in the northeastern corner of the Indian Territory with lands which we have declared shall not be subject to the legislation of any State or Territory. We commence legislating there by the terms of this bill. Bill after bill is pending in Congress for the purpose of reaching the other Indian lands, and they will be reached, and this policy is to be substituted for the benign, humane, honorable policy of our fathers which set apart a fine body of land for the purpose of colonizing those Indians who would consent to go there and build up a great Indian commonwealth. And, sir, our experience up to the present time has justified the hope of our fathers that a great Indian commonwealth might be built up there and that at least one State of this Union might be peopled by the descendants of the brave Indian tribes that once occupied and possessed this whole land.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] that there is nothing pending before the House. The gentleman from Indiana has not submitted any amendment.

Mr. WEAVER. Will the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. HOLMAN. Certainly.

Mr. WEAVER. I wish to ask the gentleman whether he thinks from the current history of the Indian Territory that a very humane condition of affairs exists there?

Mr. HOLMAN. I think that in the main, everything considered, the Indian Territory is doing remarkably well. The claim has been made, and I have never heard it denied, that there was not a pauper among the five civilized tribes, and the same claim has beeen set up by the Sacs and Foxes.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Speaker, I dislike to interrupt the gentleman, but——

Mr. WEAVER. The condition of the Indian Territory is that it is controlled by a few barons who are enslaving all the rest.

Mr. HOOKER. I wish to ask the gentleman in charge of this bill [Mr. PERKINS] what portion of the existing law section 7 proposes to repeal. I observe in that section this language:

And so much of that portion of the act of March 3, 1873, as relates to the consolidation of said tribal funds of said Peoria and Miami Indians is hereby repealed.

To what section of the act of March 3, 1873, does that refer?

Mr. PERKINS. To the provision which has created this consolidated fund.

Mr. HOOKER. And put it in trust?

Mr. PERKINS. And put it in trust.

Mr. HOOKER. Then this repeals that provision, and provides for the distribution of the fund.

Mr. PERKINS. Yes, sir; we repeal that section of the act of 1873.

The Clerk read the next section, as follows:

SEC. 8. That within ninety days from and after the passage of this act the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to pay over to the said Peoria, Wea, Kaskaskia, and Piankeshaw Indians, except as hereinafter provided, all money belonging to said Peoria, Wea, Kaskaskia, and Piankeshaw Indians, and heretofore invested by the United States for the benefit of said Indians, together with all money now in the custody of the United States and belonging to said Indians, and arising from any and all sources whatsoever, the same to be paid out under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior per capita to all of said Peoria, Wea, Kaskaskia, and Piankeshaw Indians: Provided, That the shares of all minors entitled under this act shall be retained in the Treasury of the United States until such minors shall arrive at full age; and such shares so remaining shall bear interest at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, there are, as many members of this House may be aware, some citizen Indians who have heretofore belonged to these tribes. Under acts of Congress already passed their fund has been distributed, and the relations previously existing between the several members of the tribe have been adjusted. The citizen Indians, however, think that in this adjustment they did not get their full proportion of the trust fund; and they have a bill pending in the House, which has been referred to our committee, asking a readjustment of the matter and a redistribution of the fund. That is the bill to which my friend from Mississippi has referred. In order to give the Interior Department an opportunity to reinvestigate this matter and to do justice in the event that these Indians did not get their full share in the distribution already had, I move the following amendment:

In line 2 of section 8 strike out the words "passage of this act" and insert the following:

"Revision of a distribution of the invested and other common property of the Confederated Peoria, Kaskaskia, Weah, and Piankeshaw Indians, made under the treaty of 1867, as hereinafter provided."

Other amendments are to follow which will make the bill harmonious.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following:

SEC. 9. That within ninety days from and after the passage of this act the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to pay over, except as hereinafter provided, to the said Miami Indians, all money belonging to said Indians, or that may be due to said Miami Indians from the United States, arising from any and all sources whatsoever, the same to be paid out, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, per capita to the members of the said Miami tribe of Indians. That all money received and now in the custody of the United States, or that may be received up to the date of the passage of this act, arising from the sale of the unallotted lands in Kansas, including the school sections referred to in section 6 of this act, shall immediately be available after the passage of this act; and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to pay the same to said Miami Indians in accordance with the provisions of the act of March 3, 1873.

Mr. HOLMAN. I would be very glad to know whether the Commissioner of Indian Affairs recommends definitely this section and the two preceding sections. Has he given an expression of approval as to the general bill, or does he advise the distribution of this fund among the Peorias and other Indians?

Mr. PERKINS. As I stated a few minutes ago, this bill was submitted to the Indian Office and to the Secretary of the Interior, in order to obtain the views of the Office and the Department upon it. They interpolated in the bill as submitted to them such amendments as in their judgment were proper. The committee accepted every such amendment and suggestion, and reported the bill to the House as amended and approved by the Indian Office and the Secretary of the Interior. This bill confers upon these Indians the rights of citizenship substantially as the general allotment bill confers the right of citizenship upon the Indians to whom allotments are made.

Mr. HOLMAN. So that the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, it is understood, actually recommended the policy of this bill.

Mr. PERKINS. He did, he indorsed every line of it as reported to the House.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope this is not a mistake, because it is a very serious matter to these unfortunate people. My belief is that within five years the body of these Indians will either be asking aid from this Government to support them on their lands, or else they will be outcasts and paupers.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There is no amendment pending. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 10. That upon the completion of the allotments provided for in this act and the patenting of the lands to said allottees, each and every member of the united tribes to whom allotments have been made shall become and be a citizen of the United States entitled to all the rights, privileges, and immunities of such citizens.

Mr. COBB. I move to amend by striking out the section just read.

Mr. Speaker, while I am not opposed to the policy of allowing Indians to become citizens of the United States, I am unalterably opposed to the policy of thrusting citizenship upon them without reference to their qualifications to receive it. This bill proposes in the first place to divide the lands of these Indians in severalty; and the mere fact that the land is so divided is to make them citizens, so we are told, under the general laws of the United States. If that be true, then this section is not necessary. If it is not true, then I am opposed to the section, because I am opposed to having these Indians made citizens in the manner here provided.

It is well known that these Indians are not the most civilized of our Indian tribes. There are other Indians more advanced in civilization who have never yet received the privilege of citizenship. It is more than doubtful whether any of the Indians are prepared, as tribes or bands, to enjoy the rights and privileges and assume the duties and responsibilities of citizens. If we are to pursue the policy of making them citizens, why not do so under such regulations, limitations, and restrictions of law as will insure their fitness to exercise the rights of citizenship? Here is a whole tribe or band of Indians, not the most civilized in the Indian Territory, upon whom you propose to confer by a single enactment the rights and duties of citizenship. I think the policy is wrong, looking to the interests of the Government; and it is certainly wrong, in my judgment, so far as the Indian himself is concerned, as it will tend to drive him more speedily to his destruction.

Mr. NELSON. I beg to have read section 6 of the general allotment act passed at the last Congress. I want to have it read for the information of the House.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 6. That upon the completion of said allotments and the patenting of the lands to said allottees, each and every member of the respective bands or tribes of Indians to whom allotments have been made shall have the benefit of and be subject to the laws, both civil and criminal, of the State or Territory in which they may reside; and no Territory shall pass or enforce any law denying any such Indian within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law. And every Indian born within the territorial limits of the United States to whom allotments shall have been made under the provisions of this act, or under any law or treaty, and every Indian born within the territorial limits of the United States who has voluntarily taken up, within said limits, his residence separate and apart from any tribe of Indians therein, and has adopted the habits of civilized life, is hereby declared to be a citizen of the United States, and is entitled to all the rights, privileges, and immunities of such citizens, whether said Indian has been or not, by birth or otherwise, a member of any tribe of Indians within the territorial limits of the United States without in any manner impairing or otherwise affecting the right of any such Indian to tribal or other property.

Mr. COBB. I ask the gentleman from Minnesota to have read at the same time section 8 of the same law.

Mr. PEEL. I must object to the time being taken up in these debates when there is no question pending before the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HATCH in the chair). The gentleman from Minnesota is entitled to the floor.

Mr. NELSON. I desire to say, Mr. Speaker, that the general law which I have had read at the Clerk's desk goes further even than the proposition in this bill. Therefore whether we leave this in the pending bill or not these Indians will come in under the general allotment act.

Mr. PERKINS. These Indians were specially excepted from the general allotment act, and therefore if they are to become citizens of the United States it must be done affirmatively, because as the law now stands they are expressly excepted.

Mr. HOLMAN. Have these Indians applied for this legislation?

Mr. PERKINS. They have.

Mr. HOLMAN. The men who are here are white men—one is a white man and the other is a half-breed. I am not aware that they are here having any authority from these Indians to represent them.

Mr. COBB. I should like to have read section 8, to which I have referred, of the general allotment act.

Mr. PEEL. I do not wish to interfere with my colleague on the committee, but I should like to ask the Chair a parliamentary question: whether it is competent for gentlemen to discuss this bill except under the five-minute rule?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill is being discussed under the five-minute rule. The gentleman from Alabama who offered the amendment occupied but two minutes, and the gentleman from Minnesota occupied less than three minutes.

Mr. PEEL. I am anxious to get along with this bill.

Mr. COBB. In addition to the statement made by the gentleman from Minnesota, I will say that section 8 does except these Indians from the operation of section 6, which was read on his request at the Clerk's desk.

I have but a word more to say. I am as anxious as my colleague, the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, to get along with the bill; but it strikes me it is not prudent and wise legislation to permit a bill to pass without fair consideration.

Mr. PERKINS. By express terms, it is provided in the general allotment act—

That the provision of this act shall not extend to the territory occupied by the Cherokees, Creeks, Choctaws, Chickasaws, Seminoles, and Osages, Miamies and Peorias, and Sacs and Foxes, in the Indian Territory.

It was expressly understood that these Indians were not to be embraced.

Mr. HOLMAN. In the treaties with the five civilized tribes of Indians in the Indian Territory it was expressly provided that they were not to be embarrassed by legislation in reference to the Indians who were allowed to be located in that Territory. Those Indians were to be under their own government. They sold to these Miamies and Peorias a small corner of land. I would inquire, therefore, whether this legislation is not almost a violation in terms of the treaty under which the Cherokees acquired these lands?

Mr. COBB. I have no knowledge about that; if I had time I would go more extensively into that question; and I hope to do so when the Indian appropriation bill comes up for consideration. We have not time now to go into these questions.

We are now speaking on the question of citizenship. I do not think this provision extending the right of citizenship to these Indians, before we are assured they are ready for it, should be in this bill; and it is against that provision I feel it to be my duty to object. I propose before this Congress adjourns to introduce a bill repealing the general law on this subject, because I think it is wrong in principle and destructive in its policy. I do not want this thing to extend further than it has already gone, and hence I am opposed to providing in this bill for the extension of citizenship to these Miamies and Peorias. It is violative, as my friend from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] has suggested, of our treaty stipulations.

I am opposed to the whole policy as to conferring citizenship covered by this bill. What inquiry is provided to be made into the qualifications these men have for the exercise of the right and the performance of the duties of citizenship? Since this Government was organized we have been liberal in our policy of granting citizenship, but it has always been connected with the inquiry as to the qualification of the person applying for it to discharge its duties and obligations.

Mr. PERKINS. I simply desire to say, in response to the gentleman from Alabama, that I have here a letter from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and this section 10 found in the bill is found in the language draughted and recommended by the Indian Office. I therefore ask a vote on the amendment.

Mr. HOOKER. Mr. Speaker, I understand the motion of the gentleman from Alabama is to strike out the tenth section upon the ground that it proposes to regard as citizens of the United States all the members of these two combined tribes of Miami and Peoria Indians immediately upon receiving their allotted lands. An amendment which was adopted at the instance of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PERKINS] this morning, or a few moments ago, contained the stipulation that these lands, when thus allotted to the Indians, should be inalienable except to Indians; that the title should be perpetually in the allottees, their heirs or assigns, provided they were Indians, and that the lands should be exempt from execution, levy, or sale under the ordinary forms of law as provided when lands are held by white men. The singular aspect is thus presented of a proposition to create over a small portion of the Indian Territory—a little parallelogram along the northeastern portion of the Territory, as gentlemen will see by reference to the map which I hold in my hand—a different system, and establish there the two tribes of Indians which you propose to locate in that parallelogram under a system different from that which is in force over the remainder of the Territory inhabited by these various tribes. It is proposed here by legislative enactment to admit the combined tribes of Miamies and Peorias as citizens of this country, and settle them upon their own lands, coupled with the extraordinary condition, I might say one unparalleled in the history of any people over whom we propose to stretch our laws, that they shall be vested with all the rights and privileges of citizens of the United States and at the same time be entirely free from execution through the ordinary processes of law. Under what State are they placed? In what State would they be regarded as citizens? Under what law do they live? How would they be citizens of the United States? Under what territorial organization would they act? Where would they be triable for a violation of the law? Where would they be amenable to civil suits?

Under this law they could not be amenable at all, for their realty is free from all execution, from any judgments, which may be obtained against them, unlike any similar provision incorporated in the laws of any of the States of the Union affecting the property of the poorest man in the country. The strange policy would be presented here of carving out of the extreme northeastern portion of this Indian Territory this small parallelogram and clothing the combined tribes of the Miami and Peoria Indians, whom you propose to locate there, with the rights of citizenship under the laws of the United States, and yet under no State, in no State, having no laws applicable to them or over them, and under the control of no law whatever.

Mr. HOLMAN. Except their own.

Mr. HOOKER. Yes, except their own.

Now, it will be observed, and it is significant, that this little strip of land to which I have referred is close upon the State of Missouri, and on the northern boundary is the State of Kansas.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Does not that arise from its geographical position? [Laughter.]

Mr. HOOKER. Undoubtedly from its geographical position, but most fortunately for Kansas and Missouri, however unfortunate it may be for the Indians themselves.

But, sir, I hold that the bill contains graver objections than the objections that have been so well stated by my friend from Alabama [Mr. COBB]. These people are in the midst of the five semi-civilized Indian tribes. These tribes are known to be bitterly opposed to the principle of allotment of their lands in severalty. They sold these lands to the Miami and Peoria Indians, under what particular terms of the treaty I have not now time to investigate, but sold them for the purpose of being occupied by Indians living under the same system of laws as themselves, wedded to the same line of policy as themselves. It is undoubtedly a violation of the terms and stipulations of the treaty under which the Cherokees held these lands to say that you will now change the conditions under which they are held and adopt a different system in relation to them from that applied to the other tribes. If you may do that you may change the laws applicable to the lands held by the Indians in any portion of the territory occupied by any of the Indians, and I prophesy, Mr. Speaker, that this bill is but the entering wedge for propositions that are now here, or shortly will come, submitting plans and methods to change the policy under which the Indians hold their lands.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say for the benefit of my friend from Mississippi that, unless I am badly mistaken, under a general allotment bill the Quapaws and Pottawatomies and other Indian tribes have already had their lands allotted; and hence this is no anomaly. The world will go on all the same after it is done as it has been going on for some time.

Mr. HOOKER. It will be imitating a very bad example, if it has been set before. I understand that the Pottawatomies are situated in that way, and that amongst them that principle prevails. I do not think, however, it can be justified upon any ground unless you are going to change the whole Indian policy, and on the pretense that you understand their interests better than they do themselves.

Now, I assert that the five civilized tribes are amply capable of directing their own affairs. I had occasion to pass through that part of the country not very long since, and met with men of the Cherokee, Chickasaw, Creek, and Choctaw tribes, and know their feelings in reference to the matter. I have spoken heretofore of their capacity to manage their own affairs. And while they may have peculiar views of the obligations of contract, if there is one principle that is dearer to these Indians than another, and if there is one in which they show marked intelligence and unanimity, it is the pertinacity with which they insist on holding their lands in common. They say, "It is our right, and unless you were dealing with us when you donated these lands in exchange for this vast empire east of the Mississippi," to use their own figurative language, "with forked tongues, and your promise that we should enjoy the occupancy of these lands forever meant only that we might hold them until you wanted them for the white people, and would then ruthlessly, under the pretended form of protection, take them away, you will leave us to determine for ourselves what are our best interests and not force upon us a condition not demanded by our condition or best interests and not warranted by your obligations to us."

We stand, sir, related to these Indians, not only by solemn treaties, but the patents of the Government have gone forth, the highest evidence of title. And if you may invade it in one small and insignificant corner of the Indian Territory you may invade it everywhere, and set it aside at your own will and pleasure whenever you want these rich lands.

Mr. WARNER. I desire to make a correction of a statement made a short time ago. It was stated that by the treaty with the Cherokees in 1866 it was provided that lands should be deeded to them as tribes. I beg to say it was left to the discretion of the General Government whether lands should be deeded to the tribes or to the Indians.

Mr. HOLMAN. The Government used that discretion and elected to give the lands to the tribes.

Mr. PERKINS. Let us get on with this bill, which has nothing to do with the Cherokees.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. COBB] to strike out the tenth section.

The question being taken, there were—ayes 33, noes 73.

So (further count not being called for) the motion to strike out the section was not agreed to.

The Clerk read section 11, as follows:

SEC. 11. That it is distinctly understood that no person or persons who have heretofore been attached to either of said tribes, and who have withdrawn from either of said tribes and become citizens of the United States, and been paid their fair share of the funds set apart for them and their families, shall have or be permitted to have any part or interest in and to any portion of the land or money allotted or paid to the said Peoria or Miami Indians under the provisions of this act. Where present members of either of said tribes shall have intermarried into each other's tribe, respectively, he or she shall not be barred from receiving his or her full share of all land and money divided per capita under this act among the tribe from which he or she originated.

Mr. PERKINS. I offer the amendments which I send to the desk. I think it will save time to take them together.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 2, strike out "either of said" and insert "the Western Miami."
Strike out the letter "s" from "tribes" in line 3, and strike out in same line the words "either of."
In line 4, strike out "s" from the word "tribes."
In line 5, strike out the word "fair."
In line 8, strike out "Peoria or."
Strike out all after the word "act" in line 9.

Mr. HOOKER. Why in this section strike out the Peorias?

Mr. PERKINS. Because these provisions do not relate to them.

Mr. HOOKER. I understand the purport of the gentleman's amendment to be that none of those who have chosen to become citizens of the United States shall be entitled to any portion of this fund.

Mr. PERKINS. The object of our amendments is that they shall have whatever may be found to be their due, and that the Government shall be able to give it to them.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I wish to ask the gentleman from Kansas a question. He says, as I understand, that this bill has been submitted to and approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

Mr. PERKINS. Yes, sir.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I wish to know whether the bill submitted to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs was the bill reported to the House or the bill as it is now being amended?

Mr. PERKINS. The bill reported to the House.

Mr. ADAMS. I suggest to the gentleman from Kansas another amendment to the eleventh section. I think it would be better if the words at the beginning of the section "that it is distinctly understood" should be stricken out.

Mr. PERKINS. I agree to that and accept it as part of my amendment. Let the section now be read as it is proposed to be amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 11. That no person or persons who have heretofore been attached to the western Miami tribe, and who have withdrawn from said tribe and become citizens of the United States, and been paid their share of the funds set apart for them and their families, shall have or be permitted to have any part or interest in and to any portion of the land or money allotted or paid to the said Miami Indians under the provisions of this act.

The question being put on the amendments of Mr. PERKINS as odified they were agreed to.

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading of the bill.

Mr. PERKINS. In order that the bill may be made to conform entirely to what I suggested to the gentleman from Mississippi I move now the additional sections as an amendment pertaining to the same subject.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend by adding sections 14 and 15, as follows:

"SEC. 14. That the Secretary of the Interior shall, immediately after the passage of this act, examine and revise the distribution heretofore made of the 'invested and other common property' of the tribe of Confederated Peoria, Kaskaskia, Wea, and Piankeshaw Indians, under the provisions of the treaty of 1867, between said Indians and the United States, and shall ascertain and determine the amount due the Indians of said tribe 'who remained and became citizens of the United States' under the provisions of said treaty at the date of the distribution aforesaid, and deduct therefrom the sum actually paid to said Indians in said distribution heretofore made, and pay to said Indians of said tribe 'who remained and became citizens of the United States,' the survivors of them, their heirs or legal representatives, according to the laws of descent and distribution now in force in the State of Kansas, the difference between the revised amount in excess of the amount so distributed as aforesaid, with interest thereon from the date of distribution aforesaid, and deduct the amount so found to be due to said Indians of said tribe 'who remained and became citizens of the United States,' with the interest thereon from such of the invested or other funds of said tribe of Confederated Peoria, Kaskaskia, Wea, and Piankeshaw Indians, or of such of the invested or other funds now held in trust for said confederated tribe. If it shall appear that any living persons who were members of said confederated tribe of Peorias, etc., as appear in the treaty of 1854 were not enrolled on the division rolls on which a distribution was made under the treaty of 1867, they shall be enrolled with the Indian class; and if any persons have been fraudulently or erroneously enrolled on either of said rolls they shall be stricken therefrom and the two rolls thus amended shall be the basis of the redistribution herein provided.

"SEC. 15. That in the revision and examination herein provided for said Indians 'who remained and became citizens of the United States' under said treaty of 1867, may be heard through counsel learned in the law, who shall have free access, for the purposes of this examination and revision, to all papers now on file in the Department of the Interior relating to or in any wise pertaining to said distribution or revision; and for the services of said counsel in this behalf a reasonable sum, to be fixed by contract between said Indians and their counsel, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, or in the absence of such contract in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, shall be retained out of the amount found to be due said Indians 'who remained and became citizens of the United States,' the survivors of them, their heirs or legal representatives, and be paid by the Secretary of the Interior to said counsel."

The amendment was adopted.

Mr. PERKINS. I ask unanimous consent for the House to recur to sections 7 and 9. I made a statement to the House, which I find, on examination of the letter of the Indian Office, was not correct. I said every amendment suggested to the bill by the Indian Office had been incorporated and reported; but I find now the Department criticises section 7 and section 9, and doubts the propriety of dividing this investment fund among these Indians. I ask unanimous consent to reconsider these sections, so that the House may not be deceived by any statement I made in the matter.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to going back to the consideration of those sections?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOLMAN. I shall move to strike out those sections.

Mr. BLOUNT. Let them be read.

Section 7 was read, as follows:

SEC. 7. That the Peoria and Miami Indians shall be paid separately all such sums of money as may be due each of said tribes, in manner as hereinafter provided; and so much of that portion of the act of March 3, 1873, as relates to the consolidation of said tribal funds of said Peoria and Miami Indians is hereby repealed.

Mr. PERKINS. I desire to read from the letter of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Mr. Atkins, in regard to those sections:

As to sections 7, 8, and 9, I quote from my report of April 16, 1886:

"Section 7 provides that the Peoria and Miami Indians shall be paid separately all such sums of money as may be due each of said tribes in manner as hereinafter provided, and repeals so much of the act of March 3, 1873, as relates to the consolidation of said tribal funds of said Peoria and Miami Indians, and section 8 provides that within ninety days from and after the passage of this act the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to pay over to said Peoria, etc., Indians—with the exception of $15,000, to be reserved as a school fund—all moneys belonging to said Indians heretofore invested or held in trust, and arising from any and all sources whatsoever.

"In regard to these two sections, I have to say that it is not deemed wise or prudent to pay to these tribes the whole amount of moneys due under treaties or held in trust for their benefit, but that under the twenty-fourth article of the treaty with the Peorias, etc., dated February 23, 1867 (Stats. 15, pages 519–520) the Secretary of the Interior has authority to grant relief from time to time by payment of a part of their funds, invested or otherwise, upon the application of the chiefs for the same.

"The same remarks will apply to section 9 regarding the payment in full to the Miamies of all moneys due, except as to the land moneys now on hand or hereafter to be placed to their credit on the books of the Treasury, which requires the consent of Congress before payment."

So that the Indian Commissioner does not suggest any amendment to the section, and, in consequence of that, no amendments were made by the committee; but the Indian Office doubts the propriety of the legislation proposed in that section.

The motion of Mr. HOLMAN to strike out section 7 was agreed to.

The Clerk read section 9, as follows:

SEC. 9. That within ninety days from and after the passage of this act the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to pay over, except as hereinafter provided, to the said Miami Indians all money belonging to said Indians, or that may be due to said Miami Indians from the United States, arising from any and all sources whatsoever, the same to be paid out, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, per capita to the members of the said Miami tribe of Indians. That all money received and now in the custody of the United States, or that may be received up to the date of the passage of this act, arising from the sale of the unallotted lands in Kansas, including the school sections referred to in section 6 of this act, shall immediately be available after the passage of this act; and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to pay the same to said Miami Indians in accordance with the provisions of the act of March 3, 1873.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to strike out the ninth section.

Mr. PERKINS. I hope that amendment will not prevail. This relates only to the money that is to be derived from the sale of their lands in Kansas, so I understand it from a hasty reading, and as to that, I think it should be the sense of the House that they should receive that money.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman is mistaken. If he will read the section he will see it provides that "the Secretary of the Interior shall pay over, except as is hereinafter provided, to the said Miami Indians all money belonging to said Indians, or that may be due to said Miami Indians from the United States, arising from any and all sources whatsoever."

Mr. PERKINS. Yes, I see it contains that provision.

The motion of Mr. HOLMAN to strike out the section was agreed to.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. Speaker, the letter from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs makes the same objection to section 8 as it does to section 7, which has been stricken out on the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN]. I therefore move that section 8 also be struck out from this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the section.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 8. That within ninety days from and after the passage of this act the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to pay over to the said Peoria, Wea, Kaskaskia, and Piankeshaw Indians, except as hereinafter provided, all money belonging to said Peoria, Wea, Kaskaskia, and Piankeshaw Indians, and heretofore invested by the United States for the benefit of said Indians, together with all money now in the custody of the United States and belonging to said Indians, and arising from any and all sources whatsoever, the same to be paid out under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior per capita to all of said Peoria, Wea, Kaskaskia, and Piankeshaw Indians: Provided, That the shares of all minors entitled under this act shall be retained in the Treasury of the United States until such minors shall arrive at full age; and such shares so remaining shall bear interest at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, the House will remember that this section 8 was amended so as to make provision for the citizen Indians. In consequence of the amendment which was made in section 8 we incorporated in the bill sections 14 and 15 as additional provisions. Now, if it should be the sense of the House that section 8 should be stricken out, it would carry with it the amendments which were put on that section, and would make nugatory sections 14 and 15. I make this statement so that the House may understand the case. I do not know that I care particularly about it, only that I thought it would be right to give the Secretary of the Interior authority to reinvestigate this trust fund, so that if there had been any injustice done to any Indian, whether a citizen or a member of the tribe, it might be remedied. However, if section 8 is to go out, I shall move to strike out sections 14 and 15.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman's explanation does not go to the objection made by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to the section which I have moved to strike out. The Commissioner's objection is that it provides for paying over to these Indians the gross sum of their funds, and operates right in the line of objection raised by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] The Commissioner of Indian Affairs says:

In regard to these two sections, 7 and 8, I have to say that it is not deemed wise or prudent to pay to these tribes the whole amount of money due under treaties or held in trust for their benefit.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that these sections should both go out, because, no matter what amendments may have been made to them, there has been no amendment made providing that they shall not receive the whole sum of their fund under these sections.

Mr. STEWART, of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I do trust that the House will vote to strike out the eighth section with the amendments. I am very much impressed with the idea, sir, that we are engaged in a scheme of inconsiderate legislation. We are undertaking to confer some kind of immunity or citizenship upon these Indians—something which is not clearly defined. There is nothing definite as to how they shall hold their property, or as to how they shall exercise their right of suffrage or any rights of citizenship. The character of their citizenship is not defined by this bill; and I apprehend that no member on this floor clearly understands the exact character of the citizenship which we here propose to confer. The Indians affected by this bill are not made citizens of any State; they are not clothed with the power usually conferred by a Territorial government; and in addition to this, if we confer the right of citizenship upon them we take away this fund now set apart for their support. In one breath we say, "They are not capable of holding and controlling their own;" and in another we declare, "They are citizens." The very statement of the proposition ought to be sufficient to convince any fair mind that this is unwise legislation.

Mr. Speaker, there is another provision of this bill which, whether so intended or not, is most deceptive in its character. Here we are disposing of 50,300 acres of land, and we say that these people may hold for twenty-five years 160 acres of this land for each Indian, and we allow them to sell the remainder, about 23,000 acres, to other Indians. If I have a right to sell or convey land to an Indian, why can not he sell it to somebody else? In other words, we say that an Indian can sell his land to another Indian, as though by this we mean that the land should remain perpetually the property of the Indians. The result will be that so much land as the Indian is allowed to sell in fee under this bill will soon be frittered away in his well-known prodigality and improvidence. This bill places the Indian at the mercy of the greed and shrewdness of the white invader.

While I do not make any charge against any one, I apprehend that this scheme is an effort to dispose of 23,000 acres of land to the "poor Indians" in order that some white men, the next day after the bill takes effect, may own the land. I apprehend this is the purpose of the bill—not disclosed in terms, but a hidden purpose covered by artful verbal dissimulation.

It is said that the bill allows the Indian to sell his land only to some other Indian. Why not allow him to sell to any one? If our purpose is sincere and honest, why impose the restriction that the land shall be sold to Indians only? Why not allow it to be sold in open market?

I repeat that in my judgment this bill is an inconsiderate measure of legislation, hurried through this House without mature deliberation. What sort of citizenship will these Indians enjoy? What will be their rights as to the inheritance and transmission of title to property? No limitation or regulation in that respect is provided in the bill. It simply, by the adoption of certain platitudes, says that these Indians are, or may become, citizens, when in point of fact they are not citizens and they do not become such under the bill. I hope we shall strike out this eighth section, for in doing so we strike out the very heart of the bill; and then I hope we shall defeat the entire measure.

Mr. PERKINS. Let us vote.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question will now be taken on the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], to strike out the eighth section.

Mr. PERKINS. I do not care particularly about this question. I am quite willing the section should be stricken out, as that action has been taken on sections 7 and 9, pertaining to the same subject.

The amendment of Mr. LA FOLLETTE was agreed to; there being—ayes 51, noes 21.

Mr. PERKINS. I now move the previous question on the engrossment and third reading of the bill as amended.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman desire any action on sections 14 and 15?

Mr. PERKINS. No, sir; on mature reflection I believe they are complete in themselves.

The previous question was ordered.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I desire to make a motion to recommit the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That will be in order when the question is upon its passage.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is now on the passage of the bill.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I move to recommit the bill to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The question being taken, there were—ayes 45, noes 75.

Mr. BLOUNT. I think we had better have the yeas and nays on this question. I call for them.

The yeas and nays were ordered, there being—ayes 25, noes 96 (more than one-fifth voting in the affirmative).

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 47, nays 135, not voting 142; as follows:

YEAS—47.

Abbott,	Clements,	Hooker,	Smith,
Adams,	Cogswell,	La Follette,	Sowden,
Arnold,	Elliott,	Mahoney,	Spooner,
Bacon,	Felton,	Mason,	Stahlnecker,
Baker, Ill.	Finley,	McAdoo,	Stephenson,
Barnes,	Fuller,	McClammy,	Stewart, Ga.
Blanchard,	Greenman,	McComas,	Stone, Ky.
Blount,	Guenther,	McCreary,	Thomas, Ky.
Bryce,	Hall,	Pidcock,	Tracey,
Campbell, T.J., N.Y.	Haugen,	Randall,	Turner, Ga.
Caswell,	Henderson, N. C.	Rowland,	Whitthorne.
Chipman,	Holman,	Seymour,

NAYS—135.

Allen, Mich.	Dingley,	Lane,	Sawyer,
Allen, Miss.	Dockery,	Lanham,	Sayers,
Anderson, Miss.	Dorsey,	Lind,	Shaw,
Anderson, Ill.	Dougherty,	Long,	Sherman,
Anderson, Kans.	Enloe,	Macdonald,	Shively,
Belden,	Flood,	Mansur,	Springer,
Bland,	Forney,	Martin,	Stewart, Tex.
Bliss,	French,	McRae,	Stockdale,
Boothman,	Gaines,	Milliken,	Stone, Mo.
Boutelle,	Gallinger,	Mills,	Struble,
Breckinridge, Ark.	Gear,	Moffitt,	Symes,
Breckinridge, Ky.	Gest,	Montgomery,	Tarsney,
Brewer,	Gibson,	Morrill,	Taulbee,
Brower,	Glass,	Morrow,	Thomas, Wis.
Browne, T.H.B., Va.	Grosvenor,	Neal,	Thompson, Cal.
Browne, Ind.	Hare,	Nelson,	Vance,
Brown, Ohio	Hatch,	Newton,	Wade,
Burrows,	Hayes,	Nichols,	Walker,
Butler,	Hemphill,	Nutting,	Warner,
Butterworth,	Henderson, Iowa	O'Donnell,	Washington,
Bynum,	Hermann,	O'Neill, Pa.	Weaver,
Cannon,	Hires,	Owen,	Weber,
Caruth,	Hitt,	Payson,	West,
Catchings,	Hogg,	Peel,	Wheeler,
Cheadle,	Holmes,	Penington,	White, N.Y.
Clardy,	Hopkins, Ill.	Perkins,	Whiting, Mich.
Cobb,	Hunter,	Perry,	Wickham,
Cockran,	Jackson,	Peters,	Wilkins,
Conger,	Kean,	Post,	Wilkinson,
Cothran,	Kerr,	Rice,	Wilson, W. Va.
Crouse,	Ketcham,	Richardson,	Wise,
Culberson,	Kilgore,	Rogers,	Yoder,
Cummings,	Laidlaw,	Russell, Conn.	Yost.
Darlington,	Landes,	Ryan,

NOT VOTING—142.

Allen, Mass.	Davidson, Ala.	Kelley,	Phelps,
Anderson, Iowa	Davidson, Fla.	Kennedy,	Plumb,
Atkinson,	Davis,	Laffoon,	Pugsley,
Baker, N. Y.	De Lano,	Lagan,	Rayner,
Bankhead,	Dibble,	Laird,	Reed,
Barry,	Dunham,	Latham,	Robertson,
Bayne,	Dunn,	Lawler,	Rockwell,
Belmont,	Ermentrout,	Lee,	Romeis,
Biggs,	Farquhar,	Lehlbach,	Rowell,
Bingham,	Fisher,	Lodge,	Russell, Mass.
Bound,	Fitch,	Lyman,	Rusk,
Bowden,	Foran,	Lynch,	Scott,
Bowen,	Ford,	Maffett,	Scull,
Brown, J. R., Va.	Funston,	Maish,	Seney,
Brumm,	Gay,	Matson,	Simmons,
Buchanan,	Glover,	McCormick,	Snyder,
Buckalew,	Goff,	McCullogh,	Spinola,
Bunnell,	Granger,	McKenna,	Steele,
Burnes,	Grimes,	McKinley,	Stewart, Vt.
Burnett,	Grout,	McKinney,	Taylor, E. B., Ohio
Campbell, F., N.Y.	Harmer,	McMillin,	Taylor, J. D., Ohio
Campbell, Ohio	Hayden,	McShane,	Thomas, Ill.
Candler,	Heard,	Merriman,	Thompson, Ohio
Carlton,	Henderson, Ill.	Moore,	Tillman,
Clark,	Herbert,	Morgan,	Townshend,
Collins,	Hiestand,	Morse,	Turner, Kans.
Compton,	Hopkins, Va.	Norwood,	Vandever,
Cooper,	Hopkins, N. Y.	Oates,	White, Ind.
Cowles,	Houk,	O'Ferrall,	Whiting, Mass.
Cox,	Hovey,	O'Neall, Ind.	Wilber,
Crain,	Howard,	O'Neill, Mo.	Williams,
Crisp,	Hudd,	Osborne,	Wilson, Minn.
Cutcheon,	Hutton,	Outhwaite,	Woodburn,
Dalzell,	Johnston, Ind.	Parker,	Yardley.
Dargan,	Johnston, N. C.	Patton,
Davenport,	Jones,	Phelan,

So the motion to recommit was disagreed to.

During the roll-call the following pairs were announced:

On all political questions until further notice:

Mr. NORWOOD with Mr. DAVENPORT.

Mr. LYNCH with Mr. HIESTAND.

Mr. COWLES with Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio.

Mr. JONES with Mr. PHELPS.

Mr. GOFF with Mr. SNYDER.

Mr. HOWARD with Mr. DE LANO.

Mr. COLLINS with Mr. JOHN R. BROWN.

Mr. TOWNSHEND with Mr. MAFFETT.

Mr. MATSON with Mr. DUNHAM.

Mr. HUDD with Mr. CLARK.

Mr. PHELAN with Mr. BUTLER.

Mr. MCSHANE with Mr. MCCULLOGH.

Mr. SPINOLA with Mr. THOMAS, of Illinois.

Mr. GRANGER with Mr. ROCKWELL.

For this day on all political questions:

Mr. OUTHWAITE with Mr. PUGSLEY.

Mr. O'FERRALL with Mr. COOPER.

Mr. CAMPBELL, of Ohio, with Mr. BAKER, of New York.

Mr. SENEY with Mr. KENNEDY.

Mr. CRAIN with Mr. ALLEN, of Massachusetts.

Mr. HUTTON with Mr. BAYNE.

Mr. DAVIDSON, of Florida, with Mr. ATKINSON.

Mr. DIBBLE with Mr. LEHLBACH.

Mr. LAWLER with Mr. HOPKINS.

Mr. FORD with Mr. STEELE.

Mr. BANKHEAD with Mr. COGSWELL.

Mr. GRIMES with Mr. MCCORMICK.

Mr. RUSSELL, of Massachusetts, with Mr. FITCH.

Mr. MOORE with Mr. DARLINGTON.

Mr. HOGG with Mr. LAIRD.

Mr. BURNETT with Mr. ROMEIS.

Mr. DARLINGTON. I am paired on all political questions with Mr. MOORE, but not regarding this as such, I have voted in the negative.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. PERKINS demanded the previous question on the passage of the bill.

The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereof the bill was passed.

Mr. PERKINS moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CREDITORS OF POTTAWATOMIE INDIANS.

Mr. PEEL. I move that the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 4487) to enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay certain creditors of the Pottawatomie Indians out of the funds of said Indians, and that it be put on its passage.

The motion was agreed to.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of moneys appropriated for the Pottawatomie Indians by the act of August 3, 1886, entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies," etc., a sum not exceeding $3,175, being 10 per cent. of the amount or proportion of said appropriation due the Citizens' band of Pottawatomie Indians, to E. John Ellis, for professional service rendered said Citizens' band in the collection of said claim: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior shall first determine that the said services were rendered to said Indians by said Ellis, and were contracted for in good faith by persons authorized to represent said Indians.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PEEL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

OLD SETTLER OR WESTERN CHEROKEE INDIANS.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Speaker, I now ask unanimous consent to discharge the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 1407) to authorize the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render final judgment upon the claim of the Old Settler or Western Cherokee Indians, and put it upon its passage.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of that part of the Cherokee Indians, known as the Old Settlers or Western Cherokees, against the United States, which claim was set forth in the report of the Secretary of the Interior to Congress of February 3, 1883 (said report being made under act of Congress of August 7, 1882), and contained in Executive Document No. 60 of the second session of the Forty-seventh Congress, be, and the same hereby is, referred to the Court of Claims for adjudication; and jurisdiction is hereby conferred on said court to try said cause, and to determine what sum or sums of money, if any, are justly due from the United States to said Indians, arising from or growing out of treaty stipulations and acts of Congress relating thereto, after deducting all payments heretofore actually made to said Indians by the United States, either in money or property; and to try and determine all questions that may arise in such cause on behalf of either party thereto and render final judgment thereon; and the Attorney-General is hereby directed to appear in behalf of the Government; and if said court shall decide against the United States, the Attorney-General shall, within thirty days from the rendition of judgment, appeal the cause to the Supreme Court of the United States; and from any judgment that may be rendered the said Indians may also appeal to said Supreme Court: Provided, That the appeal of said Indians shall be taken within sixty days after the rendition of said judgment, and said courts shall give such cause precedence: Provided further, That nothing in this act shall be accepted or construed as a confession that the Government of the United States is indebted to said Indians.

SEC. 2. That said action shall be commenced by a petition stating the facts on which said Indians claim to recover, and the amount of their claim; and said petition may be verified by the authorized agent or attorney of said Indians as to the existence of such facts, and no other statement need be contained in said petition or verification.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendment:

After the word "property," in line 19, of the first section, add: "and after deducting all offsets, counter-claims, and deductions of any and every kind and character which should be allowed to the United States under any valid provision or provisions in said treaties and laws contained, or to which the United States may be otherwise entitled, and after fully considering and determining whether or not the said Indians have heretofore adjusted and settled their said claim with the United States, it being the intention of this act to allow the said Court of Claims unrestricted latitude in adjusting and determining the said claim, so that the rights, legal and equitable, both of the United States and of said Indians may be fully considered and determined."

Mr. PEEL. I desire, Mr. Speaker, to call attention briefly to the objects of this bill. The branch of the Cherokee Indians known as the Old Settlers, or Western Cherokees, have been prosecuting a claim against the Government for over forty years, growing out of the stipulations of the treaty made with them in 1846.

In the Forty-seventh Congress the Senate, by a resolution, referred the claim to the Secretary of the Interior, with instructions and authority to have a special accountant examine the claim from its inception. The Secretary of the Interior employed a special accountant under the resolution, who found, after a laborious and thorough investigation, that the Government was indebted to these Indians in the sum of about $400,000. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs made a separate report, corresponding with and corroborating that of the special accountant.

In the Forty-eighth Congress this came from the Department by way of an Executive document for the purpose of making an appropriation to meet the payment of the claim. It was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, of which I was a member, and to me as a subcommittee to examine and report upon it. I gave it a thorough examination and came to a different conclusion from that reached by the Department—that under the treaties we did not owe these Indians anything. That is still my opinion.

During that same session of Congress the Senate, however, referred it to the Court of Claims under the Bowman act. That court ascertained and reported that under one construction of the treaty the Government owed these Indians about $4,000, and under another construction two hundred and sixty-odd thousand dollars. This bill is not for the purpose of appropriating the money. When I reported adversely upon it in the Forty-eighth Congress I held, as stated, the same opinion that I have now, and this bill is simply to refer it to the Court of Claims with the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

The bill makes it imperative upon the part of the Attorney-General to appeal the case on behalf of the Government if the Court of Claims decides in favor of the Indians. I recommend this course from the fact—notwithstanding I came to the conclusion that we are not indebted to them—that this is a question involving a legal consideration growing out of the construction of the terms of the treaty with these Indians. I may be wrong in my construction of it; and while my honest judgment is that we are not indebted to them, I prefer the judgment of another department which is equally interested. The Court of Claims holds, as I have said, that the treaty is susceptible of the two constructions, under one of which $4,000 is due them, and under the other in the neighborhood of $260,000; and the object of this bill is to bring the question before the proper tribunal, and eventually to the highest court of the land, to interpret and construe the treaties and ascertain whether or not we are indebted, and, if indebted, to what extent. That is all the bill asks.

Mr. BLOUNT. Will the gentleman from Arkansas allow me a moment?

Mr. PEEL. Certainly.

Mr. BLOUNT. I wish to know if the gentleman can inform me how many years this matter has been before Congress, and whether there have been any adverse reports?

Mr. PEEL. The adverse report that I made when it was before the Forty-eighth Congress is the only one that I have any knowledge of against it. There were two reports made in the Senate, one in the Forty-sixth and one in the Forty-seventh Congress, one of them submitted by Senator Logan and the other by Senator CAMERON, both in favor of it.

Mr. BLOUNT. Do I understand that from 1846 up to that time Congress took no notice of the claim, or that it was not pressed?

Mr. PEEL. Well, there was a time during the war that it was not pressed.

Mr. BLOUNT. I understand the gentleman to say that it grew out of the treaty of 1846.

Mr. PEEL. It did.

Mr. BLOUNT. Then Congress failed to recognize it at all until since the war?

Mr. PEEL. No; the gentleman is mistaken. I think there was an appropriation made in 1850, growing out of the treaty stipulation of 1846; but they received it under protest at that time.

Mr. BLOUNT. Then Congress in 1850 determined the question and appropriated the amount to pay it?

Mr. PEEL. They did, and gave the same construction to the treaty that I gave it in my adverse report. But the trouble is here: I do not think it is just to these people, or to any other people in the United States who have a claim against the Government for money growing out of the language of treaties, to refuse a hearing because I or any other man may come to the conclusion that it is not correct, and acting on that belief refuse to let them go to the court and have it passed upon by a proper judicial tribunal.

Mr. BLOUNT. Then why not have a general provision of law instead of making a special act in regard to this old claim?

Mr. PEEL. Because I suppose a general law is not asked for. I do not know of any other reason. This claim has been prosecuted earnestly, and theclaimants believe that something is due them; and under the construction of the Court of Claims something appears to be due them.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Is your committee unanimous?

Mr. PEEL. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope, sir, we are not going to agree to this bill. My friend from Arkansas has just stated to the House that in 1850 this claim was presented to Congress. It was examined by both branches and they ascertained the amount believed to be due, passed a bill to that effect, and the Government paid the money over to the Indians.

Mr. WEAVER. Amounting to very nearly a million of dollars.

Mr. BLOUNT. Yes; amounting, as my friend from Iowa states, to nearly a million of dollars. That was in 1850. Now the claim is pressed again. It is like all those old claims, in which there is always somebody about this Capitol interested in some form or other.

My friend from Arkansas tells the House he examined this matter in the last Congress and came to the same conclusion that Congress did in 1850; that there was nothing at all in it. He states that the Court of Claims, having examined it, reports that there is one construction under which $4,000 are due, and that something is due under another construction.

Mr. WEAVER. But under the construction which Congress puts upon the treaty nothing is due.

Mr. BLOUNT. So I understand. This claim was acted upon by Congress just as we have done with reference to other Indian matters. Congress in 1850 took the subject in hand and disposed of it as they saw fit; and I think that ought to be final. I therefore see no reason why this old claim should be revived when there are thousands of claims all over the country which are not to have the privilege of going to the Court of Claims.

We have many bills providing for the submission of claims to the Court of Claims, and I think if any of these applications should be declined this one ought to be. I think when claims come before us which have been disposed of by the Government in a solemn legislative form we will not, after the lapse of nearly half a century, proceed to make another examination of them.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. Move to lay the bill on the table.

Mr. BLOUNT. I move to lay the bill on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Arkansas is entitled to the floor.

Mr. PEEL. I am somewhat surprised at the attitude of my friend from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT], whose voice but a few moments ago was heard lifted up in protest against our robbing the Indians. And now he will not let them go to the Court of Claims to pass upon the justice of their claim. The gentleman professes to be a friend of the Indians, and yet when we ask on behalf of the old Cherokee Indians the simple right to go to the court and have the court adjudicate a claim which the Interior Department says we owe them and in regard to which the Court of Claims say something is due them under the treaty, the gentleman is opposed to that proposition, as if we should be afraid to trust a court of the United States to adjudicate a case and dispose of it finally.

I do not pretend I am perfect in all things. It may be that nothing is due those Indians. I made an investigation and came to that conclusion. But other gentlemen, equally able and perhaps more able than myself, say differently. The Court of Claims say in their investigation, under the Bowman act, that under one construction of the treaty we owed them $4,000; under another construction, $260,000. Is it right to deprive these people of a hearing in the court? Is it not right to alllow them to go to court and present their claim to a court that has the power to construe the treaty and the law?

Mr. BLOUNT. What is meant by the term "Old Settlers?"

Mr. PEEL. These were a branch of the Cherokees who removed to the west of the Mississippi River, settled in Arkansas, and then went to the Indian Territory.

Mr. BLOUNT. How many of them are there?

Mr. PEEL. I can not give the exact number. About a third of the whole tribe belong to the Old Settlers. They have always been so denominated.

Mr. BLOUNT. Then this if paid would only go to a branch of the Cherokee Nation?

Mr. PEEL. Yes, sir. I do trust Congress will give them the chance of a hearing in the court.

Mr. ADAMS. I desire to ask the gentleman from Arkansas a question. I understand the gentleman to say that the only question remaining in this case is a question of law—a question of construction.

Mr. PEEL. A construction of the treaty.

Mr. ADAMS. I ask whether the report of the committee states what that question of law is. Is the report brief enough to have it read now?

Mr. PEEL. It is very brief, but I do not think it would enlighten the House upon that one subject.

Mr. ADAMS. The reason why I ask that question is that the main object of referring a case to the Court of Claims is to settle a disputed question of fact, and, although a question of law might be settled in that court, yet, after all, this House is entitled to its opinion on the construction of the law.

Mr. PEEL. If my friend will pardon me, this proposition is not only to send the case to the Court of Claims, but the object is to get it to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. ADAMS. But there would still be the question of appropriation, and that question can come up in this Congress, or in the next, and after all it will come to that, and therefore will not the determination of the question ultimately depend upon the construction which Congress puts upon the law?

Mr. PEEL. Not at all. When the Supreme Court renders its judgment.

Mr. BLOUNT. The bill provides that it shall be a final judgment, and when it comes here we have nothing to do but to appropriate the money.

Mr. ADAMS. Or to refuse to appropriate.

Mr. BLOUNT. You can not refuse to appropriate for a judgment.

Mr. ADAMS. Can we not neglect it? [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House will be in order. The gentleman from Arkansas has not yielded the floor, except as he has indicated.

Mr. PEEL. I yield now to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON].

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I only want to say that I very much doubt the wisdom of legislating in a hurry on this matter and sending it, as is now proposed, to the Court of Claims. We have got to have various negotiations and settlements with the Cherokee Indians in the not distant future. We have had various negotiations and settlements with them, running back, as the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. PEEL] says, to 1850, and even back of that. I understand the gentleman to say that in 1850 we settled this claim and paid them a round million of dollars. It will be recollected by the House that we bought some lands of these Indians, known as the Cherokee Strip, and from time to time we have paid them money upon those lands; but still they have possession of them, and are leasing them to other parties without authority.

Mr. PEEL. I am afraid, if the gentleman will allow me——

Mr. CANNON. I beg that the gentleman will allow me to go on for a moment. Now, Mr. Speaker, it may be that we owe these Indians this money; but I doubt it very much. I suspect that this claim having been settled at one time and paid, and they having accepted the money, they are in point of fact estopped.

Mr. PEEL. That is all set out in the bill, and the court can consider it if they want to.

Mr. CANNON. Let that be as it may, I wish to remind the House also that we sent a Choctaw claim to the Court of Claims some time ago, and it came back here in the form of a judgment for nearly three millions of dollars, which so outraged the sense of the House, or at least of a majority of it, that, although the judgment has been at interest for a year and a half, no appropriation has ever been made for it.

Mr. WEAVER. I wish to ask the gentleman whether it is not true that this House had as good a right at that time to pass upon the legality of that claim as the court had?

Mr. CANNON. With all due regard to the views of my friend from Arkansas [Mr. PEEL], in whose judgment I have great confidence, I think we ought to be a little slow in sending this claim to the Court of Claims.

A MEMBER. Fifty years is moderately slow.

Mr. CANNON. For one, Mr. Speaker, I am not willing, without more light upon the subject, to vote to send this claim to the Court of Claims.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I think that the members are not prepared to vote on this question at this time, and I therefore move that the House adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. PEEL] yield?

Mr. PEEL. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL].

BILL H. R. 8383, TO REDUCE AND EQUALIZE DUTIES, ETC.

Mr. RANDALL, by unanimous consent, offered the following resolution; which was adopted:

Resolved, That the Public Printer be, and he is hereby, directed to print for the use of the House of Representatives 3,000 additional copies of the bill H. R. 8383, entitled "A bill to reduce and equalize duties on imports, to reduce internal-revenue taxes, and for other purposes."

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Speaker, I do not suppose the House cares to continue the discussion of this bill at length; but I now yield to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER], who desires to submit a few remarks at this time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] moves that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. BLOUNT. I call for the regular order. If this bill is to be debated only on one side, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair understood that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] had the floor by consent of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. PEEL], to make the motion to adjourn, which is the pending motion before the House.

Mr. BLOUNT. I renew the motion to adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Did the gentleman from Arkansas yield to the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. PEEL. I did not. I move that the House do now adjourn.

CORRECTION.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pending the motion to adjourn the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. JACKSON] rises to a question of privilege.

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. Speaker, in the proceedings in the House on Friday last, on the consideration of House bill 2952, for the payment of certain claims, in the Journal I am reported as not voting.

I was present and voted "no," having previously voted in favor of taking the vote by yeas and nays. I ask to have the Journal corrected, to show me voting against the bill as it stood on its passage.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The correction will be made.

Pending the motion to adjourn, the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency asks unanimous consent to take from the table House bill 1816 and re-refer it to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. What is the title of the bill?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk has not the bill at hand at this moment.

Mr. MILLS. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The request of the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency will go over until to-morrow.

The motion to adjourn was agreed to; and the House accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.) adjourned.

PRIVATE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED AND REFERRED.

Under the rule private bills and joint resolutions of the followin titles were introduced and referred as indicated below:

By Mr. J. M. ALLEN (by request): A bill (H. R. 8471) for the relief of B. L. Owen—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 8472) for the relief of Charles C. Whiteside—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BLAND: A bill (H. R. 8473) for the relief of Tarrell W. Young—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COMPTON: A bill (H. R. 8474) for the payment of the claim of Columbus E. Robey—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8475) for the relief of Mrs. Thomas S. Ferral—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. COOPER: A bill (H. R. 8476) granting a pension to Mortimer Hyatt—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8477) granting a pension to Philip Stull—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8478) granting a pension to Charles Guest—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DORSEY: A bill (H. R. 8479) granting a pension to Elvira E. Fancher, widow of E. D. Fancher—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FISHER: A bill (H. R. 8480) granting a pension to James M. Camp—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FINLEY: A bill (H. R. 8481) for the relief of the estate of Isham Combs, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FUNSTON: A bill (H. R. 8482) granting a pension to Mrs. Elvira Parish—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GAINES: A bill (H. R. 8483) for the relief of Mary E. Hamilton, administratrix, Cross County, Arkansas—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HAUGEN: A bill (H. R. 8484) granting a pension to David E. Lawton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HAYES: A bill (H. R. 8485) granting a pension to John Schebler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8486) for the relief of Thomas S. Brooke & Co.—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. HIRES: A bill (H. R. 8487) granting a pension to Samuel M. Robinson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HITT: A bill (H. R. 8488) for the relief of Josephine Dubendorf—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LONG: A bill (H. R. 8489) granting a pension to Abial S. Chamberlain—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McCLAMMY: A bill (H. R. 8490) for the relief of W. P. Lane—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8491) for the relief of George E. Taylor—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8492) authorizing the construction of a bridge across Northeast River, Black River, and Cape Fear River, in the State of North Carolina—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. MORRILL: A bill (H. R. 8493) granting an increase of a pension to George N. Faulcouer—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. NEAL: A bill (H. R. 8494) granting a pension to Gilbert Reed—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PETERS: A bill (H. R. 8495) granting a pension to Alva D. Tomlinson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8496) to increase the pension of Albert E. Magoffin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8497) for the relief of G. F. Mecklen—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SYMES: A bill (H. R. 8498) granting a pension to Michael O'Loughlin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8499) to remove the charge of desertion against Alfred G. Romine—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8500) granting a pension to William E. Wheeler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WALKER: A bill (H. R. 8501) granting a pension to Fridoline Glastetter—to the Committee on Invalid Pension.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8502) granting a pension to Edward Maag—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. E. B. TAYLOR: A bill (H. R. 8503) for the relief of Otis H. Gaylord—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. STONE, of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 8504) granting a pension to Lucinda Dunlap—to the Committee on Pensions.

Change in the reference of a bill improperly referred was made in the following case, namely:

A bill (H. R. 6036) to pay Waddy T. James and others for horses killed in the service of the United States—from the Committee on War Claims to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as follows:

By Mr. J. M. ALLEN: Papers in the claim of Isaac Owen, administrator of F. Owen, of Lawrence County, Alabama—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BACON (by request): Petition of Patrick Morgan, Company H, One hundred and forty-third Regiment New York Volunteers, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also (by request), petition of Charles J. Dolson, Company G, Nineteenth Regiment New York State Militia Volunteers, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BLISS: Petition of Mary F. Denby for relief—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. J. R. BROWN: Petition of Isaac M. Huff, of Virginia, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BUCHANAN: Petition of 86 citizens of Philadelphia; and of 93 citizens of Pittsburgh, Pa.; of 154 citizens of Camden County, New Jersey; and of 164 citizens; of 112 citizens, and of 45 citizens, of Atlantic City, N. J., in favor of increase pay to keepers and surfmen in the Life-Saving Service—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, resolutions of the New York Produce Exchange, in favor of pure-food legislation—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. BURROWS: Petition asking speedy action in protecting wool and woolen interests in the United States—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of the Saginaw (Mich.) Board of Trade, protesting against the proposed legislation to put salt and lumber on the free-list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BYNUM: Petition of citizens and business men of Indianapolis, Ind., to have tin-plate placed on the free-list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of 20 manufacturers of tobacco, and of 25 laboring men of Indianapolis, Ind., against removal of the internal-revenue tax on cigars and cheroots—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of the Tippecanoe Club, of Indianapolis, Ind., for an appropriation of $20,000 for the erection of a monument at the grave of General Harrison—to the Committee on the Library.

Also, petition and resolution of the Indianapolis Live Stock Exchange, against the sale of articles of food which have been compounded or adulterated without being labeled—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. CARUTH: Paper relating to the claim of Mrs. M. J. Walker, for relief—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. COOPER: Petition of John C. McCarthy and 25 others, citizens of Camden County, and of James Pendleton and 45 others, citizens of Kinney County, Texas, for increase of tariff on wool and revision of the duty on worsteds—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CRAIN: Petition of citizens of Galveston, Tex., that the least per diem pay for laborers for the United States Government shall be $2—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. DALZELL: Petition of Marshall Lodge, Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, with respect to a protective tariff—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. R. H. M. DAVIDSON: Memorial of William D. Chipley, president of the provisional municipality of Pensacola, Fla.—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ENLOE: Petition of P. E. Parker, administrator of J. C. Parker, of Tennessee, for reference of his case to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of Eliza Bridges, of McNairy County, Tennessee, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of T. C. Bell, of Henderson County, Tennessee, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FISHER: Petition of James M. Camp, Company C, Seventh Regiment Pensylvanaia Cavalry Volunteers, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FUNSTON: Petition of A. H. Tanner and others, to pension Mrs. Elvira Parish, mother of Cyrus O. Parish—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GAINES: Petition of the professional musicians of the District of Columbia—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GOFF: Petition of Bridget Kearney, widow of Patrick Kearney, late private Company B, Third Virginia Volunteer Infantry—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GROSVENOR: Memorial of professional musicians of the District of Columbia, protesting against interfering by law with the right of the Marine band to play on private engagements—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GROUT: Memorial of Acting Assistant Surgeon O. P. Frick, of Fort Selden, N. Mex., in support of House bill 5023—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HAYES: Petition of John Schebler, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HEMPHILL: Petition of Charles Brunger and others, and of George E. Kennedy and others, for improvement of certain streets represented by the North Capitol, Boundary, and other street associations—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. J. S. HENDERSON: Petition of 107 professional musicians of the District of Columbia, against the enactment of any law proposing to interfere with the liberty of the United States Marine band—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. JACKSON: Petition of New Castle Lodge of Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, of New Castle, Pa., in relation to the tariff—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. McCREARY: Paper to accompany bill for the relief of H. S. Powell—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, papers in the case of Estes and Warren—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, affidavit of T. T. Garrard, of Clay County, Kentucky, in support of the claim of the heirs of John Patton—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. McKINLEY: Papers in the claim of Paul Greory, of Erie County, New York—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. NEAL: Papers in the case of Gilbert Reed—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. OWEN: Petition of D. J. Jones and others, for the passage of the wool-growers and woolen manufacturers' tariff schedule—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PHELAN: Petition of W. H. Neel, of Shelby County, and of Hiram Howell, of Fayette County, Tennessee, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, papers in the claim of William Goolsby, of Jasper County, and of Joseph B. Inabuct, of Hinds County, Mississippi—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. RYAN: Resolutions of the Board of Trade of Junction City, Kans., for an appropriation to continue the work at Fort Riley, Kans.—to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, petition of citizens of Ryan County, Kansas, in favor of opening the Indian Territory to settlement—to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, papers relating to the pension bill of Belinda J. McLelan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SENEY: Petition of John S. F. Ferguson, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SEYMOUR: Petition of William Hooper and 69 others, miners and laborers, of Crystal Falls, Mich., protesting against the repeal or reduction of the duty on iron ore—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HENRY SMITH: Protest of Joseph Hunter and 175 others, citizens of the Public Land Strip, against the passage of any measure attaching said territory to any State for judicial purposes only, and asking for local government as provided by House bill 1277—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. M. A. SMITH: Resolutions of the Arizona Department of the Grand Army of the Republic, for the disability pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. J. D. STEWART: Petition of Walter S. Wither, agent for Selana Coughlin; of Elizabeth Ray, widow of E. Ray, and of J. N. Wilkinson, heirs of J. Wilkinson, of Georgia, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. SYMES: Petition for a pension to Michael O'Loughlin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. E. B. TAYLOR: Petition of farmers of Ashtabula County, Ohio, in favor of a tariff on wool—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. VOORHEES: Petition of 26 citizens, and of 27 citizens of Pacific County, Washington Territory, for an increase in the pay of surfmen in the Life-Saving Service—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, papers in the claim of G. F. Jocknick—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WILKINS: Petition of James W. Collins and 200 others, citizens of Newark, Ohio, protesting against removal of the duty on glass bottles—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. YOST: Petition of Josef Kasper and others, protesting against the enactment of a law tending to interfere with the liberty of members of the Marine band—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The following petitions for an increase of compensation of fourth-class postmasters were severally referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads:

By Mr. J. R. BROWN: Of R. B. Dawson and others, of Level Run, and of W. T. Mitchell and others, of Callands, Pittsylvania County, Virginia.

By Mr. T. H. B. BROWNE: Of A. B. Eskridge and others, citizens of Northumberland County, Virginia.

By Mr. TILLMAN: Of sundry citizens of Celestia, S. C.

The following petitions, indorsing the per diem rated service-pension bill, based on the principle of paying all soldiers, sailors, and marines of the late war a monthly pension of 1 cent a day for each day they were in the service, were severally referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions:

By Mr. A. R. ANDERSON: Of Grand Army of the Republic Post No. 251, of Leon, Iowa.

By Mr. BELDEN: Of soldiers in the vicinity of Cortland and of Willetts, N. Y.

By Mr. BREWER: Of William A. Linman and 45 others, ex-soldiers of Lusk Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Elsie, Mich.

By Mr. BUCHANAN: Of the per diem rated service-pension bill.

By Mr. HALL: Of soldiers and sailors of Butler County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. HAUGEN: Of George L. Wakefield and 75 others, ex-Union soldiers and sailors and citizens of Pepin County, Wisconsin.

By Mr. JACKSON: Of Union soldiers of West Alexander, Pa.

By Mr. O'DONNELL: Of 51 soldiers of Bellevue, Mich.

By Mr. SAWYER: Of 30 soldiers of Livingston County, New York.

By Mr. E. B. TAYLOR: Of ex-soldiers of Lordstown, of Fowler, and of Ashtabula County, Ohio.

By Mr. WEAVER: Of H. B. Moore, of Albin, Iowa, and 118 other ex-Union soldiers.

By Mr. YODER: Fifty-one petitions signed by 2,573 ex-Union soldiers and sailors of the Fourth district of Ohio.

The following petitions, praying for the enactment of a law providing temporary aid for common schools, to be disbursed on the basis of illiteracy, were severally referred to the Committee on Education:

By Mr. J. R. BROWN: Of W. M. Peyton, county superintendent of schools, and teachers of Henry County, Virginia.

By Mr. FLOOD: Of 121 citizens of Chemung County, New York.

By Mr. HALL: Of 435 citizens of Crawford County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. MANSUR: Of 114 citizens of Linn County, Missouri.

By Mr. SCOTT: Of 209 residents of Warren County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. WEAVER: Of J. M. Brown and other citizens, and of J. W. Young and others, citizens of Bloomfield, Iowa.

The following petition, asking for the passage of the bill prohibiting the manufacture, sale, and importation of all alcoholic beverages in the District of Columbia, was referred to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic:

By Mr. VANCE: Of 196 citizens of the First district of Connecticut.

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, March 14, 1888.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a petition of citizens of Montana, praying for the adoption of the schedule of duties agreed upon by the representatives of the Wool-Growers' and Wool Manufacturers' Association at Washington, January 14, 1888, and for the correction of the erroneous classification of worsteds; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented two petitions of citizens of Kansas, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I present the petition of a large number of highly respectable citizens of Vermont, ex-soldiers, in favor of what is called the rated pension bill, and also the petition of William B. Westervelt and 39 other surviving soldiers and sailors of the Union Army and Navy, in favor of the same bill. I move the reference of the petitions to the Committee on Pensions.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS presented the petition of R. A. Tilden and 46 other citizens of Norwich, Vt., praying for an increase of the duties on wool; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I present a resolution in the nature of a petition, and intended to be presented (although it is not strictly in the form that it ought to be, I ask leave to present it), of a body of farmers in Vermont on the subject of reducing the postage on agricultural and horticultural seeds, etc., which I ask may be referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the resolution will be received as a petition and so referred.

Mr. CAMERON presented the petition of I. M. Huston Post, No. 394, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Iowa, and a petition of surviving soldiers and sailors of the Union Army and Navy, citizens of Victor, Iowa, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of Beavertown (Pa.) Grange, No. 799, Patrons of Husbandry, praying for legislation granting protection to agricultural products; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. SHERMAN presented seven petitions, signed by 146 ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of the State of Ohio, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill, as follows:

A petition of citizens of Lordstown;
A petition of citizens of Ohio;
A petition of citizens of Fowler;
A petition of citizens of Mesopotamia;
A petition of citizens of Smithville;
A petition of citizens of Pittsburgh and Potsdam; and
A petition of citizens of Bristolville.

The petitions were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a petition of 143 citizens of Ohio, praying for the protection of agricultural products; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of citizens of Lucas and Clarke Counties, Ohio, praying for the enactment of legislation for the protection of the wool and woolen industries; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. FRYE. I present a large number of petitions from soldiers of the State of Maine, praying for the equalization of the pay of soldiers of the late war, that is to say, to pay them the difference, as I understand it, between gold and currency, the petitions representing about 6,000 soldiers. I do not know whether the petitions should be referred to the Committee on Pensions or the Committee on Military Affairs.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The petitions will be separately noted in the Journal and RECORD, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The petitions are as follows:

A petition of John C. Cobb and others, of Portland;
A petition of John L. Russell and others, of Dexter;
A petition of William K. Kimball Post, No. 148, Grand Army of the Republic, of South Paris;
A petition of Justus Webster and others, of Chesterville;
A petition of G. H. Ramsell and others, members of Post No. 33, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Maine;
A petition of N. H. Martin and others, of Fort Fairfield;
A petition of R. G. Smith and others, of Whitefield;
A petition of J. A. Stout and others, of Biddeford;
A petition of Thomas H. Marshall Post, No. 42, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Maine;
A petition of J. B. Currier and other citizens of Corinna;
A petition of S. G. Hunington and other citizens of Bridgewater;
A petition of John M. League and other citizens of Weld;
A petition of Jesse Pierce and other citizens of Booth Bay;
A petition of Matcher Post, No. 111, Grand Army of the Republic, of Maine;
A petition of Enoch G. Mitchell and other citizens of Kennebunk;
A petition of George E. Elliott and other citizens of Lynchville;
A petition of William H. Leavitt and other citizens of Phillips;
A petition of Harry Rust Post, No. 54, Grand Army of the Republic, at Norway;
A petition of Kimball Post, No. 38, Grand Army of the Republic, at Livermore Mills;
A petition of F. J. Leavitt and other citizens of Buxton;
A petition of Russell Post, No. 96, Grand Army of the Republic, at Skowhegan;
A petition of Meade Post, No. 40, Grand Army of the Republic, at Eastport;
A petition of J. H. H. Hewitt and others, of Thomaston;
A petition of Edwin Ilsley and others, of Limerick;
A petition of Theodore Shackford and others, of Gorham;
A petition of James McGlauflin and others, of Mapleton;
A petition of Charles O. Wadsworth and others, of Gardiner;
A petition of William H. Nevers and others, of Cornish;
A petition of Ruel Anners Post, No. 104, Grand Army of the Republic, of Sprague Mills;
A petition of A. A. Dwinal Post, No. 3, Grand Army of the Republic, of Mechanic's Falls;
A petition of Sedgwick Post, No. 6, Grand Army of the Republic, of Bath;
A petition of Ira P. Wing and others, of Monson;
A petition of James A. Garfield Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Bluehill;
A petition of George E. Hapgood and others, of North Anson;
A petition of Sergeant Wyman Post, No. 95, Grand Army of the Republic, of Oakland;
A petition of D. L. Weard Post, No. 89, Grand Army of the Republic, of East Sullivan;
A petition of George L. Marson and others, of Windsor;
A petition of F. M. Gilman and others, of Mount Vernon;
A petition of T. S. Keen and others, of Brooks;
A petition of Judson Hall and others, of South Gardiner;
A petition of Benjamin B. Mayberry and others, of South Windham;
A petition of Hiram E. Stellman, commander of Post 147, Grand Army of the Republic, of State of Maine, and members of said post;
A petition of John Renier and others, of Madison;
A petition of L. W. Elliot and others, of New Sharon;
A petition of E. H. Bryant and others, of Machias;
A petition of John Merrill Post, No. 137, of Richmond;
A petition of Burnside Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Auburn;
A petition of L. C. Morse and others, of Liberty;
A petition of Charles W. Cook and others, of Solon;
A petition of Wade Post, No. 123, Grand Army of the Republic, of Presque Isle; and A petition of Levi W. Smith and others, of Maine.

Mr. FRYE presented a petition of the Bath (Me.) Board of Trade, praying for the repayment to ship-owners of the tonnage tax; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HISCOCK presented two petitions of ex-Union veterans, citizens of the State of New York, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PADDOCK presented a petition of 45 ex-Union soldiers and sailors of the Second Congressional district of Nebraska, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. MANDERSON presented three petitons of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Hardy, Nebr., praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. FARWELL presented a petition of citizens of Chicago, Ill., praying for the enactment of legislation to correct the evils resulting from convict labor; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented certain papers relating to the claim of David Blakeslee, a soldier of the war of 1812; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. CULLOM. I present the petition of J. M. Means and 11 other citizens of Iroquois County, Illinois, praying for legislation to prevent the formation of trusts or combinations to corner markets, to restrict immigration, to prevent the sale of adulterated articles used as food or drink, and also urging that the tax on bogus butter be retained, and that the tax on tobacco and spirits be retained until the war debt is paid. I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. KENNA presented a petition of 33 ex-Union soldiers, citizens of Middlebourne, Ripley, Kidwell, Lone Tree, and Sistersville, Tyler County, and Van Camp and Martinsville, Wetzel County; a petition of 41 ex-Union soldiers, of Adonis, Pursley, Friendly, Sistersville, Bearsville, Little's Mills, Shiloh, and Long Reach, Tyler County; a petition of Edwin A. Barr and 19 other ex-soldiers, of Sistersville, Tyler County, West Virginia; a petition of Newton Wilson and 20 other ex-soldiers, of Wick, Tyler County, West Virginia, and the petition of John R. Mason, of Long Reach, Tyler County, West Virginia, and A. Meredith and 5 ex-soldiers, of Hebron, Pleasants County, West Virginia; a petition of 75 ex-soldiers, of Middlebourne, Lone Tree, Ripley, Sancho, Kidwell, Conaway, Bearsville, Wick, North Bend, Pursley, and Sistersville, Tyler County, West Virginia, and Central Station, Doddridge County, West Virginia; a petition of 33 ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of Tyler County; and a petition of Isaac S. Smith, chairman, and Joab Martin, secretary, of a meeting of ex-Union soldiers, of Ellenborough, W. Va., praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. HOAR presented a memorial of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, signed by W. H. Pearson, secretary, in favor of the passage of the tonnage bill, and of the carrying of the United States mail in American ships; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. CAMERON, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred a petition in reference to a marine hospital at Evansville, Ind., asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds; which was agreed to.

Mr. DAVIS, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 875) granting a pension to Patrick Breene, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. BATE, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5874) for the relief of the heirs of the late Francis I. Wheeler, reported it without amendment.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2039) for the relief of the Albemarle and Chesapeake Canal Company, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. MANDERSON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom were referred the resolutions of the Grand Army of the Republic, favoring a change in the law for retiring enlisted men in the United States Army, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the resolutions.

Mr. BLAIR, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the petition of Mrs. Jennie Hart Mullany, widow of the late Rear-Admiral Mullany, United States Navy, praying an increase of pension to $50 per month, submitted a report thereon, accompanied by a bill (S. 2346) granting increase of pension to Jennie Hart Mullany; which was read twice by its title.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was recommitted the bill (S. 431) granting a pension to Emma S. Free, widow of Thomas S. Free, late major of the United States Army, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. BOWEN introduced a bill (S. 2347) to amend section 837 of the Revised Statutes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HARRIS (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2348) to provide for the extension of Eighteenth street, in the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2349) to provide for the widening of Columbia road, in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2350) to regulate the fees and limit the compensation of the recorder of deeds of the District of Columbia, and of the register of wills of the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. TELLER (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2351) to promote the interests of agriculture by irrigation, and to encourage the settlement of the arid lands in the Territory of New Mexico; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2352) granting pension to John F. Keran; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2353) granting pension to Daniel C. Auld; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PALMER (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2354) to amend section 4444 of the Revised Statutes, relative to vessels engaged wholly or in part in the coastwise service; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2355) for the relief of Rebecca Rhodes; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2356) to provide a pension for Mrs. Adeline Couzins; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. KENNA (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2357) for the relief of James Forgey; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2358) for the relief of G. W. McCulloh; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2359) for the relief of Frederick Ford; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2360) granting a pension to Nicholas C. Rohrbough; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2361) granting a pension to Sarah J. Eyster; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2362) granting a pension to Jackson Myers; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2363) for the relief of John W. Combs; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2364) granting an increase of pension to John S. Hale; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2365) for the relief of James A. Armstead; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. DAVIS introduced a bill (S. 2366) granting a pension to Mrs. Emeline Anderson; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. EVARTS introduced a bill (S. 2367) for the relief of Austin Mandeville; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. MANDERSON introduced a bill (S. 2368) to remove the charge of desertion against William C. Jones; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2369) for the relief of Dorr Heffleman; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. SHERMAN introduced a bill (S. 2370) granting a pension to Sarah C. Anderson and children under sixteen years; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2371) granting a pension to Jacob Pitner; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2372) restoring pension to George L. Flech; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. CHANDLER introduced a bill (S. 2373) relating to promotions in the Navy; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. SAWYER introduced a bill (S. 2374) for the relief of David Gray Purman; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2375) granting a pension to Joseph McGuckian; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. TELLER introduced a bill (S. 2376) for the reduction of postage on seeds, cuttings, bulbs, scions, etc.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 4487) to enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay certain creditors of the Pottawatomie Indians out of the funds of said Indians; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolution; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 1071) for the relief of A. B. Norton;

A bill (H. R. 120) for the relief of Charlotte Caroline Hackleman;

A bill (H. R. 221) increasing the pension of John C. Johnston;

A bill (H. R. 363) granting a pension to Mrs. Eliza L. Mace;

A bill (H. R. 365) granting a pension to John Humes;

A bill (H. R. 440) granting a pension to Mary C. Knight;

A bill (H. R. 880) granting a pension to Mary Everingham Brown;

A bill (H. R. 2457) to increase the pension of Hubert M. Potter;

A bill (H. R. 2467) to amend chapter 191 of the private acts of the Forty-ninth Congress, passed at the second session thereof, concerning James H. Young; and Joint resolution (S. R. 60) directing the Secretary of the Interior by means of the Director of the Geological Survey to investigate the practicability of constructing reservoirs for the storage of water in the arid region of the United States and to report to Congress.

DISTRICT PROHIBITION HEARINGS.

Mr. FARWELL submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on the District of Columbia is hereby authorized and empowered to employ a stenographer to report oral statements on the bill (S. 927) to prohibit the manufacture and sale of spirituous and intoxicating liquors in the District of Columbia, the expenses therefor to be paid out of the contingent expenses of the Senate.

INTERNAL-REVENUE LAWS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there are no further resolutions, concurrent or other, the morning business is closed.

Mr. BROWN. I gave notice the other day that I should move at this hour to take up the resolutions introduced by me at an early day of the session, in reference to the collection of the revenues of the Government and the repeal of the internal-revenue laws. I move to take up the resolutions.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolutions will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the resolutions submitted by Mr. BROWN January 4, 1888, as follows:

Resolved, That the practice of the Government of the United States was correct, for the first three-quarters of a century of its existence, when it collected the revenues necessary to its support at the ports or other boundaries of our territory by tariff, except in cases of war or other great emergency, when internal-revenue laws or laws imposing direct taxes were passed, which were repealed as soon as the emergency which called them forth ceased to exist.

Resolved, That the present internal-revenue laws, which were enacted as war measures in time of a great emergency, which are onerous, oppressive, and undemocratic, have existed for almost a quarter of a century after the emergency has passed, and there being a very large surplus in the Treasury, which it is the duty of the Government to provide against by a reduction of the revenues, it becomes the imperative duty of Congress to enact appropriate legislation for the repeal of said internal-revenue laws at the earliest day practicable.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the resolutions are before the Senate, and the Senator from Georgia is entitled to the floor.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, it is important to inquire what is the true issue now before the people of this country in reference to the collection of our revenues, and to those of us who are Democrats it is important that we view it from a Democratic standpoint.

Thomas Jefferson, the great apostle and founder of the Democratic party, denounced the excise system of collecting taxes, except in cases of great emergency, and secured the repeal of all such laws during his administration. The Democratic party for a great many years, and during a long succession of Democratic administrations, collected the money necessary to support the Government by tariff taxation, so adjusted as to afford encouragement and protection to domestic manufactures.

Andrew Jackson, the next greatest leader of the Democratic party, held to the same doctrine. In his message of 7th of December, 1830, he says:

The power to impose duties on imports originally belonged to the several States; the right to adjust those duties with a view to the encouragement of domestic branches of industry is so completely identical with that power that it is difficult to suppose the existence of the one without the other.

Again, in the same message, he says:

While the chief object of duties should be revenue, they may be so adjusted as to encourage manufactures.

In another part of the message again he says:

In this conclusion I am confirmed, as well by the opinions of Presidents Washington, Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe, who have each repeatedly recommended the exercise of this right under the Constitution, as by the uniform practice of Congress, the continued acquiescence of the States, and the general understanding of the people.

Again, in his letter to Dr. Coleman, of North Carolina, General Jackson wrote:

If we omit or refuse to use the gifts which Providence has extended to us, we deserve not the continuation of His blessing. He has filled our mountains and our plains with minerals, with lead, iron, and copper, and given us a climate and soil for the growing of hemp and wool. These being the great materials of our national defense, they ought to have extended to them adequate protection; that our manufacturers and laborers may be placed in a fair competition with those of Europe, and that we have within our country a supply of those leading and important articles so essential to war. I will ask, what is the real situation of the agriculturist? Where has the American farmer a market for his surplus produce? Except for cotton he has neither a foreign nor a home market. Common sense at once points out the remedy. Take from agriculture in the United States 600,000 men, women, and children, and you will at once give a market for more breadstuffs than all Europe now furnishes us. In short, sir, we have been too long subject to the policy of British merchants. It is time we should become a little more Americanized, and instead of feeding the paupers and laborers of England, feed our own, or else in a short time, by continuing our present policy, we shall be rendered paupers ourselves.

THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM OF 1884 ON TARIFF ABUSES.

The Democratic convention of 1884, which nominated President Cleveland, characterized "the system of direct taxation known as the internal revenue as a war tax," and declared that "sufficient revenue to pay all the expenses of the Federal Government economically administered, including pensions, interest and principal of the public debt, can be got under our present system of taxation from custom-house taxes, on fewer imported articles, bearing heaviest on articles of luxury, and bearing lightest on articles of necessity." The convention then denounces, not the tariff system, but the abuses of the tariff.

What is the plain purport of the language of the founders of the Democratic party, and the traditions and precepts of former administrations, and the language of the platform of the party in its last national convention? Simply, as there is now no emergency, and we have an overflowing Treasury, that the internal-revenue system, which is only temporary, should be repealed without unnecessary delay, and that there should be a revision of the tariff, and that, under our present system of custom-house taxes, the revenue should be raised on fewer imported articles bearing heaviest on articles of luxury and bearing lightest on articles of necessity.

A FALSE ISSUE.

The issue that some persons have attempted to raise, whether it would be better to repeal the internal-revenue law and give the people free whisky and tobacco, or whether it would be better to reduce the tax on the necessaries of life, is a false issue. Neither the fathers of the Democratic party nor the practice of Democratic administrations for nearly half a century, nor the last platform laid down by the Democratic party in convention, submits or justifies any such issue. The obvious plain duty of the Democratic party under the authority and precepts above mentioned is to abolish the internal-revenue system as early as possible, and leave the States to tax whisky and tobacco; and in good faith to revise the tariff, putting the heaviest burdens on articles of luxury consumed by the rich, and the lightest burdens on articles of necessity consumed by the poor. There is no room for an issue between the repeal of the internal revenue and the revision of the tariff. The Democratic party is pledged to do both, and it is an imperative duty which the party owes to the country in good faith to redeem that pledge. And the party does not redeem the pledge by carrying out one of these measures, but it is bound to carry them both into effect.

THE TRUE ISSUE.

The only issue is, will the party in good faith redeem its pledges, and sweep from the statute-book the system of direct taxation known as internal revenue, and "revise the tariff in a spirit of fairness to all interests?" Both must be done. This is the plain meaning of the pledge of the party, and it is the duty of every Democrat to aid in redeeming that pledge. His Democracy may be justly questioned, who refuses to aid in redeeming the solemn pledges of the National Democratic Convention.

NOT A PROTECTIONIST PER SE.

I believe the true position is to collect all the money necessary to the support of the Government economically administered, by tariff, except in cases of great emergency. I am not a protectionist per se, and I would not vote to raise a dollar more than is absolutely necessary to the economical support of the Government, for any purpose, or to protect any industry of any character. In adjusting the tariff, I would as a general rule put on the free-list such articles as are produced abroad and not in this country, where the tax upon the imported article could afford no protection to American industry, and I would as a general rule collect the tax by imposts or tariff on such articles imported from abroad as are produced in this country, so as to give to American capital and American labor all the incidental protection within our power. In other words, I believe in a tariff for revenue, so adjusted as to afford incidental protection to American capital and American labor.

Again, in adjusting the tariff, I would as far as possible put the heaviest burdens on articles of luxury which are used mostly by the rich, who are better able to pay the tariff and the lightest burdens upon articles of prime necessity which are used by the poor, who are less able to pay the tariff.

GIVING PREFERENCE TO FOREIGN CAPITAL.

The principal difference between my position and that of some who claim to be tariff reformers is that they would prefer to put the tariff on such articles as are produced abroad and not produced in this country so as to carefully avoid any protection to American capital and American industry. In other words they would raise, as I understand it, if left to their choice, all the money necessary to the support of the Government by internal revenue by direct tax, and by a tariff on such goods as are produced abroad and not produced in this country, and thus avoid all protection of American interests, giving the preference in every case to foreign capital and foreign labor. This was not the position of Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, or Jackson.

THE WHISKY TAX.

It has been matter of boast on this floor again and again that the internal tax on whisky does not, as its advocates claim, increase the price of that commodity made by anybody else except the licensed distillers; or rather, they claim that all internal-revenue tax goes into the Treasury, and there is no incidental protection. Senators say they prefer to collect over $100,000,000 a year on internal revenue, because it all goes into the Treasury and protects nobody. But this is not true. The whisky ring is protected against all foreign whisky by a tariff of 1,000 per cent. on what it costs the registered distiller to make it, and pays 90 cents a gallon internal revenue, leaving a net protection of over 500 per cent. on its cost at the distillery. The tariff is prohibitory, and therefore gives the registered distillers the control of the market. They are protected by a prohibitory tariff at the coast, and by penal enactments that put all small people in the interior in jail who attempt to come in competition with them. It is true they pay to the Government a tax of 90 cents a gallon on most of the whisky made by them, which goes into the Treasury, just as the tariff on woolen blankets paid at the custom-house all goes into the Treasury. The advocates of the whisky ring claim that the tariff on woolens protects our home manufacturers engaged in that business. So does the tariff on whisky of $2 a gallon, and the law making it illegal for anybody to compete with the registered distillers protects them to almost any extent that they choose to increase the price to the consumer.

As I have shown elsewhere, it costs them not exceeding 20 cents a gallon to make the whisky. They are protected on one side by a high tariff, and on the other side by a law making it criminal for people to compete with them. They are supposed to make all the whisky that is legally sold in this country. Now, what profit growing out of protection do they make when they sell the whisky to the consumer? Ninety cents tax and 20 cents a gallon would be what it costs the distiller. It is guarded for them at the expense of the Government for three years without paying either tax or interest, and they then sell it at from two to three dollars a gallon. All over $1.10 is net profit, a net profit levied on all consumers, obtained how? By reason of the enormous protection which the law gives them, which amounts to a monopoly—net profit which they levy upon everybody who buys whisky from them, and everybody, if the law is obeyed, is obliged to buy whisky made by them.

The only difference between the manufacturer of woolen blankets and the manufacturer of whisky is that the manufacturer of whisky is protected by a higher tariff than the manufacturer of woolen blankets, and protected by penal law, which sentences to jail anybody who attempts to make whisky in competition with them. In case of the manufacturer of woolen blankets there is a tariff for his protection, but any and every body who chooses may build factories and compete with him. The law enables the licensed distillers, without competition from persons outside of their ring, to put any price they please on whisky. To prevent a decrease in the price by competition among themselves they regulate that matter by a trust and agree with each other not to sell below a certain price.

To give protection to the manufacturer of woolens equal to that given to the registered distiller it would be necessary for the Government to license a certain number—say twenty factories—who are engaged in making woolen blankets, put a prohibitory tariff on woolen blankets, and enact a penal law making it criminal for anybody else to engage in the business of making woolen blankets, and then impose a license fee or tax upon those who make woolen blankets, to be paid into the Treasury. This would protect them by a tariff against foreign manufacturers; it would protect them by penal statute against home competition, and it would give them the power now possessed by the whisky ring to add the amount they pay as internal tax to the Government to the price of the commodity, and then, as they control the market entirely, to fix their own profits in addition to that. So far as competitors not belonging to their organization are concerned they would have no chance to come in competition, and so far as competition among themselves is concerned, they regulate that by a trust. So that in every sense there is no other class of manufacturers in this country so extravagantly and so thoroughly protected as the whisky ring. The Senator from Kentucky says that no Democrat is in favor of protection, and still the Senator from Kentucky defends the whisky ring, which has more protection than any other protected interest or monopoly in this country, and desires the continuance of the present state of things.

But the proposition that 90 cents a gallon on all the whisky made goes into the Treasury is not true. There is a large amount which runs the blockade, from the licensed distilleries that pays no tax to the Government, and still the consumer pays full price for it. There is a large amount that is lost by fire and other casualties that pays no tax to the Government. There is a large amount allowed the distillers for evaporation which pays no tax, to wit, 7½ gallons on every forty-gallon barrel which has been stored three years, while the whisky is stored and guarded by the Government and at the expense of the Government for the benefit of the owners. It is not true, therefore, as assumed by the Senator from Kentucky, that the Government gets its tax on all the whisky made, and that there is no protection resulting in an increase of the price to the consumer. Large quantities of whisky are sold to the consumer that have paid no tax to the Government, and the protection given to the licensed distillers, as above stated, gives them a practical monopoly of the business, and adds enormous tax to the cost of every gallon of whisky consumed by the laboring masses of the people of this country.

Say the laboring man buys a pair of woolen blankets and pays $1.50 tariff on it; he buys as a medicine for himself and family a gallon of whisky and pays $1.50 tax on it to the registered distiller. Which hurts him worst? In each case he pays $1.50 more than he would pay if there were no tariff on blankets and no tariff and internal revenue on whisky. In each case a dollar and a half of the amount for which he has labored, and which would otherwise go to the support of his family, is taken out of his pocket.

The Senator says, however, that he can do without the whisky; so he can do without the blankets. There are thousands of families in the mountains and backwoods of this country who have no blankets, unless it is a home-made one. The industrious wife and daughters in thousands of families make home-made blankets, or quilts which serve in place of blankets, so that the purchase of either blankets or whisky is alike a matter of interest or a matter of choice. Both are highly protected. But the manufacturer of whisky has about three times as much protection as the manufacturer of blankets. The money taken from the pocket of the consumer in case of whisky is much greater than the money taken from his pocket in case of a pair of blankets, because the price of whisky in comparison with the cost of its manufacture is two or three times as great as the price of blankets when compared with the cost of their manufacture.

This is not a question of sentiment. This is a question of dollars and cents. Which injures the pocket of the consumer most the tariff paid upon woolen goods, which is high, or the tariff and internal-revenue tax paid by the consumer upon whisky, which is three times as high? If it is wrong to defend the lower protection, is it not worse to defend the higher protection, which is three times as high in case of whisky as it is in case of woolens? If it is robbery for the manufacturer to take from the consumer of woolen blankets 50 per cent., growing out of protection, is it not greater robbery to take from the consumer of whisky three or five times as large a per cent. as profit to the distiller, growing out of the protection which the law gives him?

The whisky ring, this grandest of monopolies, is better protected, and the people have to pay more for its protection, than they pay for the protection of any other class of producers or manufacturers in this country.

AGAINST TWO SYSTEMS OF COLLECTORS.

But if the Senator is right about it, and it is better to collect over a hundred millions a year on tobacco and whisky, because the money all goes into the Treasury and protects nobody but the whisky ring, then why not collect all the money we need by a direct tax, which all goes into the Treasury, and abolish the custom-houses altogether? We certainly ought not to have two systems of collecting revenue and two armies of collectors, each at the expense of many millions of dollars a year. One or the other system should be abolished. I am for the abolition of internal revenue and all direct taxation, and collecting all the revenue necessary to support the Government, economically administered, at the ports by a tariff. If the Senator is right, and the internal-revenue and direct taxation is a better system, then we ought to abolish the custom-houses and collect all the tax under the present system of spies, informers, and raiders upon the homes and property of the people. In that way you can collect your revenues and protect nobody but the distillers, not even protect the persons, property, or, in many cases, the lives of your fellow-citizens.

But what would the people say to such a practice? Suppose we undertake to raise three hundred millions a year by internal-revenue laws and direct taxes? The people of each State must then pay its part in cash, in addition to the direct tax which its people pay for the support of its own government. When apportioned out among the different States, my own State, being a little over the average State, would have to pay, in addition to the tax it now pays to support the State government, something over $8,000,000 a year in cash, collected directly from the people who have visible property to aid in the support of the Federal Government. This is about eight times as much as we now pay to support the State government. What would the people of Georgia or Kentucky say to such a system, with all the oppressions and domiciliary vexations which would attend the collection of the taxes under it?

THE GEORGIA PEOPLE DO NOT WISH TO CRUSH MANUFACTURES.

I do not undertake to speak for the people of Kentucky; but I have no hesitation in saying that, while the people of Georgia desire a just revision of the tariff and the abolition of the internal-revenue system entirely, they do not desire to crush American manufactures or reduce the compensation of American labor.

On that question they stand squarely on the Democratic platform as promulgated by the national Democratic party in 1884, which no person or association of persons, except the Democratic party in convention, has power to change or abrogate. That platform says:

But in making reduction in taxes it is not proposed to injure any domestic industries, but rather to promote their healthy growth. From the foundation of this Government taxes collected at the custom-house have been the chief source of Federal revenue. Such they must continue to be. Moreover, many industries have come to rely upon legislation for successful continuance, so that any change of law must be at every step regardful of the labor and capital which is involved. The progress of reform must be subject in the execution, to this plain dictate of justice—all taxation should be limited to the requirements of economical government. The necessary reduction can and must be effected without depriving American labor of the ability to compete successfully with foreign labor, and without imposing lower rates of duty than will be ample to cover any increased cost of production which may exist in consequence of the higher rate of wages prevailing in this country.

Then the platform adds this significant language, which leaves no room for the internal-revenue system:

THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM FOR INTERNAL REVENUE REPEAL.

Sufficient revenue to pay all the expenses of the Federal Government economically administered, including pensions, interest and principal of the public debt, can be got under our present system of taxation from custom-house taxes on fewer imported articles, bearing heaviest on articles of luxury, and bearing lightest on articles of necessity.

This, as I understand it, and as the Democracy of Georgia understand it, is sound Democratic doctrine on the revenue question. It involves the absolute repeal of the internal-revenue system, which the Democratic platform says is a "war tax," at the earliest day when the emergency that called it into existence has passed. And it has already passed.

So much for the position and precepts of Jefferson, Jackson, and the other founders and champions of the Democratic party, who all favored such adjustment of our tariff laws as was necessary to give encouragement and protection to manufactures and to American labor; and it involves an adjustment of the tariff in such manner as not to injure any domestic industries, but rather to promote their healthy growth; and as some industries have come to rely on legislation for successful continuance, the position is distinctly taken by the national Democratic convention that every step in changing the law must be regardful of the labor and capital thus involved, and that the necessary reduction in taxation can and must be effected without depriving American labor of the ability to compete successfully with foreign labor, and without imposing lower rates of duty than will be ample (mark the word "ample") to cover any increased cost of production which may exist in consequence of the higher rates of wages prevailing in this country. Here in the platform is the doctrine of protection clearly set forth.

It is not the purpose of the Democratic party, as its platform distinctly states, to injure any domestic industry, or to reduce the tariff so low as to compel the American manufacturer to reduce the wages of American laborers about one-half, so as to bring it down to the prices paid for labor in Europe, and thus enable the American manufacturer to compete with the European manufacturer.

As labor is much the larger part of the cost of most manufactured articles, the American manufacturer can not compete successfully and pay double the price for labor which the European manufacturer pays. It follows, therefore, that in case of most manufactured articles the price of labor must be reduced when the tariff is reduced, or the American manufacturer must retire and give the field to the European who has the cheap labor. You can not reduce American labor to the price paid paupers in Europe without compelling American laborers to live like the paupers in Europe live. To this our laborers should never submit. Against this the faith of the Democratic party is solemnly pledged. And I trust we may find every true Democrat ready to aid in keeping faith and redeeming that solemn pledge.

IMPORTED AND HOME MANUFACTURES.

The whole value of dutiable manufactured articles imported in one year is $190,088,633. The whole value of home products of manufacturers, mechanics, and miners, according to the last census, is nearly five and a half billions a year, or over twenty-seven times as much home production as the whole amount of like dutiable goods imported. So that our people use more than twenty-seven times as much home-made goods on which they pay little or no tariff as they use of foreign goods on which they pay the tariff. The amount of the tariff paid by a farmer or planter in the South who lives plainly and economically is so small that it is almost imperceptible. He pays tariff on a small proportion of the small quantity of manufactured goods which he buys, such as blankets, wool hats, trace-chains, etc. And he gets protection under our tariff law on the articles raised by him to almost if not quite as large a sum, as he pays tariff on goods bought by him which are subject to duty under our tariff law as it now stands on the statute-book.

But suppose we reduce the estimate taken from the census one-half. Then our people use thirteen and one-half times as much home-made goods as they use of imported manufactures. Or, say you reduce it to one-third, then they use nearly ten times as much home-made as foreign manufactures. Though it is much more than that, for the purposes of this argument, we will say ten times as much.

The following table will illustrate this more clearly:

IMPORTS AND HOME PRODUCTION OF MANUFACTURES.

Total imports 1887	$663,429,189
Total free	219,887,787
Total dutiable	443,541,402
Total manufactured, dutiable	190,088,633
Per cent	42.86
Total home manufactured products, 1880	$5,369,579,191
1887—Imported dutiable manufactures	190,088,633
Excess home manufactures	5,179,490,558
Ratio imports to home manufactures	1 to 28
Yearly average increase home manufactures, 1860 to 1880	$173,247,276
Home manufactures in 1887 by same increase	$6,554,569,166
Imported manufactures 1887	190,088,633
Excess home manufactures	6,364,481,533
1887—Ratio imports to home manufactures	1 to 33

THE DIVISION OF LABOR IN THE UNITED STATES.

According to the last census, the whole number of persons employed in gainful pursuits in the United States was 17,392,099, divided as follows:

In agriculture	7,670,493
Professional and personal	4,079,238
Manufacturing and mechanical operations, and mining	3,837,112
Trade and transportation	1,810,256
The total number of farms was	4,008,967
The whole value of farms	$10,197,096,776
Value of farm products	$2,113,402,564
Value of live-stock	$2,000,000,000
Whole number of manufacturing establishments	253,852
Capital invested	$2,790,272,606
Whole number of hands employed	3,837,112
Annual wages paid	$941,953,795
Value of materials used	$3,396,823,549
Whole value of products	$5,369,579,191
Increased product from 1870 to 1880	$1,137,253,749
Increased capital invested	$672,063,837
Horse-power increased by steam and water	3,410,837

The foregoing statement, taken from the census reports, shows that the labor of this country is becoming pretty well diversified, that it is divided out into different classes who are engaged in different pursuits, each tending to build up the general prosperity of the country and promote the interest of the whole. Any legislation that disarranges this apportionment of labor to different channels and different productions, or that destroys any one of the great industries of the country, produces a shock in the system which is followed by very serious consequences to the whole body politic.

AN ILLUSTRATION OF INJURY.

As an illustration, take one and a half millions of the persons now engaged in manufacturing and mining, and put them to farming, and it would add about 20 per cent. to the number of farmers, and thus reduce the number of non-producing consumers in like proportion and add one-fifth additional to the present surplus productions made by the farmers, which would greatly reduce the price of all farm products in the market below what it now is; and if one and a half millions of the persons now engaged in manufacturing and mining were taken from that pursuit, that would greatly reduce the manufactured articles in the market, and to that extent increase the price of all manufactured articles that must be bought by the farmer.

Any legislation so unfriendly to the manufacturing interests of the country as to materially cripple those interests and cause factories to be closed, and operatives to be thrown out of employment, would drive large numbers of people now engaged in manufacturing back to farm life to make a living, and would necessarily greatly increase the number of farmers and the quantity of farm productions, and thus lessen the demand for farm products and diminish the price which the farmer would receive for his corn, wheat, and other productions.

SURPLUS REDUCTION AND THE TARIFF.

But it may be said that it is not intended to reduce the amount paid into the Treasury from the tariff so as to cripple the manufacturers, and in that way stop the surplus which now goes into the Treasury. The Secretary of the Treasury in his annual report says that during the present fiscal year, ending June 30, 1888, the surplus taxation will amount to $113,000,000. Then if we are to get rid of all the surplus as recommended by the President, the proposition as I understand it is to reduce the tariff on manufactured articles and raw material $113,000,000 next year. The whole amount paid into the Treasury last year from customs was $217,286,893.13. The surplus as estimated for by the Secretary of the Treasury for this year will be $113,000,000, leaving only $104,000,000 to be raised by tariff, if we retain the internal revenue. Or, in other words, we must take off more than one-half the tariff on every article taxed, or take it entirely off half the articles taxed.

Let us see what reduction it will be necessary to make. Say we want to reduce the tariff $113,000,000 so as to stop entirely the surplus which now flows into the Treasury. During the last year the amount paid into the Treasury under the operation of our tariff laws on the chief classes of articles manufactured in this country was, on

All woolen manufactures	$27,278,523
All silk manufactures	13,000,000
All iron and steel manufactures	14,631,876
All cotton manufactures	11,752,207
All chemical manufactures	4,247,816
All jute, hemp, and sisal-grass manufacturers	9,247,816
Earthenware and china	2,829,540
Glass and glassware	3,694,924
Leather manufactures	3,262,233
Paper	392,469
Tobacco manufactures	8,311,114
Total revenue from the manufactures above named	98,748,328
Additional revenue from all raw materials	12,419,699
Total revenue from all sources named above	111,168,027
Surplus for this year	113,000,000
Surplus still remaining after repealing all the above-named duties	2,831,973

Thus you see, Mr. President, if we leave it as it now is on other articles we will have to remove all tariff from woolen, silk, iron, steel, cotton, chemicals, hemp, earthenware, glass, leather, paper, and tobacco, and all tariff from raw materials, and we will still fall short over two millions of dollars of disposing of the whole surplus estimated for by the Secretary of the Treasury for the current year.

The last census shows that there were then 802,206 persons employed in the eleven chief branches of manufacturing above enumerated, and it is safe to calculate that each of the persons employed at labor supports him or herself, with at least two other persons dependents. Some estimates put it as high as five other persons; so that at the most moderate estimate, there were 2,406,618 persons employed in said eleven branches of manufacturing and dependent upon the employés in said factories for a support. Or, if we count five dependents upon each laborer, this would make 4,011,030 persons—employés and dependents. There was, in 1880, according to the census reports, 35,529 manufacturing establishments of the character above mentioned, and there was invested in said above-enumerated industries the enormous sum of $875,995,387 capital. They paid annually $268,606,609 in wages, and they turned out annually $1,400,196,117 worth of manufactured articles. The following table will better illustrate this:

Manufactures.

Kind.	Establishments.	Capital.	Hands.	Wages.	Products.
Wool	2,689	$158,091,869	161,557	$47,389,087	$267,252,913
Silk	382	19,125,300	34,521	9,146,705	34,519,723
Iron and steel	1,005	230,971,884	140,978	55,476,785	296,557,685
Cotton	796	208,280,346	172,544	42,040,510	192,090,110
Chemicals	592	28,593,458	9,545	4,157,163	38,173,658
Jute, etc	27	2,491,500	3,207	827,759	3,571,653
Earthenware, etc	686	6,380,610	9,494	3,279,535	7,942,729
Glass	211	19,844,699	24,177	9,144,100	21,154,571
Leather	23,694	130,473,911	176,006	73,450,263	403,551,149
Paper	4,970	53,529,409	44,421	17,275,678	82,588,870
Tobacco	477	17,207,401	25,756	6,419,024	52,793,056
Total	35,529	875,995,387	802,206	268,606,609	1,400,196,117

You will notice, Mr. President, that this was the census report of 1880. Since that time seven years have passed, the most active seven years of American progress and American manufacturing, and I think it is safe to estimate that there has been one-third added to the number of establishments, the amount of capital invested, the number of persons employed, and the amount of productions of said factories. It would certainly be a very moderate estimate to say that there are now forty thousand of said manufacturing establishments, one million of persons employed in them, and, counting two dependents to each, three millions of persons employed and dependent; or if we count five persons dependent upon each laborer, then there would be six millions employed and dependent, one billion of capital invested, and three hundreds millions a year paid in wages, and $1,800,000,000 worth of manufactured articles produced.

THE INJURY OF GENERAL TARIFF REPEAL.

Now, an act of Congress that repeals the tariff on all these imported articles not only strikes down a large part of the enormous capital invested, but it throws a million of persons out of employment and cuts off not only their means of support, but the livelihood of from two to five millions of additional persons who are dependent upon them, and leaves the whole mass without food or clothing until they can, by charity or some other way, get locations upon farms, where, as tenants or otherwise, they can dig their living out of the ground, and cease to purchase their bread from the farmers who now supply them and make a good profit by so doing.

The present tariff paid into the Treasury upon all the manufactures of the character above described, and upon all raw material, as already stated, amounts in round numbers to $111,000,000. The internal-revenue tax amounts to about $118,000,000, a little larger sum.

The manufacturing investments that are more or less protected by the payment by foreign importers into the Treasury of $111,000,000 tariff maintain 40,000 manufacturing establishments, and employ and support in operatives and dependents at least 3,000,000 people, and turn out nearly $2,000,000,000 worth of manufactured articles every year.

SURPLUS REDUCTION AND THE WHISKY RING.

Now, let us contrast this with the whisky ring. The 969 registered distillers in the United States last year made about 76,000,000 gallons of whisky. They have comparatively a small number of employés, running up at most to a few thousand persons. The repeal of the internal-revenue laws still leaves the owners of these registered distilleries to distill or not to distill, as they think proper, and turns comparatively a small number of operatives out of employment.

A TREMENDOUS ANTITHESIS.

Now, which is best for the people of the United States as a whole? Shall the tariff on the eleven most important branches of manufacturing above enumerated be repealed, which partially protects and encourages 40,000 manufacturing establishments and affords food, shelter, and clothing to over 3,000,000 people, turning out nearly $2,000,000,000 worth of manufactured articles a year, and paying over $300,000,000 a year in wages, and affording a better market for 7,000,000 agriculturists; and shall the billion of dollars invested in these establishments be destroyed and the vast number of employés and dependents supported by them be turned out of employment and left to contend with starvation and want, or shall we let these industries continue to live and let the employés make an honest and liberal support, as they are now doing, by their daily labor, and let the billion of capital invested and the millions of persons employed prosper as heretofore? Or shall we, in obedience to the dictation of the whisky ring, by legislation strike down these manufacturing establishments, destroy the billion of dollars invested in them, and turn 3,000,000 people supported by them out of employment, without support, for the purpose of protecting the 969 "whisky barons" of this country, who make 76,000,000 gallons of whisky a year and realize vast profit upon it, protected by $2 a gallon at the ports, which, if the rule laid down by tariff reformers is correct, gives them $2 a gallon protection and profit, or $152,000,000 a year net profit on the whisky manufactured by them?

Mr. President, is it better that the vast manufacturing interests above referred to should be crushed out and their employés be reduced to beggary, and the market they afford our farmers destroyed, or is it better that the internal revenue should be repealed and the "whisky barons" left to take care of themselves, which they are abundantly able to do without the present enormous protection which they receive and without the monopoly they now enjoy?

You can get rid of the surplus revenue by crushing out the manufacturing interests referred to and turning the vast number of operatives out homeless and penniless, or you can get rid of the surplus by leaving them in a prosperous condition and all the balance of the country prosperous, and repealing the whisky and tobacco tax, and leaving the "whisky barons," already enriched by enormous profits made by the monopoly they have so long enjoyed, to provide for themselves without legislative protection in the future.

It is a question whether more than a million of people connected with the manufacturing establishments, with two millions of dependents, shall have their livelihood destroyed or whether less than a thousand men running registered distilleries shall have their enormous profits curtailed.

PERIL TO AMERICAN LABOR.

Now, suppose you remove the tariff entirely from all the class of leading manufactures above described, or suppose you take half the tariff from every article of import now taxed, and if you get rid of all the surplus and retain the internal revenue you are obliged to do one or the other. What will then become of American labor? The manufacturers of Europe get their pauper labor for less than half the wages paid to American labor. Then, unless they have tariff protection, as pledged in the Democratic platform, our manufacturers can not compete without a reduction of labor to the European standard, which puts American laborers on an equality with the pauper labor of Europe. Take two cotton factories in Augusta, Ga., and if one gets labor at a dollar a day and the other has to pay $2 a day, the latter must soon close, as it can not compete with the former. So an American manufacturer without tariff protection, paying twice as much for labor as is paid by a European manufacturer, must soon close, or he must reduce the price paid by him for labor one-half, so as to make his labor as cheap as the labor of the rival in Europe. The American factory without protection must close, and the European with pauper labor must do our manufacturing on the other side of the ocean, or the American manufacturer must reduce American labor to the pauper prices paid to put him on an equality with his European competitor. Without protection or the reduction of American labor you must close the American mills and turn the employés out doors to seek a living by tilling the soil, as there is probably no other occupation that the great body of them can engage in where they can make a living. This will violate the pledges made in the Democratic platform of 1884 in reference to such industries as have come to rely upon legislation for successful continuance, and also the pledge that the necessary reduction "can and must be effected without depriving American labor of the ability to compete successfully with foreign labor, and without imposing lower rates of duty than will be ample to cover any increased cost of production which may exist in consequence of the high rate of wages prevailing in this country;" and it will crush out and close three-fourths of the factories of this country and leave their operatives in a state of deplorable privation and suffering, and will produce a panic such as we have not felt in many a year, and precipitate a flood of condemnation and denunciation which will overwhelm the Democratic party if it is false to its pledges.

But the Senator may say that he does not intend that, and that the Democratic party in Congress do not intend to remove the tariff to that extent, and strike down these great industrial enterprises that are affording a livelihood to millions of people in this country. Then will he be kind enough to tell the country how he expects to reduce the revenue one hundred and thirteen millions of dollars? From what classes of manufactured articles or imported articles will he remove the one hundred and thirteen millions of the customs duties?

It will take more than one-half the whole customs to make the necessary reductions and carry out the President's recommendation.

THE PLIGHTED FAITH OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

What will he take it from without a violation of the plighted faith of the Democratic party in its platform of 1884? Is the Senator ready to reduce the tariff upon all manufactured and imported articles more than one-half, or to take it entirely off one-half and leave it as it is on the other half, and take the chances of the crash of insolvency which it will entail upon capital invested in manufactures, and the misery and panic which it will produce over the whole country, to enable 969 "whisky barons," who are protected on all sides under the enormous monopoly which they now enjoy, to pile up immense profits and accumulate enormous fortunes under the internal-revenue system?

THE PEOPLE VERSUS THE WHISKY RING.

Mr. President, the true issue is between the millions of men, women, and children of this country who are dependent upon the manufacturing industries of the country for their support, and the whisky monopoly, who under the present laws are enjoying outrageous privileges, by which they are accumulating enormous profits without any benefit to others. Shall between three and four millions of persons engaged in manufacturing, mechanics, and mining be crushed and reduced to poverty, or shall the iniquitous system of internal revenue be repealed, with its spies and informers, and the profits of the "whisky barons" be reduced? That is the true issue which the people of this country have to meet. Yes, the issue is between the 969 "whisky barons," with their enormous profits, on the one hand, and the millions of dependent women and children of this country on the other hand. Let us look at this question in another view.

Suppose, by unfriendly legislation, you crush out or break down a large number of the manufacturing establishments of this country. What is the result? Of course the effect is greatly to diminish the manufactured articles offered in our market for sale. As matters now stand more than nine-tenths of the manufactured articles which go upon the American market are home-made, the products of our own manufacturing establishments. As long as this is true the home competition, in a very large degree, regulates the price, and the foreign manufacturer, bringing his merchandise here, can not put up the price so as to make it oppressive to our people. Thus far our experience has frequently been that when the tariff has been made very high on any great and growing industry it has induced large amounts of capital to be put into factories for the production of articles upon which the tariff is high. When a large amount of capital has been invested in a large number of factories to make a particular article, and they reach a point where they can make about all that is demanded in our markets, there springs up a home competition which regulates the price.

HOW THE TARIFF HAS BENEFITED BY HOME COMPETITION.

Take as an illustration the article of Bessemer steel. Twelve or fourteen years ago I purchased the first 100 tons of Bessemer steel which was laid down on the Western and Atlantic Railroad, and paid $130 a ton for it. At that time the tariff on Bessemer steel was $28 per ton. This high rate of tariff induced millions of capital to be put into plants or mills to produce Bessemer steel. Enormous factories were established. In 1883, just before the tariff act was passed, I purchased 2,000 tons of Bessemer steel at $38.50 a ton in the market. The tariff was still $28 a ton, and before the tariff act of 1883 went into operation Bessemer steel went still lower in the market. I think it got down as low as $33 a ton, while the tariff was still $28 a ton. The tariff act of 1883 reduced the tariff on Bessemer steel to $17 a ton, and since that time Bessemer steel, on account of the active home competition which was gotten up between our manufacturers, and which has made their business but moderately profitable, has sold in the market as low as $27 a ton. I was offered a lot of Bessemer only a few days since at $31 per ton, and the tariff is now $17 a ton.

What has produced the enormous decline in the price of Bessemer steel? How is it that an article which twelve or fourteen years ago paid the foreign manufacturer $130 a ton in our market is now selling at $31 a ton? The extravagantly high tariff which was then in operation induced an immense amount of capital to engage in that business and they now turn out so much Bessemer that the American manufacturers in competition with each other keep the price down, and we have a perpetual guaranty that the price will never again go up to an exorbitant figure, for the simple reason that our own mills with a reasonable tariff make enough to supply this country, and the British mill owner who attempts to import it must do so, generally, at a loss, and he will only do it when he has a large surplus which he can not dispose of without loss and must dump it on somebody. The price of Bessemer steel in Great Britain, say, is $20 a ton at the wharf. It costs, say, $2.50 a ton freight to lay it down here. That makes it cost the English manufacturer $22.50 a ton, which is the price in Great Britain with the freight added. Then he must pay $17 a ton tariff to be added, which makes $39.50 per ton, when the American manufacturer is offering it in the market at $31, being $8.50 a ton less than it actually costs the British manufacturer to pay the tariff and lay it down in our market. In other words, he pays half the tariff out of his own pocket to get into our market. Now as long as our home Bessemer factories are able to sustain themselves and make steel, as they are now making it, it is impossible for the British manufacturer, or any other manufacturer, to put up the price of Bessemer steel materially in this country.

They can not in other words take the price in Great Britain and the freight added and add the tariff to it, and sell the steel at its price in Great Britain with the tariff added, for the simple reason that our own manufacturers in competition with each other will always sell it lower, and it is impossible for British laborers, to any great extent, to take the business from American laborers. Then as long as we do not by unfriendly legislation destroy our home steel factories by putting the tariff so low as to let in a flood of steel from abroad, made by pauper labor, we are in no danger of having the price put up to an exorbitant point at any future time by foreign importers. But, Mr. President, if by unfriendly legislation you could destroy the Bessemer steel factories of this country, and turn over the whole business to the British manufacturer, as I believe some persons would be glad to do, it would not be five years, no, not three years, until they would put up the price in this market to $60 or $75 a ton. In other words, whenever the home supply is exhausted or destroyed and all our great railroad interests in this country are dependent upon foreigners for their supply of Bessemer, we are then at the mercy of the foreign manufacturer, and must pay whatever price he chooses to dictate.

THE LESSON OF RICE PROTECTION.

This is forcibly illustrated in the case of the price of rice during our late unfortunate civil war. Prior to the commencement of the war the American rice planters with slave labor made as cheap rice as could be had anywhere. They supplied the American market, and probably more than one-half the European market, and they sold rice at from $1.75 to $2.25 per 100 pounds. The war came on and the Southern planters had to take their negroes off the rice plantations and put them to building fortifications, and soon after the Federal Government threw a blockade around the Southern ports and cut off the Northern States entirely from the rice plantations of the South. What was the result? The foreign rice planters at once saw their opportunity. The American supply was cut off. The American people must have large quantities of rice, and large quantities were required for the army and the hospitals, and the foreigners advanced the price of rice in the market step by step until it reached over $14 per 100 pounds, where it stood for quite a length of time. Why did the people of the Northern States and the army hospitals have to pay $14 per 100 pounds for rice? For the reason that the Southern supply, upon which they had heretofore depended for their rice, was cut off. Little was made and none could reach them, and they were left at the mercy of the foreign importer; and the foreign importer made them pay most extravagantly for it. Since our rice fields are again in cultivation and the ports open and rice is protected by a high tariff the price in the market has gone down until it is now from $3 to $4 per 100 pounds.

Now, if you legislate in reference to any of the great manufacturing interests so as to crush out the American factories and leave us dependent upon foreign manufacturers for our supply, the same result will follow. Whenever foreigners see that we are dependent upon them they will use their power and compel us to pay extortionate prices for the articles they sell us.

MORE BENEFICIAL PROTECTION.

Take another illustration of home competition, the article of cut nails. They are now worth in the market $2 a keg of 100 pounds. The duty on cut nails is $1.25 per 100 pounds. This leaves the foreign importer who brings cut nails into our market but 75 cents per 100 pounds as his compensation for manufacturing them on the other side of the ocean and paying the freight to this country. In other words, cut nails in our home market are worth $2 per 100 pounds and the foreign importer pays $1.25 per 100 pounds tariff. Now repeal the tariff on cut nails, and if the foreign importer can bring them into this market at 75 cents per 100 pounds with his pauper labor he would soon stop all the nail factories of this country. But do you suppose after our factories were destroyed that the foreign importer would continue to sell us nails at 75 cents per 100 pounds? By no means. He would see his opportunity and he would advance the price of nails to the highest point in his power as long as we were dependent upon him and did not make our own supply at home. So with many other articles that might be mentioned. But those already enumerated are sufficient to illustrate the principle.

THE FARMERS AND THE TARIFF.

But the advocates and defenders of the whisky ring, with its enormous protection and colossal monopoly, whenever anything is said in favor of abolishing the internal revenue or curtailing the profits of the whisky ring, shed many crocodile tears over the poor unfortunate farmers of this country, who are so heavily taxed by the heartless manufacturers. In other words, it will not do to repeal the internal-revenue laws and interfere with the profits of the whisky ring, as they say that would leave no room for a repeal or reduction of the tariff, which they say is necessary for the relief of the farmers of this country, as they are at present unprotected. Now, the truth is that nine-tenths of the farmers of this country would never know they paid a dollar of revenue into the Treasury of the United States (and they pay very little) if they were not very kindly reminded of it by the low-tariff orators who seek office. They are told that the tariff is enormously high and that it is literally ruining the farming and planting interests of the country.

SUGAR, CALICO, ETC., CHEAPER UNDER PRESENT TARIFF.

From 1856 to 1860 was a period of low tariff. At that time refined white sugar in the market was worth from 14 to 16 cents a pound at retail. Now you can buy refined granulated sugar at about 6½ cents a pound, and I presume you can buy the brown sugar at about 5. Thus you see, Mr. President, how the enormous tariff on sugar by reducing the price is ruining the farmers of Georgia, who have to purchase sugar.

Prior to the war, in the period of low tariff, a good article of calico was worth from 10 to 12 cents at retail. Now the same article, and just as good, can be bought at from 5 to 6 cents a yard, one-half the price that it brought during the low-tariff period. So you see, Mr. President, how the present high tariff is ruining the planters and farmers who have to buy calico. Prior to the war all agricultural implements were worth from 30 to 50 per cent. more than they now command. For instance, it was worth 35 cents to lay a scooter plow at the blacksmith shop, and would cost from 50 to 75 cents to purchase one. Now you can purchase it for 25 cents. Everybody knows this helps the farmer. And in the face of all this the free-trader tells the farmer that he is being ruined by the tariff. How utterly absurd! How absolutely false! Yet they say the planting interest is being ruined by the high tariff. Take the article of bacon for instance, which is purchased largely by the farmers of Georgia, and prior to the war, during the low-tariff period, it was worth from 10 to 12 cents a pound in the market. Now it ranges generally from 6 to 8, and it has sold by the car-load within the last three or four years as low as 4½.

This is the way the tariff is ruining the great mass of farmers in the South who have to buy their bacon and other food supplies; and I might extend this list by enumerating article after article purchased by the farmer that is worth a third less, or one-half as much now, in the market, as it cost him prior to the war. Now, the farmers who are getting this reduction upon the price formerly paid by them for necessary articles would never know they were being ruined if they were not kindly reminded of it by their good friends, the agents or advocates of the whisky ring; and they would not be reminded so often now if it were not for the fact that there is a large surplus in the Treasury of the United States that you must get rid of, and it comes down to the question whether more than one-half the tariff shall be taken off and crush the manufacturing interests of this country, or whether we shall reduce the price of labor one-half, or whether the internal revenue shall be abolished and curtail the profits of the whisky ring. And whenever this issue is being made up the friends of the whisky ring then very politely and kindly inform the farmers and laborers of this country of the immense oppression of the tariff, which is reducing the price of many of the necessary articles they now buy to about half the price they cost prior to the war. If this state of things goes on and the manufacturing interests continue to be built up as they have been in the past, and the price of all the necessaries of life, on account of the competition growing up between home manufacturers, continues to go down, what is to become of the farmer and laboring man who has to buy these articles?

BETTER PRICES FOR LABOR UNDER THE TARIFF.

But this is not all. The price of nearly all the necessaries of life which the farmers buy has not only gone down from 25 to 50 per cent., but the price of labor has gone up. There was never a period in American history when labor commanded as high a price in the market as it does at the present time, or when the price of a day's labor would buy as much of the necessaries of life to the family of the laborer. What is to become of the country, Mr. President, and especially the farmers and laboring class of this country, if the price of all the necessaries which they have to buy is to continue to go down in the market, and labor, by which they make their money, is to continue to go up? There must be some check to this state of things, or some one's interest will suffer. In other words, if this state of things is not checked the internal-revenue laws will have to be repealed, even though it be at the expense of a large proportion of the profits of the whisky ring.

PROTECTION ENJOYED BY THE FARMERS.

But is it true that the present tariff protects everybody else but the farmer, and levies enormous exactions on him without protection? So far from this being true, a large proportion of the articles produced by the farmers of this country enjoy a large share of protection under the present tariff. In other words, foreign producers, in case of farm products as well as the products of the factories, have to pay a tariff before they can bring their productions into this country and expose them for sale in competition with our own farmers. Let us see how this matter really does stand. Is the farmer discriminated against and left unprotected while everybody else has protection at his expense, as we are told by the advocates of the whisky ring? By reference to the tariff act it will be found that this state of things does not exist. I have here some figures taken from the statistical reports of our imports and exports and from our tariff laws, which show very clearly that the interest of the farmer has not been neglected in framing our present tariff legislation, but he is liberally protected.

The following table will show the number of horses, cattle, sheep, etc., imported annually, and the tariff upon them, the quantity of breadstuffs imported, and the value and the tariff paid upon them. The table will also show the flax, hemp, etc., that were imported, the value of them, and the tariff upon them; also the fruits raised by our farmers and gardeners, the quantity of each imported, its value, and the tariff upon it; also the hay, hops, and barley malt imported, with the value of each article and the tariff paid upon it; also the provisions, such as meat, butter, cheese, etc., with the quantity imported and the tariff upon it; also rice and sugar, in which the planters are vitally interested, with the quantity of each imported and the tariff upon it; also tobacco, which is an article produced by the farmer alone, with the quantity brought in and the tariff paid upon it; also vegetables, such as beans, peas, potatoes, etc., with the quantity imported and the tariff paid upon it; also wool, which is a production of the farmer, the quantity imported, and the tariff upon it. I have not, Mr. President, embraced the manufactured articles made of these commodities, but only the commodities themselves, such as are produced by our own farmers and gardeners, dairymen, and fruit-growers, with the amount brought in and the tariff paid before it could come into competition with our own farmers and reduce the price of their produce. I will print the table from the official statistics with my remarks:

Farm imports, dutiable.

Articles.	Quantity.	Amount.	Duty.
Animals (page 791):
Cattle	72,665	$979,696	20 per cent. ad valorem.
Horses	38,725	2,464,303	Do.
Sheep	451,253	1,187,847	Do.
Total		4,631,846
Breadstuffs (page 791):
Barley.....bushels...	10,355,594	6,173,208	10 cents per bushel.
Corn.....do.....	30,536	16,636	Do.
Oats.....do.....	87,380	29,579	Do.
Oatmeal.....pounds...	939,502	37,857	½ cent per pound.
Rye.....bushels...	18,469	10,720	10 cents per bushel.
Wheat.....do.....	277,842	218,867	20 cents per bushel.
Wheat flour..barrels...	1,013	3,302	20 per cent. ad valorem.
All other		150,059
Total		6,640,228
Flax, etc. (page 794):
Flax.....tons..	7,140	1,922,182	$5 to $40 per ton.
Hemp.....do.....	32,739	4,041,522	$25 per ton.
Jute.....do.....	88,514	2,616,128	20 per cent. ad valorem.
Sisal grass, etc..do.....	36,355	3,733,001	$15 per ton.
Total		12,312,833
Fruits (pages 794, 795):
Figs.....pounds...	8,724,583	487,602	2 cents.
Lemons		3,835,147	30 cents per box, 16 cents per half box, $2 per 1,000.
Oranges		2,408,140	25 cents per box, 13 cents per half box, $1.60 per 1,000.

Farm imports, dutiable—Continued.

Articles.	Quantity.	Amount.	Duty.
Fruits—Continued.
Prunes.....pounds...	92,032,625	$2,999,648
Raisins .....do.....	40,673,288	2,281,981	2 cents.
Preserved fruit.....	.....	748,493	20 per cent. ad valorem.
All other.....	.....	1,799,462	35 per cent. ad valorem.
Almonds.....	5,482,362	597,476	5 cents per pound, 7 cents per pound shelled.
All others.....	.....	682,878	2 cents per pound.
Total.....	.....	15,840,827
Hay (page 795).....tons...	78,368	790,394	$2 per ton.
Hops (page 795)..pounds...	18,538,049	3,404,669	8 cents per pound.
Malt barley (page 796) bushels.....	209,960	153,363	20 cents per bushel.
Provisions (page 797):
Meat products, extracts.....	.....	272,651	20 per cent. ad valorem.
All other	.....	162,202	1 to 2 cents per pound.
Dairy:
Butter .....pounds...	236,100	38,125	4 cents per pound.
Cheese.....do.....	6,592,192	874,261	Do.
Milk, condensed.....	.....	459,000	20 per cent. ad valorem.
Total.....	.....	1,806,239
Rice (page 798):
In grain.....pounds...	46,765,394	922,305	1½ to 2½ cents per pound.
Granulated.....do.....	47,921,263	754,089	Do.
Total.....	94,686,659	1,674,394
Sugar, molasses, etc. (page 799):
Molasses ....gallons...	37,894,126	5,340,763	4 to 8 cents per gallon.
Sugar, to No. 13, pounds.....	2,918,103,240	69,153,830	1.4 cents per pound.
Sugar, Nos. 13 to 20, pounds.....	25,043	1,017	3 cents.
Sugar, above No. 20, pounds.....	24,122	1,026	3.5.
Candy.....	.....	22,971	5 cents per pound.
Total.....	.....	74,519,607
Tobacco (page 799):
Leaf, wrappers.....	54,939	49,430	75 cents to $1 per pound.
All other.....	17,464,255	8,655,520	35 cents per pound.
Total.....	17,519,104	8,704,950
Vegetables (page 799):
Beans,peas..bushels...	648,388	607,853	10 per cent. ad valorem.
Potatoes .....do...	1,432,490	543,091	15 per cent. per bushel.
Pickles, etc.....	.....	387,177	35 per cent.
All other, natural.....	.....	516,319	10 per cent. ad valorem.
All other, preserved...	.....	295,911	35 per cent. ad valorem.
Total.....	.....	2,350,351
Wool (page 800):
Clothing wools, lbs...	17,963,982	3,431,567	2½ to 12 cents per pound.
Combing wools..do.....	10,721,753	2,528,560	Do.
Carpet, etc.....do.....	85,352,295	10,464,352	Do.
Total.....	114,038,030	16,424,479

RECAPITULATION.

Animals.....	$4,631,846	Rice.....	$1,674,394
Breadstuffs.....	6,640,228	Sugar and molasses.....	74,519,607
Flax, hemp, etc., raw.....	12,312,833	Tobacco, raw	8,704,950
Fruits.....	15,840,827	Vegetables.....	2,350,351
Hay	790,394	Wool, raw.....	16,424,479
Hops	3,404,669
Barley malt.....	153,363	Total.....	149,254,784
Provisions	1,806,239

So you see, Mr. President, the farmers and planters and fruit-growers of this country are all protected by the tariff in nearly everything they produce, and it does not meet the case to say that little or nothing would be brought in if there were no tariff, and therefore the farmers get no protection, because the table taken from the official reports shows that $149,300,331 worth of these articles were brought in the last year and the tariff paid upon them. Then the farmers, gardeners, dairymen, etc., get protection on articles that were brought in, amounting to nearly $150,000,000 a year under the present tariff. It is reasonable to suppose that a much larger quantity would have been brought in if there had been no tariff, which would have come into direct competition with our own planters and farmers and gardeners and orchardmen and reduced the prices of their products. It is a deception and a delusion, then, when the advocates of the whisky ring attempt to convince the farmer that everybody else gets protection under the tariff but himself. He gets a liberal share of protection on almost every article he makes, and he gets almost every manufactured article he buys a great deal cheaper than he was formerly able during a period of low tariff to buy it.

THE ALLEGED RULE THAT THE TARIFF RAISES PRICES.

But there is another view of the farmer's interest that it would be well in this connection to present. The advocates of the whisky ring, in their zeal for reducing the tariff and retaining internal-revenue taxes, lay down the rule that the tariff laws raise the price to consumers of all articles imported and subject to duty the sum paid for such duties.

In other words, that the price paid by the purchaser of imported articles is measured by the duty on the articles, and that the importer adds the amount of tariff to the price of the commodity he imports, and the consumer has to pay the original price with the tariff added, and that this is not only true as to the imported article, but that it raises in the market the price of every article of like kind produced in this country, and that the people pay not only the tariff on the imported article, but an additional sum as large as the tariff on the price of every article produced in this country of the same kind and quality as the imported article. This is the rule laid down by able tariff reformers and the advocates of the whisky ring. I do not agree to the correctness of the rule. But I will argue this question on the supposition that they do lay down the rule correctly and we will see the result that is reached.

The rule must work both ways or it is not a good rule. To illustrate the manufacturers' side of it. We will say that the tariff on calico is 20 per cent. ad valorem. The owner of a factory in Canada imports one thousand bolts of calico and pays the tariff of 20 per cent. on it. He adds the tariff to the price, and it is paid by the consumer. This, according to the rule, adds 20 per cent. to the price of all the calico manufactured in this country, and all purchasers of calico pay 20 per cent. more than they would have paid but for the tariff on every yard of calico manufactured in the United States, which is 20 per cent. net the manufacturer gets as protection by the tariff. I will admit, for the argument, though untrue, that the above rule is correct, and that the payment of 20 per cent. tariff on imported calico adds 20 per cent. to the price of all the calico manufactured in the United States, and the manufacturers get the 20 per cent. protection.

THE FARMER'S SIDE OF TARIFF PROFIT.

Now we will test the rule by an illustration on the farmer's side. Suppose the tariff on wheat to be 20 per cent. ad valorem. A farmer in Canada imports into the United States 1,000 bushels of wheat, and pays a tariff of 20 per cent. He adds the tariff to the price of the wheat, and it is paid by the consumer. It follows, under the rule, that this at once raises the price of every bushel of wheat made in the United States, and all purchasers of American wheat must pay 20 per cent. more for it, and the farmers, as a protection under the tariff, gets 20 per cent. increase on the price of every bushel of wheat raised by them. If the rule is correct when applied to the manufacturer, it must be correct when applied to the farmer. They each make the 20 per cent. on articles to which the tariff is equally applicable, or neither makes it. In the case supposed, each produces an article upon which there is 20 per cent. tariff, and importation is made of each kind of article, one produced by the farmer and the other by the manufacturer, and the same per cent. is paid as tariff by each, and of course each gets the same protection.

I proceed now on the assumption that the rule is correct. This rule has been laid down again and again in the discussions on this floor, and if it is a correct rule then no class of our citizens have anything like the amount of protection under our tariff laws that is given to the planters and farmers of this country.

A PRODIGIOUS SHOWING FOR THE FARMERS.

For instance, there is a tariff of 10 cents a bushel on corn, and the official statistical report puts down the whole quantity of corn produced in this country last year at 1,936,136,000 bushels. There were imported last year 30,536 bushels, which paid a tariff of 10 cents per bushel. In other words, the tariff was added to the original price of the corn, and that raised the price of all corn produced in this country 10 cents a bushel. Now, what was the result? Ten cents a bushel on the quantity of corn above mentioned amounted to a net income to the farmers, if the rule be correct, of $193,617,600 on account of corn alone for one year. This was a greater sum in net profits which the farmers made by the tariff than the sum made by the whisky ring, the difference being, however, that there were only 969 "whisky barons" among whom it was to be divided, while there was a longer division among the farmers.

I have a table here showing how much under that rule the farmers made net on corn, wheat, rye, oats, barley, potatoes, tobacco, cattle, horses, and sheep, and other articles, showing the aggregate of net profit to the planters, farmers, and stock-raisers of this country under the rule above mentioned of twelve hundred millions of dollars in round numbers in a single year. Now, who will say in the face of these figures, taken from the official reports, that the farmers are not well protected by the tariff? If the rule laid down by the tariff reformers is correct, then there is no escape from the official figures, and there is no question that the farmers made last year by the tariff over a billion of dollars. I will insert this table, No. 4, in my speech, without reading it.

The following are the amounts of leading farm products of the United States, with profit to farmers by application of the rule, which applies as well to farmers as manufacturers, that prices are increased the rate of tariff duties on like products imported:

1885.	Corn produced	bushels...	1,936,176,000
	Gain at 10 cents per bushel duty		$193,617,600
	Wheat produced	bushels...	357,112,000
	Gain at 20 cents per bushel duty		$71,422,400
	Rye produced	bushels...	21,756,000
	Gain at 10 cents per bushel duty		$2,175,600
	Oats produced	bushels...	629,409,000
	Gain at 10 cents per bushel duty		$62,940,900
	Barley produced	bushels...	58,836,000
	Gain at 10 cents per bushel duty		$5,836,000
	Potatoes produced	bushels...	175,029,000
	Gain at 15 cents per bushel duty		$26,254,350
	Hay produced	tons...	44,731,550
	Gain at $2 per ton duty		$89,463,100
	Tobacco produced	pounds...	562,736,000
	Gain at 35 cents per pound duty		$196,957,600
	Duty at 35 cents to $1 per pound.
1887.	Cattle raised, 23,511,750 head	value...	$663,137,926
	Gain at 20 per cent. ad valorem duty		$132,627,585
	Horses raised, 12,496,744 head	value...	$901,685,755
	Gain at 20 per cent. ad valorem duty		$180,337,151
	Sheep raised, 44,759,314 head		$89,872,839
	Gain at 20 per cent. ad valorem duty		$17,974,569
1880.	Wheat flour made		$315,394,385
	Gain at 20 per cent. ad valorem duty		$63,078,877
	Cheese made	pounds...	243,157,850
	Gain at 4 cents per pound duty		$9,726,314
	Butter made	pounds...	806,672,071
	Gain at 4 cents per pound duty		$32,266,882
	Molasses made	gallons...	46,811,523
	Gain at 4 to 8 cents per gallon duty		$3,745,081
	Sugar made	pounds...	124,516,685
	Gain at 1.40 to 3.50 cents per pound duty		$4,358,084
	Provision—meats	value...	$303,562,413
	Gain at 20 per cent. ad valorem duty		$60,712,482
	Hops raised	pounds...	26,546,378
	Gain at 8 cents per pound duty		$2,123,710
	Rice raised	pounds...	110,131,373
	Gain at 2½ cents per pound duty		$2,477,965
	Wool clips	pounds...	240,681,751
	Gain at 10 per cent.—per pound 2½ to 12 cents—duty		$24,068,175
	Pickles, etc	value...	$2,407,342
	Gain at 35 per cent. ad valorem duty		$842,569
	Beans and peas	bushels...	9,594,027
	Gain at 10 per cent. ad valorem duty		$959,002

RECAPITULATION OF SUPPOSED PROFITS.

Corn	$193,617,600	Cheese	$9,726,314
Wheat	71,422,400	Butter	32,266,882
Rye	2,175,600	Molasses	3,745,081
Oats	62,940,900	Sugar	4,358,084
Barley	5,836,000	Meats	60,712,482
Potatoes	26,254,350	Hops	2,123,710
Hay	89,463,100	Rice	2,477,965
Tobacco	196,957,600	Wool	24,068,175
Cattle	132,627,585	Pickles, etc	842,569
Horses	180,337,151	Beans, etc	959,002
Sheep	17,974,567
Wheat flour	63,078,877	Total	1,203,954,994

THE FARMERS OR THE WHISKY RING, WHICH?

Now, Mr. President, shall we cut off the tariff on all these articles that protects the farmers of this country, or greatly reduce it at the dictation of the whisky ring, or shall we repeal the internal revenue and cut off the unreasonable incomes on whisky and let the farmers of this country enjoy the benefits of the tariff to which they are legitimately and justly entitled and by which they are largely protected?

HOW FACTORIES BENEFIT FARMERS.

But this is not all. Every man of common sense knows that every factory that is built in this country that employs 100 hands or 500 hands is a great advantage to every farmer who lives within many miles of it. You go back into the portions of the country far distant from manufacturing establishments and you will find chickens selling at 10 to 12 cents apiece, butter at 10 to 15 cents, eggs at 10 cents a dozen, and everything produced on the farm or in the dairy at a price that is scarcely remunerative.

Now change your location and go into the neighborhood of one or more large factories where there is a large number of officers, employés, and operatives engaged in manufacturing. They produce none of these things. They want to buy everything of the character mentioned that is made upon the farm, in the garden, or the dairy, and instead of chickens being 10 to 12 cents apiece they are from 20 to 30 cents; instead of eggs being worth 10 cents a dozen they are worth 20 to 25 cents; instead of butter being 10 or 15 cents a pound it is worth 40 cents a pound, and so with everything the farmers and the farmers' wives make for sale which is needed by the large number of persons engaged in manufacturing, who do not make these necessary articles.

Not only that, but the price of land is greatly increased by their proximity to and diminished by their remoteness from manufacturing centers. You may find lands selling at $50 an acre within a few miles of a manufacturing town, and you may buy the same quality of land at $5 an acre 50 or 100 miles from manufacturing centers. And why so? Because not only the good housewife has a market for her butter and chickens and eggs and cheese, and everything of that character that is produced upon the farm, but the farmer himself has a market for every bushel of corn, wheat, rye, etc., and for every apple, peach, pear, melon, and everything of that character that he makes upon the farm when located near a manufacturing center, and he gets the best price for his corn, flour, meat, and other necessary articles produced upon the farm. So, in every view of it, no class of people in this country are more benefited by the increase of manufactures and the diversity of labor, thus putting down the price of manufactured articles and putting up the price of labor and the price of farm products, than the farmers themselves, and if on some few articles they pay tariff, it is an indirect tax, that they do not feel much, and they have, as already shown, compensation in numerous other respects for the tariff imposed upon them on part of the articles which they have in daily use.

THE ATLANTA CONVENTION AND THE TARIFF.

In this connection, Mr. President, I desire to state that the farmers of the Southern States held an interstate convention in Atlanta, in August last, which was largely attended by those representing the planting and farming interests of the South. Among other things several tariff speeches were made by persons who were either members or invited by the convention. One of the distinguished gentlemen present was General W. R. Miles, of Mississippi, an able man and a distinguished planter. He referred to the tariff speeches that had been made in the convention, and then called the attention of the convention to the fact that other things were affecting their interests much more injuriously than the tariff. He says:

> Have you ever made a calculation as to the expenditure of these ten Southern States for what they could raise at home? Over $100,000,000 per annum. How much do you pay for your pork? Pork and bacon brought to these ten States cost over $50,000,000 a year. You can raise it all if you will. How much do your mules cost you per annum? I have stated that the hog meat brought into these ten States cost over $50,000,000 a year. I have stated that the mule flesh brought into these States costs at least from twenty to twenty-two millions of dollars a year.

Again, he says:

> Think a moment, will somebody explain to me how much tariff there is on a Kentucky or a Western hog that you eat? [Laughter.] I have never found it in the tariff list. Will you tell me how much duty there is on a Kentucky or St. Louis or Western mule that you buy? [Laughter.] I have not found it in the tariff list.

He then adds:

> I have on my property now the rise of four hundred negroes. I can not state with precise accuracy, but I know that it has not required $1,000 a year to buy all the dry goods that clothes those negroes with the greatest comfort. Twelve hundred dollars, I am satisfied, will cover the total outlay for clothing and for suits, but when I touch the oily hog I have to pay out about $5,000 to feed him, and I have to pay annually from $2,000 to $3,000 for the mules that they work, because they will wear out and die. Now, the tariff does not hurt you at all on your mules and your hogs, nor does it help you. The little duty upon the $1,000 of dry goods that I buy is not a mote in the sunbeam to these expenses.

FREE TRADE AT HOME.

Think of it, Senators, we have free trade between the thirty-eight States and all the Territories of the Union, from ocean to ocean. Take the Southern planters and farmers and they have free trade with the West, and the great bulk of the money they make does not go to buy articles upon which they pay tariff. Indeed, they buy comparatively a small amount of articles upon which they pay tariff. Where they buy one dollar's worth upon which they pay tariff they buy ten dollars' worth, and probably one hundred dollars' worth, from the West, that they ought to raise at home, upon which they pay no tariff. In other words, the great bulk of the purchases made by planters and farmers is made upon the free-trade principle. They purchase from the West under perfect free trade, and they spend most of the money they make in buying supplies from the West, while they spend comparatively a very small portion of it in buying clothing and other articles upon which they pay tariff; and they sell their cotton, rice, and lumber to foreign countries, upon which they pay no tariff and no export duty. Indeed, the great bulk of their transactions, probably nineteen-twentieths of the whole, is conducted upon a strictly free-trade principle. The class of articles bought by the planters upon which they pay tariff is small compared with the exports of their crops and their free trade with the West in numerous commodities where there is no tariff and no export duty.

THE FARMER AND GAMBLER AS AFFECTED BY THE TARIFF.

As a class, our farmers buy sparingly such articles as pay a tariff. I know a fashionable gambler in a Southern city who wears fine clothes, drinks fine wine, and smokes fine cigars, who pays more tax under the tariff laws than a farmer with whom I am well acquainted who is worth $20,000, and who raises his own mules, his own hogs, makes his own corn, and his own fodder and hay, in a word, raises upon the farm everything he uses, except a portion of his clothing, for most of it is made upon the farm, and some sugar and salt and a few other articles. With these exceptions, he is free from taxation to aid in the support of the Government under the tariff system. In other words, he buys fewer articles upon which he has to pay tariff and pays a less amount of money for them than the gambler just mentioned, while the farmer has $20,000 worth of property that is visible and subject to direct taxation, and the gambler has not a dollar of visible property upon which a tax could be collected in any other way except by tariff.

THE FARMER PAYS LITTLE TARIFF.

The truth is, Mr. President, that our Southern planters and farmers pay comparatively a very small proportion of the tariff. The tariff is paid mostly by men of wealth who conduct large business, who wear fine clothing, drink fine liquors and fine wines, entertain largely, living in fine houses with fine furniture, and having fine carriages and equipage, giving fine dinners and suppers, and who use almost exclusively such articles as pay tax under our tariff laws.

WHO PAY THE MOST TARIFF.

The gambler, the dude, the demi-monde, and a large class of fashionable people who dress extravagantly and wear fine jewelry, and make great display, pay most of the tariff, and a great many of them can only be reached by tariff legislation, as they have no visible property upon which a tax can be assessed and collected, and the only way to reach them is to make them pay a tariff in the shape of an increase of the price upon the goods they buy.

In fact a large proportion of the tariff is paid by a class of people above referred to, and by foreign importers who bring such goods to the American market as are made in this country, where the competition between home producers and home manufacturers regulates the price, and the foreign importer has to pay the tariff, or a large part of it, out of his own pocket to get into our markets. This is true whenever the price is fixed by our home competition and the importation of the article has not increased the price. Then it costs the purchaser of the imported article no more than the home market price, and in that case the importer must pay the tariff out of his own pocket. So that a large part of our tax is paid under the tariff system for us by foreign importers to get into our market, at prices fixed by our home competition, and not changed by the importation on which the foreigner pays the tariff.

THE REAL BURDENS OF THE FARMER.

The heavy burdens borne by the Southern planters and farmers are not the result of tariff legislation. They result from an unwise system adopted by our planters of raising one particular crop or product. Instead of diversifying labor and crops, many of them raise no crop but cotton. They purchase their corn, flour, hay, pork, bacon, and agricultural machinery from the West. They ought to make it at home and make less cotton.

But there is still another cause for their want of prosperity, which outweighs the tariff more than tenfold.

Under our national-banking system banks can not loan money to our planters and take lien or mortgage on real estate as security. Planters have no stocks or bonds to deposit as security. Consequently they can not borrow money in bank. What are they to do? They are obliged to purchase supplies to be used in making the crop. As they have no other resource, they turn to the merchant and ask him to sell them corn, bacon, and other necessary supplies on credit for six or nine months, till they can make and sell the crop. He agrees to sell them corn and bacon on six months' time. But he charges 25 per cent. on the cash price for the corn and bacon on six months' time. In other words, he charges on a credit for six months a dollar a bushel for corn worth 75 cents cash, which is 25 per cent. for six months or 50 per cent. for twelve months. And like rates on other necessary supplies. This is 50 per cent. per annum the planter pays for the use of the money with which to purchase supplies to make the crop. It is not the tariff, but the 50 per cent. he pays for the use of the money that ruins the Southern planter. This is what covers the plantations of our farmers with mortgages. The tariff is not the cause. The high rate of interest paid for money does the mischief.

NOT FOR FREE WHISKY AND TOBACCO.

But the great cry of the advocates of the whisky ring is that the repeal of the internal-revenue laws will give free whisky and tobacco to the people of this country, which will be a great curse to them, and therefore the benevolent distillers, who have the great interests of the people supremely at heart, insist that Congress continue to collect by law from them 90 cents a gallon on whisky, which tax does not cost them a cent, and which they charge to the consumer. Now, if we were to repeal the internal-revenue laws and make whisky as free as these reformers insist it would be, that would only put us back where we were at the beginning of the war. There would be no more whisky drank than there is now, there would not be half as much kept in bonded warehouse or in stores, tempting people to use it, as there is now by the whisky ring, and there would be no greater temptation to get drunk on whisky that might cost but 50 cents a gallon than there now is to get drunk on whisky that costs $3 a gallon; and the drunk, when it came, would not be generally as bad, because the whisky made by the small distillers all through the mountain country of this Union would be much purer and less adulterated than that which we get from the store-houses of the whisky ring.

But I do not advocate free whisky, and there is no sort of reason why we should have free whisky as a result of the repeal of the internal-revenue laws, unless we want it free. I say that the system of internal revenue, accompanied with its spies, its informers, and its oppressions, should not be kept on articles of any character in this country, neither on whisky nor tobacco, nor anything else, but it should be swept out of existence. I object, in a word, to the iniquitous system much more than I object to the tax on whisky or tobacco, or any other particular commodity. But I state distinctly, as I have stated on a former occasion, which can not be controverted without misrepresentation, that I am opposed to free whisky. I believe that whisky and tobacco ought both to pay a liberal share of the taxes assessed against our people, but they should pay it to the States. Each State, in other words, should take hold of that matter and put such tax on whisky and tobacco as it thinks reasonable, and in my State I should advocate a high tax on both. In Illinois or Kentucky there would be no obligation upon the State authorities to impose any tax on whisky unless they preferred it. The public would be left to their own choice whether they taxed it or not. It might be entirely free and those States might derive no revenue from it, but if it is to be taxed at all, and revenue is to be derived from it, then it should be a tax levied and collected by the States and not by the Federal Government.

REPEAL DOES NOT TRANSFER THE TAX.

It has been objected that the repeal of the internal-revenue law would transfer the present tax, or the money raised by it, from the United States Treasury into the State treasury, and that a few of the Western States would get enormous sums of money, while other States that pay but little revenue, or do not do much distilling, would get almost nothing. This is not true in any sense. Nobody proposes to transfer the money raised by the present internal-revenue system from the Federal Treasury into the State treasuries. The proposition is to repeal absolutely the internal-revenue laws on whisky and tobacco and leave each State to pass its own laws and collect its own tax upon those commodities.

As I have stated on a former occasion, there is a large class of people in each State who use tobacco and whisky freely, who have no visible property upon which you can collect any tax. A proper law passed by the State to collect the tax on whisky and tobacco would charge the tax to the consumer, and the fashionable gambler or other character who dresses fine and drinks fine whisky and uses fine tobacco, would then have to pay something and divide the expense of the government with the old farmer who is taxed at present upon his land, his horses, his mules, and his cattle, and other property. In other words, so far as the whisky and tobacco tax is concerned, it would be paid by those who use whisky and tobacco, and those who use most of it would pay most of the tax. This would greatly relieve the honest farmers who are property holders, and now pay a large share of the tax to support the State government.

In other words, they now pay a tax to the United States on all the whisky they use, and then pay a direct tax to help support the State government. When the change is made, the tax, whatever it might be, imposed by the State upon whisky and tobacco, would not go into the Federal treasury, but into the State treasury, and to that extent reduce the tax now collected from the people for the support of the State government. As it now stands we virtually pay a double tax. We would then pay but one tax, and that would go into the State treasury. As shown on a former occasion, this would be better for all parties, and it would do away with the present practice of arresting innocent men and dragging them a hundred miles from their homes to be arraigned before the Federal courts, and it would turn over all prosecutions of that character to the State court in the county of the residence of the defendant and the witnesses in his case. In every view of it, then, it would be better for the people of the country for the States to take this matter into their own control, and let the Federal Government wash its hands of the whole system.

A NEW SOUTHERN INTEREST IN THE TARIFF QUESTION.

A few words, Mr. President, upon one other subject and I have done. On account of questions of paramount importance, including race troubles, and on account of the great embarrassments of the Southern States and Southern people in the reorganization of society in the South, which become necessary on account of the changed condition of things, the tariff question has been but little discussed by our people, and is not probably as well understood by the present generation as it was by the past.

In the days of Henry Clay, when he was the leader of a grand old party, a tariff for revenue with incidental protection, or a tariff upon articles so adjusted as to give all the protection possible to American manufactures, was not regarded by the people of the South as an unmitigated evil. The Whig party frequently carried the elections on that platform in a number of Southern States. In that day Kentucky was always true to her great son and to his principles on the tariff.

Our interests, however, being slaveholders and planters, were strongly in favor of free trade or as near an approximation to it as possible. True, we had as large natural resources then as we now have, but they were undeveloped. In our then state of society, and with our devotion to the planting interest, we did not care to develop them. But now this is all changed, and the Southern people will have to take up the tariff question for themselves, investigate it, and do on that question as all other people in every other portion of the Union do, there being no constitutional question involved, favor the line of policy which best promotes their own interest.

Now, we frequently hear it said South that the people of the North have grown rich by manufacturing, in which pursuit they have had the advantage of a high protective tariff.

THE SOUTH'S SUPERIOR NATURAL ADVANTAGES.

But it is time that we were reflecting upon this question, and asking how is it that the people of the North have grown rich by manufacturing and commerce, though they may have had the benefit of protection? Did they have superior advantages or greater resources than the South? By no means. No section of the Union, and probably no portion of the continent or of the civilized world, has advantages superior to those enjoyed by the Southern section of this Union. We have a genial climate, a healthy country, immense fertility of soil; in fact, great varieties of soil and climate, adapted to the culture of almost every crop that is grown in this country. We have the orange belt along the coast; we have the sugar and rice lands in great abundance. Above that we have the cotton belt; then the belt where clover and the different grasses grow and flourish admirably well; then comes our vast mineral belt, where the bowels of the earth are store-houses of inestimable wealth. We have iron, manganese, marble, and coal, and almost every mineral known to the catalogue, including rich gold mines in great abundance. We have water-power without limit, enough to run all the machinery of this continent; and if we prefer steam the coal is at hand to make it. In a word, the natural advantages of the Southern country are surpassed by no other country on the globe. Why, then, should we lag behind in poverty?

THE EXAMPLE OF THE NORTH IN MANUFACTURING SHOULD BE IMITATED.

If the North, with fewer resources and less genial climate, has grown immensely rich by manufacturing, and shipping, and commerce, should we not imitate their example, and with our better climate and greater facilities and resources move forward on the same line, and in the course of half a century accumulate greater wealth than they have piled up under a like system? For half a century, while we were planting cotton, or while we were engaged in war, and while we have been reconstructing society and government, the people North have availed themselves of our tariff legislation, and with great energy and zeal have engaged in manufacturing and commerce. They now have immense capital invested in manufacturing plants. They have skilled labor in abundance. They have had long experience, and they are approximating the condition where they will be able to compete with the English manufacturer almost upon equal terms. Indeed, in some of the branches of manufactures they could now compete if it were not for the great advantage that the British manufacturers have in cheap labor. As matters now stand, however, New England is much further advanced than the Southern States are in manufacturing, and Old England is still further advanced than New England.

THE BAD RESULTS OF TARIFF REPEAL.

If all tariff laws were repealed, some of the industries in New England could still sustain themselves, but the great mass of them would go down in a crash, and it would transfer our workshops and the labor which manufactures our supplies from this side of the ocean to the other side, and the English manufacturers would supply most of the articles we use.

This, as already stated, would throw millions of people on this side out of employment, or compel them to work at starvation prices, and bring about a state of distress the like of which we have probably never known. But the result would be still more disastrous to the Southern States, to the extent that we have manufacturing establishments, than it would to New England. The South could not, with its present lack of capital invested, of improved machinery, and of skilled labor, compete at all with Old England, or to any considerable extent with New England. The result even of a reduction of the tariff, while it might not destroy many factories in New England, would destroy almost all the factories of the South, except probably some cotton-factories making the coarser fabrics. In other words, the great reduction of the tariff would crush almost all Southern factories, and turn that portion of our population now engaged in manufacturing into other pursuits, and leave us, as heretofore, farmers and planters dependent upon New England mainly for the manufacture of such articles as we constantly need.

Now, Mr. President, I do not think it would be a wise course for Southern people to adopt any such line of policy. With the great advantages we have of climate, and the vast advantages of natural resources, and with the progress which we have been making under the present tariff in building up our manufacturing establishments, it seems to me it would be worse than madness to adopt a line of policy that would crush them out and put us back half a century behind even our present state of progress. The result will be, instead of encouraging diversity of labor and making each class of laborers in each of the different classes of production dependent more or less upon the other, thus creating a mutual dependence and mutual support, it would drive our whole population back to the cotton-fields and the farms, and would greatly increase our field productions, while it would greatly reduce the consumers who are now non-consumers of field products, and leave our farmers with no home market and no prospect of one in future. As it now is, many of our communities are being benefited by the home market afforded by our manufacturing establishments, and if we should press forward for half a century with the same energy that we have for the last ten or fifteen years the South would be a great manufacturing section, with diversity of employment and labor that would produce general success and prosperity throughout that whole vast region.

The growth of manufactures in the South in the two years 1886 and 1887 is given by the Baltimore Manufacturers' Record of December 31, 1887, and the following are the figures:

Year.	New establishments.	Capital and capital stock.
1886	1,575	$129,226,000
1887	3,430	256,298,000
Total growth two years	5,005	385,524,000

These manufactures consisted of lumber and wood factories, iron-works, mines and quarries, cotton, flour, and cotton-seed-oil mills, gas and water works, ice and canning factories, furniture and carriage factories, brick and stove works, and hundreds of miscellaneous manufactures.

The two following tables, taken from the Record, illustrate this increase more in detail:

New enterprises.	1887.	1886.
Iron furnace companies	29	28
Machine-shops and foundries	103	68
Agricultural-implement factories	25	11
Flour mills	135	92
Cotton mills	77	9
Furniture factories	55	23
Gas-works	35	24
Water-works	88	42
Carriage and wagon factories	44	16
Electric-light companies	83	34
Mining and quarrying enterprises	562	174
Lumber mills, including saw and planing mills, sash and door factories, stave factories, etc	726	418
Ice factories	96	50
Canning factories	82	13
Stove foundries	4	8
Brick-works	169	53
Miscellaneous iron-works, rolling-mills, pipe-works, etc	71	26
Cotton compresses	36	13
Cotton-seed-oil mills	18	4
Natural-gas companies	53	21
Miscellaneous enterprises not included in foregoing	939	418
Total	3,430	1,575

Summing up the amount of capital and capital stock represented by our list of new enterprises and the enlargement of old plants for 1887, and comparing it with 1886, we have:

States.	1887.	1886.
Alabama	$17,982,000	$19,848,000
Arkansas	24,466,000	15,240,000
Florida	2,786,000	1,650,000
Georgia	15,361,000	3,599,000
Kentucky	40,053,000	28,404,000
Louisiana	8,218,000	2,240,000
Maryland	15,187,000	8,765,000
Mississippi	4,771,000	774,000
North Carolina	9,767,000	3,676,000
South Carolina	3,895,000	1,208,000
Tennessee	35,861,000	21,240,000
Texas	16,430,000	5,694,000
Virginia	23,255,000	8,514,000
West Virginia	8,265,000	8,365,000
Total	256,298,000	129,226,000

As compared with 1886 the list of new enterprises for this year and the aggregate of capital and capital stock show a most astonishing increase. The capital (and capital stock) for 1887 is a little less than double the amount for 1886, while the number of new enterprises is a little more than doubled.

In view of this astonishing result, showing the wonderful progress now being made in manufacturing in the South, it seems almost incredible that the chosen representatives of the South should support legislation which tends seriously to cripple if not to destroy this immense wealth-producing development, as any material interference with the tariff must undoubtedly do.

In the South, by the cotton-fields where the water-power and the coal are both to be found in abundance, and the climate is equable, and everything else is favorable, with no freight to pay, and no commissions, is the place where the cotton raised in the South ought to be manufactured. In the South, where we have immense deposits of iron and coal in juxtaposition with each other, is the place where the iron and steel for that section of country, and in fact for a great portion of the balance of the country, ought to be manufactured.

THE BENEFITS OF MANUFACTURING INCREASE.

If we take from the farms and add 2,000,000 to our present manufacturing population in the South, it would to that extent diminish the farm productions and increase the demand for everything made by the farmer, as it would add 2,000,000 to the number of consumers of commodities, of which they are now producers, and on account of the diminished quantity produced increase the price of every commodity raised on the farm, in the orchard, or the poultry yard, or the dairy. In a word, it would greatly swell our general population and increase the prosperity and happiness of our whole people.

We raise over six millions bags of cotton every year and the great bulk of it is shipped to New England or Old England to be manufactured, and a large part of it is sent back to us and purchased by us in the shape of manufactured articles. Think of the freight and the commissions and insurance and wharfages and drayages and all the expenses attaching to a cargo of cotton from the time it leaves the plantation in Georgia until it reaches the spinners of Manchester, England, and then think of all the like freight and charges on the manufactured article made of the cotton on its return to be sold to us, and then reflect for a moment upon the fact that we have a better climate and superior advantages, as far as natural resources are concerned, than Great Britain has for manufacturing cotton. Why should we send it 1,000 miles to New England or 4,000 miles to Old England to be manufactured and be sent back to us? Why not do it at home? Why not take one-half our population, if necessary and profitable, from the fields and put them into the factories, and take the whole cotton crop made in the South, worth, say, $300,000,000, and manufacture it into thread and into cloths, both coarse and fine, and more than double the value of it, making it worth $800,000,000 in the manufactured state, instead of $300,000,000 in the raw state? In this way we would add annually nearly $500,000,000 to the wealth of the South.

THE SOUTH'S INTEREST IN A LIBERAL TARIFF.

No, Mr. President, no section of this Union is as much interested as the South in sustaining a liberal and just tariff, which, while it raises all the revenue we need, affords all the incidental protection possible to the manufacturing industries of this country. We complain that the Northern people have grown rich by perseverance in manufacturing under our tariff system. As we have greatly superior natural advantages, instead of making war on them, suppose we imitate their example and go forward in the development of our resources and the manufacture of our raw material, the diversity of our labor, of our crops, and of our productions, and let us see if we can not in this way grow rich and powerful, as the people of the North have done, by adopting their line of policy, which created their wealth. Instead of lagging behind and crying out against a policy which has greatly enriched a sister section of the Union, let us go forward as a determined competitor, and with our greatly superior advantages finally bear off the palm of victory in progress, development, and wealth.

THE TYRANNY OF THE WHISKY RING.

But we can never do this, Mr. President, while the South is dominated and dictated to by the whisky ring, and while the 969 capitalists of whom it is composed, strongly intrenched behind legislative enactments, levy tribute upon the whole 60,000,000 of the population of these United States.

Let us rise in our might and break the cords of this giant monopoly which now bind us, and repeal the internal-revenue laws, and thus stop the drain of surplus into the Treasury. This would restore peace, prosperity, and happiness to the whole country.

The war, which was the exigency that justified the enactment of the present odious excise-tax laws, having been terminated twenty-odd years ago, the question is, how much longer do the advocates of the whisky ring ask that the law be kept in operation? Is it their policy to have it repealed soon, or is it their policy to ingraft it on our present revenue system and make it permanent as a means of raising revenue for the support of the Federal Government? If so, those who advocate that principle could scarcely be called Jeffersonian Democrats. Mr. Jefferson, in speaking of the internal-revenue taxes of his day, said:

> These, covering our land with officers and opening our doors to their intrusion, have already begun that process of domiciliary vexation which, once entered, is scarcely to be restrained from reaching successively every article of produce and property.

Whenever it is agreed that the odious internal-revenue laws are a part of our permanent system of taxation, then propositions will come from every quarter to extend the excise laws from whisky and tobacco to this, that, and the other article, as it may suit the interests and convenience of the parties moving in the matter. Already it embraces oleomargarine, and it is now proposed to extend it to cotton-seed oil; and it would not be many years until this process of domiciliary vexation, which the great founder of the Democratic party denounced, would be common all over this broad land of ours, and our doors would be opened and our houses searched by tax-gatherers, spies, and intruders, acting under these infamous laws. If the system is not to be permanent there never will be as good a time to repeal it as the present, when our Treasury is full to overflowing and nobody pretends that there is any possible necessity for the collection of this odious tax to supply the wants of the Government. If the exigency has not now passed, when will it ever pass? No, Mr. President, the policy of the advocates of the whisky ring is not to repeal it at all, but to ingraft it permanently upon our system of raising revenue, and ultimately to transfer, in the interest of British manufacturers, the larger part of our taxes from the custom-house to the office of the internal-tax gatherer. What say the free people, the liberty-loving people of this country? Are they ready for the permanent establishment of this monstrous evil? They will answer at the polls when an opportunity is afforded them.

INTERNAL-REVENUE REPEAL WILL NOT INTERFERE WITH TARIFF REVISION—BOTH NECESSARY.

But, Mr. President, the repeal of the internal-revenue laws will not interfere with the proper and just revision and modification of the tariff. The national Democratic convention in 1884 demanded a proper revision of the tariff, subject to the provisions that—

> The necessary reduction in taxation can and must be effected without depriving American labor of the ability to compete successfully with foreign labor, and without imposing lower rates of duty than will be ample to cover any increased cost of production which may exist in consequence of the higher rate of wages prevailing in this country.

There are inequalities in the present tariff that should be removed by proper legislation, so as to make the tariff act more uniformly and justly than it does at present. The tariff laws should be so modified and changed as to impose a higher rate on luxuries, which are used by the rich, and a lower rate on such articles of necessity as are used chiefly by the poor.

There are some articles, such as whisky, for instance, which are now protected by a tariff so high as to amount to a prohibition. In all such cases a reduction of the tariff will increase the importations and greatly increase the revenue.

It follows, Mr. President, that we can safely spare the money now collected under the internal-revenue laws; and by a judicious revision of the tariff we can raise by customs all the money necessary to an economical administration of the Government. I favor an immediate repeal of the odious excise laws and such judicious revision of the tariff as was demanded in 1884 by the national Democratic party in its platform.

I insist that this is sound Democracy, as it follows in the footsteps and practices the precepts of Thomas Jefferson, the founder, and Andrew Jackson, the defender, of the Democratic party; and it obeys the behest laid down in the platform by the national Democratic party in 1884, upon which it nominated for President the only Democratic candidate who has been successful for the last twenty-five years.

Before concluding these remarks I desire to say, in consideration of all that has been said, and in view of the apparently adverse and conflicting opinions and expressions of Democratic statesmen, and in view of the peculiar theories and policies that are advanced by Democratic Senators respecting the sentiments of sections and the interests of industries, that I trust and believe when we come to put into action and into law a measure in reality to adjust the customs and revenue system of this country that the great party to which all true Democrats belong will unite, and by mutual concessions give to the people that wise and expected reform in keeping with and conformity to the Chicago platform, which will be fair and just to all interests and industries and acceptable to our just and liberal-minded fellow-citizens. Believing that harmony is essential to success, and that Democratic success is essential to the public welfare, I earnestly desire such action as will redeem the solemn pledges of the party and assure its successive and repeated triumphs.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON COMMERCE.

Mr. FRYE, from the Committee on Commerce, reported the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

> Resolved, That the Committee on Commerce be, and they are hereby, authorized to employ a stenographer from time to time as he may be necessary to report such hearings as may be had before said committee, and to have the same printed for the use of the committee; and that such stenographer be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

THE MAIL SERVICE.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland. I desire to give notice that to-morrow, at the conclusion of the morning business, I intend to call up the motion of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. PADDOCK] to reconsider the vote by which the resolution offered by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB] with reference to the mail service was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, with a view of making some remarks thereon.

VALUATION OF IMPORTED MERCHANDISE.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 977) to regulate the importation of foreign merchandise, and to secure uniformity in the classification and valuation thereof, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. ALLISON. For the convenience of the Senate in the consideration of the bill, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment reported by me on the 16th of February be considered as the original bill, and that the original bill reported be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHACE in the chair). If there be no objection, the amendment will be considered as accepted and adopted as the original bill.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask now that the original bill, Senate bill 977, be indefinitely postponed. That, I am informed, is the proper disposition to have made of it in order to accomplish what I desire.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The order will be so made.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, this is a bill relating solely to the administration of the customs laws. It is a bill reported from the Committee on Finance without a single objection, having received the unanimous support of the committee.

I ask, without further explanation, that the bill may now be read. I will say, however, before proceeding with the consideration of the bill, that if Senators desire to follow the sections as they are read by the clerks they will be very much facilitated by sending for the report, No. 295, which accompanies the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the bill.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill, and having read to the end of the second section,

Mr. EVARTS said: I desire to ask the Senator from Iowa in what manner he will find it convenient to have any discussion about the details of the bill. In the section which has now been read there are several points which have been brought to my attention by importers of New York City, a very respectable collection of merchants under an association; and if now is the proper time to propose to the consideration of the Senate suggestions pertinent to that section of the bill, I will now do so.

Mr. ALLISON. I think inasmuch as the bill must be read through under the rules of the Senate, it would perhaps be best to postpone any discussion of details until after that is done; and then if the Senator from New York and other Senators will allow me, from the committee, to present one or two amendments and have them agreed to, the whole bill will be open to discussion or amendment.

Mr. EVARTS. That will be quite agreeable to me if it is so understood.

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly; it will be so understood.

The reading of the bill in the amended form was resumed and concluded; and is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all invoices of imported merchandise shall be made out in the currency of the place or country from whence the importations shall be made, or if purchased, in the currency actually paid therefor, shall contain a correct description of such merchandise, and shall be made in triplicate and signed by the person owning or shipping the same, if the merchandise has been actually purchased, or by the manufacturer or owner thereof, if the same has been procured otherwise than by purchase or by the duly authorized agent of such purchaser, manufacturer, or owner.

SEC. 2. That all such invoices shall, at or before the shipment of the merchandise, be produced to the consul, vice-consul, or commercial agent of the United States of the consular district from which the merchandise is imported to the United States, and shall have indorsed thereon, when so produced, a declaration signed by the purchaser, manufacturer, owner, or agent, setting forth that the invoice is in all respects correct and true, and was made at the place where the merchandise was originally procured for exportation to the United States; that it contains, if the merchandise was obtained by purchase, a true and full statement of the time when, the place where, the person from whom the same was purchased, and the actual cost thereof and of all charges thereon; and that no discounts, bounties, or drawbacks are contained in the invoice but such as have been actually allowed thereon; and when obtained in any other manner than by purchase, the actual market value or wholesale price thereof at the time of exportation to the United States in the principal markets of the country from whence exported; that such actual market value is the price at which the merchandise described in the invoice is freely offered for sale to all purchasers in said markets, and that it is the price which the manufacturer or owner making the declaration would have received, and was willing to receive, for such merchandise sold in the ordinary course of trade, and if subject to specific duty the actual quantity thereof; and that no different invoice of the merchandise mentioned in the invoice so produced has been or will be furnished to any one. If the merchandise was actually purchased, the declaration shall also contain a statement that the currency in which such invoice is made out is that which was actually paid for the merchandise by the purchaser.

SEC. 3. That, except in case of personal effects accompanying the passenger, no importation of any merchandise exceeding $100 in dutiable value shall be admitted to entry without the production of a duly certified invoice thereof as required by law, or of an affidavit made by the owner, importer, or consignee before the collector or his deputy, showing why it is impracticable to produce such invoice; and no entry shall be made in the absence of a certified invoice, upon affidavit as aforesaid, unless such affidavit be accompanied by a statement in the form of an invoice, or otherwise, showing the actual cost of such merchandise, if purchased, or if obtained otherwise than by purchase, the actual market value or wholesale price thereof at the time of exportation to the United States, in the principal markets of the country from which the same has been imported; which statement shall be verified by the oath of the owner, importer, consignee, or agent desiring to make entry of the merchandise, to be administered by the collector or his deputy, and it shall be lawful for the collector or his deputy to examine the deponent under oath touching the sources of his knowledge, information, or belief in the premises, and to require him to produce any letter, paper, or statement of account, in his possession or under his control, which may assist the officers of customs in ascertaining the actual value of the importation or any part thereof; and in default of such production when so requested, such owner, importer, consignee, or agent shall be thereafter debarred from producing any such letter, paper, or statement for the purpose of avoiding any additional duty, penalty, or forfeiture incurred under this act, unless he shall show to the satisfaction of the court or the officers of the customs, as the case may be, that it was not in his power to produce the same when so demanded; and no merchandise shall be admitted to entry under the provisions of this section unless the collector shall be satisfied that the failure to produce a duly certified invoice is due to causes beyond the control of the owner, consignee, or agent thereof.

SEC. 4. That whenever merchandise imported into the United States is entered by invoice, one of the following declarations, according to the nature of the case, shall be filed with the collector of the port, at the time of entry, by the owner, importer, consignee, or agent; which declaration so filed shall be duly signed by the owner, importer, consignee, or agent, before the collector, or before a notary public or other officer duly authorized by law to administer oaths and take acknowledgments, who may be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury to receive such declarations and to certify to the identity of the persons making them: and every officer so designated shall file with the collector of the port a copy of his official signature and seal: Provided, That if any of the invoices or bills of lading of any merchandise imported in any one vessel, which should otherwise be embraced in said entry, have not been received at the date of the entry, the declaration may state the fact, and thereupon such merchandise of which the invoices or bills of lading are not produced, shall not be included in such entry, but may be entered subsequently.

DECLARATION OF CONSIGNEE, IMPORTER, OR AGENT.

I, ——— ———, do solemnly and truly declare that the invoice and bill of lading now presented by me to the collector of ——— are the true and only invoice and bill of lading by me received of all the goods, wares, and merchandise imported in the ———, whereof ——— ——— is master, from ———, for account of any person whomsoever for whom I am authorized to enter the same; that the said invoice and bill of lading are in the state in which they were actually received by me, and that I do not know nor believe in the existence of any other invoice or bill of lading of the said goods, wares, and merchandise; that the entry now delivered to the collector contains a just and true account of the said goods, wares, and merchandise, according to the said invoice and bill of lading; that nothing has been, on my part, nor to my knowledge on the part of any other person, concealed or suppressed, whereby the United States may be defrauded of any part of the duty lawfully due on the said goods, wares, and merchandise; that the said invoice and the declaration therein are in all respects true, and were made by the person by whom the same purports to have been made; and that if at any time hereafter I discover any error in the said invoice, or in the account now rendered of the said goods, wares, and merchandise, or receive any other invoice of the same, I will immediately make the same known to the collector of this district. And I do further solemnly and truly declare that to the best of my knowledge and belief [insert the name and residence of the owner or owners] is [or are] the owner [or owners] of the goods, wares, and merchandise mentioned in the annexed entry; that the invoice now produced by me exhibits the actual cost [if purchased] or the actual market value or wholesale price [if otherwise obtained] at the time of exportation to the United States in the principal markets of the country from whence imported, of the said goods, wares, and merchandise, including the value of all cartons, cases, crates, boxes, sacks, and coverings of any kind, and all other costs, charges, and expenses incident to placing said goods, wares, and merchandise in condition, packed ready for shipment to the United States, and no other or different discount, bounty, or drawback but such as has been actually allowed on the same.

DECLARATION OF OWNER IN CASES WHERE MERCHANDISE HAS BEEN ACTUALLY PURCHASED.

I, ——— ———, do solemnly and truly declare that the entry now delivered by me to the collector of ——— contains a just and true account of all the goods, wares, and merchandise imported by or consigned to me, in the ———, whereof ——— ——— is master, from ———; that the invoice and entry which I now produce contain a just and faithful account of the actual cost of the said goods, wares, and merchandise, including the value of all cartons, cases, crates, boxes, sacks, and coverings of any kind, and all other costs, charges, and expenses incident to placing said goods, wares, and merchandise in condition, packed ready for shipment to the United States, and no other discount, drawback, or bounty but such as has been actually allowed on the same; that I do not know nor believe in the existence of any invoice or bill of lading other than those now produced by me, and that they are in the state in which I actually received them. And I further solemnly and truly declare that I have not in the said entry or invoice concealed or suppressed anything whereby the United States may be defrauded of any part of the duty lawfully due on the said goods, wares, and merchandise; that the said invoice and the declaration thereon are in all respects true, and were made by the person by whom the same purports to have been made; and that if at any time hereafter I discover any error in the said invoice or in the account now produced of the said goods, wares, and merchandise, or receive any other invoice of the same, I will immediately make the same known to the collector of this district.

DECLARATION OF MANUFACTURER OR OWNER IN CASES WHERE MERCHANDISE HAS NOT BEEN ACTUALLY PURCHASED.

I, ——— ———, do solemnly and truly declare that the entry now delivered by me to the collector of ——— contains a just and true account of all the goods, wares, and merchandise imported by or consigned to me in the ———, whereof ——— ——— is master, from ———; that the said goods, wares, and merchandise were not actually bought by me, or by my agent, in the ordinary mode of bargain and sale, but that nevertheless the invoice which I now produce contains a just and faithful valuation of the same, at their actual market value or wholesale price, at the time of exportation to the United States in the principal markets of the country from whence imported for my account [or for account of myself or partners]; that the said invoice contains also a just and faithful account of all the cost of finishing said goods, wares, and merchandise to their present condition, including the value of all cartons, cases, crates, boxes, sacks, and coverings of any kind, and all other costs and charges incident to placing said goods, wares, and merchandise in condition, packed ready for shipment to the United States, and no other discount, drawback, or bounty but such as has been actually allowed on the said goods, wares, and merchandise; that the said invoice and the declaration thereon are in all respects true, and were made by the person by whom the same purports to have been made; that I do not know nor believe in the existence of any invoice or bill of lading other than those now produced by me, and that they are in the state in which I actually received them. And I do further solemnly and truly declare that I have not in the said entry or invoice concealed or suppressed anything whereby the United States may be defrauded of any part of the duty lawfully due on the said goods, wares, and merchandise; and that if at any time hereafter I discover any error in the said invoice, or in the account now produced of the said goods, wares, and merchandise, or receive any other invoice of the same, I will immediately make the same known to the collector of this district.

SEC. 5. That any person who shall knowingly make any false or untrue statement in the declarations provided for in the preceding section, or shall aid or procure the making of any such false statement as to any matter material thereto, shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000, or by imprisonment at hard labor not more than two years, or both, in the discretion of the court: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be construed to relieve imported merchandise from forfeiture for any cause elsewhere provided by law.

SEC. 6. That the owner, consignee, or agent of any imported merchandise which has been actually purchased may, at the time when he shall make and verify his written entry of such merchandise, but not afterwards, make such addition in the entry to the cost or value given in the invoice, or pro forma invoice, or statement in form of an invoice, which he shall produce with his entry, as in his opinion may raise the same to the actual market value or wholesale price of such merchandise at the time of exportation to the United States, in the principal markets of the country from which the same has been imported; but no such addition shall be made upon entry to the invoice value of any imported merchandise obtained otherwise than by actual purchase; and the collector within whose district any merchandise may be imported or entered, whether the same has been actually purchased or procured otherwise than by purchase, shall cause the actual market value or wholesale price of such merchandise to be appraised; and if the appraised value of any article of imported merchandise shall exceed by more than 5 per cent., and not more than 20 per cent., the value declared in the entry, there shall be levied, collected, and paid, in addition to the duties imposed by law on such merchandise, a further sum equal to 2 per cent. of the total appraised value for each 1 per cent. of the increased valuation as ascertained by the appraiser in excess of 5 per cent. above the entered value; and the additional duties shall only apply to the particular article or articles in each invoice which are undervalued; and if such appraised value shall exceed the value declared in the entry more than 20 per cent., such entry shall be held to be presumptively fraudulent, and the collector of customs shall seize such merchandise and proceed as in cases of forfeiture for violations of the customs laws; and in any legal proceedings which may result from such seizure the fact of such undervaluation shall be presumptive evidence of fraud, and the burden of proof shall be on the claimant to rebut the same, and forfeiture shall be adjudged unless he shall rebut said presumption of fraudulent intent by sufficient evidence: Provided, That the forfeitures provided for in this section shall apply to the whole of the merchandise or the value thereof in the case or package containing the particular article or articles in each invoice which are undervalued: And provided further, That all additional duties, penalties, or forfeitures applicable to merchandise entered by a duly certified invoice shall be alike applicable to goods entered by a pro forma invoice or statement in form of an invoice. The duty shall not, however, be assessed upon an amount less than the invoice or entered value.

SEC. 7. That when merchandise entered for customs duty has been consigned for sale by or on account of the manufacturer thereof, to a person, agent, partner, or consignee in the United States, such person, agent, partner, or consignee shall, at the time of the entry of such merchandise, present to the collector of customs at the port where such entry is made, as a part of such entry, and in addition to the certified invoice or statement in the form of an invoice required by law, a statement signed by such manufacturer, declaring the cost of production of such merchandise, such cost to include all the elements of cost as stated in section 10 of this act. When merchandise entered for customs duty has been consigned for sale by or on account of a person other than the manufacturer of such merchandise, to a person, agent, partner, or consignee in the United States, such person, agent, partner, or consignee shall at the time of the entry of such merchandise present to the collector of customs at the port where such entry is made, as a part of such entry, a statement signed by the consignor thereof, declaring that the merchandise was actually purchased by him or for his account, and showing the time when, the place where, and from whom he purchased the merchandise, and in detail the price he paid for the same: Provided, That the statements required by this section shall be made in triplicate, and shall bear the attestation of the consular officer of the United States resident within the consular district wherein the merchandise was manufactured, if consigned by the manufacturer or for his account, or from whence it was imported, when consigned by a person other than the manufacturer, one copy thereof to be delivered to the person making the statement, one copy to be transmitted with the triplicate invoice of the merchandise to the collector of the port in the United States to which the merchandise is consigned, and the remaining copy to be filed in the consulate.

SEC. 8. That if any owner, importer, consignee, agent, or other person shall make or attempt to make any entry of imported merchandise by means of any fraudulent or false invoice, affidavit, letter, paper, or by means of any false statement, written or verbal, or by means of any false or fraudulent practice or appliance whatsoever, or shall be guilty of any willful act or omission by means whereof the United States shall be deprived of the lawful duties, or any portion thereof, accruing upon the merchandise, or any portion thereof, embraced or referred to in such invoice, affidavit, letter, paper, or statement, or affected by such act or omission, such merchandise, or the value thereof, to be recovered from the person making the entry, shall be forfeited, which forfeiture shall only apply to the whole of the merchandise or the value thereof in the case or package containing the particular article or articles of merchandise to which such fraud or false paper or statement relates; and such person shall, upon conviction, be fined for each offense a sum not exceeding $5,000, or be imprisoned for a time not exceeding two years, or both, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 9. That it shall be the duty of the appraisers of the United States, and every of them, and every person who shall act as such appraiser, or of the collector and naval officer, as the case may be, by all reasonable ways and means in his or their power, to ascertain, estimate, and appraise (any invoice or affidavit thereto or statement of cost, or of cost of production to the contrary notwithstanding) the actual market value and wholesale price of the merchandise at the time of exportation to the United States, in the principal markets of the country whence the same has been imported, and the number of yards, parcels, or quantities, and actual market value or wholesale price of every of them, as the case may require.

SEC. 10. That when the actual market value, as herein defined, of any article of imported merchandise wholly or partially manufactured and subject to ad valorem duty, or to duty based in whole or in part on value, can not be ascertained to the satisfaction of the appraising officer, and to assist in the ascertainment of such value, the appraiser or appraisers shall use all available means to ascertain the cost of production of such merchandise at the time of exportation to the United States, and at the place of manufacture; such cost of production to include cost of materials and of fabrication, all general expenses covering each and every outlay of whatsoever nature incident to such production, together with the expense of preparing and putting up such merchandise ready for shipment, and a profit of not less than 5 per cent. upon the total cost as thus ascertained; and in no such case shall the said actual market value of such merchandise be appraised upon original appraisal or reappraisement at less than the total cost of production as thus ascertained.

SEC. 11. That there shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, nine general appraisers of merchandise, each of whom shall receive a salary of $5,000 a year. Not more than five of such general appraisers shall be appointed from the same political party. They shall not be engaged in any other business, vocation, or employment, and may be removed from office at any time by the President for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office. They shall be employed at such ports and within such territorial limits as the Secretary of the Treasury may from time to time prescribe, and are hereby authorized to exercise the powers and duties devolved upon them by this act, and to exercise, under the general direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, such other supervision over appraisements, classifications, and rates of duty of imported merchandise as may be needful to secure lawful and uniform appraisements, classifications, and rates of duty at the several ports. Three of the general appraisers shall be on duty as a board of general appraisers daily during each day of the year (except Sunday and legal holidays) at least from 10 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, at the port of New York, at which port a place for samples shall be provided, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may from time to time prescribe, which shall include rules as to the classes of articles to be deposited, the time of their retention, and as to their disposition, which place of samples shall be under the immediate control and direction of the general appraisers.

SEC. 12. That the appraiser shall revise and correct the reports of the assistant appraisers as he may judge proper, and the appraiser, or, at ports where there is no appraiser, the person acting as such, shall report to the collector his decision as to the value of the merchandise appraised. If the collector shall deem the appraisement of the merchandise by such appraiser too low he may order a reappraisement, which shall be made by one of the general appraisers; or, if the importer, owner, agent, or consignee of such merchandise shall be dissatisfied with the appraisement thereof, and shall have complied with the requirements of law with respect to the entry and appraisement of merchandise, he may forthwith give notice to the collector in writing of such dissatisfaction, on the receipt of which the collector shall at once direct a reappraisement of such merchandise by one of the general appraisers. The decision of the appraiser, or the person acting as such (in cases where no objection is made thereto, as above authorized, either by the collector or by the importer, owner, consignee, or agent), or of the general appraiser in cases of reappraisement, shall be final and conclusive as to the dutiable value of such merchandise against all parties interested therein, unless the importer, owner, consignee, or agent of the merchandise shall be dissatisfied with such decision, and shall forthwith give notice to the collector in writing of such dissatisfaction, or unless the collector shall deem the appraisement of the merchandise too low; in either case the collector shall transmit the invoice and all the papers appertaining thereto to the board of general appraisers which shall be on duty at the port of New York, or of three general appraisers who may be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury for such duty at that port or at any other port, which board shall examine and decide the case thus submitted, and their decision, or that of a majority of them, shall be final and conclusive as to the dutiable value of such merchandise against all parties interested therein, and the collector shall ascertain, fix, and liquidate the rate and amount of duties to be paid on such merchandise, and the dutiable costs and charges thereon, according to law.

SEC. 13. The decision of the collector as to the classification of imported merchandise, and as to the rate and amount of duties chargeable thereon, including all dutiable costs and charges, and as to all fees, charges, and exactions of whatever character (excepting duties on the tonnage of vessels), shall be final and conclusive against all persons interested therein, unless the owner, importer, consignee, or agent of such merchandise, or the person paying such fees, charges, and exactions other than duties, shall, not before, but within ten days after such ascertainment and liquidation of duties, as well in cases of merchandise entered in bond as for consumption, or within ten days after the payment of such fees, charges, and exactions, if dissatisfied with such decision give notice in writing to the collector, setting forth therein distinctly and specifically, and in respect to each entry or payment, the reasons for his objections thereto, and if the merchandise is entered for consumption shall pay the full amount of the duties and charges ascertained to be due thereon. Upon such notice and payment the collector shall transmit the entry and all the papers and exhibits connected therewith to the board of general appraisers which shall be on duty at the port of New York, or of three general appraisers who may be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury for such duty at that port or at any other port, which board shall examine and decide the case thus submitted, and their decision, or that of a majority of them, shall be final and conclusive upon all persons interested therein (except in cases where an application shall be filed in the circuit court within the time and in the manner provided for in section 14 of this act), and the entry thereof shall be reliquidated accordingly, including all dutiable costs and charges thereon, and all fees, charges, or exactions shall be paid in accordance with their decision.

SEC. 14. If the owner, importer, consignee, or agent of any imported merchandise, or the collector, or the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be dissatisfied with the decision of the board of general appraisers, as provided for in section 13 of this act, as to the construction of the law respecting the classification of such merchandise and the rate of duty imposed thereon under such classification, they, or either of them, may within thirty days next after such decision, and not afterwards, apply to the circuit court of the United States, within the district in which the matter arises, for a review of the questions of law involved in such decision. Such application shall be made by filing in the office of the clerk of said circuit court a concise statement of the errors of law complained of, and a copy of such statement shall be served on the collector, or on the importer, owner, consignee, or agent, as the case may be. Thereupon the court shall order the board of appraisers to transmit to said circuit court a certified statement of their findings of the facts involved in the case and their decision thereon; and the facts so found and certified shall be final and conclusive upon the court; which statement and certificate of the board of appraisers shall constitute the record in the circuit court, and said circuit court shall proceed to hear and determine the question of law involved in such decision, and the decision of such court shall be final unless such court shall be of opinion that the question involved is of such importance as to require a review of such decision by the Supreme Court of the United States, in which case said circuit court or the judge making the decision may, within thirty days thereafter, allow an appeal to said Supreme Court; but an appeal shall be allowed on the part of the United States whenever the Attorney-General shall apply for it within thirty days after the rendition of such decision. On such original application and on any such appeal security for damages and costs shall be given as in the case of other appeals in cases in which the United States is a party. Said Supreme Court shall have jurisdiction and power to review such decision, and may affirm, modify, or reverse such decision of such circuit court, and remand the case with such orders as may seem to it proper in the premises, which shall be executed accordingly. For the purposes of this section the circuit courts of the United States shall be deemed always open, and said circuit courts respectively may establish, and from time to time alter, rules and regulations not inconsistent herewith for the procedure in such cases as they shall deem proper.

SEC. 15. That all decisions of the general appraisers and of the boards of general appraisers, respecting values and rates of duty, shall be preserved and filed, and shall be open to inspection under proper regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. All decisions of the general appraisers shall be reported forthwith to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the board of general appraisers in New York, and the report to the board shall be accompanied, whenever practicable, by samples of the merchandise in question, and it shall be the duty of the said board, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, to cause an abstract to be made and published of such decisions of the appraisers as they may deem important, and the decisions of each of the general appraisers and boards of general appraisers, which abstract shall contain a general description of the merchandise in question and of the value and rate of duty fixed in each case, with reference, whenever practicable, by number or other designation, to samples deposited in the place of samples at New York, and such abstract shall be issued from time to time, at least once in each week, for the information of customs officers and the public.

SEC. 16. That whenever imported merchandise is subject to an ad valorem rate of duty, or to a duty based upon or regulated in any manner by the value thereof, the duty shall be assessed upon the actual market value or wholesale price of such merchandise, at the time of exportation to the United States, in the principal markets of the country from whence imported, and in the condition in which such merchandise is there bought and sold for exportation to the United States, or consigned to the United States for sale, including the value of all cartons, cases, crates, boxes, sacks, and coverings of any kind, and all other costs, charges, and expenses incident to placing the merchandise in condition packed ready for shipment to the United States; and if there be used for covering or holding imported merchandise, whether dutiable or free, any unusual material, article, or form, designed for use otherwise than in the bona fide transportation of such merchandise to the United States, additional duty shall be levied and collected upon such material or article at the rate to which the same would have been subject if separately imported. That the words "value" or "actual market value" wherever used in this act or in any law relating to the appraisement of imported merchandise shall be construed to mean the actual market value or wholesale price as defined in this section.

SEC. 17. That in all suits or informations brought, where any seizure has been made pursuant to any act providing for or regulating the collection of duties on imports or tonnage, if the property is claimed by any person, the burden of proof shall lie upon such claimant: Provided, That probable cause is shown for such prosecution, to be judged of by the court.

SEC. 18. That all fees exacted and oaths administered by officers of the customs, except as provided in this act, under or by virtue of existing laws of the United States, upon the entry of imported goods and the passing thereof through the customs, and also upon all entries of domestic goods, wares, and merchandise for exportation, be, and the same are hereby, abolished; and in case of entry of merchandise for exportation, a declaration, in lieu of an oath, shall be filed, in such form and under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; and the penalties provided in the fifth section of this act for false statements in such declaration shall be applicable to declarations made under this section: Provided, That where such fees, under existing laws, constitute, in whole or in part, the compensation of any officer, such officer shall receive, from and after the passage of this act, a fixed sum for each year equal to the amount which he would have been entitled to receive as fees for such services during said year.

SEC. 19. That no allowance for damage to goods, wares, and merchandise imported into the United States shall hereafter be made in the estimation and liquidation of duties thereon; but the importer thereof may, within ten days after entry, abandon to the Government all or any portion of goods, wares, and merchandise included in any invoice, and be relieved from the payment of the duties on the portion so abandoned: Provided, That the portion so abandoned shall amount to 10 per cent. or over of the total value or quantity of the invoice.

SEC. 20. That whenever it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury that, in any case of unascertained or estimated duties, more money has been paid to or deposited with a collector of customs than as has been ascertained by final liquidation thereof the law required to be paid or deposited, the Secretary of the Treasury shall direct the Treasurer to refund and pay the same out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. The necessary moneys therefor are hereby appropriated, and this appropriation shall be deemed a permanent indefinite appropriation; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to correct manifest clerical errors in any entry or liquidation, whether for or against the Government, at any time within one year of the date of such entry, but not afterwards.

SEC. 21. That from and after the taking effect of this act no collector or other officer of the customs shall be in any way liable to any owner, importer, consignee, or agent of any merchandise, or any other person for or on account of any rulings or decisions as to the classification of said merchandise or the duties charged thereon, or the collection of any dues, charges, or duties on or on account of said merchandise, or any other matter or thing as to which said owner, importer, consignee, or agent of such merchandise might, under this act, be entitled to appeal from the decision of said collector or other officer, or from any board of appraisers provided for in this act.

SEC. 22. That any person who shall give, or offer to give, or promise to give any money or thing of value, directly or indirectly, to any customs officer in consideration of or for any act or omission contrary to law in connection with or pertaining to the importation, appraisement, entry, examination, or inspection of goods, wares, or merchandise, including herein any baggage, or of the liquidation of the entry thereof, shall, on conviction thereof, be fined not exceeding $2,000, or be imprisoned at hard labor not more than one year, or both, in the discretion of the court; and evidence of such giving, or offering or promising to give, satisfactory to the court in which such trial is had, shall be regarded as prima facie evidence that such giving, or offering, or promising was contrary to law, and shall put upon the accused the burden of proving that such act was innocent and not done with an unlawful intention.

SEC. 23. That any officer or servant of the customs or of the United States who shall, excepting for lawful duties or fees, demand, exact, or receive from any person, directly or indirectly, any money or thing of value, in connection with or pertaining to the importation, appraisement, entry, examination, or inspection of goods, wares, or merchandise, including herein any baggage, or liquidation of the entry thereof, on conviction thereof, shall be fined not exceeding $5,000, or be imprisoned at hard labor not more than two years, or both, in the discretion of the court. And evidence of such demanding, exacting, or receiving, satisfactory to the court in which such trial is had, shall be regarded as prima facie evidence that such demanding, exacting, or receiving was contrary to law, and shall put upon the accused the burden of proving that such act was innocent and not with an unlawful intention.

SEC. 24. That sections 2808, 2838, 2839, 2841, 2843, 2844, 2845, 2853, 2854, 2856, 2858, 2860, 2900, 2902, 2905, 2907, 2908, 2909, 2929, 2930, 2931, 2932, 2943, 2945, 2952, 3011, 3012, 3012½, 3013, 3090 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and sections 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, and 16 of an act entitled "An act to amend the customs-revenue laws and to repeal moieties," approved June 22, 1874, all of the act entitled "An act restricting the refunding of customs duties and prescribing certain regulations of the Treasury Department," approved March 3, 1875, and sections 7, 8, and 9 of the act entitled "An act to reduce internal-revenue taxation, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1883, and all other acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed, but such repeal shall not affect pending actions or causes of action which have already accrued.

Mr. ALLISON. On page 2, in section 2, line 4, I move to strike out "imported" and insert "exported;" so as to read:

SEC. 2. That all such invoices shall, at or before the shipment of the merchandise, be produced to the consul, vice-consul, or commercial agent of the United States of the consular district from which the merchandise is exported to the United States, and shall have indorsed thereon, when so produced, a declaration signed by the purchaser, manufacturer, owner, or agent, setting forth that the invoice is in all respects correct and true.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. On page 21, after line 45, of section 14, I move to insert as a new section:

SEC. —. That the general appraisers, or any of them, are hereby authorized to administer oaths, and said general appraisers, and boards of general appraisers, and collectors, as the case may be, may call before them, and examine upon oath, any owner, importer, agent, consignee, or other person, touching any matter or thing which they, or either of them, may deem material respecting any entry of imported merchandise, in ascertaining the value or classification thereof; and they, or either of them, may require the production of any letters, accounts, or invoices relating to said merchandise, and may require such testimony to be reduced to writing, and when so taken it shall be filed in the office of the collector, and preserved for use or reference until the final decision of the collector or said board of appraisers shall be made respecting the valuation or classification of said merchandise, as the case may be.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would suggest to the Senator from Iowa that if he will look in line 6 of section 18 he will find that the word "exportation" is misspelled.

Mr. ALLISON. The word "evportation" should be "exportation." Strike out the "v" and insert an "x."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection that change will be made.

Mr. ALLISON. I have no further amendments to propose.

Mr. EVARTS. Mr. President, I ask an explanation from the committee pertinent to some clauses in the second section of this bill. The changes that have been introduced in this section are in the memorandum before me denoted in italics. On the print before us, in reading this bill we are not aided in determining what is a change and what is not a change from the existing regulations of law. I will read this section and point out the parts which are new, that the Senate and the committee may understand with me what the subject of observation now is:

That all such invoices shall, at or before the shipment of the merchandise, be produced to the consul, vice-consul, or commercial agent of the United States—of the consular district from which the merchandise is imported to the United States—

Now I read new matter:

That is new.

Mr. ALLISON. Yes, that is new.

Mr. EVARTS. It proceeds—and shall have indorsed thereon, when so produced, a declaration signed by the purchaser, manufacturer, owner, or agent, setting forth that the invoice is in all respects—

Now I read—correct and true, and was made at the place where the merchandise was originally procured for exportation to the United States;—

That is new—

that it contains, if the merchandise was obtained by purchase, a true and full statement of the time when, the place where, the person from whom—

I read in italics—

the person from whom—

These words are introduced now for the first time into our importation law.

And the actual cost thereof—

That is in the old law—

and of all charges thereon; and that no discounts, bounties, or drawbacks are contained in the invoice but such as have been actually allowed thereon; and when obtained in any other manner than by purchase, the actual market value or wholesale price thereof—

The words "or wholesale price" are introduced—at the time—

Now, I read new matter—

of exportation to the United States in the principal markets of the country from whence exported; that such actual market value is the price at which the merchandise described in the invoice is freely offered for sale to all purchasers in said markets, and that it is the price which the manufacturer or owner making the declaration would have received, and was willing to receive, for such merchandise sold in the ordinary course of trade.

All that is new.

Mr. ALLISON. What is the particular point there?

Mr. EVARTS. This is a criticism of the original bill.

Mr. ALDRICH. That language has been inserted.

Mr. EVARTS. I look at the text. Now, the phrase "of the consular district" is in the bill. What importance is there for this in the regulation of commerce in this respect? for we shall all agree that changes without some importance or some motive for them should not be encouraged in the law-making power which we are now exercising. Before, it was required that at or before the shipment the invoice should be produced to a consul or vice-consul or commercial agent of the United States. Now, it is required by this section to be in the consular district from which the merchandise is exported to the United States. As we all know, consular posts are selected in reference to points of interest in commerce and proximity to exportation, or centers of commerce; these are the proper places for consular agencies and facilities. Why was not the old law sufficient on that score? Why is it necessary if the article to be exported is produced in a consular district where the consul's post and the commercial interest is much nearer to the district of production, although it falls outside of the consular district, rather than that the merchants should be driven to a more remote and less important post for consular verification?

Mr. ALLISON. The object of this particular provision is to regulate the consular certification of value to the appraising officer. As the law now stands it allows the consular certificate to be made at the place of shipment. It may be that the consular officer at that particular point will have no knowledge whatever of the goods intended to be shipped, whilst the presumption is that the officer in the consular district where the merchandise has been procured will be able to ascertain definitely the market value and thus make a proper certification. That is the only object of the change.

I will say to the Senator, by way of illustration, that as the law now stands merchandise purchased, if you please, in Manchester may be certified by the consul at Liverpool. In the nature of things the consul at Liverpool would not have that knowledge of merchandise procured in Manchester which a consul stationed at Manchester would have, and as a matter of practice it turns out that many persons are particular to have their invoices certified at places where the goods are shipped and not where they are procured.

I have stated the object of the change. It may be wise or otherwise; the committee think it is a wise change.

Mr. EVARTS. I supposed that it rested nothing upon what might be thought a proper protection of the sincerity of the invoice.

Mr. ALDRICH. That is just what it does.

Mr. EVARTS. That is what the Senator from Iowa has just said, and the Senator from Rhode Island concurs; but take the illustration the Senator from Iowa gives, although it is an instance in which it might be supposed that this sincerity could be better tested by getting a certificate from Manchester instead of from Liverpool. That is not the situation that I desire to have protected in the conveniences in districts of less importance; and while presumptively the central point of business in the products may be the proper place—although it may be across a stream by division between districts—it is not true that the point to be gained in such districts may be more readily gained by going into the distant points of commerce and deserting the points that commerce has pointed out as the site and the place where the knowledge of these values is.

It is for that reason that it will be, as I am told, a very serious interference with the natural convenience and the natural knowledge and the natural verification of these values, at points where there converges such a knowledge, for the purpose of transshipment, as gives to our important consul there the means of knowing what is the true value, and the production being at a manufactory in this or that corner of the district, that is not a better resort.

Now, to come to the instance that has been given, certainly the Senator from Iowa will not seriously contend that the value of articles produced in Manchester and sent to Liverpool in the course of commerce between Great Britain and the United States is not as well known for the purposes of commerce in Liverpool as in Manchester. Does any one pretend that in regard to products in Lowell, prepared for exportation in Boston, their value is not as well known commercially in Boston as it is known in Lowell? That is a similar situation to the citation which the Senator from Iowa has produced of Manchester and Liverpool; and so in any other case.

Take New York, where at various points in our State there are important articles of exportation produced, manufactures, contrivances, and all come down into the city of New York for exportation from all parts of that State. If we had consuls representing a foreign country that had adopted this same method of verification, would not the consul in New York be the most convenient, the most important, the most competent, the most responsible, the best informed adviser as to the value stated in the invoice, whether it came from Cohoes or from a Western manufacturing establishment? If consuls were distributed through the interior of our great State, would it not be an inconvenience that an exporter should have prepared an invoice that is to be presented before a consul in Buffalo when the product was to be shipped from New York City?

It is through this attempt to realize more accurately, if you please, and with a proper motive, the defenses of the revenue and the sincerity of importations, that the channels and methods of distribution for shipment and for verification are neglected. The former law as it reads allows such a resort to our consuls as may be most convenient for the exporter, not governed by any evasion or any contrivance, but in the rapid course of all commercial transactions, taking the consul found in this or that place, nearest at hand.

I must think, therefore, Mr. President, that this proposed improvement is not a real improvement, and will interfere with the convenience of trade. It will not be avowed, it certainly should not be for a moment harbored as a surmise, that the frame of these regulations as a body presented is hostile to importation or hostile to foreign commerce. Whether this or that measure is hostile to foreign commerce, is hostile to facility and justice in our intercourse commercially with other nations, the place to ask that question is to ask it of commercial men and of foreign merchants who are engaged in that business; I mean those who have the conduct of it abroad. We wish to facilitate and observe the just obligation of commercial facilities between countries. We fix our own tariff; we look out for that; but otherwise than that we are bound to put no impediment in the way of obstructing commercial intercourse that does not touch some important and essential protection of the revenue.

I think, therefore, that there is a minimum of advantage in this change, even as it is pretended, and that it is open to fear, at least, and certainly it is the opinion of the commercial people engaged in importations in New York that serious inconvenience will be caused by this innovation.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, one word in response to the Senator from New York. I may have been unfortunate in my illustration; but the Senator will see that as the law now stands one shipper or manufacturer or merchant can ship at Liverpool, another at London, and another at perhaps some other port of Great Britain, all of the merchandise being purchased or secured in Manchester, where it has a well-known market value. If the purchaser finds that he can more easily attract the attention of a consul at Liverpool or London, that will be the point from whence his goods will be shipped. But that is not the only object. I perhaps did not go quite so far in my illustration as I should have gone.

It is perfectly well known that the great body of the merchandise shipped from Germany is shipped from the port of Antwerp. Under the existing law it is held that the certification of a consul at Antwerp will answer for goods that have been manufactured and purchased, if you please, at Crefeld, or at any point on the Rhine, where so many valuable goods are now manufactured.

So we concluded, after a full examination of this subject, and also taking the counsel and advice of the appraisers of merchandise at the port of New York, that the only true measure of the value of certification of a consular officer is to have that certification made by the officer who is located at the point where the goods are purchased.

It may be that now and then somebody will be inconvenienced by this arrangement; it may be that now and then somebody will be obliged to cross a stream or ride a few miles to secure a consular certification; but the great benefit of this provision over the existing law is that we locate these certifications at points where the value of the goods must be known.

Mr. HISCOCK. I desire to ask the Senator from Iowa a question. As I understand the purpose of this bill, it is to prevent undervaluation, frauds upon the Treasury in the undervaluing of imported goods. As I understand him to argue, the exporter from the foreign market has advantage in perpetrating frauds if he has the chance to select a consul or consular agent wherever he pleases before whom the invoice shall be verified. That is the argument, as I understand.

Mr. ALLISON. That is one argument.

Mr. HISCOCK. And that is practically the great argument in favor of the provision. It is not for the purpose of embarrassing the exporter, but, as I understand from the framework of the bill, importation to this country now is largely carried on by the exporter abroad, in Europe, being the owner of the goods and practically exporting to this country to himself here, so that there is really no change in the title of the goods until they reach the American port. Therefore all of his interest is in his invoices to fix as low a price as possible upon the goods which are brought to America; and for the purpose of keeping that entirely out of his power it is deemed advisable that the Government should indicate the officer who issues the certificate and before whom the value is proved, thus designating him, so that it must be followed, rather than to leave the power of designation to the exporter abroad to select his own agent, who may be friendly or unfriendly to him.

Mr. EVARTS. But my colleague will see while he is correct in his statement of the purposes of the bill, in which I concur entirely, that he overlooks what is really the point; and that is, whether it does tend to secure any such result by this circumstantial change as will justify an interference with the course of trade, which, without need of resorting to any contrivance, finds in the arrangement we have provided abroad the consular agents who are to supervise the exportation. We accomplish that by going to the district where this product is produced; for when you come to the point of influence, the local consul may be an unimportant consul, and he would be more likely to be under the influence of the immediate manufacturing surrounding interest than a consul at the great point that has to deal with shipments of products from other districts, all of which he has to supervise and certify to, being entirely free from such local influences.

Now, it is not for me, nor is it for the Senator from Iowa, nor is it for the Senate to feel that they can appreciate the inconveniences to commerce. It is those who deal with commerce that present this as an inconvenience. They do not present it because it is a guaranty or a preventive against fraud—by no means. These are the representations of honest importers who desire to carry on foreign commerce; they say that this circumstantial item interferes with the regular character of commerce, and it is very difficult for me to see that the change from one supervising consul to another, if fraudulent or overdealing influence is to divert the consul from his duty, is going to be any great security. The consul in the single manufacturing town in the interior of Switzerland or Germany is quite as likely to be under the influence of neighbors and friends there as the consul at an important point, through whose post invoices from various parts of the country flow.

On this point I move to strike out, after the words "United States," in the third line of section 2, on page 2, the words "of the consular district from which the merchandise is exported to the United States."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from New York will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. In section 2, line 3, after the words "United States," it is proposed to strike out all down to and including the words "United States," in line 5, as follows: "of the consular district from which the merchandise is exported to the United States."

Mr. CALL. Before the vote is taken on this amendment I should like to hear some reason why a consul at the place of manufacture is more reliable and more honest than a consul at the place of shipment. It seems to me that there is no kind of reason for that difference, and yet that is the proposition on which this clause is based, that the consul at probably a small, insignificant place where there happen to be manufactures is better informed than a consul at a larger place, the place of shipment.

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, no Senator is more familiar than the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS] with the fact that the United States has established consular officers at all the commercial and manufacturing cities of the world, and that the principal function of those consular officers is the ascertainment of the market value of merchandise exported from their ports and the verification of invoices.

The law provides that duties shall be assessed upon imported merchandise based upon the market value or wholesale price in the principal markets of the country of exportation. In the case cited by my colleague upon the committee, the Senator from Iowa, where goods were procured originally in Germany, at Barmen for instance, and shipped at Antwerp, the market value is assessed in Barmen, not in Antwerp, in a different country.

The object of this provision is that this verification shall be made by the consul at Barmen, whose duty it is under the law to familiarize himself with the market value of the products of his own district, and who has the best knowledge which any consul can have of the market value of the products of his own district, that market value being the basis upon which dutiable value is assessed on this side of the ocean. It is plain that the consul at Antwerp, or the consul at Liverpool, outside of the district, outside of the country, can not have as good knowledge of the facts in the case and of the market value upon which duty must be based, as the consul in Barmen, whence the goods are shipped, and whose duty it is, as I have said before, to familiarize himself with the value of the products of the country in which his post of service is.

The Senator from New York says that the gentlemen whose brief he holds in his hands object to this. Of course they object to it, and they object, as it will be disclosed as we proceed, to every provision of this bill. Why? Because they are the men who are benefited by the present state of affairs. They are the men who are shipping goods from points like Antwerp and Liverpool and Paris when they should have been shipped from Barmen and Crefeld and the points upon the Rhine, or in Austria or in Switzerland and in various parts of Europe. I expect that these gentlemen will object to every provision of this bill. The work of the committee would have been in vain if objections had not been raised from this quarter.

Mr. FRYE. Will the Senator allow me a suggestion right here?

Mr. ALDRICH. Certainly.

Mr. FRYE. The product of an immense corset factory at Stuttgard for three or four years was shipped to this country for exactly one-half of the cost of the corsets at Stuttgard.

Mr. ALDRICH. Do you know where they were certified?

Mr. FRYE. They were not certified at Stuttgard.

Mr. ALDRICH. On the forty-eighth page of the testimony taken by the Committee on Undervaluation appears the examination of the gentleman having charge of the invoice bureau in the New York custom-house, and he pointed us to innumerable instances of just the nature which I am now describing, where goods produced in one consular district were sent, apparently and undoubtedly for the purpose of being undervalued, to another consular district for purposes of certification.

In reply to the question of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BECK]—

What value do you attach to a certificate of that sort on invoices coming from cities outside of the consul's jurisdiction, and where there is a consul who should certify, but does not?—

this gentleman answered:

We can not attach any importance to it, because the consul who certifies can not know anything about it. He can not know anything about goods not produced in his own district.

This is the state of affairs which this clause was suggested to obviate, and it seems to me there can be no question but what it does obviate it, and obviate it in a way in which every honorable and honest importer will be willing to have it corrected.

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. President, I think I can cite one fact which may perhaps satisfy my friend from New York [Mr. EVARTS] that this is a proper thing to do in the proposed revision of the revenue administration part of the laws.

It will be remembered by all that Germany has got to be a very large manufacturing country; that there are many cities or towns where manufactures are conducted, and wherever they are conducted it is found that generally one kind of manufacture is confined to a particular city or town. Take the cities of Berlin, Bremen, and Chemnitz, where large manufactures of woolens are made; Cologne and Crefeld, where there are manufactures of iron and implements of iron; Dresden, where there are manufactures of china-ware of all descriptions; Mayence and Stettin, and various other places, and it will be seen at once that a consul at one of those places may know all about the manufactures which are produced there and know nothing at all about manufactures produced elsewhere.

Therefore, it seems to me quite obvious that the bill is exactly correct in this particular.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to make a single observation, though I do not know that it is necessary; and that is, that there is a very large variety of products of foreign countries imported into ours where the manufacture is specially conducted to suit the taste of our market, where there is no sale for the precise quality or grade or finish or character of the article in the country where it is produced. The port of export in the country producing such an article as that would furnish to the consul no method of inquiring into and ascertaining its true value, because in that port there would be no such thing as a market price for it. Necessarily, therefore, the place of investigation of the value of that article would be the place where it is manufactured, where all the material for ascertaining its cost and value exists.

Then also there must be a very large number of articles which are produced alike for the domestic market of the foreign country and for exportation here, for our market, in which the port of export is no considerable market for the thing produced; it is not the principal market; and there also that locality would not be the place to go to find a consul who would be the best authority as to its value.

But in every case the consul who is close to the place of manufacture has every opportunity for ascertaining the cost and value, and for detecting and unearthing fraud. He is there; he can have his secret agents on the spot; he can report; he has an opportunity the whole year round to watch for suspicious circumstances in regard to the conduct of the manufacture; he knows the price of labor; he gets acquainted with the foremen or leading persons; he gets acquainted with the rivals of the exporter; and if the exporter should be a dishonest person he learns the fact.

It seems to me that from every consideration, as we are to fix by law the authority of a United States officer who is to certify to the value, and the value at the place of manufacture, the Government should intrust that duty to and impose that duty upon the consul there, instead of leaving the importer, who may desire a fraudulent undervaluation in certain cases, to roam about among the consuls and to select such port of export as he sees fit to choose.

Mr. MORRILL. That is the opinion of the collector of the port of New York.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from Vermont says that is the opinion of the present collector of the port of New York, whose authority, of course, is very great on this subject.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS].

Mr. EVARTS. Mr. President, I shall not delay the Senate upon this point longer, but will make an observation upon what fell from the lips of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH], who, besides applying rather an opprobrious suggestion in reference to the importing merchants of New York, was also so polite as to use an opprobrious epithet towards myself, that I held a brief.

Mr. ALDRICH. If the Senator from New York will allow me, I did not use the term "holding a brief" in a technical sense, but I meant, literally, that the Senator held a brief in his hand.

Mr. EVARTS. I held this document in my hand, as I had explained, because the bill as reported and printed did not give any light on the subject as to what was old and new, and I was reading only from the text of the statute as here printed with a designation of what was new and what was old. But I think a larger imputation might have been reasonably inferred from the use of the term "holding a brief," especially when the Senator had fixed a stigma upon the clients, as they were to be designated.

I represent a great State, which is concerned in foreign commerce as well as in domestic manufactures. I shall endeavor to the best of my ability under our laws and in the making of laws to protect and defend the manufacturers of this country and also the importers of this country; and I do not propose to be deterred because my opinions are understood to be in favor of the protection of domestic industries and of the manufacturers of our State as well as of the rest of this country, because I am not able so to see whether in the zeal of their interests they may not encroach unnecessarily, not in protection against frauds, but on the honest and useful and facile conduct of lawful commercial intercourse. Every observation that I have made thus far, and every observation that I shall make hereafter, in reference to this bill regulating foreign commerce will address itself to seeing that the rights of importers in the maintenance of our just relations of foreign intercourse with foreign nations are protected in this bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I rise to inquire of the Senator from Iowa, who has this bill in charge [Mr. ALLISON], whether the attention of his committee has been invited to a recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, given on the 21st of November, 1887, in the case of Oelbermann and others vs. Edwin A. Merritt, late collector of the port of New York, reaffirming two previous decisions going back for a space, both of them in Howard, one in 10 Howard, I think, and one in 15 Howard, or in a later volume, where the court held that the failure under the existing provision of law to examine one package in ten (in the case of an appeal for the reappraisement or in the case of a reappraisement on the part of the Government, whether it is an appeal technically or not, so that one package in ten can be before the collector at the time of the second appraisement), makes the whole thing invalid, so far as the reappraisement is the foundation of a claim on the part of the Government for increased duty, or is the foundation for a claim for a penalty for an attempted violation of the revenue laws. I understand that the decision of the court is that that is an essential to the proceeding, and if one package in every ten is not laid out from the cargo the whole adjudication upon the reappraisement is invalid and without force of law.

It is said that it is physically impossible with regard to a large number of branches of merchandise to retain one package in ten for the reexamination, and that it is never done; that practically it can not be done; that the store-houses would not afford the necessary space.

The suggestion has been made to me by persons very much interested in the promotion of this legislation, that it would be a proper and convenient time now, and that this bill would be a proper and convenient place, for an enactment by which there might be an arrangement between the collector and the importer as to what portion of the imported article would furnish a fair sample, and in that case a dispensing with the strict provision of the law which now exists.

If I have made my point clear to the Senator in charge of the bill, I should like to have him state for the information of some constituents of mine who are interested in the question whether the committee have considered that matter, and whether he would favor an amendment to the bill which I am prepared to offer at this time if the committee do favor it, or whether the committee prefer that that should be dealt with elsewhere.

Mr. ALLISON. The committee did consider the questions that arose in what is called the Oelbermann case. The decision in that case was substantially that a merchant appraiser should be familiar with the articles in the invoice, or on which he was called upon to decide, and the court did reaffirm, I think, two earlier decisions, both deciding that where the law required a particular thing to be done, either by an appraiser or other officer, that thing must be done.

Mr. HOAR. Perhaps the Senator from Iowa will allow me to read a sentence or two from this Oelbermann vs. Merritt decision, which state very clearly the proposition. The court in dealing with the question of the appointment of the substitute merchant appraiser, referred with approbation as a foundation for their opinion to the case of Converse vs. Burgess, 18 Howard, and they say:

In Converse vs. Burgess (18 How., 413), which arose under the act of 1842, the plaintiffs offered to prove that the merchant appraisers did not examine or see any of the original packages of the merchandise, which was sugar, but only saw samples which had been previously taken from one in ten of the packages described in the invoice, and that such samples would not, when exposed to the air, afford a fair criterion by which to judge of the importation, and claimed the right to go behind the return of the merchant appraisers, on the ground that they had not examined the sugar. Section 21 of the act of August 30, 1842, c. 270 (5 Stat., 565), now embodied in section 2901 of the Revised Statutes, provided that the collector should designate on the invoice at least one package of every invoice, and one package at least of every ten packages imported, to be opened, examined, and appraised in the public stores. The defendant objected to the admission of the evidence, in the absence of fraud on the part of the appraisers, and claimed that their decision was in the nature of an award, and final under the statute, and not open to review under the protest.

The protest alleged that the goods "were not fairly and faithfully examined by the appraisers." The circuit court ruled that the evidence was admissible, and that the plaintiffs might go to the jury on the question whether the examination made by the merchant appraisers was in substance and effect equivalent to an examination of one package in ten of the importation, and that, if it was not, the appraisement was void. The plaintiffs had a verdict and a judgment, and on a writ of error by the collector the judgment was affirmed by this court. The court observes in its opinion that the decision of the merchant appraisers is final, "provided it is made in pursuance of law," and referring to the acts of Congress on the subject the court adds: "These acts of Congress provide for the appointment, regulate the duties, and impose the limitations on the authority of the appraisers and determine the conditions on which the validity of their assessment depends. All their powers are derived from these acts, and it is their duty to observe the restrictions and to obey the directions they contain. In the present instance there was a neglect of the positive mandate 'to open, examine, and appraise one package of every invoice and one package at least of every ten packages of goods, wares, and merchandise;' and the jury have found that the inquiry they made was not in substance nor in effect an equivalent for such an examination. We are, therefore, of the opinion that the importer was not precluded by their return from disputing the sufficiency or accuracy of their assessment."

Mr. ALLISON. In the case cited it was claimed that the appraisers had not complied with the statute, but in this particular case it was claimed that the merchant appraiser was not familiar with the goods, and upon that ground the decision below was reversed. But the general scheme of this bill dismisses entirely the idea of a merchant appraiser.

Mr. HOAR. In this case also the merchant appraiser not only was not familiar with the goods, but he did not comply with the other provision and examine one package in every ten.

Mr. ALLISON. We have dispensed in this bill with the merchant appraisers, and of course that settles that particular case. But the question which the Senator propounds to me is, whether the committee considered the question of modifying or changing section 2901 of the Revised Statutes; that is, whether we believe that it is wise to allow the collector and the importer jointly to say whether or not a less number than one in ten of the packages shall be sent to the appraiser's office. The committee did consider that question, our attention having been called to it by the Senator from Massachusetts, and I think, after a pretty full consideration, the general view of the committee was that it would not be wise to so modify section 2901 of the Revised Statutes as to place wholly within the power of the collector a discretion as to the number of packages that should be sent to the appraiser's office.

Of course, the importer would always be willing that no package should be sent or that one package should be sent out of a whole invoice, so that the question would be left practically to the importer; and it seemed to us that a law which had stood the test of forty-six years as respects the propriety of sending at least one package in ten ought not to be lightly changed. The committee in their examinations in New York and Boston heard no complaint as respects the capacity of the appraiser's stores to contain these packages. There was complaint, and I think very just complaint, that the appraiser's stores in the city of New York were entirely inadequate for the work done there, because, in fact, the work is performed in an old sugar-house illy adapted to the business of appraising merchandise. But I suggest to the Senator from Massachusetts that in this bill it would be, it seems to me, very unwise to undertake to amend section 2901 of the Revised Statutes and give such an important matter to the discretion of the collector of the port.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, as the Senator from Iowa very well knows, I took a great deal of interest in having the evils which this bill is intended to remove dealt with in a comprehensive, summary, and thorough manner, and, indeed, the original investigation was made by the Finance Committee under a resolve which I originally introduced in the Senate.

This suggestion which I have made was made to me by the representative of a very important body of business men in Boston; and it is of course my desire, as I am sure it is that of my colleague, that while this measure shall be adopted to suppress the fraudulent importations from which not only the manufacturing interests of Massachusetts but the interests of the honest importers of Massachusetts alike have so grossly suffered, and which have been carried on to such an extent in other ports of the country—I will not say in what ports they have been carried on—it shall have an effect to prevent the diversion of the honest and natural trade of the city of Boston and other important cities to places where the imports would not go but for the opportunities of fraud which have existed.

I say that, feeling this evil, I still am very desirous to have this bill, as I am sure the chairman and all the members of the Finance Committee are, so constructed as to impose no unnecessary or invidious discrimination on the honest and legitimate importer. He is as much entitled to the protection of law everywhere as is the manufacturer. The business which is open to him under the laws is of course an honorable and honest business. I have not, however, after the great care which has been taken with this measure by the Senator from Iowa and his associates on the subcommittee, and especially after they have had the opportunity to consult with the collectors of different ports and with the most eminent of the appraisers and other customs officials, and with importing merchants and manufacturers and the representatives of boards of trade who have given this subject study, felt at liberty to move an amendment which does not meet their approbation and take the risk of the chance of having it hastily adopted on the floor of the Senate. Therefore I yield to the judgment which the honorable Senator from Iowa has expressed.

Mr. EVARTS. Mr. President, in lines 8, 9, and 10 of section 2 occurs this language, speaking of the invoice.

And was made at the place where the merchandise was originally procured for exportation to the United States.

We have an adequate verification of the invoice produced to the extent already provided for, that it must be to the consul of the district where the articles were produced. Now, why is it necessary that the invoice, which is the commercial document that accompanies the cargo from the port of exportation to the port of delivery, should be made up in the place where the goods were originally procured for exportation?

This seems to overlook the fact that merchants have a right to procure articles from whatever source they may find most suitable to their traffic, and collect them at ports of exportation, and make up their own shipment of collected articles as their proposed trade adapts itself to the port of delivery. This is entirely a novel proposition; that of a Liverpool merchant accompanying his exportation of a variety of articles that make up his shipment included in one invoice, and which is to be protected by supervision and certification, with an invoice made out for each one of these articles in his shipment, made in the place from which the articles were originally procured.

Mr. ALLISON. "For exportation."

Mr. EVARTS. "For exportation." Very well. Now, a Liverpool or London merchant collects from the Continent and from the interior of Scotland, and Ireland, and England the articles that he proposes to send to the city of New York. He has ordered them by correspondence, and in the literal sense he has procured them for exportation from the different places, whence, by conveyance, they have made up his shipment, for which he is to furnish an invoice. It is required that the invoice which he produces before the consul shall be not only before the consul of the district in which the purchase was made, but he must have an invoice that itself was made up in the various places or districts from which the contributory products of his shipment were obtained. If that is the meaning, and it seems to me the meaning, it is a very serious inconvenience to trade; and what good is to come of it except in the mere particular of seeing that by every means an account may be had of every item that comes here? Immense volumes of commerce come here all the while. Every person that manufactures within a district does not himself export the article he makes. He does not make an invoice which is to accompany it as one of the documents of transmission across the Atlantic. He merely sends it to his purchaser in any town in England or on the Continent with such a bill of lading as is consonant with trade there and corresponds with our internal bills of lading here.

When he undertakes to ship what he has collected for foreign commerce and is to produce an invoice before our consul, he must produce an invoice that was made in that place from which he procured, by purchase or otherwise, the means of his foreign commerce, which does not become foreign commerce until he makes it a subject of foreign commerce as collected by himself. If that is the meaning, it is an interference with the regularity and the intelligible and sensible conduct of commerce.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, the object of this provision is to have the invoice statement show what the transaction is. In the case put by the Senator from New York, here is a merchant in Liverpool; he may be a merchant who purchases articles in Ireland, in Scotland, in Germany, and elsewhere. If he purchases those articles in Liverpool for shipment to the United States he should have the certification of the consul of the country from whence they are exported; otherwise our appraising officers will have no knowledge of their value. They are bound to ascertain the value of the merchandise at the point of exportation. So in the case of the Liverpool merchant, he may send linen from Belfast and Dunfermline to Liverpool. It is not difficult for him to ascertain the value of those articles at those places, and it is the business of the consul at the place whence they come to ascertain what their market value is at that point; otherwise the certification is of no value to the appraiser at New York. What value is it to an appraiser in New York to know what the price of linen is in Liverpool or in Paris? The object is to have the invoices made at the place where the goods are sold or purchased, and made by the people who sell or purchase them, and not by a man in London or Liverpool or Paris, who may know nothing about the real transaction, and who can conveniently, if he wishes to do so, defraud the Government, make up an invoice, and require a certification by the Liverpool consul.

The object of this second section is to furnish the appraising officers at the ports of entry in the United States knowledge of the actual market value of merchandise at the point where it is purchased or procured, the actual transaction itself. If the Senator's illustration is intended to show that a Liverpool merchant ought to be permitted to gather goods from all Europe and then ship them from Liverpool certified by the consul there, it is not the purpose of this bill to allow that, but to really prevent it, because in that case certainly the market value would not properly be ascertained.

Mr. EVARTS. Now, Mr. President, the Senator knows that in London and Liverpool and in New York and Boston honest people do collect from the interior articles of exportation, and it is a perfectly legitimate piece of foreign commerce to do so, and you must have adequate guaranties and protection for the invoices which accompany the foreign transaction and not trace every interior rivulet up to the manufacturer that has sent a bale of goods from here and another from there to the warehouse in Boston or New York, or Liverpool or London, where there is a collection enough to supply the trade of the foreign merchant. You are undertaking to make commerce subordinate to the conveniences and securities against fraud. You are strangling commerce under a vain endeavor to protect against the efforts and contrivances of interested parties.

Mr. ALLISON. Either the Senator from New York does not understand me or I do not understand him. This bill does not interfere with a merchant at Liverpool or London, or anywhere else, who purchases at any other place merchandise and then sells it to be exported here.

Mr. EVARTS. He exports it.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well; then he becomes the consignor. Another section of this bill treats of invoices as respects the case of the consignor, and it does require him in that case to show from whom he purchased the goods and the price he paid, if he becomes the consignor and is not the manufacturer.

So it seems to me that the merchant who purchases goods in Liverpool or in London, if you please, and exports them to the United States, must find his certification at one or the other of those places; but if he purchases them in Ireland, surely it would not be held that he ought to have the certification of a consul at Liverpool.

Mr. EVARTS. I am not talking about certification; you have already provided for that. You now require that the invoice itself of the exporting merchant's merchandise that is to cross the Atlantic, that invoice which he sends with his merchandise, is to be made out in every place where he originally procured an article for exportation. That is what the point is. Either it is misunderstood or it is an entanglement of commerce that can not be tolerated. No exporting merchant here would tolerate any such arrangement abroad that obliged him, not to have an invoice of his transaction, but that he should accompany it with an invoice of somebody that did not export and had simply been an interior trader that had sold him an article and transmitted it by railroad certificate or by bill of lading. "There's the rub" here. You interfere with commerce. You have a good object, to stamp out fraud, but you are not to carry that so far as to trample out commerce. You will have no fraud if you shut out commerce; that is plain. Now, let me ask the Senator a question. The Liverpool merchant, as I suppose, sends to France, or wherever else, or to the interior of the United Kingdom, and buys articles here and there as he pleases, collects them in his warehouse, makes up his shipment three months afterwards, whenever it is made up, it is according to his trade, to suit himself. Now, suppose this Liverpool merchant, instead of having originally procured for exportation the article from the place where it was made, and to which he wants to trace it, bought it of another Liverpool merchant who had not procured it for exportation but had bought it for sale, and the exporting merchant goes to him and buys the merchandise, he then seeing it for the first time—what is the meaning of it? Was it originally procured for exportation in Liverpool?

Mr. ALLISON. Undoubtedly.

Mr. EVARTS. Where, then, do you follow this trade? It is an impossible case.

Mr. DAWES. Will the Senator allow me a word?

Mr. EVARTS. Certainly.

Mr. DAWES. When this Liverpool merchant makes out his invoice after he has got his shipment together, what price or value does he certify—that in Liverpool?

Mr. EVARTS. He certifies the price that he paid for it, if he bought it, and nothing else. He is not allowed by law to put anything else in.

Mr. DAWES. Without intimating that there is any such practice as to establish an intermediary and then get a fictitious value fixed on the cost at the point of production, which is the matter as between us and foreign importers, may it not be well to provide against such a contingency?

Mr. EVARTS. We are not now discussing the tariff or the integrity of the price of a shipment. This is one of the modes——

Mr. DAWES. My inquiry is whether, if that is easy to be accomplished, it is not wise to try and prevent it.

Mr. EVARTS. You have various other protections under which commerce has been carried on up to this time. Now you have got a contrivance in the mere commercial arrangement of documents interfering with foreign commerce by requiring that the invoice which is made up in Boston (to change the scene) for exportation from here, instead of exportation hither, must not only state that the exporter is making that shipment and that he has paid for its contents, which are described, so many thousands of dollars, but he has got to have that invoice, that paper, made up in the place where he procured in the interior the articles that he ships; and there will have to be as many invoices as there are items in the exportation.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Why not a general invoice covering all the items?

Mr. EVARTS. Because this says the invoice shall be made, the invoice that you produce before the consul shall be made in the place where the merchandise was originally procured for exportation.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That is the original paper.

Mr. EVARTS. No, the merchandise originally procured.

Mr. EDMUNDS. But it is the original paper that marks the transfer of the property.

Mr. EVARTS. No, but our invoice is described. Our invoice is the merchant's statement of the transaction by which he makes his importation here, which is produced to the collector here. Now, you provide that that paper which he produces to the collector here is to be made in the place from which he got the articles in his invoice.

Mr. DAWES. Will the Senator allow me to make another suggestion?

Mr. EVARTS. Certainly.

Mr. DAWES. Is it not the fact that Australian wool raised far in the interior by different men in the interior is sent to the coast, and one man on the coast gathers it in large quantities and adds to the cost a vast amount attributed to the expenses of its reaching the coast and there being shipped? Is not that the point at which the actual cost of exportation has occurred? Is not that true of wool, and is it not true in different degrees in all methods of proceeding throughout, that they escape the idea of cost at the point of production and substitute for it the cost at some intermediate point, and in that way avoid a real appraisal?

Mr. EVARTS. There are two rules for the invoice price inexorable. One is that if you have bought an article you must put in the price you paid, and not any other, and it is a fraud to put in anything else. If you manufacture it, and therefore have not procured it by purchase, then by abundant provisions you are required to put in the market value. Those two rules cover all the exportations and all the importations.

But what we are now concerned with is requiring that the very invoice, which is a transaction of foreign commerce, is to be made up in every place from which the articles were procured for the purpose of exportation. If a merchant in New York, as has been illustrated here, wishes to export to China, and has a correspondent in a similar relation in China, sheeting and calico, he makes up his statement, which his invoice fully describes, and which states what he paid for them all. If besides that an invoice is to come from each of the mills, and is to be one of the invoices of foreign commerce when obtained, the producer and the manufacturer and the merchant who collects by purchase is to accompany it, not with an invoice to the collector, but a bill of lading or a letter or a memorandum or anything that is a sufficient and satisfactory description.

Now, as I understand, when the merchant is going to export a shipment of manufactured articles collected from a dozen interior manufacturing towns he must have an invoice that is made up in each of these local districts where each purchase was made. That is what it means, I assume. If it does not mean that, I do not know what it does mean.

This is new. It applies either to an American merchant exporting or a foreign merchant exporting to us. That is my view of the matter. You must have your guaranties and protections such as do not trammel commerce unnecessarily, because there is fraud in commerce no more than in manufactures. If fraud is the staple of the business, you may as well exclude all of it.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, it seems to me the effect of an additional restriction like this will be an increase of the price of all imported articles to the consumer. In the first place, if a man buys abroad a block of merchandise for exportation to the United States he must have an invoice made, by the express provisions of this bill. He must pay all the consular fees for a certificate of that invoice, and the expense can not be less than from one to three dollars in the ordinary course of exportation. If there be no consul of the United States at Geneva, supposing that to be the point of exportation, he must go any distance to the nearest consul in the district, perhaps from 50 to 100 miles.

This provision can not be carried into effect without adding largely to the cost of imported articles; and the question arises, what is the necessity for it? The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] said that it was necessary, because there was a more intimate knowledge on the part of the local resident consul than there would be on the part of a consul at the place of shipment.

Mr. ALDRICH. If the Senator from Florida desires information, I will say that this bill does not change the export law one particle in regard to that matter, the number of invoices required, or the fees paid.

Mr. CALL. Then what is the necessity for requiring that the place where the purchase is made shall be the place where the invoice shall be made?

Mr. ALDRICH. The chairman of the committee has explained that, or it certainly will be explained by the other Senators. But the Senator from Florida is now addressing himself to the question that no invoice at all should be required. That is a point that is not touched by this bill.

Mr. CALL. Not at all. The Senator from New York made a very correct observation, in my judgment, when he said that where purchases are made at different places, certainly the certification may well be made at the place of final shipment to the United States.

Mr. ALDRICH. That question has been disposed of already by a vote of the Senate.

Mr. CALL. I understand that, and I say in regard to the vote of the Senate adopting that provision, it very materially increases the cost of imported articles to the consumers in this country.

So far as regards the other provision in the bill we are now considering, it expressly requires that an additional invoice shall be made at the place of purchase or production of each article. If that is already in the existing law, why is it inserted here?

Mr. HISCOCK. Mr. President, as I understand this bill, it is intended to prevent the frauds which have been discovered by the Government, which have been emphasized notably by the present collector of the port of New York, and which largely grow out of the fact that the importer is the exporter also, that the exporter on the other side practically consigns his goods to his agent here, and that he makes a systematic calculation, when he brings them here, as he desires to have them as cheap as possible on our market, as to the lowest possible price at which they can be passed through the custom-house, and without any regard to the price he paid for them, or the value of them on the other side, or the cost of them to himself. This bill is intended, so far as is practicable, to do what was illustrated by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL], present to the appraisers here the actual transaction upon the other side.

It is easy to criticise the provisions of this bill. In answer to those criticisms it is proper to ask, what is the great hardship to the exporter abroad in requiring him to present with his importation here the original invoice of those goods to himself by the party of whom he purchased them? How can it damage him? What does it cost him? What embarrassment is there to him in the fact that he is compelled to present to the appraisers here and our consular agent abroad the original transaction between him and the person from whom he purchased those goods? If he purchased them not for exportation, if he collected them at Liverpool, at Manchester, or at any other place, and not specially for exportation at the time, as a matter of course his invoice is made out as of that place; but if he purchased them in some district remote, for exportation, why should he not, I ask, present the bill of sale which has been delivered to him by the party of whom he purchased the goods? Why should not the transaction be brought out, and let these officers who are to pass upon it know what he did pay for the goods and of whom he purchased them, and all that? Why should it be open for him to calculate, in the making of his invoice, the lowest possible price that he can put it in and get it through the custom-house?

One feature of this bill I certainly am heartily in sympathy with, and that is it looks in the direction, to some extent at least, of putting our foreign trade in the hands of our own people. It is those people who complain of present practices to a certain extent—men who are honestly and legitimately engaged as importers in this country. It is men of that kind, our own folks, who complain of the present law, of the chance that there is upon the other side for men who are shipping to their own agents here, the consignee here being in their employ, to "doctor" the invoice, if I may use a slang phrase, to make them up in such a way that you can not trace the property, fixing arbitrarily a value upon the goods themselves; and this absolutely forces out of trade those who are legitimately engaged in the business of importation.

Take the first few lines of this section:

SEC. 2. That all such invoices shall, at or before the shipment of the merchandise, be produced to the consul, vice-consul, or commercial agent of the United States of the consular district from which the merchandise is exported to the United States, and shall have indorsed thereon—

Now I come to the certificate—shall have indorsed thereon, when so produced, a declaration signed by the purchaser, manufacturer, owner, or agent, setting forth that the invoice is in all respects correct and true.

He must produce the bill of sale, if you please, the original evidence of his title, exhibiting the transaction between him and the party from whom he purchased the goods. I put the question, and it seems to me that it is a pertinent one, what harm does that requirement do that man? What burden does it lay upon his shoulders? How does it restrict commerce? What impediment does it put in the way of importations to this country that the original transaction shall be exhibited so that these custom-house officers, for they are practically that, the consular agents, who act in connection with our custom-house system here, may detect these frauds, and to a certain extent at least make the importation to this country free to all, and not put it in the hands of persons on the other side entirely? And it is for that reason that I support this bill, and the general scheme and frame-work of the bill.

I desire not to repeat myself, but to impress upon the Senate, what wrong does it do these men, wherein are they harmed or injured, if they are honest and there is no fraud in the transaction, to force them to exhibit the original bills of sale to the officers, that they may accompany the goods and exhibit the actual transaction between themselves and the people from whom they purchased the property?

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, I submit that the senior Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS] in his treatment of this provision in regard to invoice as an innovation confuses two different and distinct transactions which have been in former years treated by present legislation in an entirely different manner.

So far as concerns goods which are purchased, what are known under the law as purchased goods, it is required that the actual transaction shall be disclosed by the invoice, and that that invoice shall be made at the place where the goods were originally procured for exportation to the United States; and the bill also provides for another class of goods, consigned goods. All that the consignor is required to do before exporting them to this country is to prepare and present to the consul an invoice which shall show the market value or wholesale price of the merchandise in question at the principal markets of the country of exportation.

In the case cited by the Senator from New York in regard to a merchant in Liverpool who shall collect goods from Asia, Africa, and from various parts of Europe, and consign them to the United States, he is not required by the provisions of this section to submit with his shipment any invoices other than the single invoice which shows the market value in Liverpool or in the principal markets of Great Britain. That is the only invoice which this section requires of him.

Another provision of another section—section 6, I think it is—provides that where those goods have been purchased by him and he is not the manufacturer, he shall accompany the goods by a statement of where those goods were purchased, and from whom, and the price paid; but so far as the provisions of this section are concerned, this declaration does not require the consignor who gathers goods from various parts of the world and ships them to America on consignment to make more than one invoice, which shall show the market value of those goods in the principal markets of the country of exportation.

Mr. EVARTS. Mr. President, the observation of the Senator from Rhode Island shows conclusively that the clause about which I am speaking ought not to be in. I am not concerned at all with what the invoice shall contain. I am not talking about that. Your previous and existing laws show what the invoice shall contain. But I am talking about your new entanglement of this new invoice, in the future. Now, let me show what is done by the innovation:

That all invoices of imported merchandise shall be made out in the currency of the place or country from whence the importations shall be made.

No other invoice shall be presented or prepared. Every degree of guaranty against duplication is taken. Now you are describing a verification of the paper that is produced before our consul as being the invoice that is to accompany the exportation. My objection is that you require that the paper thus produced of exportation, which is then the commencement of the commercial transaction, the first start in it, shall contain a declaration verified, and therefore it must be true—a declaration signed by the purchaser, manufacturer, owner, or agent, setting forth that the invoice is in all respects correct and true—

That is right—

and was made—

This paper was made—at the place—

Not of exportation, not the commencement of the transaction, but that it was made in the place where your domestic transaction was made.

Mr. ALLISON. If the Senator will allow me one moment——

Mr. EVARTS. Let me read it. I have tried to get the meaning out of the committee.

Mr. HOAR. On what page?

Mr. EVARTS. I read lines 8, 9, and 10 of the second section, on page 2:

And was made at the place where the merchandise was originally procured for exportation to the United States.

As my colleague has suggested, it is not only to trace it to the place where you collect the items that make up your invoice, but you are to furnish the indicia of domestic trade between you and the vendor to you. And this is one of the searching methods of preventing fraud! I am willing to interpose impediments to fraud, but I am not willing to interpose impediments to commerce that have nothing to do with the regular transaction of commerce. Foreign commerce begins when the merchant undertakes an exportation; and how he got his goods together and where he bought them and what he paid for them has nothing to do with the transaction except so far as we make it such by requiring that he shall insert, if he exports goods as his own, the price that he paid for them. That settles that question. He paid his money for them. Now, you can not look into the interior and domestic trade as to where he bought them.

When you come to condemn, when you come to take proof, search the transaction; but now we are providing for the commercial instrument, and we are providing what it shall contain. That is one thing. We are now providing that the instrument of foreign commerce shall not be made in the place where the foreign commerce begins, but that it shall be made in the place where the exporter first procured the articles which he has got together for the purpose of exportation.

The interior vendor does not make the exportation. He is not exporting the goods; he has nothing to do with their exportation; and how are you going to have your invoice when you originate the foreign transaction? You are responsible for it; you are held here by all sorts of guaranties and forfeitures, and properly. I do not care how severe, how searching they are; but I do not want an impediment introduced that has nothing to do with the just guaranties. It may be a mode of searching, but we do not want to search commerce before it starts here. We want to have such muniments, such instruments of commerce as shall be made plain and distinct, and shall conform to the regulations of commerce, and that shall be only responsible for forfeiture and for criminal prosecution.

If I plan an exportation of articles from New York to China and order interior producers to send them to me, I pay for them and that is the end of it; and then when I get ready and find a ship that will take my shipment, I have my invoice with which I accompany my exportation, which is the first and original instrument and which our previous regulation fortifies and protects. There shall not be any duplicate; there shall not be anything else; it shall all be simple, and I shall be held to my own action. But when I am going to ship for China it is proposed that I shall send up to Berkshire and have an invoice made there. The man up there does not ship the goods; he is not engaged in foreign commerce; he has not sent them on the way of foreign commerce; he has nothing to do with it; and yet my invoice must be sent up there and made in Berkshire.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator from New York insists that when he purchases goods at a particular point he shall have a right to make out the certification and the statement of that transaction, whatever it is, at another point. In his case it might be well enough, because I assume that the Senator from New York would in no instance undertake to make a false statement of the fact; but it turns out everywhere—and we may as well speak plainly respecting this matter—that there are men in Paris and London (I mention those two points particularly) who make it a business to sell goods at those points, and to export goods from those points, which are purchased in Lyons, in Marseilles, in Belfast, and elsewhere, and which are exported, not from London or Paris, but exported from the points of manufacture.

It is the intention and purpose of the second section, in connection with other sections of the bill, that when a dishonest man (if there be any such importing goods, and I do not say that there are) presents his invoice for entry at the custom-house he shall show the transaction.

The Senator from New York says that if he wants to export goods to China, it is a great hardship for him to be compelled to show what he paid for the goods that he purchased in Chicago and have that statement made out in Chicago. The Senator from New York knows perfectly well that if he purchases a thousand tierces of lard in Chicago for shipment abroad, somebody there who knows of that transaction will make out a statement of the transaction. That is all there is here; there is nothing more of it. That original paper then becomes a part of the invoice, and is traced all the way through until it reaches the appraising officers in the custom-house at New York, and they are able, therefore, to know whether linens purchased in Belfast have been doctored in Liverpool as to certifications or as to statements. The Senator insists that these papers shall not be made out where the transaction occurred. Why not?

Mr. HOAR. May I ask the Senator from Iowa one question? Does he understand that the bill requires the affidavit of verification of the invoice to be made in the place where the goods were produced, or merely the invoice or bill?

Mr. ALLISON. The invoice.

Mr. HOAR. That is all? It does not require the affidavit?

Mr. ALLISON. No.

Mr. HOAR. So I understand.

Mr. ALLISON. If I am a purchaser of linens in Belfast for exportation to the United States and live in Liverpool, London, or in New York, I ask the Senator from New York what hardship there is in requiring a statement at Belfast that so many goods were purchased, so many packages shipped on board a vessel there, or on a railway, and transported to New York?

If there is any impediment to commerce in a statement of that kind, I fail to see it. It is not only not an impediment, but if a man is honest in the transaction and desires to make a correct statement of it, he will be only too glad to have it traced from its beginning, in order that the custom-house officers who must deal with him will be able easily to see that he is not endeavoring to defraud the Government, but that he is honestly endeavoring to import goods into this country, and pay the duty, and sell them in our own markets.

Whilst I do not say that this will in any great degree prevent fraud if men are disposed to commit fraud, it enables the appraising officers to see that here is a transaction which took place in Belfast, and not in Liverpool, or in Limoges, if you please, and not in Paris, or on the Rhine, instead of at Amsterdam or Antwerp.

Mr. EVARTS. The Senator does not speak as I did. I am talking not upon frauds in invoices; I am talking about having the invoice, which is the orignal document of commerce, as the beginning of exportation, carried back and distributed all over the internal production, if the articles were procured there for exportation.

Now let me confine the gentleman not to protections against fraud in invoices or exportations, but to the preparation of the invoice itself in the instance he has adduced. A merchant in New York trades in exporting lard, and he orders a thousand tierces of lard to be sent to him from Chicago, which he buys and pays for. Does the Chicago vendor export that lard? Then why should my invoice be sent out to Chicago?

Mr. ALLISON. Not in that case.

Mr. EVARTS. That is the case. You cover all cases. Every invoice that a foreign exporter starts his export with, by this provision, must, in its actual reduction to writing on the paper that is laid before the consul, be sent to the region of the country from which he bought from a vendor.

Mr. ALLISON. Would it interrupt the Senator if I should ask him a question?

Mr. EVARTS. That does not present the transaction between the lard merchant in Chicago and the exporting lard merchant in New York. You are saying that when I am exporting I must have my invoice made out there.

Mr. ALLISON. I should like to ask the honorable Senator from New York a question. He is a merchant in New York. He desires to buy a certain amount of linen goods, and purchases them in Belfast. What does this bill require? It requires that the invoice, that original paper, shall show the Belfast transaction, whatever it was. That is all there is of it.

Mr. EVARTS. You are speaking of importation now.

Mr. ALLISON. I am speaking of importation. If at the same time he buys crockery in France, there is another invoice. What the Senator from New York seems to think is that he should gather all these invoices together at Liverpool and then make up at that point a general single invoice and have it visaed, if you please, by the consul at Liverpool, and then send the goods to this country.

Mr. EVARTS. Let me correct the Senator.

Mr. GEORGE. Right there I desire to ask a question.

Mr. EVARTS. I was only using the New York importer as illustrating the condition if he were an exporter to a foreign country.

Mr. ALLISON. I understand.

Mr. EVARTS. I do not say that the importer here has a right to have collected all the invoices together. I am speaking of the foreign merchant, who is buying wherever he pleases and collecting, but always for exportation, if you please.

Mr. ALLISON. As a consignor?

Mr. EVARTS. No, as an owner.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well; then if he becomes a purchaser and an importer into this country he should certainly be in no better position than that——

Mr. EVARTS. No, he is on the other side; he exports.

Mr. HISCOCK. But take this case: if he collects upon the other side and sells to some party in New York, then the transaction between the New York party and him upon the other side is his invoice.

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly; and it is done in Liverpool, if he lives there.

Mr. EVARTS. I am talking of the foreign exporter and what you require from him.

Mr. HISCOCK. If my colleague will allow me a moment; if, on the other hand, he is not only the exporter but the importer, and he is collecting on the other side to import to himself, consigning to himself here, having the control of the whole transaction, and there being no purchase or sale as between the exporter and importer, how else can you trace the value of the goods unless you do this?

Mr. EVARTS. That is an extraneous consideration.

Mr. HISCOCK. No.

Mr. EVARTS. Every invoice that comes here is not to be made where the commercial transaction begins, but it has to be sent into the interior to be made in the place where the purchase was made.

Mr. ALLISON. Not at all.

Mr. EVARTS. What does it mean, then?

Mr. ALLISON. It means that wherever the goods are purchased, if they are purchased, that is the point of exportation under this bill. It is not a secret. If a man purchases goods at Crefeld, or at Limoges, or at a point 100 miles or 1,000 miles from the sea and starts these goods on their pathway to the United States, that is the point of exportation in the contemplation of this bill, and nothing else. We discard the idea of ports of exportation in the bill, in every sentence and section in it. We make the place where the transaction occurs, either with the American merchant or with the foreign merchant, if he be a consignor or a manufacturer, the place where the thing starts. That is what is contemplated here, and nothing else.

Mr. EVARTS. I have asked for information, but I have not derived it. When you gave me an explanation it was of the Chicago lard transaction, and that does not accord with your present construction.

Mr. ALLISON. If I misled the Senator I regret it exceedingly; but that is the intent and purpose of the bill from beginning to end.

Mr. EVARTS. Here is the language. What you have in view may be as you now present it, but this language requires that the exporting merchant abroad, whether he owns or whether he consigns, must have an invoice, which he delivers to the master and of which he sends a duplicate to his consignee or vendee here to go through the custom-house, and it must be produced at the custom-house. It must be made not where he begins the origin of exportation, but from whence he procured the article of exportation. That is what I have explained, and that is what I have been contending against.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I tried to get the attention of the Senator from Iowa a few moments ago, with a view of asking him a question to relieve a difficulty which I have in this matter. Now I will ask it.

I understand him to say that the effect of the provision in the bill about which this controversy has arisen is to prevent the American merchant who has purchased goods for import into the United States at Belfast from having the invoice of those goods made out in Liverpool, when the shipment is actually made from Belfast to New York. I agree to that. That is right; it ought to be done.

But I have some difficulty, to which my mind has been called by the debate, and upon which I desire to have the Senator from Iowa enlighten me. Suppose a merchant in Liverpool (and I suppose there are a great many of that sort there) should buy goods in Belfast, should buy goods in Paris, should buy goods in Germany, and have them shipped to Liverpool and placed in his warehouse there, and he desires to make a shipment of those goods to the United States from Liverpool. I desire to ask the Senator whether, in the case of that Liverpool merchant, who has thus gathered in his warehouse goods from all parts of the world, and who desires to make an exportation to this country, when he makes that exportation he must accompany the exportation with the original invoice which he received from the various vendors to him of the goods in the various countries in which he bought them.

Mr. ALLISON. If the merchant in Liverpool having thus gathered his goods into his own warehouse consigns them, as I understand the Senator's suggestion to mean, to a port in the United States——

Mr. GEORGE. As his own goods.

Mr. ALLISON. As his own goods, to his agent here, he is bound under the bill to make his invoice at Liverpool, and is bound to testify as to the market value of those goods at Liverpool or the principal markets of the country. No matter where he purchased them, he is bound in that case by the market value at the point from which he exports them, and he is not bound by the fact of his having gathered those goods from Asia or Europe.

Mr. GEORGE. He is not bound to accompany his exportation with the invoice which he got in the various countries from which he purchased?

Mr. ALLISON. Not at all; in no sense. If instead of consigning them he sells them at Liverpool to a merchant in New York, then again the New York merchant is bound to produce the invoice at Liverpool of the price paid in Liverpool for the goods.

Mr. GEORGE. I understand that.

Mr. ALLISON. So in either case the price at Liverpool controls under this bill.

Mr. EVARTS. I am talking about the paper, the instrument itself.

Mr. ALLISON. The paper itself must be made in that case at Liverpool, and nowhere else; but there is in the bill an additional provision as respects consigned goods, to the effect that the consignor must make a statement showing where he purchased the goods and the price he paid. That is another section of the bill, the object being in that case to enlighten, if we can, the appraising officers as respects the invoice, which shows their market value in Liverpool.

Mr. GEORGE. But he is not obliged to carry the invoice?

Mr. ALLISON. No, not at all.

Mr. ALDRICH. If the Senator from Mississippi would read the section a little further along, he would see that the section provides as to what the invoice shall contain in each one of two cases. Beginning at the tenth line, the provision is that—

If the merchandise was obtained by purchase—

The invoice shall contain—a true and full statement of the time when, the place where, the person from whom the same was purchased, etc.

Then, commencing in the sixteenth line—

And when obtained in any other manner than by purchase, the actual market value or wholesale price thereof at the time of exportation to the United States in the principal markets of the country from whence exported.

The section makes distinct provision for two different kinds of goods, making in the case of purchased goods, to which I first alluded, a provision that the invoice shall show the actual transaction, and in the case of consigned goods, to which I alluded the second time, it is provided that the invoice shall show the actual market value or wholesale price at the time of exportation in the principal markets of the country from whence exported.

Mr. HOAR. I do not know whether I quite understood the question of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE], but if I did I thought the Senator from Iowa made his answer not quite understanding it.

I understood the question of the Senator from Mississippi to suppose the case of a merchant in Liverpool, designing to export goods to this country who sent to various parts of the Kingdom of Great Britain or elsewhere for those goods. For instance, he makes up an assorted cargo, as merchants used to do in the old days. He gets so much linen from Belfast, so much crockery from Leeds or Worcester, so much of this, that, or the other; but when he originally acquires the article at the place of manufacture he designs that article to be exported to this country, though it came first to Liverpool, where he exports it.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator from Mississippi did not state that case.

Mr. HOAR. That is what I understood by his question.

Mr. ALLISON. That was not his question.

Mr. HOAR. In such a case, let me ask the Senator from Iowa if it is the purpose of the bill to compel the transaction at Leeds, or at Worcester, or at Belfast, that is, the bill of sale or invoice there, to be disclosed?

Mr. ALLISON. Undoubtedly; but that was not the case the Senator from Mississippi put.

If the Senator from Massachusetts will allow me just one moment, I will show him why the Liverpool merchant would want just that thing. He would not desire to pay the charges upon those goods in gathering them up to Liverpool and then add that item to his invoice price, which he would be bound to do if he made it up at Liverpool.

Mr. HOAR. That is what I was about to observe, that it was in the interest of the importer to have that rule.

Mr. ALLISON. Undoubtedly; because he pays less duty.

Mr. HOAR. In other words, as I understand the bill, whenever those goods start on their way to this country, where the person controlling them intends them to come, the value at that place, as evidenced by the invoice, is to be disclosed to our customs authorities. If he be a manufacturer he is to disclose the value at the place of manufacture, at the time the goods were started. If a man buy them of the manufacturer he is to get an invoice made where he buys them of the manufacturer. If he be a man who has collected them in Liverpool and somebody in this country sends to him and purchases them there of him to bring here, then that transaction of purchase, as evidenced by the invoice, is to be disclosed to our customs authorities.

I can not understand why that is not only not the most reasonable rule but the best rule for the importer, as I was about to say when the Senator from Iowa anticipated me. You have either to disclose the original value, or the value which you disclose to our customs authorities is to be a greater one, because something will have been added to it in the way of transportation and other charges, charges of the middleman, if there be one, of superintendence and insurance, or whatever charges are added in that interval.

If the New York merchant sends to Berkshire County or sends to Worcester, Mass., the place of my residence, for a dozen tons of barbed-wire fence to be sent to South America, I can not see why it should be any hardship on him to have the South American customs laws require that an invoice should be made out at the price disclosed in the bill of sale at Worcester, where he buys it, intending to export it.

Mr. EVARTS. That is not the question at all.

Mr. HOAR. That is precisely the illustration——

Mr. EVARTS. That has nothing to do with it.

Mr. HOAR. That is precisely the illustration which the Senator from New York has put twenty times of the hardship of which he complains.

Mr. EVARTS. I have not talked about the contents of the invoice in the least.

Mr. HOAR. I have not talked about the contents of the invoice in the least.

Mr. EVARTS. Does not the Senator speak of the bill of sale at Worcester?

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator will pardon me, I have talked about the place where the bill should be made. I understand the Senator from New York says, for the purpose of illustration (transposing the relations of the parties, and taking an American exporter, we being familiar with the places of manufacture and exportation here), that it would be a hardship for a New York merchant who takes articles manufactured in different parts of the interior of this continent to send with them, to the country where he sends them for the purpose of their customs laws, an invoice made out at the place where he buys them of the manufacturer, and therefore it is a hardship on the man who is to bring goods to this country, if he lives in Liverpool and gathers them from Limoges, or Brussels, or Belfast, or anywhere else, to have the invoice made where he gets them.

I say that if at the time he acquires them, which is the only case this bill covers, he has the purpose of bringing them here, it is very easy for him to stipulate that his bill of sale from the buyer shall be accompanied with this triplicate invoice of the character which our customs law describes. It is no hardship. On the other hand, it is a positive and an exceeding benefit, from the fact that in that case there is not added to the value of the goods the cost of transportation, of insurance, of superintendence, and of all intermediate charges.

Mr. EVARTS. In the first place, we have a gloss on this interpretation, that it only concerns exported merchandise which starts for that exportation at some other place than that of invoice. But the invoice shows what it is, and what its guaranties and what its securities should be. This section simply says that the invoice shall be made at the place where the merchandise was originally procured for exportation. I should like to know how you would make out an invoice in those cases. Who shall make it out? If it was an exportation from Europe, and so stated in the invoice, there would not be a word of truth in it. The exportation of the invoice begins in Boston, where a man has bought goods to export from there.

Mr. ALLISON. If the Senator will allow me, that is not the theory of the bill at all. The theory is that the exportation begins where the goods are actually purchased. It would begin, to use an illustration of our own, where I live, or at the Vermont home of the Senator from New York if it came from there, in compliance with the law, wherever the original transaction was.

Mr. EVARTS. Very well; that is what I desired to draw out. Now, if it comes to that, we have what it means, and I move an amendment. I move to change lines 8, 9, and 10, so that they will read as I now read them:

And was made at the place from which the merchandise is to be exported to the United States.

Not where it was originally procured for exportation, for that is abandoned now, but let us make it what it ought to be, and to which I agree.

Mr. ALLISON. If the Senator thinks his phraseology——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment of the Senator from New York will be first read at the desk.

Mr. EVARTS. Let the clause read:

And was made at the place from which the merchandise is to be exported to the United States.

Mr. ALLISON. That, I think, is very good, and rather an improvement on the phraseology used in the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The proposed amendment will be read from the desk.

The SECRETARY. In line 8 of section 2 it is proposed to strike out the word "where" and insert the words "from which;" and in line 9 to strike out the words "was originally procured for exportation" and insert "is to be exported;" so that the clause will read:

Setting forth that the invoice is in all respects correct and true, and was made at the place from which the merchandise is to be exported to the United States.

Mr. CALL. I think that amendment is entirely correct and relieves the clause of the difficulties suggested to my mind.

It has been asked, what harm will it do to the consumer of foreign goods if there should be a multiplication of needless charges? That is a very simple question to answer. This bill unquestionably provides, no matter what its object or purpose is, that if a person shall purchase an article to be shipped to the United States from some port of France or Germany, the first thing he shall do is to present to the consular agent of that district, although he may be 40 or 50 or 100 miles away, the original transaction between himself and the person from whom he bought the property. It then provides that when the merchandise arrives at the place of exportation he shall again reinvoice and again re-examine. That is the unquestionable purport and effect of the provisions of this bill. It provides that the price of the merchandise shall be the valuation in the invoice. How unreasonable is that. Why should a transaction between two individuals be the basis of valuation of imported goods? What necessity for that proposition? It matters not what the individual transaction between them may be; it is the market price; it is the general price in the market from which the article is exported that ought to be taken as the basis of valuation.

But that is the plain effect of the bill, and that is the objection to it, that every needless multiplication of expense and charge adds to the consumer's cost in the use of imported articles.

The amendment of the Senator from New York, while not making the matter entirely clear, does provide that the place of exportation shall be the place at which the valuation shall be ascertained, whether it be the place of original transaction or not. It avoids the objection to the reproducing of invoices and examination. I think a much better and plainer system would have been to have required the consul of the port most convenient to the place of shipment to ascertain the market valuation and to have him held responsible. That strikes me as a much better method.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. EVARTS. I ask attention now to line 12 of the second section, which says that the invoice shall contain "a true and full statement of the time when, the place where, the person from whom the same was purchased."

The new words here are "the person from whom the same was purchased." That, in my judgment, carries too far a disclosure and it does not bear on the protection of the revenue. That carries too far an inquisition into the transactions of commerce. You will observe that this has nothing to do with the exportation. You are satisfied with having the price that was paid recited in the invoice; and the importer is bound by that, and his goods are forfeited if that is not honestly stated. Now you ask and you go on and identify what is meant, properly enough, by the purchase, "a true and full statement of the time when, the place where, the person from whom the same was purchased." But when you go further and ask a foreign merchant to disclose to you, and so to the world, trade transactions with his vendors, you carry it further than proper protection against frauds in importation should go. You have a penalty, you have the requirement, you have the means of correcting by the current prices abroad, and you now require him to identify what he means by what he paid, being the time and price; but when you come to ask a merchant to tell you from whom he bought all the articles that he exports and the price that he paid to each of them, you are encroaching upon commerce and trade beyond any just protection of the revenue. I move to strike that out.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from New York.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. EVARTS. There is a further clause in this section, beginning at line 19, which I will read.

That such actual market value—

Observe that the sole criterion of honest importation is the market value properly stated, and that is well defined. In addition to that there is this clause now first introduced into legislation:

That such actual market value is the price at which the merchandise described in the invoice is freely offered for sale to all purchasers in said markets, and that it is the price which the manufacturer or owner making the declaration would have received, and was willing to receive, for such merchandise sold in the ordinary course of trade.

This reaches, undoubtedly, in a great direction against fraudulent evasions on the question of value. That I agree to, but it introduces an element not easy to be verified. There are a great many things, as we know, that are manufactured especially for our market. I leave out whether they are manufactured for the purpose of controlling the market, and so regulating improperly the price here; but there are a great many things, and very properly, that are manufactured and produced for exportation to this country, as there are others that are produced for exportation to Australia and to Hindostan, and to China and South America, and all over the world.

When you require an adherence to the price that you name as being that of the market value, that is as near as you can reduce anything. You may diversify it, of course; that we understand; but you can not exclude falsification. Your guaranties are by supervision and penalty, and to look after your own revenue. That we all understand. Now, you require in this invoice not only this market value, but—

That such actual market value—

You are giving a description of the market value—

That such actual market value is the price at which the merchandise described in the invoice is freely offered for sale to all purchasers in said markets—

There might be a market not provided with such a criterion as that—and that it is the price which the manufacturer or owner making the declaration would have received, and was willing to receive, for such merchandise sold in the ordinary course of trade.

But the articles are not for sale in the ordinary course of trade. They are articles intended for China, if it were an exportation there, for the United States, if for exportation here. It seems to me, therefore, that you carry the verification, and the scrutiny, and the functions of the exporter as far as you properly can when you hold him to describe "the actual market value or wholesale price thereof at the time of exportation to the United States, in the principal markets of the country from whence exported." My present objection is that then the exporter shall go on and state his judgment about what the actual market value is:

That such actual market value is the price at which the merchandise described in the invoice is freely offered for sale to all purchasers in said markets.

It may not be offered at all; it may not be freely offered; it may not be a subject of general transaction. Do you mean, then, to say that we shall not export anything here that is not in the condition of being in vogue and having an ascertained free vend in foreign places? One would think not; but nevertheless just in proportion as the exporter is conscientious—and conscientious men are your best exporters—you require him not only to state what the value is in the principal markets of that country, if he knows, but to go on and say that that actual market value that he gives is one that is the subject of free and common sale.

This is new. This seems to me unnecessary in reference to a proper regulation of commerce. It tends, of course, to protect exportations; I understand that; but it is simply because it introduces an additional clause upon the conscience and a statement that will exclude from exportation not an article that you wish to exclude, because there can be no ascertainment and conscientious verification of the condition of its being a subject of common trade.

Mr. ALLISON. A definition of market value is contained in the bill, and it is perfectly plain, so that if these words were out they would be in by the decision of the courts; but these words, being in the statute, are a notification to these people as to what they ought to put into their invoices. The language which we have inserted here is copied from a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. EVARTS. It is a correct estimate whenever that estimate can be made of what market value means, and so the court say; but where it can not be used as a test the court say other means must be resorted to.

There are two objections to forcing the conscience of the exporter to say that as a matter of fact. The true judicial criterion is stated by you under your oath to be the state of things there. That is the trouble. It is a wise position to come to. Let us stand, then, upon the language as it rests before you in this clause which appeals to the conscience, because you are not only putting in a good rule but you are putting in a statement of facts as to actual value which is to be ascertained by this criterion of common vending.

The courts all say this is the criterion of determining what "market value" means, but they always add, if the articles imported are not in the condition of trade such that that criterion can be resorted to, then other means are to be used, and one of the means is to ascertain what the cost of production is. The Senators on the committee are familiar with this as lawyers and merchants are. It is natural to see how much it costs to manufacture the article and what is a fair profit. I want the distinction drawn, as I did before, between what belongs to an invoice and belongs to a declaration, and what belongs to a solution or interpretation by law. When you enact it, that is settled. Still there must be an interpretation of that as well as the other; and when you put it in the declaration that the exporter's invoice shall state that, you entangle him either in stating what may be proved not to be a just support of this definition, or he may say, "I do not know anything about this; it was sent here, and I know nothing about it." Starting the invoice you shut him up to this condition of things, whereas heretofore it has come in under a very wide definition, which our courts have ascertained.

I move to strike out from line 19 to line 25, beginning with the word "that" and ending with the word "trade."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The proposed amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. In section 2, line 19, after the word "exported," it is proposed to strike out all to and including the word "trade," in line 25, as follows:

That such actual market value is the price at which the merchandise described in the invoice is freely offered for sale to all purchasers in said markets, and that it is the price which the manufacturer or owner making the declaration would have received, and was willing to receive, for such merchandise sold in the ordinary course of trade.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. EVARTS. These amendments of detail to this important section are all that I have to present to the notice of the Senate at this time; but there are some very important and general provisions of subsequent sections that I shall ask the attention of the Senate to. Probably we have now reached an hour when the Senate will think it convenient to adjourn.

Mr. PLATT. If the chairman of the committee does not intend to press the bill further to-night, I should like to make a motion to recommit a bill—not this bill, but another.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa yield for that purpose?

Mr. ALLISON. I do.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 1438) to authorize the Kansas Valley Railroad Company to construct and operate a railway through the Fort Riley military reservation in Kansas, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 3300) to amend an act to enable the city of Denver to purchase certain land for cemetery purposes;

A bill (H. R. 5310) for the relief of Arthur C. Tompkins, late postmaster at Hempstead, Tex.; and

A bill (H. R. 8074) to provide for allotment of land in severalty to United Peorias and Miamies in Indian Territory.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1027) to fix the charge for passports at $1.

RECOMMITTAL OF A BILL.

Mr. PLATT. I ask that the bill (H. R. 1406) to provide for the sale of certain New York Indian lands in Kansas, which was reported by me from the Committee on Indian Affairs a day or two since, may be recommitted to that committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That order will be made if there be no objection.

ADMISSION OF SOUTH DAKOTA.

Mr. PLATT. I desire at this time to say that immediately upon the conclusion of the bill which is now under consideration I shall ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill for the admission of the State of South Dakota. I gave notice for a former day, at the time when the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] gave notice that he would call up this bill (but other matters which preceded this bill had delayed the finishing of its consideration beyond the day for which I gave notice), that I would ask the consideration of the bill to which I have referred; and I wish now to say that immediately upon the conclusion of this bill I shall ask the Senate to consider the proposition to admit the State of South Dakota.

CONFEDERATED OTOE AND MISSOURIA RESERVATION.

Mr. PADDOCK submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be directed to furnish for the information of the Senate a statement of the number of acres embraced in the appraisement and sale of the remainder of the reservation of the Confederated Otoe and Missouria tribes of Indians, in the States of Nebraska and Kansas, under the provisions of the act of Congress relating thereto, approved March 3, 1881, and published in volume 21, United States Statutes at Large, page 380; said statement to show, as nearly as may be, the appraised valuation of each subdivision of said reservation and the price at which it was sold, together with the name of the purchaser thereof in each case. He is also requested to report whether or not proclamation was made of said sale or any advertisement of the same; and, if so, what, and furnish copies thereof.

POSTAL-TELEGRAPH SYSTEM.

Mr. CULLOM. I desire to call up a bill that was laid upon the table some days ago, which was reported from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, Senate bill No. 2222, to regulate commerce carried on by telegraph, and ask that it be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce. The Senator from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] is present, and I am not sure whether it is his purpose to oppose the motion or not.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read by title.

The SECRETARY. The bill (S. 2222) to regulate commerce carried on by telegraph.

Mr. REAGAN. I do not propose to make any formal resistance to this motion, but I do desire to say a word in vindication of the action of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, which authorized this bill to be reported.

Many petitions have been sent to the Senate asking for some action in relation to telegraph companies. We had before us four bills, I believe, some of them proposing to build telegraph lines by the Government and operate them by the Government. The committee took the subject up and gave a great deal of attention to it. It was unwilling to agree to the proposition that the Government should build and operate telegraph lines, or that it should purchase the existing telegraph lines and operate them, because an effort to build and operate lines, it was believed, would involve the Government in a great deal of expense and in such expense as would probably make the cost of telegraphy greater than it would be under an act regulating the transmission of dispatches.

One of the bills proposed that the Government should build a system of its own without purchasing or absorbing the existing telegraph lines. This would sacrifice in a large measure the property of the owners of the existing telegraph lines, and I suppose no one would desire to destroy property if that could be avoided.

When we had determined that we would not report any of the bills presented to us, it was my view, and I suppose the view of others of the committee, that we should not be placed in the attitude of negativing the wish of the people that something should be done to control the telegraph system, understanding, as we do, that it is largely under the control of a single company, and in fact under the control of a single individual. Responding, therefore, to what we understood to be the demand of the public for action, we determined to prepare a bill regulating the transmission and delivery of dispatches. To do that we took as the foundation for our measure the bill offered by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] and amended that bill, and reported it to the Senate, providing for the regulation of the transmission and delivery of telegraphic dispatches, having for our purpose to guard against extortionate prices and to guard against discrimination and injustice, the points in which it appeared to the committee that there had been abuse. We have reported the bill which met the approval of the committee, and which, I think, is a good bill on that subject.

I shall not resist the reference of this bill to the Committee on Interstate Commerce, though I can not, in justice to myself, say that in consenting to its reference I do not fear that that is the last we shall hear of it.

Mr. CULLOM. I do not desire to take up the time of the Senate further than to say, as the Senator has referred to two bills or more that he reported adversely from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, and has given some reasons for such action, that I may take occasion before the subject is finally disposed of to give my views upon the question of the rightfulness of those bills; but I shall not trespass upon the time of the Senate by doing it now.

I make this motion not desiring to complain of the action of the Post-Office Committee in what it has done especially, but because there can be no question but that the Interstate Commerce Committee should have jurisdiction of this bill, as it is clearly, by its terms as well as by its title, a bill to regulate commerce by telegraph. I therefore have persisted in the desire that the bill should go to that committee.

In answer to the suggestion of the Senator from Texas expressing a fear that nothing may come from that committee looking to the regulation of telegraphs, I desire to say that the Senator, in my judgment, has no possible ground for even imagining what that committee will do on that subject, because it has not discussed it; it has not had an opportunity yet to do so; but a subcommittee has been appointed and is preparing to investigate the question fully, with a determination to do its duty in the premises, and I have no doubt that the Committee on Interstate Commerce will do its duty when the time comes for action.

Mr. REAGAN. I wish to supplement what I previously said by stating that we understood that we had the whole subject before us in the Post-Office Committee. Technically the bill which the Senator from Wisconsin introduced properly went to the Committee on Interstate Commerce; technically this report does not come from that committee, and in the form in which it is I see that it would more appropriately have come from the Committee on Interstate Commerce; but having the full subject before the Post-Office Committee as we understood, and not agreeing to the bills referred to us, we thought it our duty to report a bill which would meet the exigencies of the case.

Mr. HARRIS. But the bill which you reported is substantially a bill which had been originally referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and is pending there to-day.

Mr. REAGAN. I do not know whether I understand exactly what the Senator means by "substantially." We took the bill of the Senator from Wisconsin as the basis of our action and amended it in very material particulars.

Mr. HISCOCK. It would be no more than it would be if the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads had reported the bill that we are considering to-day, so far as your originally having jurisdiction of it is concerned. It was not referred to your committee, and certainly it did not come within your jurisdiction.

Mr. REAGAN. That particular bill was not referred to us; the Spooner bill was not referred to us, but we took that as the basis for our action.

Mr. HISCOCK. Then you reported a bill which was referred to another committee.

Mr. REAGAN. I do not resist this motion, because technically the Committee on Interstate Commerce is entitled to have the bill. It is an open question whether they will ever make a better bill than has been reported by the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is moved that the bill be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

The motion was agreed to.

THE SIOUX RESERVATION.

Mr. DAWES. The statement of the Senator from Connecticut that he proposes soon to call up the bill for the admission of South Dakota seems to me to render it necessary that I should ask the indulgence of the Senate at some early day to present another bill. The bill of which he speaks will be likely, of course, to consume a great deal of time. We have had no opportunity for a long time to go to the Calendar. I desire at as early a day as can be to ask the Senate to permit me to call up in the morning hour, before the consideration of these important bills, a bill which has passed the House for the division of the Great Sioux reservation in Dakota. I do that under the impression that the bill in its present shape will cause no debate, and that therefore it will consume simply the time taken to read and pass it. It contains provisions that make it very necessary, if it is to become a law, that it become a law very early; and if the Senate will indulge me to the extent of allowing me to call it up in the morning hour in a day or two, I shall be much obliged.

CONSIDERATION OF THE CALENDAR.

Mr. HARRIS. The morning hour during this session of Congress has been consumed mainly, almost entirely, in a scramble for consideration. The rules provide that we shall go to the Calendar under Rule VIII upon the completion of the routine morning business and continue under that rule until 2 o'clock. From this time on, unless by unanimous consent we agree to take two or three days consecutively to be devoted to the Calendar under Rule VIII, I will serve notice now that it will require a majority of this body to consider matters within the morning hour other than those provided for by Rule VIII.

Mr. DAWES. I have made no motion to displace the Calendar, or take any matter out of its order during the morning hour. I have not trespassed on the Senate in attempting to make any such motions. I have not used up the morning hour in that way. I have not made a motion to adjourn over from Thursday to Monday with a Calendar groaning with the amount of business ours is. I have endeavored, so far as I am concerned, to be as diligent as a man naturally would desire to be in getting along with the business. If the Senate will not consent to consider such an important bill as that moved by me, provided it involves no debate—I would not ask it to be done otherwise—a bill which has passed the Senate twice, but never before got action in the House of Representatives, they have got to object to it, that is all. I shall have done my duty. I regret that the Senator from Tennessee should serve his notice just at this point.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. President, I desire very much to go to the Calendar, not only in the morning hour, but to have a day or two set apart for it. I think we ought to do that. I will say that in speaking to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER], who entertains somewhat different views in relation to the admission of Dakota from myself, he said he would help me get the bill up, but that after I had made my statement he might want a little time to elapse before replying. If the bill could come up, and I could make a statement in regard to it, I think there would be no difficulty about interposing a little time for the consideration of the Calendar.

Mr. DAWES. As I have to crowd in a subject of this importance, it will be for the Senate to decide.

Mr. DOLPH. I quite agree to what has been said in regard to the necessity of some days being set apart for the consideration of the Calendar. There are a number of bills, almost every Senator has some bills which ought to be considered, which will take no time, to which there is no objection. They will pass the Senate and stand some chance of going through the House if sent there soon. Now I ask unanimous consent that Monday and Tuesday of next week, after the expiration of the morning hour, be set apart for the consideration of bills on the Calendar.

Mr. HARRIS. Under Rule VIII.

Mr. DOLPH. Under Rule VIII. When that is done I think the scramble for the consideration of important bills will go on without occupying so much time.

Mr. ALLISON. I shall not object to that if in the mean time the bill now under consideration as the regular order shall be disposed of. I shall agree to that if it is understood that the pending bill shall first be disposed of.

Mr. DOLPH. That is satisfactory.

Mr. HARRIS. I suggest to the Senator from Oregon that he make his request subject to the disposition of the bill in charge of the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. ALLISON. If I were to make a suggestion especially, I would suggest that we try and finish this bill to-morrow, if we can, and then set apart Friday—that is a very good day—to go to the Calendar.

Mr. DOLPH. There should be two days of the session devoted to the Calendar after the pending bill is disposed of.

Mr. PLATT. My consent to that will depend upon the vote on the motion to take up the bill to which I have referred. If that is taken up, I shall have no objection that it be laid aside informally.

Mr. SAWYER. I was about to ask unanimous consent to take up the unobjected pension cases on the Calendar.

Mr. HARRIS. There need be no hurry about them. They can be acted on at any time.

Mr. DOLPH. If we take up the Calendar that will include the pension cases.

Mr. SAWYER. Very well; I will not interfere if you want to go to the Calendar.

Mr. ALLISON. Then I understand the Senator from Oregon to ask unanimous consent now that, immediately after the disposition of the bill respecting the undervaluation of importations, two days be set apart for the Calendar under the eighth rule.

Mr. DOLPH. Subject to morning business.

Mr. PLATT. I shall move to take up the Dakota bill; and if that is taken up, it may be laid aside informally for the purpose of proceeding with the Calendar.

Mr. DOLPH. There will be no objection to that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands the Senator from Oregon to ask unanimous consent that after the final disposition of the unfinished business two days shall be devoted to the consideration of the Calendar, under Rule VIII. Is there objection? [A pause.] The Chair would inquire, in order to guide him in enforcing the agreement, whether the order is to commence immediately each day after the conclusion of the formal routine morning business?

Mr. HARRIS. After the routine business of the morning hour.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. VANCE. Does that mean the entire legislative day, or only the unconcluded portion of the morning hour?

Mr. DOLPH and Mr. HARRIS. The whole day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands the order to be that after the conclusion of the unfinished business the Senate will go to the Calendar, under Rule VIII, at the expiration of formal routine morning business, for two legislative days. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. CALL rose.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Florida rise to this question?

Mr. CALL. I rise to——

Mr. PLATT. I make the reservation which I have already made.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That prevents unanimous consent.

Mr. HOAR. I understood the Senator from Oregon to qualify his request for unanimous consent by excepting the bill referred to by the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DOLPH. I understood that the Senator from Connecticut desired to call up the Dakota bill, and then lay it aside informally.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is subject, then, to the right of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] to move the consideration of the bill for the admission of South Dakota. Is there objection? The Chair hears no objection to that arrangement.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills, received from the House of Representatives, were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs:

A bill (H. R. 4487) to enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay certain creditors of the Pottawatomie Indians out of the funds of said Indians; and

A bill (H. R. 8074) providing for the allotment of land in severalty to United Peorias and Miamies in Indian Territory.

The bill (H. R. 1438) to authorize the Kansas Valley Railroad Company to construct and operate a railway through the Fort Riley military reservation in Kansas, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The bill (H. R. 3300) to amend an act to enable the city of Denver to purchase certain land for cemetery purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

The bill (H. R. 5310) for the relief of Arthur C. Tompkins, late postmaster at Hempstead, Tex., was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

CONDITION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore appointed as the select committee, under the resolution adopted by the Senate, to examine into the present condition of the civil service in all branches of the Government, Messrs. HALE, MANDERSON, CHACE, SPOONER, BLACKBURN, DANIEL, and BLODGETT.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. PADDOCK. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nebraska moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After seven minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, March 15, 1888, at 12 o'clock m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate the 14th day of March, 1888.

POSTMASTERS.

J. Henry Browne, to be postmaster at Tompkinsville, in the county of Richmond and State of New York, in the place of John W. Bassett, resigned.

John F. Cashen, to be postmaster at New Rochelle, in the county of Westchester and State of New York, in the place of William H. Le Count, deceased.

MARINE CORPS.

Maj. Charles Heywood, to be a lieutenant-colonel in the Marine Corps, from the 9th of March, 1888, vice Lieut. Col. J. L. Broome, retired.

Capt. McLane Tilton, to be a major in the Marine Corps, from the 9th of March, 1888, vice Maj. Charles Heywood, promoted.

First Lieut. Henry H. Coston, to be a captain in the Marine Corps, from the 9th of March, 1888, vice Capt. McL. Tilton, promoted.

Second Lieut. Francis E. Sutton, to be a first lieutenant in the Marine Corps, from the 9th of March, 1888, vice First Lieut. Henry H. Coston, promoted.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 7, 1888.

POSTMASTERS.

John C. Weatherred, to be postmaster at Tacoma, in the county of Pierce and Territory of Washington.

William C. Smith, to be postmaster at Stockton, in the county of San Joaquin and State of California.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 14, 1888.

TERRITORIAL JUDGE.

Lucius B. Nash, of Washington Territory, to be associate justice of the supreme court of the Territory of Washington.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS.

John R. Read, of Pennsylvania, to be attorney of the United States for the eastern district of Pennsylvania.

Alexander B. Cooper, of Delaware, to be attorney of the United States for the district of Delaware.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Tenth Regiment of Infantry.

First Lieut. Daniel F. Stiles, to be captain.

Second Lieut. Victor E. Stottler, to be first lieutenant.

Twenty-first Regiment of Infantry.

First Lieut. Daniel Cornman, to be captain.

Second Lieut. Edward H. Brooke, to be first lieutenant.

Fourth Regiment of Cavalry.

Second Lieut. Harry C. Benson, to be first lieutenant.

Fifteenth Regiment of Infantry.

First Lieut. Edward S. Chapin, to be captain.

Second Lieut. Will T. May, to be first lieutenant.

Thirteenth Regiment of Infantry.

Second Lieut. William L. Buck, to be first lieutenant.

Second Lieut. Alexander L. Dade, Thirteenth Infantry, to be second lieutenant Tenth Cavalry.

POSTMASTERS.

D. T. Graham, to be postmaster at Madison, in the county of Madison and State of Nebraska.

Milton H. Northrup, to be postmaster at Syracuse, in the county of Onondaga and State of New York.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, March 14, 1888.

The House met at 12 o'clock m., and was called to order by the Speaker, who, on taking the chair, was greeted with general applause.

Prayer by Rev. J. H. CUTHBERT, D. D., of Washington, D. C.

The Clerk proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the portion of the Journal which relates to bills reported from committees (of which the number was very large yesterday) be dispensed with.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the reading of the portion of the Journal indicated by the gentleman will be dispensed with. The Chair hears no objection.

The residue of the Journal was read and approved.

PUBLIC BUILDING, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a report of the postmaster at San Francisco, Cal., relative to the necessity for a public building in that city; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

EXPENSES OF CUSTOMS COLLECTION.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting estimates for expenses of collecting the revenue from customs for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

LIGHT-HOUSE, GLADSTONE HARBOR, MICHIGAN.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Light-House Board of an appropriation for a light-house at Gladstone Harbor, Michigan; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

SURVEY OF KASKASKIA RIVER, ILLINOIS, ETC.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Acting Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, reports of the examination and survey of Kaskaskia River, Illinois, and of the Mississippi River at Rush Island Bend and Ivy Landing; which was referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

SURVEY OF NEWPORT HARBOR, CALIFORNIA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Acting Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, a report of the survey of Newport Harbor, California; which was referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed.

CLAIMS UNDER EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Postmaster General, in response to a resolution of inquiry relative to the amount of claims arising in his Department under the bill for the adjustment of claims of certain employés under the eight-hour law; which was referred to the Committee on Labor, and ordered to be printed.

PRIVATE LAND CLAIM, NEW MEXICO.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, with a letter from the Acting Commissioner of the General Land Office, the supplemental report of the surveyor-general for New Mexico on private land claim, the San Miguel del Bado, No. 119; which was referred to the Committee on Private Land Claims, and ordered to be printed.

F. L. SLADE, ADMINISTRATOR.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings of fact in the case of F. L. Slade, administrator, etc., against the United States; which was referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. FISHER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found duly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (S. 1071) for the relief of A. B. Norton;

A bill (H. R. 2467) to amend chapter 191 of the private acts of the Forty-ninth Congress, passed at the second session thereof, concerning James H. Young;

A bill (H. R. 880) granting a pension to Mary Everingham Brown;

A bill (H. R. 2457) to increase the pension of Hubert M. Potter;

A bill (H. R. 221) increasing the pension of John C. Johnston;

A bill (H. R. 365) granting a pension to John Humes;

A bill (H. R. 440) granting a pension to Mary C. Knight;

A bill (H. R. 363) granting a pension to Elizabeth L. Mace; and

A bill (H. R. 120) for the relief of Charlotte Caroline Hackleman.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent, leave was granted to Mr. WHITE, of New York, to withdraw from the files of the House the petition of W. M. Henry, filed in the Forty-sixth Congress, without leaving copies.

RECOMMITMENT OF A BILL.

On motion of Mr. WILKINS, by unanimous consent, the bill (H. R. 1816) to repeal all acts and parts of acts discriminating in taxation against the circulating notes of State banks and State banking associations was taken from the table and recommitted to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED.

Mr. BOWEN, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found duly enrolled a joint resolution (S. R. 60) directing the Secretary of the Interior, by means of the Director of the Geological Survey, to investigate the practicability of constructing reservoirs for the storage of water in the arid regions of the United States, and to report to Congress; when the Speaker signed the same.

RIGHT OF WAY THROUGH FORT RILEY MILITARY RESERVATION.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to discharge the Committee of the Whole House from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 1438) to authorize the Kansas Valley Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Fort Riley military reservation, in Kansas, and for other purposes, and put it upon its passage.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, subject to objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Kansas Valley Railroad Company, a corporation created under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Kansas, be, and the same is hereby, empowered to survey, locate, construct, and maintain a railway, telegraph, and telephone line through that portion of the Fort Riley military reservation, upon such a line as shall be determined and approved by the Secretary of War.

SEC. 2. That said corporation is authorized to take and use for all purposes of a railway, and for no other purpose, a right of way 100 feet in width through said Fort Riley military reservation for said line of the Kansas Valley Railroad Company, with the right to use such additional ground, where heavy cuts or fills may be necessary for the construction and maintenance of the road-bed, not exceeding 100 feet in width on each side of said right of way, or as much thereof as may be included in said cut or fill: Provided, That no part of the lands herein authorized to be taken shall be leased or sold by the company, and they shall not be used except in such manner and for such purposes only as shall be necessary for the construction and convenient operation of said railroad, telegraph, and telephone lines; and when any portion thereof shall cease to be so used, such portion shall revert to the United States, from which the same shall have been taken: Provided, further, That unless the construction of said railroad across said reservation be entered upon in good faith within three years after the passage of this act, this grant shall cease and determine upon the declaration by the Secretary of War to that effect.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. I ask for the reading of the report, which is brief, and will explain fully the object of the bill.

The report (by Mr. LAIRD) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1438) to authorize the Kansas Valley Railroad Company to construct and operate a railway through the Fort Riley military reservation, in the State of Kansas, and for other purposes, respectfully report the same back to the House and recommend that the bill do pass, with the amendment suggested in the letter of the Lieutenant-General of the Army, hereto attached, to wit: Add, after the word "reservation," in line 7 of section 1, the words, "situated south and west of the Kansas River."

"HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES,
"Washington, D. C. January 28, 1888.

"SIR: I have the honor to return herewith a bill (H. R. 1438, Fiftieth Congress, first session) to authorize the Kansas Valley Railroad Company to construct and operate a railway through the Fort Riley military reservation, in Kansas, and for other purposes.

"As now drawn the provisions of the bill do not sufficiently guard the interests of the Government, since no particular portion of the reservation is given as that upon which it is desired to locate the road. A similar bill was introduced in the last Congress, and after certain modifications, received my approval, in which the Secretary of War concurred.

"If the present bill were made to conform to the modified bill of the last Congress, as could be done by adding after the word 'reservation,' in the seventh line of section 1, the words 'situated south and west of the Kansas River,' its enactment would be of no detriment to the military service.

"Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

"P. H. SHERIDAN,
"Lieutenant-General Commanding.

"Hon. WILLIAM C. ENDICOTT,
"Secretary of War."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. McCREARY. If it does not lead to debate I shall not object. If it does, I shall insist upon the regular order.

Mr. HATCH. I want to ask the gentleman from Kansas a question.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. With pleasure.

Mr. HATCH. Is it proposed to build this railroad through this Indian reservation——

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. This is not an Indian reservation; it is to grant the right of way through the Fort Riley military reservation in Kansas—the largest reservation in the United States.

Mr. HOLMAN. How much land is appropriated for this purpose by the bill?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. I do not think it will exceed 3 or 4 miles in extent.

Mr. HATCH. May I ask the gentleman another question?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. Certainly.

Mr. HATCH. Does the gentleman from Kansas think that if this road is built there is any probability of its becoming a monopoly? [Laughter.]

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. I am very glad the gentleman from Missouri gives me an opportunity of saying this: that the Union Pacific Railroad now runs on the north side of the Kansas River, through the Fort Riley military reservation. This is a proposition to grant the right of way to a railway company to build a road along the south side of the river, and of course it will afford a competing line for the shipment of freight and for all business traffic in that region.

Mr. HATCH. Is there any provision in the bill to prevent these two lines from pooling? [Renewed laughter.]

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. There is such a provision under the general law; but nothing under the power of Heaven can prevent the railroads from pooling. There is not a railroad in the United States that is not engaged in that business now.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to inquire of the gentleman whether this grant is imperative, or whether it leaves the matter in the discretion of the Secretary of War?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. It is solely in his discretion, and nothing can be done without his assent.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the first section of the bill will be again read.

Mr. McCREARY. I have given notice that I shall object to the consideration of this bill if there is to be discussion.

Mr. HOLMAN. There will be no discussion. I only wish to have that section read to satisfy myself on this point.

The section of the bill was again read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not wish to object; but it does not seem to me that the Secretary of War has any discretion, except as to the route.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. Does the gentleman from Indiana propose an amendment? This bill simply allows the right of way.

Mr. HOLMAN. But does it give that right of way dependent solely upon the approval of the Secretary of War, in the event that he finds the public interests will not be affected?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. Undoubtedly. The right of way can not be located at all without his assent.

Mr. HOLMAN. I would suggest that it should be amended to read, "if in the judgment of the Secretary of War the public interests will not be affected."

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. If the Secretary of War thought the right of way ought not to be granted, the location could not be made under the bill. It is wholly and absolutely in his power.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ARTHUR C. TOMPKINS.

Mr. STEWART, of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to discharge the Committee of the Whole House from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 5310) for the relief of Arthur C. Tompkins, late postmaster at Hempstead, Tex.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to pay to Arthur C. Tompkins, out of any funds in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $216.28, to reimburse him for losses unavoidably sustained by him when postmaster at Hempstead, Tex., in the years 1884 and 1886.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendment:

Strike out in line 6 of the bill the words "two hundred and sixteen dollars and twenty-eight cents" and insert "one hundred and fifty-four dollars and eighteen cents."

There being no objection, the bill was considered, the amendment concurred in, and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. STEWART, of Texas, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. McCREARY. I call for the regular order.

Mr. SYMES. I wish to ask unanimous consent for the passage of a bill which I think will only take a minute or two.

Mr. McCREARY. I yield to the gentleman from Colorado.

CEMETERY AT DENVER, COLO.

Mr. SYMES. The gentleman from Kentucky waives the call for the regular order and allows me to call up for present consideration the bill (H. R. 3300) to amend an act to enable the city of Denver to purchase certain lands for cemetery purposes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Whereas at the second session of the Forty-second Congress an act approved May 21, 1872 (17 Stat., page 140), entitled "An act to enable the city of Denver to purchase certain lands in Colorado for a cemetery," erroneously describes a tract of land as the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 1 and the north half of the southeast quarter of section 2 and the southwest quarter of the southeast quarter of section 2, township 4 south, range 68 west, sixth principal meridian; and

Whereas the said city of Denver has paid for and received a patent for the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 1 and the north half of the southeast quarter of section 2 and the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter of section 2, township 4 south, range 68 west, sixth principal meridian, which latter description is correct, and in accordance with the land actually occupied by the said city of Denver for a cemetery: Now, therefore,

Be it enacted, etc., That an act entitled "An act to enable the city of Denver to purchase certain lands in Colorado for a cemetery," approved May 21, 1872, be, and the same is hereby, amended as follows: Strike out the words "the southwest quarter of the southeast quarter" and insert in lieu thereof the words "the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter;" so that the description of the said land in the said act shall read:

"The northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 1 and the north half of the southeast quarter of section 2 and the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter of section 2, township 4 south, range 68 west of the sixth principal meridian."

SEC. 2. That the United States patent issued November 15, 1873, conveying the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 1 and the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter of section 2 and the north half of the southeast quarter of section 2 in township numbered 4 south, of range 68 west of the sixth principal meridian, in the Territory of Colorado, to Joseph E. Bates, mayor of the city of Denver, and to his successors and assigns forever, be, and the same is hereby approved and confirmed. That the said city of Denver be, and it is hereby, authorized to vacate the use of the said land or any portion thereof as a cemetery, and to appropriate and use the same or any part thereof for a public park or grounds and for such other legitimate and proper purposes as the corporate authorities of the said city of Denver may hereafter determine.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. McCREARY. I will object if there is to be any discussion.

Mr. SYMES. I will withdraw the bill if there is any discussion.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. SYMES moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. GLASS. I ask that the Committee of the Whole be discharged from the consideration of the bill H. R. 1070, and that it be brought before the House for present consideration.

Mr. McCREARY. I must demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the call of committees for reports.

CONTESTED ELECTION—WORTHINGTON VS. POST.

Mr. O'FERRALL, from the Committee on Elections, presented a report in the contested-election case of Nicholas E. Worthington vs. Philip Sidney Post, Tenth Congressional district of Illinois; which was referred to the House Calendar, and ordered to be printed.

P. H. WINSTON.

Mr. OATES, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 4239) for the relief of P. H. Winston; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

HANNAH H. LATHAM.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported as a substitute for the bill H. R. 5781 the bill (H. R. 8506) for the relief of Hannah H. Latham; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

The bill H. R. 5781 was laid on the table.

CATHARINE PRITCHARD.

Mr. WILKINSON, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back with an adverse recommendation the bill (H. R. 5954) for the relief of Catharine Pritchard, with a resolution as a substitute referring the claim to the Court of Claims.

The bill H. R. 5954 was laid on the table, and the substitute resolution was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Mr. WILKINSON also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back with adverse recommendations bills of the following titles; which were laid upon the table, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. 3228) for the relief of Warren Hall; and

A bill (H. R. 506) for the relief of Battelle & Evans.

EIGHTH NEW HAMPSHIRE VOLUNTEERS.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 5907) directing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay withheld bounty to certain non-commissioned officers of the Eighth New Hampshire Volunteers discharged as supernumeraries; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the amendments and accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BATTLE OF TRENTON.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on the Library, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 1626) in regard to a monumental column to commemorate the battle of Trenton; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JAMES H. WELLS.

Mr. HOPKINS, of New York, from the Select Committee on Indian Depredation Claims, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 2048) for the relief of James H. Wells; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ABBIE SHARP.

Mr. WHITTHORNE, from the Select Committee on Indian Depredation Claims, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 4775) for the relief of Abbie Sharp, formerly Abbie Gardner; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that he had approved and signed bills of the following titles:

An act (H. R. 4911) to carry out the findings of the Court of Claims in the case of James H. Ayers; and

An act (H. R. 4756) to amend an act to restrict the ownership of real estate in the Territories to American citizens, etc., approved March 3, 1887.

DISTRICT MILITIA.

The SPEAKER. The call of committees for reports has been completed. The regular order is now the consideration, for one hour, of bills called up by committees. The hour begins at four minutes of 1 o'clock. The call rests with the Committee on the Militia. The Clerk will report the title of the unfinished business.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 4961) to amend the act entitled "An act more effectually to provide for the organization of the militia of the District of Columbia," passed March 3, 1803.

Mr. MCADOO. I ask that the reading of the bill for amendment be continued.

The Clerk commenced to read section 64.

Mr. BLOUNT. We were on section 62.

The Clerk read section 62, as follows:

SEC. 62. That no officer or soldier shall be liable to jury duty; and any officer or soldier who shall have served continuously and faithfully for nine years in the National Guard shall be exempt for life thereafter from jury duty.

The SPEAKER. On yesterday all the words after "liable to jury duty" were stricken out.

Mr. BLOUNT. On consultation with the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MCADOO] I have concluded to move to strike out the balance of the section. The duties provided for by this bill are very small; a large part of the population is not resident, and there is great difficulty in getting a sufficient number of men for jury duty.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Georgia to strike out the entire section.

The amendn ent was agreed to.

Mr. BLOUNT. I ask that the Clerk report the next section.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that section 63 has been stricken out by the House.

Mr. MCADOO. Section 64 is the next section.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 64. That the system of discipline and field exercise ordered to be observed by the Army of the United States, or such other system as may hereafter be directed for the militia by laws of the United States, shall be observed by the National Guard.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word. I desire to call attention to some of the features of this bill. The House was not giving attention to it, nor was I myself, at the time the request was made to dispense with the first reading, and unless gentlemen have taken pains to examine the bill during its reading by paragraphs, I fear that its contents are not generally comprehended, and for that reason I take the liberty of calling attention to it. On page 4 of the bill there is a provision for a staff consisting of an adjutant-general, an inspector-general, a quartermaster-general, a commissary-general, a chief of ordnance, a chief of engineers, a surgeon-general, a judge-advocate-general, an inspector-general of rifle practice, and other officers; and on page 5 there is a provision that this force shall consist of thirty-six companies of infantry, which shall be divided up according to the directions of the commanding general into infantry companies, artillery companies, cavalry companies, etc.

The uniforms, arms, and equipments are to be paid for out of the Treasury of the United States. This organization is designated as the National Guard, and there is a provision that every organization of the guard shall be "provided with such ordnance and ordnance stores, clothing, camp and garrison equipage, quartermaster's stores, medical supplies, and other military stores as may be necessary for the proper training and instruction of the force." Then there is a provision for the transfer of the property which may be needed by them. On page 15 of the bill there is a provision that "the quartermaster-general of the militia shall provide, by rental or otherwise, such armories for the National Guard as may be allowed or directed by the commanding general." Then this large and valuable staff is taken care of by a provision that the quartermaster-general "shall also provide suitable rooms for the offices of the commanding general and staff, for the keeping of books, the transanction of business," etc.

On page 17 the duties of the guard are defined, and the only duty required of them is that they shall "perform not less than six consecutive days of camp duty in each year, at such time as may be ordered by the commanding general; and the quartermaster-general of the militia, subject to the approval of the commanding general, shall provide by rental or otherwise a suitable camp ground for the annual encampment of the militia, make the necessary provisions thereon for the encampment, and provide the necessary transportation to and from the same for baggage and supplies."

Section 45 provides that the National Guard "shall have the use of the drill-grounds and rifle-range at the Washington Barracks."

Now, as to the cost of this. The committee, in their report, say that there is no appropriation contained in this bill, and that is true, but it is not the whole truth. On page 21 there is a provision "that there shall be allowed for the general expenses of the militia such sums as may be necessary for the rental and furnishing of offices for headquarters, stationery, postage, printing, and issuing orders, advertising orders, providing necessary blanks for the use of the militia, the cost of storing, caring for and issuing all public property, and such other contingent expenses not herein specially provided for as may be estimated and appropriated for."

But this does not cover it all, for on page 22 of the bill there is a provision "that during the annual encampment, and on every duty or parade ordered by the commanding general, there may be employed such number of horses as the commanding general may authorize for the use of the battery of light artillery, the troop of cavalry, the ambulance corps," etc. So that this valuable troop of cavalry are to have no care of their horses and no training of them, but the horses are to be hired from livery-men whenever occasion arises for a parade, no matter how often that may be, and are to be paid for out of the public Treasury. It appears, therefore, that we are to have an organization which is to be paid for out of the Treasury of the United States, the armory, the camp-ground, the arms, everything, and that their horses are to be taken care of by livery-men except when these militia see fit to display themselves on the street in parade.

More than that, these gentlemen who are to render such valuable services saw fit to have inserted in their bill a provision which the House has stricken out, exempting from jury duty for life "any officer or soldier who shall have served continuously and faithfully for nine years in the National Guard." They go still further, and provide for a monopoly of this thing—this businees of parading on the streets. In section 66 it is provided that—

It shall be a misdemeanor for any body of men other than the regularly organized militia and the troops of the United States, except such independent military organizations as are now in existence, to associate themselves together as a military company or organization, or meet for drill with arms, or parade in public with arms, without the permission of the commanding general; and whoever belongs to or parades with any such unauthorized body of men with arms shall be punished by imprisonment for not exceeding six months or by a fine not exceeding $50, or by both; and the police court of the District of Columbia shall have jurisdiction of misdemeanors under the provisions of this s ction.

That is section 66—it was section 67, but has become section 66. It will be observed that the bill provides—my friend from Kentucky [Mr. BRECKINRIDGE] who sits beside me, and who introduced this bill I believe, will, I hope, bear with any criticism I may make upon it——

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Oh, it does not hurt my feelings when a militiaman like the gentleman criticises a military bill. [Laughter.]

Mr. BLOUNT. This bill provides that there shall be not exceeding thirty-six companies, and the minimum to a company shall be ten. Therefore there may be 360 men, or there may be thirty-six full companies. This is the beautiful organization we are to have at all this expense! Now, I can see no occasion for it. The report of the committee embraces this remark:

It being an axiom recognized in the Constitution of our country that a well-regulated militia is necessary to the security of a republic.

Mr. Speaker, our last war disclosed the fact that this remark quoted as an "axiom" is not true. In that war the soldiery on either side were men the mass of whom had perhaps never drilled in a militia company. Yet they won a reputation equal to that of any soldiers the world has ever seen. With the experience we have had, and in view of the growth of our nation and its resources, the force of the proposition quoted in the report is completely negatived.

Sir, I can see no reason why we may not now, as in the past, depend on the volunteer organizations of the country. In my own State I have never seen a militia drill since I was a boy. We have not thought it important to have such things; and I think many other States of the Union have been willing to depend on volunteer militia organizations. I think this experience gives us a safe rule by which to be guided in this District. This bill embodies but the beginning of this force here in Washington. What we are to have hereafter in the matter of expenses for troops, armories, arsenals, etc., we can not foresee.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] has expired. The Chair observes by the Journal that the Committee of the Whole was discharged from the consideration of this bill, and an order was adopted to consider the bill in the House under the five-minute rule.

Mr. BLOUNT. I move to amend by striking out the last word.

The SPEAKER. That is the pending motion.

Mr. BLOUNT. Then I move as an amendment to the amendment to strike out the last two words.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the gentleman from Georgia will proceed.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Speaker, the volunteer organizations of this District, like those in other sections of the country, have provided on their own motion armories, etc. They are not calling upon the Federal Treasury for contributions to expenses of this sort. It is said that we need a military organization of this sort at the national capital, for the suppression of riots, popular disorder, etc. Sir, I think for meeting such emergencies we may safely rely upon volunteer organizations of the District; and if we may not, the country from this point is ramified in every direction with railroads, and soldiers can be brought here on very short notice. So far as the national defense is concerned, I apprehend that indications of trouble from foreign countries would so far precede any danger to the capital as to give time for ample provision for that contingency.

I have taken occasion, Mr. Speaker, to bring these matters before the House, because I thought that attention should be called to some of the provisions of the bill. I think, if passed, it would be hasty legislation. It had better go over as unfinished business, in order that there may be some opportunity for further consideration.

It has been said that the military organizations in this city have concurred in favor of the passage of this bill. Doubtless they have. Doubtless the disposition of the offices and other matters of that kind are all understood, and this will be a very nice thing for the military organizations that have concurred in the measure.

As to the last section, it has been urged that unless it be adopted anarchists and an ignorant class of colored people may parade as military organizations in this District. Sir, I see no harm in the anarchists, if they do nothing else than what gentlemen seem to apprehend so much; and if the colored people like the parade and the music I think we can stand it. They are the chief performers in these matters in my section, and I do not see that any harm is done.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Georgia withdraw his amendment?

Mr. MCADOO. He does, as I understand, and I move, proforma, to renew it. Sir, it is quite evident from the remarks of my friend from Georgia, that a man may be a distinguished civilian without being a very proficient militiaman. Now, this bill, although it looks like a voluminous measure, and is such so far as length is concerned, is a very simple matter. It proposes to do for the militia in the District of Columbia what the majority of the States have done for their militia. My friend from Georgia is entirely mistaken in his remarks in regard to the militia in the several States. In New York, Pennsylvania, and in my own State of New Jersey very large sums are expended every year from the taxes of the people to keep up the militia establishment; and this bill proposes to require no more in regard to the militia of the District of Columbia than is required in regard to the militia of those States.

The gentleman has read from the bill various paragraphs going to show the expenses which may be incurred by its passage. As to these expenses, one of the sections of the bill provides that annual estimates shall be submitted to the District Committee, shall be passed upon by that committee, and that when appropriations are duly made the money shall be expended under the direction of the commissioners; and these expenses are to be paid, I presume, like other expenses of the District—one half by the National Government and the other half from the taxation of property within the District.

Mr. BLOUNT. Will the gentleman allow me——

Mr. MCADOO. One moment; permit me to proceed.

Mr. Speaker, the leading features of this bill are substantially those adopted in every State of the Union which has a militia force. The same staff has been allowed as in the State of Connecticut. The whole measure is simply, as I said, in one way the application to the now independent military organizations in this District of the militia laws of the several States. This bill will not interfere, if passed, with the existence of any independent organization, but it provides for the volunteering of this independent military organization into regular battalions of militia in the District.

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman from New Jersey announces this bill does not prevent other volunteer organizations. Now, I submit whether the bill does not expressly declare it shall be confined to a certain number; that is to thirty-six companies?

Mr. MCADOO. I think my friend——

Mr. BLOUNT. It provides that in time of peace the National Guard shall consist of not more than thirty-six companies of infantry. It also prohibits independent organizations beyond that number.

Mr. MCADOO. It is quite true so far as the organized militia of this District is concerned that there will be only thirty-six companies. I propose when we reach the sixty-sixth section of the bill, on my own motion, to strike that section from the bill, so that if any organization of gentlemen wish to pay their own expenses and to parade the streets with a military band of music they shall have the privilege to do so. I do not wish to deprive any portion of the people of the great American right of marching to the sound of military music, and when we come to that part of the section I will move to strike that out. I believe it is the right of every American citizen, if he wishes, to carry arms and parade the public streets to the sound of military music, and I will not for one deprive him of that right. I do not know there is anything else necessary to say on this measure, but I will answer any questions which gentlemen may propose to me.

Mr. BRUMM. This bill provides for the payment of a brigadier-general. Now, will that officer be subject to other officers of higher authority? Will he and his subordinates be under the authority of the President of the United States?

Mr. MCADOO. The bill provides that the President of the United States shall exercise in this District towards the militia which is proposed by this bill to be organized the same powers exercised by governors of States towards the militia of their States. Hence the President of the United States will be the commander-in-chief of this militia force, and all the officers will be under his control.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. MCADOO. I hope my time will be extended by unanimous consent.

Mr. BLOUNT. I will move to strike out the last word and yield my time to the gentleman from New Jersey.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to extending the time of the gentleman from New Jersey for five minutes?

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. BRUMM. Let me ask the gentleman from New Jersey why it would not be better to appoint one of the brigadier-generals of the Army to take charge of this militia, and thereby avoid the creation of any new offices?

Mr. MCADOO. The proposition of this bill is to have a citizen soldier at the head of citizen militia—to make it a true militia, and not merely a part of the regular Army.

Mr. BRUMM. It is proposed, then, to have a complete staff of quartermasters and so on?

Mr. MCADOO. It is.

Mr. BRUMM. Are they to be paid salaries?

Mr. MCADOO. There is to be no pay whatever except for the time they are in encampment; that is, for six days. The city of New York and your own State pay the militia for the time they are in encampment; the State of New York goes to the expense of paying for a large tract of land upon which to establish a camp for its militia.

Mr. BRUMM. At whose expense are they to be uniformed?

Mr. MCADOO. They are to be uniformed and the expense is to be put into the tax bill, just the same as the States support their militia, with the exception that in the District a portion of the expense is borne at large by the people.

Mr. ADAMS. The maximum provided in the bill is thirty-six companies. I wish to ask the gentleman whether that is not a larger proportion to the population here than in any of the States?

Mr. MCADOO. That is a question of expense. Take the case of New Jersey.

Mr. ADAMS. How many are there in the State of New Jersey?

Mr. MCADOO. Seven regiments.

Mr. CUTCHEON. What is the present organization of the militia in the District?

Mr. MCADOO. There is none in the District at present.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Only volunteer organizations?

Mr. MCADOO. I can not tell how many independent companies there are at the present time.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, permit me to state, for the information of the gentleman from New Jersey, that the National Guard of the State of Pennsylvania consists of eight thousand men, a compact body of well-drilled, well-officered, and well-equipped men, who encamp once a year for military drill and review at the expense of the State. The National Guard of the State of New Jersey is also a very compact body of men, who are well drilled; and I presume the intention of this bill is to have a similar organization of the militia companies of the District of Columbia, and consolidate them into a compact body. That, I believe, is the idea. There are thirty-six companies, I understand, of about thirty-six men each, which would be a very fair number when combined, and about in proportion, I take it, to the population of this District as the militia organizations of Pennsylvania and New Jersey are proportioned to the population of those States.

Mr. MCADOO. The gentleman is entirely correct in that.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. There was, I may say, a very satisfactory exhibition of the volunteer soldiery of this country at the centennial celebration of the adoption of the Constitution, which took place in Philadelphia in September last.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. There was a very satisfactory exhibition of soldiery at the inauguration of President Cleveland, too.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. And so far as the volunteer militia of this country was concerned, which took part in that centennial celebration, it was undoubtedly a very creditable and imposing sight to see these large bodies of men so well drilled and well uniformed and equipped.

Mr. BLOUNT. Let me ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania this question: How did the militia of the State of Pennsylvania serve the State at Pittsburgh some years back?

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. They served the State very well when it came to the moment of trial. They were ready at all times to do their duty, and their presence undoubtedly did much to allay excitement and restore order.

Mr. MCADOO. We were all very proud, I will say to the gentleman, to see that large and imposing body of troops parading the streets of Washington at the time of the inauguration of Grover Cleveland.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Let me ask the gentleman from New Jersey a question. I understand that nobody is compelled to serve in this organization, but that it is all composed of volunteers.

Mr. MCADOO. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Mr. STEELE. Mr. Speaker, I wish to call the attention of the gentleman from Georgia to the fact that the nineteenth section of this bill contains a provision that requires the National Guard to come up to a proper standard of efficiency, and an inspection is provided for. Unless, therefore, they have been properly drilled outside of the six days required under the act, it must be manifest that they could not be proficient in the drill, and hence could not come up to the requirements of the law.

Again, on page 16 of the bill, section 42, it is provided that the commanding general may provide such stated drills and parades as he may deem necessary for instruction. So the gentleman from Georgia is wrong in saying that there are but six days when these men will serve in these military organizations and in which to become efficient. It leaves the question of instruction to the commanding general of the militia.

Mr. BLOUNT. I did not say that the commanding general might not require more than six days of drill. But the law requires these six days of encampment, and that is all the requirement there is under the statute. The rest is entirely discretionary with the officer.

Mr. STEELE. Suppose the general commanding did not think his militia sufficiently perfect in drill. He could prescribe additional drill for them.

Section 66 of this bill, I think, is objectionable, and I will take this occasion while I have the floor to ask the gentleman from New Jersey to recur to sections 20, 21, 22, and 24, where the bill provides, as in line 4 of section 20, for the "appointment" of the officers of the National Guard. I think it had better be amended to read "nominated."

Mr. MCADOO. I will accept that suggestion, and ask unanimous consent to go back and adopt it in the bill in line 4 of section 20, line 2 of section 21, line 2 of section 22, and lines 3 and 9 of section 24.

There was no objection, and the amendments were agreed to.

Mr. WHEELER Mr. Speaker, I think it only fair that there should be some reply to the suggestion of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] in view of the fact that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. O'NEILL] was cut off before he had concluded his answer. The point was made, or suggested by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT], that the militia of the State of Pennsylvania did not behave creditably at Pittsburgh. It should be stated in that connection that this service at Pittsburgh was before the present militia system was adopted, which I have commended, and before they had such a thorough and compact organization as now exists and as this bill seeks to give to the militia of the District of Columbia. But all of us know that the militia of Pennsylvania have now become very efficient, well organized, well drilled and equipped, and there is no possible danger of a recurrence of what occurred at Pittsburgh in 1879. If there was any lack of efficiency at that time it was due to the want of that organization which now prevails and not on account of any deficiency in the individual morale, spirit, or courage of the men, but because they were not properly organized as soldiers. No man has ever questioned the individual prowess of the sturdy sons of Pennsylvania. She has furnished more than her quota of troops in every military enterprise in this country from the date of Braddock's expedition to the present time.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. I want to say this, that the National Guard of the State of Pennsylvania at that time was not organized just exactly or as perfectly as it is now; but I also want to say that the presence of the volunteer militia at Pittsburgh did much towards bringing about a better condition of public feeling and security. It might not have done it instantly, but the effect of its being there finally reassured the citizens, and the trouble ceased, after much damage had been done, I admit. There is now a closer organization of the National Guard of Pennsylvania; but that guard was always ready to do its duty, and always will be, whether it comes to Washington to be present at the inauguration of a President or if it be called into service to quell riots or suppress insurrections.

Mr. WHEELER. I was not questioning the conduct of the militia of Pennsylvania, but on the contrary I was commending the gallantry of the soldiers of that State; but nothing I could say on this floor could add to her well-earned record. I was merely endeavoring to explain that for want of that organization which now obtains they were unable to do their duty at Pittsburgh as effectually as they could now do it if called into service. My object was to use the statements which the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] made in his argument against the bill, to show the propriety of and necessity for its passage.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. I understand; but I did not want it to be understood that I would admit for a moment that the militia of that State had ever flinched from duty, whether in Pittsburgh or anywhere else.

Mr. WHEELER. I understand, of course, what the gentleman means; and I am confident that the gentleman appreciates the purpose I had in view, and most certainly that I had no intention of creating any impression unfavorable to Pennsylvania.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I move to strike out the last word. This bill was introduced by me in the last Congress. I at that time occupied the very responsible position of being a member of the Committee on the Militia. It was prepared with very great care, submitted to the War Department, and approved by the War Department before I introduced it. At this session of Congress I reintroduced the bill, it, however, having undergone an additional and new supervision at the War Department and several changes having been made in it.

I am not enough of a soldier to know whether the system prescribed in this bill is a perfect system, for my service in the late war was very much that of a cavalry militiaman. But in looking over it it occurred to me that the bill provided about as good a system as the House of Representatives could well get up if they went to work to get up a system; that a system carefully prepared by a board of officers and carefully supervised by the Adjutant-General and a board of officers of the United States Army might fairly be presumed to be as good a system as any of us could get up, unless it be my friend from Georgia, who was not then serving upon the Committee on the Militia. Looking over it it occurred to me that all in all it was a good system for the District militia.

The sole question that seemed to me of importance was whether the District of Columbia ought to have an organized and uniform militia, and whether a city of a couple of hundred thousand inhabitants, situated as it is in the present condition of affairs, might be better off with an organized, systematic, and uniform militia rather than an irregular, unorganized, and purely voluntary system. It occurred to me that as all the States had adopted militia laws it was not a very bad precedent for us to follow to adopt for the District of Columbia this or some similar system. I am not wedded to any particular part of this system. I care very little about the particular sections of the bill. The real question for the House to consider is whether an organized system of militia for the District of Columbia is a good thing to have. I think it is. I think on many grounds it is. I think it has been established by the precedents set by the States of New York, Pennsylvania, and my own State of Kentucky, and the States generally, that a uniform body of men regularly organized, subject to call, systematized according to law, is a very good adjunct to the constabulary force of a State, and is in better shape than it is under the unorganized, purely voluntary system.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Can the gentleman state what will be the probable expense of this organization?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I am not prepared to state what the expense would be. It is comparatively small. It is for the armory in which the men meet and in which their arms and equipments are kept. It is for the six days' encampment at which the public drill of the battalion or organized body is held. I should think the whole cost would be a comparatively small amount. It is assigned as a part of the burden upon the annual tax budget of the District of Columbia, which burden is borne in part by the District of Columbia, and in part by the United States, under the arrangement which has heretofore been made as to District matters.

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman has not in his enumeration of the cost included the arms and equipments, which do not come from the funds of the District of Columbia, but come from the quartermaster and commissary stores.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. The District of Columbia is substantially put by this bill on the same footing as the various States of the Union under the act which has been in operation for many years. The United States furnishes to the various States a certain amount of arms and equipments, tents, blankets, etc., to the extent now of $400,000. But instead of the District of Columbia getting a proportional part of that distribution, it gets its share under this bill by the actual equipment of the volunteer soldiers who enlist under its operation, it being presumed that as the District of Columbia had no separate organization, and could therefore not draw from the United States Treasury, it was better to organize these troops and clothe them by a direct requisition on the Quartermaster's Department, instead of doing as the States do—clothe them in part by the requisition of the State from the United States and then by the distribution by the State to its soldiery.

Mr. BLOUNT. Will the gentleman allow me, for information, to ask him a question?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Certainly.

Mr. BLOUNT. Section 67 of this bill provides for the repeal of the existing act for the organization of the militia in the District of Columbia.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. The sixty-seventh section has been added by the committee.

Mr. BLOUNT. Now, as to that, I desire to ask the gentleman a question. The provision preventing the organization of volunteer companies has been stricken out from this bill. I wish to know whether it was not under the act which section 67 proposes to repeal that these volunteer organizations have been formed hitherto?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I am not prepared to say what the provisions of the act of 1803 were. It is a very old act, under which there has been a simulacrum, if I may use the expression, of a militia organization in the District of Columbia—a mere shadow, without any real substance. Under that act, whatever it was, the militia had been a failure in the District of Columbia, and that being so, this system was meant to supplant it. I had intended to submit a remark on the sixty-seventh section, but I omit that, and simply add that this is the real question for the House: Will it permit the organization of this militia under a system that will make it efficient? If so, this bill will do it. If the House think otherwise, let them vote this bill down.

Mr. MCADOO. Mr. Speaker, I rise for information. I wish to know what amendment is before the House.

The SPEAKER. The motion is to strike out the last word.

Mr. McADOO. Well, Mr. Speaker, we are proceeding under the five-minute rule, and I wish to say that this is the second morning this bill has been before the House and there is only fifteen minutes of my time remaining. I shall therefore be obliged to ask the Chair to enforce the rule limiting debate to five minutes upon each amendment. If the Clerk will proceed with the reading of the bill I will give the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BRUMM] a few minutes when we come to the next amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. McADOO] moved to strike out the last word. Does he withdraw that motion?

Mr. McADOO. I withdraw it.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. BRUMM. Mr. Speaker, I think the error which is being made by the friends of this bill is in the difference which they make between the national militia and the State militia. The national soldiery is composed of the regular Army. The State militia is a force that is composed of volunteers under State laws and limited in number. By this bill, however, it is proposed to enroll the entire able-bodied citizenship of the District of Columbia, with the power to call out every man of them.

In a State you can have no authority over any of the militia, excepting the volunteer militia, unless you get an act allowing a draft, but here you give the power of drafting to the general. Section 5 of the bill provides that "whenever it shall be necessary to call out any portion of the enrolled militia the commander-in-chief shall order out, by draft or otherwise, or accept as volunteers, as many as required. Every member of the enrolled militia who volunteers or who is ordered out or drafted under the provisions of this act, who does not appear at the time and place designated, may be arrested by order of the commanding general and be tried and punished by court-martial."

This is the enrolled militia. The active militia, however, is limited, I grant you, in this bill; that is, thirty-six companies; but this bill gives the general the power, without a conscript act, without any legislation on the part of Congress, to call out every able-bodied man of the 250,000 citizens of the District, thereby giving the President the sword and the purse without constraint or limit. It is contrary to the genius of American institutions, and I think we ought not to pass a bill of this kind.

Mr. McADOO. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word, in order to reply very briefly to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BRUMM]. Every able-bodied man in the United States is part of its militia under the law and the Constitution. The first part of this bill simply relates to the general citizens of the country, who are always subject to draft.

Mr. BRUMM. Not without a special act.

Mr. McADOO. They are under the existing law to-day, and in this bill, on the request of the general commanding the militia in this District, the President of the United States can, of course, call out every able-bodied man to defend the Constitution of his country; but he gets no additional power in that respect from this act.

Mr. BRUMM. Is it not true that we are relying entirely on the volunteer force in every State, supplemented by the established militia, which is limited, and that no one can be called out under conscription until a conscript act is passed? Is not that correct?

Mr. McADOO. That is not correct.

Mr. BRUMM. I do not agree with you.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the two last words. It has been stated in the report on this bill, and reiterated time and again, that the provisions of this bill were such as have been adopted by the several States, and yet, with the exception of two or three States in the Union, gentlemen have not been able to verify that assertion. My friend from Alabama [Mr. WHEELER] I am sure will not undertake to say that in Alabama they have any such organization as is here proposed, that Alabama is paying out any such sums of money, that Alabama is paying for armories——

Mr. McADOO (interposing). If the gentleman will permit me, I will say that in my State they do.

Mr. BLOUNT. That is all right, but I am talking now about Alabama. My friend from Alabama [Mr. WHEELER] will not say that in that State the militia are clothed at the public expense, and that whenever they see fit to drill or go out on parade as cavalry their horses are hired from the livery stables, or that they have the other privileges that are provided for in this bill. I am quite sure, sir, that there is nothing of the kind in my own State. Indeed, I believe that the extent of the public appropriation in Georgia for the militia is a provision for an adjutant-general.

We have not felt any great inconvenience from our policy in this respect. There is no occasion for alarm. I do not believe that we are dependent on the formation in time of peace of any organized militia force. At the outbreak of the late civil war the Army of the United States was less than 15,000 men; but when the occasion came, in the opinion of either section of the Union, for soldiers, there sprang up armies almost unprecedented in numbers and character.

Mr. STEELE. And more men were lost to the service on either side on account of the inefficiency and want of experience on the part of officers at the commencement of the war than were killed in battle.

Mr. BLOUNT. Then if that is true, let us get up something real and substantial as a military organization. It can not help us to have a lot of band-box fellows, a body of dudes in the District of Columbia, who are to go into camp six days in the year for drill, and who when they need horses for their performances are to get them from livery stables at the expense of the General Government. If our Army is not large enough, if West Point is not graduating enough men to act as military officers, let us enlist more men, let us graduate more officers; but let us not charge the Treasury with expenses for organizations such as this bill proposes. I venture to say that the judgment and practice of most of the States of this Union repudiate a miserable force of this character. We do not need it here. They may need it in Pennsylvania, where the militia were at one time called on to quell disorder at Pittsburgh. I will say nothing as to what occurred there, but I do believe that if you need an efficient military force, you want regular soldiers constantly disciplined, constantly drilled, and under the control of thorough officers. With our existing railroad communications the regular forces of the United States can be relied on for such occasions of domestic disorder as may arise. Every man in the land feels in his heart a confidence that the authority of the United States is ready to be exerted through its Army for the suppression of disorder. I trust we shall leave the matter there. If volunteer militia organizations see fit to indulge themselves, as they do all over the country, in forming military companies and drilling, I would not discourage it; I am glad to see it.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. WHEELER. In reply to the gentleman from Georgia, I wish to say that the State of Alabama has, according to her limited resources, spent more money than most of the other States to increase the efficiency of and for the encouragement of her volunteer soldiery, and certainly with most satisfactory results.

Mr. BLOUNT. How much?

Mr. WHEELER. She has now some of the best drilled and most efficient volunteer soldiers in the United States. Her company which came to this city last May made a remarkable and highly creditable display of their efficiency, as evidenced by the prize they won.

We are not compelled to appropriate very largely in Alabama to maintain our military system. Our companies are so superior that they carry off in prizes more money than the combined appropriations of the majority of the States in the Union. The Montgomery Greys were awarded a prize of $2,000 in Louisville in 1884, $2,000 in Mobile in 1885, $5,000 in the great Philadelphia competitive drill in the same year; they were awarded $2,000 at the great Georgia drill at Savannah in 1886, and they again triumphed at Vicksburg, receiving a prize of $2,000 before the year had closed, and last year they carried off a $3,000 prize from Louisville, beside numerous badges and awards attesting the merits of its individual soldiers. The Lomax Rifles, of Mobile, have gained numerous prizes; among them I recall $3,000 at Houston, Tex., and the whole world is informed of their achievement in this city last spring, when they successfully competed with all of the best organizations in the United States, and bore off the first prize of $5,000, which was handed them by the Commanding General of the Army.

The modesty, thegentlemanly decorum, soldierly bearing, and perfect discipline of these young men while in the city, was the subject of general and favorable comment.

All of the volunteer companies of Alabama of whom I have any knowledge, are composed of gentlemen of the same character. The Mobile Rifles have also been successful in many of these friendly contests, carrying off the first prize of $3,000 at Nashville in 1883. The Montgomery True Blues have also won many prizes, and the Alabama Corps of Cadets, a body of students from the State University, were awarded the prize at the great New Orleans drill in 1885.

Other States, notably Texas, Louisiana, Tennessee, Mississippi, Kentucky, Missouri, and the gentleman's State (Georgia) can boast of admirable military organizations, but I think all will take pride in the record made by Alabama troops.

I would say more, but I do not wish to endanger the bill, as there is but little time left for its consideration.

Mr. BLOUNT. Does my friend from Alabama mean to say that the military companies which came here from Montgomery, Ala., were a sample of the militia throughout that State?

Mr. WHEELER. A very good sample. I do not mean to say that all are equal to the troops I have mentioned.

Mr. BLOUNT. And will he tell us how much Alabama has spent on militia organizations?

Mr. WHEELER. I think we appropriate about $10,000 a year; but troops who have gained $50,000 in prizes, all of which is expended in increasing their efficiency, do not need large appropriations from the State.

Mr. McADOO. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask that the Clerk proceed with the reading of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair discovers by reference to the Journal that section 63 was not stricken out yesterday. An amendment from the committee proposing to strike out the section is pending, and the question will now be taken.

The question being taken on the amendment to strike out section 63, it was agreed to.

Mr. BLOUNT. I wish to ask my friend from New Jersey a question. Under what act have the volunteer companies of this District heretofore organized? Have they organized under the act of March 3, 1803, which this bill proposes to repeal?

Mr. MCADOO. I do not know. My attention has not been called to that point. But there is nothing in the existing laws of the District to prevent any number of gentlemen from associating themselves together as an independent militia company.

Mr. BLOUNT. Will my friend allow me——

Mr. MCADOO. I can not.

Mr. BLOUNT. I am only asking for information. I do not want to speak further.

Mr. MCADOO. I am glad to know it.

Mr. BLOUNT. I know the gentleman is; and I want to accommodate him. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. There is no question before the House. Section 63 has been struck out, and the next section has not been read.

Mr. BLOUNT. After the next section is read I will have something to say.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 64. The departmental and military duties of the officers provided for in this act shall be correlative with those discharged by similarly-designated officers in the Army of the United States.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Speaker, I move to amend by striking out the last word. A moment ago I asked my friend from New Jersey a question designed to ascertain whether the repeal of the act of March 3, 1803, as proposed in this bill, would not embrace the clause under which the volunteer organizations in the District of Columbia had been organized. He answered that there is nothing in the laws of the District of Columbia which prevents the organization of volunteer companies. I submit that the gentleman's remark does not answer fully my question. This law is in existence; and I desire to know whether these volunteer companies are now organized under that law or not.

Mr. MCADOO. There are only six minutes of the hour remaining; and of course there is not time for extended discussion. I will simply say that section 67 of this bill proposes to repeal the act of 1803. If the gentleman wishes to have volunteer organizations formed under that law, and apprehends that the proposed repeal may interfere with this object, I will move when we reach that section to strike it out.

The SPEAKER. Section 67 is not a part of the bill, but is a new section which the committee proposes to add as an amendment.

Mr. MCADOO. Well, I will withdraw it if the gentleman thinks it objectionable. I desire to end the debate.

Mr. BLOUNT. My friend from New Jersey is in charge of this bill, and is, I suppose, desirous of giving information as to the effect of the legislation which the committee recommends for our adoption.

Mr. MCADOO. I have been endeavoring to school the gentleman in the militia laws according to the best of my ability in my humble way.

Mr. BLOUNT. Well, in your "humble way" you have done pretty well. [Laughter.]

I have been trying to get some information from my friend from New Jersey, but so far I have not been able to get very much from him.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. The gentleman from Georgia has not given anybody else any time to do any speaking. He would not keep still so he might get the information. [Laughter.]

Mr. BLOUNT. My friend is excited about this bill. His character for statesmanship is established, but his military career will not be complete until he gets an organization or band-box brigade in the District of Columbia in the shape of a national guard. [Laughter.]

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. How can the gentleman get any information when nobody else can get the floor to give it to him? [Laughter.]

Mr. BLOUNT. That is true; I have sought information in reference to this very important measure, and so far have not been able to get it.

Mr. WHEELER. The gentleman from Georgia is determined to have the last word.

Mr. BLOUNT. I have sought information of my friend from New Jersey, but it seems the vast amount of information he had accumulated on the subject of these militia organizations has passed from him, and I can not get it.

Mr. WEAVER. Strike out the enacting clause.

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not know but the best thing just now will be to adopt the suggestion of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEAVER], and I therefore move to strike out the enacting clause of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The motion to strike out the enacting clause is not now in order.

Mr. MCADOO. I am satisfied, if the enemy ever approaches the District of Columbia and the gentleman from Georgia can only make a few amendments, he will instantly retire.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I believe I have been recognized, and I desire to make a few statements in reference to the provisions of this bill. Now, it provides in section 47—

That no officer or soldier of the National Guard, when ordered on duty to aid the civil authorities, or when ordered into the service of the United States, in obedience to the call or order of the President, shall be excused from such duty except upon the certificate of the surgeon of his command of physical disability, such certificate to be presented to the commanding general in case of an officer, or to his company commander in case of a soldier. If such officer or soldier fail to furnish such excuse he shall be tried and punished by a court-martial.

The preceding section gives the commander-in-chief in the District power to enroll every member in the District of Columbia. It then provides that the commander-in-chief may call every man out, and if they do not obey his call they are liable to be tried, every man of them, by court-martial. It seems to me it confers most extraordinary power on the President of the United States and very dangerous power.

Mr. MCADOO. It is not more than was done during the war.

Mr. KERR. But we are not in war now.

Mr. MCADOO. It is only intended for cases of emergency.

Mr. KERR. But this is not a case of emergency now, and what was done during the war was done by authority of statutes passed by the Congress of the United States when the emergency occurred. If we had a million of men, here is power conferred on the President of the United States, on the commander-in-chief, to put every man in the Army, and, if they refused to obey his call, the power to try them by court-martial.

Mr. BLOUNT. I move to lay the bill upon the table.

The SPEAKER. That motion is not in order, as the House is now considering the bill as in Committee of the Whole under the five minute rule. After the bill has been gone through with the gentleman's motion will be in order.

Mr. MCADOO. I think the House should consider this bill fairly. We have nearly finished the reading of the bill, and I ask by unanimous consent that the time be extended for ten minutes.

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not think that is time enough to consider so important a measure.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman proposes to extend the time for ten minutes.

Mr. BLOUNT. I object.

The Clerk read section 66 of the bill, as follows:

SEC. 66. That it shall be a misdemeanor for any body of men, other than the regularly organized militia and the troops of the United States, except such independent military organizations as are now in existence, to associate themselves together as a military company or organization, or meet for drill with arms, or parade in public with arms, without the permission of the commanding general; and whoever belongs to, or parades with any such unauthorized body of men with arms shall be punished by imprisonment for not exceeding six months, or by a fine not exceeding $50, or by both; and the police court of the District of Columbia shall have jurisdiction of misdemeanors under the provisions of this section.

Mr. MCADOO. I move to strike that section out.

Mr. BLOUNT. I demand a division.

The SPEAKER. The time of the committee is expired. Does the gentleman from Georgia insist upon his demand for a division?

Mr. BLOUNT. I do. Let the section go out.

Mr. MCADOO'S motion was agreed to, and the section was stricken out.

The hour having expired, the bill went over to the next morning hour.

REDUCTION OF PASSPORT FEES.

Mr. MCCREARY. Mr. Speaker, this day, under the special order of the House, was set apart for the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

I call up for present consideration the bill (S. 1027) to fix the charge of passports at $1.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the passage of this act a fee of $1 shall be collected for each citizen's passport issued from the Department of State. That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this are hereby repealed.

Mr. MCCREARY. Let the report be read.

The report (by Mr. HITT) was read, as follows:

A passport is, in its terms, a certificate of citizenship, and it contains a request to all whom it may concern to permit the bearer safely and freely to pass, and in case of need to give him all lawful aid and protection. There is no apparent reason why such certificates should be made a source of revenue or form of taxation by the Government. "Any citizen of the United States," said Secretary of State Fish, "has a right to be furnished with such evidence of citizenship, and of his right to the protection of the Government, as has been adopted for that purpose, upon complying with the usual regulation." At the present time, and for a long time heretofore, a charge of $5 has been made to every citizen who obtains from this Government this certificate of ten lines. The Secretary of State, in a communication to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, recommends that the fee, now so high, be reduced to $1, which leaves it still a source of some revenue to the Government. The fee of $5 is really a serious burden upon many of our people. It weighs especially heavy upon those crossing from Florida to Havana, where, in addition to the passport fee of $5, there are notarial fees of $2, visé by the Spanish consul at Key West, $4, and entrance and departure fee at Havana, $2.50, total $13.50, which is levied upon American citizens desiring to go from Key West to Havana, about 100 miles.

There is now a very considerable traffic between those points. An American steam-ship company recently established a line between Tampa, Key West, Fla., and Havana, and experience shows that the passport charges are a serious check to travel. The Spanish authorities, in view of this fact, modified their charges so that the visé at Key West is now only 60 cents, with a very light charge at Havana for arrival and departure, reducing the entire Spanish charges to about $1.

In 1886, between January 1 and August 12, there were over 1,200 passengers from Key West to Havana. From October 14 to the 25th of January, 1887, there were from Tampa and Key West to Havana 1,723 cabin and 2,821 steerage passengers. Nearly the whole of this travel is commercial. It is only during a short period of the winter that there is a small amount of travel which is not commercial. It is manifestly impolitic to burden the active commerce of the country, and especially persons of such limited means as are those here mentioned, with so heavy a fee as the law now imposes.

While the fact may be that Americans traveling to Europe are usually persons of ample means, who could readily pay a tax of $5 for a passport, which they sometimes take, there has been a change in regulations by the liberal policy of the great European states, almost all of which have abolished the requirement of passports, so that American travelers going from New York to England, France, etc., are no longer required to take passports with them to those countries. But the old burden rests with all its severity upon those going to Cuba, who are engaged in business, and are generally men of slender means.

Your committee coincide in the opinion of the Secretary of State that the present passport fee ought to be reduced to $1, and therefore recommend the passage of the bill.

[Senate Ex. Doc. No. 144, Forty-ninth Congress, first session.]

Message from the President of the United States, transmitting a letter of the Secretary of State, in response to a resolution of the Senate of May 5, relative to charges for passports to American citizens.

To the Senate:

In response to a resolution of the Senate of the 5th instant, inquiring as to the necessity for the continuance of the present charge for passports for American citizens desiring to visit foreign countries, I transmit herewith the report of the Secretary of State on the subject.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, May 17, 1888.

To the President:

The Secretary of State has received from the Senate a resolution bearing date the 5th instant, of which the following is the text:

"Resolved, That the Secretary of State be, and he is hereby, directed to inform the Senate what necessity, if any, exists for the continuance of the present charge for passports to citizens of the United States desiring to visit foreign countries, and whether in his opinion the charge now made can be reduced or dispensed with without detriment to the public service."

In reply, the Secretary of State has the honor to state that the possession of passports by American citizens traveling in Russia, Germany, Turkey, and Spain, and the dependencies of these countries, is still there a subject of legal requirement. In addition, it is desirable that all naturalized citizens of the United States visiting the country of their origin should carry passports as proof of their acquired citizenship.

The present legal fee for a passport is $5, and in the year commencing March 7, 1885, and ending March 7, 1886, there were issued 4,600 passports, and from the fees charged a revenue of $23,000 was derived.

I am disposed to recommend a reduction in this charge to $1 for each passport, as the fees derived therefrom would fully pay for all the clerical force, stationery, and postage made necessary.

Respectfully submitted.

T. F. BAYARD.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, May 17, 1888.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 31, 1887.

DEAR SIR: The Plant Investment Company, in January, 1886, established a line of steam-ships between Tampa, Key West, Fla., and Havana, Cuba (distance 365 miles), making three trips per week each way during six months of the year and two trips each way the remainder. The line carries the United States mail, and the time is very fast, and it is necessary to make the most of all classes of business in order to make the line pay even expenses, which we regret it has not done at all times. The passenger business has been injured by the passport charges, which have been as follows: Notarial fees, $2; United States passport, $5; visé by Spanish consul at Key West, $4; entrance and departure fees at Havana, $2.50; total, $13.50. Key West is about 100 miles from Havana, and there would be far more travel between these two cities but for these charges.

The Spanish authorities modified their charges so the visé at Key West is 60 cents, with a very light charge at Havana for arrival and departure; so the entire Spanish charges are about $1, while the United States charge remains the same, notwithstanding that it is an American enterprise that should not be discouraged by its own Government.

From January 1, 1886, to August 12, 1886, the line carried from Key West to Havana 245 cabin and 980 steerage passengers; from August 12, 1886, to October 14, 1886, we have not the data at hand; October 14, 1886, to January 25, 1887, from Tampa to Key West and Havana, 1,723 cabin and 2,821 steerage passengers.

We think that these data will convince you that nearly the whole of this travel is commercial. During a very short period in the winter there is a small amount of travel that is not commercial. While the receipts from this source are light, we are glad to get it to help pay expenses, as it is all necessary to a line that thus far has been far from profitable.

Very respectfully,

THOMPSON & SLATER.

Hon. R. R. HITT,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Mr. McCREARY. The report in this case was made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HITT], and I yield to him such time as he may desire.

Mr. HITT. Mr. Speaker, the pending bill reducing the price of a passport from $5 to $1 is so simple that it needs no explanation, save, perhaps, to say that complaints have been so numerous of the burden which the passport fee has unnecessarily put upon many of our people, especially upon those who can ill afford it, that the attention of Congress has at last been drawn to the subject, and this bill is presented with a view to providing suitable legislation to bring the passport tax down to a reasonable amount. The Senate of the United States, two years ago, called upon the Executive to know if the passport fee, in his judgment, could not be reduced or even abolished. It is now only proposed to be reduced by this bill. Sufficient is still charged to pay and more than pay all the expenses necessarily incurred in preparing passports, such as clerical expense, stationery, etc. The diminution of the charge will in no way diminish the precautions to be taken in issuing the passport, the investigation necessary before it is granted, nor the protection it will afford to its bearer. It will be cheapened in cost, but not in quality; and this cheapening will come to those very ones who need it most. The passport regulation is enforced by foreign governments like Cuba, where people of small means go for business or work.

Mr. Speaker, the passport is no longer required of our citizens who go to France, England, and, generally, those countries where the current of American travel consists chiefly of persons of such ample means that this fee would be to them an inconsiderable expense; but on our southern coast, to the people of Florida and those of Louisiana, who have frequent occasions to go to the Spanish dependencies in the West Indies, it is a serious burden. Spanish law requires a passport from all strangers. That is not all. The amount of the exaction, connected with the passport, first by our Government, and then by the Spanish authorities, is so great that it more than equals the transportation charges of a poor man who goes to Cuba from Florida in pursuit of work or trade.

In Spain, Turkey, and Russia only, among the European countries, save in part in Germany, is the passport system still enforced upon those who arrive in those countries. Cuba, being a Spanish dependency, where disorders are quite possible, the rule is carried out in all its rigor. Here it falls upon a class of our people, becoming very numerous since the establishment of the new line of steamers, who can not well afford to hear this unnecessary charge for a paper of ten lines, which it is the right of every American citizen to have from his Government—a mere statement by the Government that he is a citizen. The newly established steamer line found it a hard struggle to maintain itself in running boats from Florida to Havana, made far harder when the passengers had to pay more for passport exactions than for steamer fare.

Mr. Fish, when he was Secretary of State, many years ago, declared that it was the right of every citizen to have this evidence of citizenship, and yet by law we have made this a source of revenue, the last thing in the world we should select as a means to fill the Treasury. I know of no objection to the bill to be answered, and therefore shall not occupy the time of the House longer.

Mr. ADAMS. Will my colleague permit me to ask him a question before he takes his seat?

Mr. HITT. Certainly.

Mr. ADAMS. I notice from the reading of the report it is said that by additional fees the cost of the passport is increased in some instances to about $13. Now, in obtaining passports in Chicago for a naturalized citizen of German extraction, for instance, I have had occasion to know that the expense there is much more than $5; and I want to know whether that additional expense does not come from some United States official whose fees can not be reduced at the same time? I believe the report stated the origin of this matter of fees.

Mr. HITT. The extra fees or charges referred to by my colleague are added by the notarial officers who procure the passport for the traveler and who are citizens of the United States. The fees referred to in the report, however, as amounting to $13 and upwards to those going to Cuba are the fees authorized by foreign laws and charged to our countrymen by foreign officers, besides the $5 first collected by our own Government. If a man who is in a hurry to embark goes to New York without providing himself with a passport, and then just before starting wishes a broker of passports to obtain one for him, he usually pays the broker $10 instead of $5, the broker charging a fee of $5 for his services. If the naturalized citizen of Chicago, referred to by my colleague, had only addressed the Department of State, "Passport Bureau," he would, upon proper information and proof, have his passport for $5. This bill reduces the cost to $1.

Mr. DAVIDSON, of Florida. Let me ask the gentleman from Illinois if the Senate did not pass a similar bill last year?

Mr. HITT. It was passed by the Senate in the last Congress, and was unanimously recommended by the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives, but was crowded out and failed with many others for want of consideration in the House. Now it has been passed again by the Senate, and is again recommended by our Committee on Foreign Affairs, and to-day only awaits the action of the House and the signature of the President to become a law.

Mr. McCREARY. Mr. Speaker, the passage of this bill has been recommended by the Secretary of State; the reasons have been fully set forth in the report and in the remarks of the gentleman from Illinois; and believing no further discussion to be necessary, I now demand the previous question on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The previous question was ordered; under the operation of which the bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McCREARY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

JOHN P. HAGEMAN.

Mr. McCREARY. I now call up the bill (H. R. 4691) for the relief of John P. Hageman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That a certain Mexican bond belonging to John P. Hageman, of the city of Kingston, Ulster County, and State of New York, and being for the sum of $50, and numbered 298, due July 4, 1885, and signed by José M. J. Carvijal, as governor of Tamaulipas and San Luis Potosi, acting for said States and the United States of Mexico, and now in the custody of the Department of State, be restored to him; and the Secretary of State is hereby authorized and directed to deliver to the said John P. Hageman, or his assigns or legal representatives, the said bond.

Mr. McCREARY. This bill was by mistake referred to the Committee of the Whole House. It does not contain any appropriation of money, nor does it raise revenue. Its object is only to restore a Mexican bond to its proper owner. I therefore ask that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from the further consideration of the bill, and that it be considered in the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SPRINGER). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCREARY. I ask now that the report may be read.

The report (by Mr. HITT) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Foreign Affairs, to whom was referred House bill 4691, beg leave to report:

That John P. Hageman, of Kingston, Ulster County, New York, in 1865 did certain advertising in his newspaper, the Rondout Courier, for the Mexican Government, amounting to $50, which was not paid, except by the delivery to him by the duly authorized agent of the Mexican Government of a bond for $50, on which nothing was or has been paid. In 1870 Mr. Hageman submitted to the United States and Mexican Claims Commission his claim for this amount, $50, and filed this bond with the papers before the commission. Owing to the fact that he failed to produce proof of his citizenship or of the authority of the parties who made and executed the obligation, the claim was dismissed by the umpire February 3, 1874. The Government of the United States has nothing whatever to do with the payment of this bond, which is one of a series known as the Corlies-Carbajal bonds, issued by the Mexican Government in 1865. Our State Department has received information, and caused it to be made public through the newspapers, that the Mexican Government has recently provided for their redemption. In reply to Mr. Hageman's inquiry, the Secretary of State said, December 17, 1886:

"Your bond is apparently one of these genuine bonds. But before you can take any steps looking to the redemption of that bond, as provided by the Mexican Government, you will have to procure an act of Congress authorizing this Department to return to you the bond in question. It, being a part of the record of that Claims Commission, can not be removed therefrom except upon such permission."

In reply to an inquiry from this committee the Secretary says:

"In view of the precedents set by Congress in acts authorizing the surrender to their owners of original papers which have formed a part of the files of the said Claims Commission, I see no reason to object to the passage of this bill."

The committee therefore recommend the passage of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McCREARY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

HUMANE JAPANESE.

Mr. McCREARY. I now call up for present consideration the joint resolution (H. Res. 95) to enable the President of the United States to extend to certain inhabitants of Japan a suitable recognition of their humane treatment of the survivors of the crew of the American bark Cashmere.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to extend to the inhabitants of the island of Tanegashima, Japan, a suitable recognition of their kind and humane treatment of the survivors of the crew of the American bark Cashmere, lost off that coast in the year 1885, and to convey to the Government and people of Japan an expression of the high appreciation in which the Government and people of the United States hold such humane services.

SEC. 2. That the sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to enable the President to execute the purpose aforesaid.

Mr. McCREARY. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from the further consideration of the joint resolution, and that it be considered in the House.

There was no objection.

Mr. McCREARY. I ask that the report be read.

The report (by Mr. MORROW) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Foreign Affairs, to whom was referred House resolution No. 95, beg leave to report:

On the 11th of September, 1885, the American bark Cashmere, bound on a voyage from the city of Philadelphia to Hiogo, Japan, encountered a violent typhoon near the coast of Japan. The fury of the gale soon reduced the vessel to a hopeless wreck. The officers and crew numbered fifteen, consisting of the master and his son, first and second mate, carpenter, eight seamen, steward, and cook. The first and second mate perished on the morning of the 13th of September while engaged in heroic efforts to save the vessel. A few hours later the master was swept overboard and lost. At this time, when the dismantled vessel was apparently unable to much longer resist the violence of the storm, seven of the men managed to get into the only remaining boat and set out in what appeared to be a hopeless effort to reach land.

The captain's son, the carpenter, and three of the crew were compelled to remain with the floating wreck. After two days of suffering, without food or water, the seven men who took to the boat landed in a famished condition on the little island of Tanegashima, inhabited by Japanese fishermen and peasants. These kind-hearted and hospitable people hastened to feed, clothe, and dress the wounds of the unfortunate castaways, and in every way possible administered to their wants. As soon as the latter were able to travel the islanders provided them with transportation to the Japanese city of Kagashima, where they were also hospitably received and kindly treated for eight days, when they were sent o Kobe, where the United States consul took them in charge and placed them on board a vessel bound to San Francisco.

In the mean time the wreck, upon which were left the captain's son and four members of the crew, was unexpectedly kept afloat by the buoyancy of its cargo of kerosene stored in cans in the hold of the vessel. For seven days and nights after the departure of the boat the five men remained on the wreck, crowded into a small space under the forecastle, with only a few raw yams to eat and a little vinegar to drink. Their suffering from hunger and thirst was most intense. The helpless craft finally drifted in sight of land, and the men constructed a raft with which, after much toil and danger, they reached shore and found that they had landed upon the same little island of Tanegashima, where their comrades in the boat had a few days before been rescued from the perils of the sea.

The Japanese, unwearied in their kindness, again hastened to the shore to rescue, feed, clothe, and administer to the wants of this second party of unfortunate strangers, which they did with even a more kindly generosity and a greater sympathy than before, as the last party were in greater distress than their comrades. After ten days of careful treatment, the second party had sufficiently recovered health and strength to travel, and they were also sent to Kobe, from which place they were sent to Yokohama by the American consul, and at the latter port they obtained passage on a vessel to New York. The escape of these poor sailors from the misfortunes that had overtaken them was most miraculous, but the humane and generous treatment they received at the hands of the kind-hearted Japanese was the feature of the story they had to tell when they reached home.

Our shipwrecked sailors have not always been so fortunate in that part of the world. The Japanese have never failed when occasion required to show their sympathy for people in distress; but their kindly disposition is in marked contrast with the barbarous conduct of many other people on the Asiatic coast. Instances have been reported where our shipwrecked sailors have been subjected to the most cruel and inhuman treatment; and the power of the Government has been invoked to punish such inhumanity.

It is the boast of our civilization that we seek to cultivate the highest order of fraternal obligations for the relief of distress in times of peril and disaster, whereby we spread abroad a spirit of friendliness and universal brotherhood. The present instance should not be allowed to pass, therefore, without some suitable recognition of the humane conduct of the Japanese towards the survivors of the American bark Cashmere.

The committee, therefore, recommend the passage of the accompanying resolution.

Mr. McCREARY. I give as much of my time as is necessary to the gentleman from California [Mr. MORROW], who introduced this bill and made the report from the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Mr. MORROW. I apprehend it will not be necessary to go into much of a discussion with reference to this joint resolution. The facts upon which it is founded are set forth in the report which has just been read.

It is a fact that the treatment received by these poor sailors from the Japanese was very conspicuous for its humanity, and that it was the feature of the story these people had to tell when they reached home. It was very remarkable that they were rescued at all, because the vessel apparently was about to go down when the first boat left the vessel with some seven of the men and sought the shore. These seven men, after suffering for two days on the open sea, finally reached land on this small island of Tanegashima. The vessel they had left, instead of going down, as it was supposed it would do, kept afloat by reason of the buoyancy of its cargo of kerosene.

There were five men who remained on board this vessel for seven days. At the expiration of that time, when almost dead with hunger and thirst, they found themselves near land and managed to construct a raft, by which they reached land on this same island of Tanegashima.

The Japanese took these poor fellows, clothed them, fed and provided them with transportation to a port where they reached the American consul. The conduct of these Japanese was very remarkable, and was in strong contrast to the treatment our men have received elsewhere under like circumstances. Some years ago an American vessel was wrecked off the coast of Sumatra. The seamen who were wrecked were treated most inhumanly and barely escaped with their lives.

When the matter was brought to the attention of our Government we sent a man-of-war to destroy the village where these inhuman people lived, to teach them and others the lesson that American citizens should be respected wherever they were.

It seems proper under all these circumstances that the President of the United States should be authorized to give some sort of testimonial to these people. If this should be done it will have an exceedingly good effect with reference to our relations with the people of the Asiatic coast.

The amount contained in this bill was incorporated in the deficiency bill of last year, was approved, I believe, by both Houses, but failed in consequence of the failure of the deficiency appropriation bill. I believe the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] is familiar with that fact.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McCREARY moved to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

DR. H. B. MATTEOSIAN.

Mr. McCREARY. I now call up the bill (H. R. 7934) for the relief of Dr. H. B. Matteosian.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, upon vouchers duly approved by the Secretary of State, the sum of $1,000 to be immediately available, to pay Dr. H. B. Matteosian for services as temporary delegate of the United States to the sanitary commission at the port of Constantinople.

Mr. McCREARY. Dr. H. B. Matteosian rendered the service referred to in the bill at Constantinople. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from the further consideration of this bill, and that it be considered in the House.

Mr. HITT. If that is agreed to I presume the bill would still be open for debate?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Certainly.

Mr. HITT. I should like to hear something from the gentleman from New York [Mr. COX] in regard to it.

Mr. McCREARY. Dr. H. B. Matteosian, as I have said, rendered this service at Constantinople. He did it under the authority of a dispatch from the Department of State to Hon. G. H. Boker, then minister to Constantinople, authorizing the provisional appointment of this physician as temporary delegate of the United States to the sanitary commission at that port.

A distinguished member of the present House of Representatives, who succeeded Mr. Boker, was intimately acquainted with Dr. H. B. Matteosian, and understands the service he rendered. I therefore yield as much of my time as may be necessary to the gentleman from New York [Mr. COX], the late minister to Turkey.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I should prefer that the report should be read to the House by way of explanation of this claim. I am not an advocate of the claim in any sense of advocacy. I am rather in the relation toward it of a judge. I know Dr. Matteosian, and, as the termination of his name signifies, he is an Armenian. He was a surgeon in our Army during the war. He went back to Turkey, and, because of his eminent skill in his profession, he was chosen in 1874 by the State Department to be a member of the sanitary commission at Constantinople. In that commission he met regularly with the other members, physicians connected with the hospitals in that city, for fourteen years. After a while our commerce there failed. We had no shipping in Constantinople—none worth looking after—only a few Italian barks that carried our petroleum there.

The commission reported regularly upon the sanitary condition of all vessels that came from the Bosphorus, and they were very strict in doing so. Dr. Matteosian met, with the English, French, Austrian, Russian, and other members of the commission, and took part in their consultations and reports. When I went to Constantinople I could not find his reports on record—indeed, I could find very little else in the legation until I at last found a gentleman who arranged our archives, put them in good order and filed them away. After I had been there some time this doctor came to the minister and said, "I am called on to pass upon some matters connected with the sanitary condition of the city in connection with American vessels." It was news to me, but looking up the archives I found that General Wallace had given assurance that our Government would pay the doctor something for his services. General Wallace, however, had no funds from which to make the payment. I wrote to the Secretary of State, asking what was the function of this doctor; whether he was an officer, and if so, of what kind; whether he was appointed under a law of Congress, and if so, under what law.

I found that he occupied an anomalous position. He was no officer. He was delegated by the State Department for this business, but he had no promise of compensation; he had assumed the position without pay. He is not strictly entitled to any pay, but, as all our ministers there have assumed from time to time that he should have some compensation besides the mere honor of the business, I wrote to the State Department about it, and I promised that it I ever got back to Congress again—and I had some little idea of getting back even then [laughter]—I would say something in favor of this claim, and I have said it. How to fix the proper amount of compensation for these fourteen years I can not tell; nobody can tell just what it should be; so I put into the bill the round sum of $1,000 for the fourteen years' service. If anybody thinks that is too much, let him move to strike it out. I promised the doctor to lay his case before the American Congress, and I have done it.

Mr. HITT. I wish to ask the gentleman a question. Knowing how familiar he is with the usages of those eastern countries generally, and especially in connection with the foreign legations, I wish to ask him whether this doctor performed any regular service that really caused him any sacrifice of time or of patients, whether he did not receive great benefit in his practice as a physician from his recognition by the legation, and whether he was not very solicitous to retain this post and very strenuous in opposition to any attempt to supplant him?

Mr. COX. I do not know as to the details of that matter. I know that the French physician connected with this sanitary commission is paid 10,000 francs and the English physician £400 sterling. Our man rendered the same service that they did, except that his service did not result in helping our own country much, because during the last few years we have had no shipping there. There was one little perquisite connected with the service of the other physicians on this commission: they were made physicians to the legation. I was not sick enough while I was there to send for this doctor, so I have no interest of that kind in this bill. [Laughter.] I suppose he met with the other members of the commission and they consulted and talked over the regulations about cholera and yellow fever and those diseases that come out of the Orient and sometimes cause great damage throughout the world, and in that way, perhaps, his services were of benefit to us.

Mr. HITT. Does the gentleman from New York [Mr. COX] think it was a real advantage to the Government to have this doctor there, always ready, willing to serve?

Mr. COX. Well, Mr. Boker thought so; General Wallace thought so; I thought so myself, and the State Department has said so.

Mr. McCREARY. Is it not true that other delegates who served in like positions were paid by their respective governments?

Mr. COX. Yes, all the governments except ours paid their members of the commission.

Mr. McCREARY. Is it not true that the French Government paid theirs $2,000, and that the English Government paid their physician the same amount?

Mr. COX. The French and the English physicians were paid, the one 10,000 francs and the other £400 sterling. I do not know what to say about this claim further than to lay it before Congress. I want to see our business in Constantinople wound up handsomely according to the equities, and I think this is one of them.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Will the gentleman tell us how long this payment of 10,000 francs and £400 to the French and the English physicians, respectively, has been made?

Mr. COX. Ever since the creation of the commission, in 1874.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Is the condition of our Treasury so bad that we need to take a position in this matter only half equal in dignity to that taken by other nations? Why should we not pay as much as the others?

Mr. COX. Well, if I were a magnate of Wall street I could answer that question, but being an impecunious person, I can not do it. [Laughter.]

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McCREARY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

A. B. TYAN.

Mr. McCREARY. I call up House bill 7255 for the relief of A. B. Tyan.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to pay to A. B. Tyan the sum of $3,618.80, being the sum found due to the said A. B. Tyan from the United States when the Secretary of the Treasury, in obedience to an act of Congress entitled "An act for the relief of Victor Bean Voucher, passed March 29, 1886" (private No. 20), audited the expenditures of Victor Bean Voucher, late consul of the United States at Jerusalem.

Mr. McCREARY. This bill was introduced by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PHELPS], and I yield to him so much time as he may desire to explain the measure.

Mr. PHELPS. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from the further consideration of the bill, and that it be now considered in the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SPRINGER). If there be no objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection.

Mr. PHELPS. Mr. Speaker, this bill has been introduced at the request of the State Department. The object of the bill is to appropriate $3,618.18 for the reimbursement of money which was expended by the claimant in the succor of certain American citizens who were stranded without resources of any kind at Jaffa in the winter of 1867–'68. This amount of money was expended in providing these people with food and with transportation by which they might return to their native country. The expenditure was made through the American consul at Jerusalem, whose name was Victor Beaubouchер. It was the supposition, until recently, that this money, which was in fact advanced through Beaubouchер, was his own money; and a bill passed in the last Congress authorized the State Department to repay him these advances. Subsequent investigations by the Department have discovered the fact that while Beaubouchер, the consul, was the instrument of making the expenditure, the money was actually advanced by a banker named Tyan, then and now doing business in Jaffa. At the request of the Department of State this bill has been introduced to authorize the payment of the money not to Beaubouchер, the consul who expended it, but to A. B. Tyan, the man who actually furnished it.

The committee has directed me to ask the adoption of two verbal amendments, which I send to the Clerk's desk—one to strike out in line 7 the words "the Treasury" and insert "State;" the other to change "Bean Voucher," in the printed bill, to the real name of the party—"Beaubouchер." I offer these amendments.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I would be glad if the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PHELPS] would inform us who these people were, and why the Government should relieve them.

Mr. PHELPS. They were a company of Americans, numbering forty or more, mostly from the State of Maine, who were led by a religious enthusiast named Adams to settle in Jaffa, in the hope that by some miraculous interposition their enterprise would prove successful. Providence did not intervene, except in the ordinary way, and they were, as I before said, stranded without resources.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The first question will be on the amendments offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PHELPS] on behalf of the committee.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McCREARY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

HANNAH J. JONES, EXECUTRIX.

Mr. McCREARY. I now call up the bill (H. R. 4257) for the relief of Hannah J. Jones, executrix.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of State be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to refer the claim of Emanuel Jones, deceased, a British subject, now on file and pending before said Secretary, to the Court of Claims for adjudication, to be presented in the name of Hannah J. Jones, his executrix; and said court is hereby authorized to hear and determine the same upon principles of equity and international law; and if a decree be rendered in favor of said Jones, the Secretary of the Treasury shall be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to make payment thereof: Provided, That either party shall have the right of appeal from such decree of said court, and the decision on such appeal shall be final.

Mr. McCREARY. I move that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from the further consideration of this bill, and that it be considered in the House.

There being no objection, it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. McCREARY. This bill was introduced, I believe, by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER], to whom I now yield so much time as he may desire to explain the measure.

Mr. HOOKER. Mr. Speaker, my friend from Kentucky [Mr. McCREARY] is mistaken in supposing that I am the author or introducer of this bill. It was introduced by my friend from Alabama [Mr. JONES], who comes from the region of country where a majority of the persons affected by the bill reside. I, however, having had the bill referred to me as a subcommittee of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, prepared the report on the subject. If it be desired by any gentleman, I will have the report read; or if more agreeable to the House, I will state the character of the claim.

Mr. HERBERT. Let the gentleman make a brief statement, without having the report read.

Mr. HOOKER. This bill proposes to authorize the reference of the claim of Hannah J. Jones to the Court of Claims, to ascertain the amount which may be due to the estate of her deceased husband, Emanuel Jones, a British subject, who came to this country before the late war between the States and settled in the city of Mobile, Ala. Before and during the war he aggregated all his assets in cotton, which was stored in a certain warehouse in the city of Mobile. When the city, by its surrender, fell into the hands of the Federal forces, this warehouse, containing Mr. Jones's cotton, with that of others, was seized by officers of the United States Government, acting under authority to confiscate whatever cotton was supposed to belong to the Confederate government or to persons who had rendered it aid. Immediately upon being notified that the Federal forces had taken possession of the warehouse containing this cotton, Mr. Jones, the owner, went to the Federal officer, and, as a British subject, demanded possession of his cotton. He was accompanied by the then British consul at Mobile, Mr. Cridland, in order that the latter might certify as to the character and nationality of Mr. Jones and the circumstances under which the cotton had been deposited.

The Federal forces having control of the warehouse and this cotton, with that belonging to others, declined to surrender it to Mr. Jones. They declined to pick out the specific cotton belonging to Mr. Jones, and which was designated by definite and specific marks. They also declined to give its weight. A few days after that the city of Mobile, Ala., fell into the hands of the Federal forces. In consequence of the explosion of ammunition in an adjoining warehouse, the warehouse where this cotton belonging to Mr. Jones was stored was set on fire, and the cotton for which the claim is made in this case in behalf of Mr. Jones—Mr. Jones having died in the mean time—was destroyed. All that is provided in the bill is that this case may be adjudicated by the Court of Claims, with the right of appeal on the part of the Government or of Mr. Jones's representative to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Let me read the certificate of Her Britannic Majesty's consul:

[British consulate for the States of Alabama and Florida, United States of America.]

I, Frederick J. Cridland, Her Britannic Majesty's consul for the States aforesaid, residing at Mobile, Ala., do hereby certify that the foregoing writing—

That is, the invoice of the cotton belonging to Mr. Jones which had been seized. I will read further—is a true and correct copy of an original invoice of 252 bales of cotton, sworn to and deposited in this consulate on the 27th day of August, A. D. 1864, by Mr. Emanuel Jones, a British subject; the aforesaid copy having been compared by me with the original document now in the archives of this office.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my seal, at Mobile, this 18th day of December, A. D. 1877.

[SEAL.] FREDERICK J. CRIDLAND,
H. B. M. Consul.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Does the report show the date of the seizure of this cotton?

Mr. HOOKER. The report of the committee shows all the facts. It is stated in the report:

On the 12th day of April, A. D. 1865, the Federal forces took possession of the city of Mobile and immediately seized the warehouse in which Mr. Jones's cotton was stored, and placed military guards around it, and declared their intention to ship said cotton to New York, to be there sold as captured property and prize of war, and the proceeds thereof to be turned into the Treasury of the United States.

On learning of the seizure of his cotton by the military authorities of the United States, Mr. Emanuel Jones went to said warehouse and notified the officer in command that this cotton was his, and that he was a British subject; and he offered to point out the specific cotton and identify it by the marks thereon. He was turned back at the gates by the armed guard, and refused admission. He appealed to Mr. Cridland, the then consul of Her British Majesty at the port of Mobile, who went with Mr. Jones to the office of the Federal general in command at Mobile, and then and there explained to said commanding officer that Mr. Emanuel Jones was the bona fide owner of said cotton, and further advised said officers that said cotton was placed in said warehouse by the advice of the said consul, to be under the care and protection of the consulate of the government of which Mr. Emanuel Jones was a citizen.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Did this British subject become the bona fide purchaser of this cotton? Is there any evidence to show that alleged fact?

Mr. HOOKER. Yes; there is evidence that he was a druggist in the city of Mobile, and was possessed of a considerable amount of Confederate money.

The report states:

He was engaged in business in said city at the breaking out of the war. Large sums of money were due him and paid to him in the depreciated currency of the South. In order to save himself from heavy losses he invested largely in cotton, hoping thus to save sufficient to enable him to return to his native country, which had always been his intention and purpose. His purchases were made in the interior, from time to time; but, for safety of his purchases, he in the year 1863 concentrated them in the city of Mobile, and stored them in a public warehouse in the city of Mobile, in the State of Alabama.

That is the language of the report. Again:

By the advice of Her Majesty's consul at the city of Mobile, Ala., Mr. Cridland, he, in August, 1874, deposited in his office an invoice of his cotton (amounting to 252 bales), which was registered by the consul as the property of Emanuel Jones, a British subject. A copy of the invoice, certified by the consul, is filed as Exhibit No. 1 to this report.

A large portion of the cotton which had been seized was surrendered, and what was surrendered was shipped to Drexel & Co. and sold, and became a part of the large sum paid into the Treasury as the proceeds of the sale of captured and abandoned property. Mr. Jones's cotton which had been there was, as I have stated, destroyed by fire a short time after its seizure. Mr. Jones, in his correspondence with the British Government, first with Lord Lyons and subsequently with Sir Edward Thornton——

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. When was this claim first preferred against this Government?

Mr. HOOKER. From the very incipiency he has made his claim for this property; first on the part of his own government, and subsequently on the part of the United States Government. I have sent for a report, made by Mr. Herndon, representing the Mobile district of Alabama, on this floor, some ten years ago. He has been constantly claiming it from the Government of the United States. He has always been insisting upon his claim being presented by his government against this Government, and has even been demanding its payment on the part of this Government.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Was the report which was made on his claim in Congress favorable or otherwise?

Mr. HOOKER. I understand the Congress in which Mr. Herndon was the Representative of the Mobile district the committee did make a favorable report.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Was it ever reported on adversely?

Mr. HOOKER. I am not aware it has ever been reported upon adversely. The claimant has been here prosecuting his claim ever since. He tried to go into the Court of Claims, but he was met with obstacles. He now asks that he shall be permitted to go into the Court of Claims for adjudication, first as to whether the matter claimed is as it is claimed; in the second place, whether the claimant of this property was a British subject, and in the third place, whether the property was destroyed or not while in the possession of the forces of the United States.

Mr. BUCHANAN. What I have heard in reference to the matter excites my curiosity to have some further information on the subject. I understand this claimant claims that as a British subject he went to Mobile, Ala., and purchased with Confederate money this cotton, and put it into a warehouse which was taken possession of by the Federal forces, and that while in such warehouse it was seized by the Federal forces. Am I correct? How long was he a resident of Mobile, Ala., before this cotton was seized?

Mr. HOOKER. He was a resident before the war broke out. He was a resident at the time of the seizure, and at the time the cotton was destroyed, and while it was in the possession of the Federal authorities. The report states:

The said owner, Jones, was completely dispossessed of his property and not allowed access to it for any purpose. There was no pretense that this property was seized on account of any act of Mr. Jones towards the Government of the United States. Mr. Jones, during his life-time, made every effort to obtain release of his cotton and for payment therefor after it was sold by the Government. The Secretary of the Treasury declined to adjudicate the claim because the proceeds never reached the Treasury, the cotton having been destroyed.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. As this claim arises on the part of a British subject, I ask whether there has been any international correspondence in reference to the claim itself, and whether any claim has been presented to this Government by the British Government in behalf of this claimant?

Mr. HOOKER. I do not think there has, and I will tell the gentleman why.

The following passage from the report which the committee make will show what was done:

He had hoped that the treaty in reference to the Alabama claims would open the way to his relief. But under this treaty British claims were limited to claims originating prior to the 9th of April, 1865, while Mr. Jones's cotton was seized on the 12th of April, 1865, and thus he was cut out of relief by three days, under the limitations of this treaty.

Hence he could not claim under that.

The committee proceed:

There is therefore no tribunal to which Mr. Jones can resort save the sense of justice of the Congress of the United States, to which he now again appeals.

That Mr. Jones was the bona fide owner of this property is beyond dispute; that he was a British subject is equally beyond dispute; that his property was seized by the Government of the United States is equally beyond dispute; that it was destroyed while so held by the Government is not denied; that he is entitled to redress somewhere and before some tribunal is a clear and undisputed proposition. Will this Government refuse to create a tribunal to pass on the question of his right to remuneration?

Your committee believe that this claim should receive adjudication by a tribunal established by the Government, and this is all the executrix and heirs of Mr. Jones ask at the hands of the Government of the United States.

Your committee therefore recommend that the bill be reported back to the House of Representatives with the recommendation that the bill do pass.

Some correspondence was had, I think, with all the British ministers here, with a view to proving his claim against the Government of the United States; and some correspondence was also had between Sir Edward Thornton and the Department of State, but it resulted in nothing. The Congress of the United States undoubtedly has the right to create or designate a tribunal in which the claimant shall be allowed to go and ascertain whether there is anything due justly and legitimately or not. That is all the bill proposes.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. HOOKER. Certainly.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. Suppose this case: Suppose a Northern man had been down there during the war, and had lost his cotton under the same circumstances suggested here, does the gentleman think the Government would be liable to him for his loss?

Mr. HOOKER. I should think that he would have an equitable claim, and should be permitted to go, as in this case, to see if he could establish his right before the proper tribunal.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. But would it, under the rules that Congress has established in reference to such cases, entitle a Northern man, who was there and lost his property under similar circumstances, to come before Congress and expect to have his claim recognized?

Mr. HOOKER. I do not know but that he would have that right. But that is a very different question from that presented here. Besides, there is no evidence, I will state to the gentleman—in fact, the evidence is all to the contrary—that he was other than he represented himself to be, a citizen of Great Britain; and this affidavit shows that he was residing there as a British subject, and, contemplating a return to his own country, he invested his money in cotton; that he never took part in the war, either on the part of the Union or the rebellion; that he had accumulated the property while there, and had by the advice of the consul of his own government confided it to this warehouse, where it was held by force of bayonets against his claim to identify or to insure it, and save him from the loss which ultimately befell him because of this fact.

I yield now to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HERBERT].

Mr. BUCHANAN. Before the gentleman takes his seat—and I am asking for information—I want to ask if I understand him to say that this cotton was taken possession of by the United States forces?

Mr. HOOKER. Yes, sir.

Mr. BUCHANAN. And was destroyed while in possession of the United States forces?

Mr. HOOKER. Yes, sir.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Is there anything to show that it was destroyed by order of the United States authorities, or was it by accident?

Mr. HOOKER. It was destroyed by an accidental explosion of ammunition in an adjoining warehouse, which communicated fire to the warehouse in which the cotton was stored.

Mr. HERBERT. Mr. Speaker, I will endeavor to answer the question of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JOHNSTON] who asked the gentleman from Mississippi if a Northern man had been in Mobile, and had acquired some cotton during the late war under the circumstances shown by this report, whether, in the event of its loss under similar circumstances to those enumerated here, the Government would have paid him? I think not. According to the reasoning of the court in, I think, the case of Alexander—at all events a cotton case—the first one decided by the Supreme Court, the status of the citizen during the late war and his relation to his property was determined by the situs of the property, and where the citizen was during the war; that is, if he was in Confederate territory, and took his chances with the Confederates, he must also take the chance of loss; and Mrs. Alexander lost her cotton for that reason.

But there is a difference between the situation in that case and in the case of a British subject. It was the duty of a citizen of the United States to go where the Government could protect him and his property. If he was South at the breaking out of the war, his duty of allegiance to the Government of the United States required that he should have gone North and brought his property North with him if he could. But there is no rule of law that required a British subject, under these circumstances, to do anything of that kind. If this man was a British subject in good faith, he had the right to own property there.

Now, the question has been asked by another gentleman whether he did not purchase this cotton with Confederate money. The report says that he did. But that is no reason why he should not be paid. The Supreme Court of the United States long ago, in the Smith case, I think—or Smith was one of the parties to the case—decided that Confederate money was a good consideration to support a contract. That is the law of this country. That decision has been followed in a number of cases——

Mr. BUCHANAN. Will the gentleman permit an interruption? I did not advance that as a reason, but was inquiring as to the facts in this case.

Mr. HERBERT. I can not see the purpose of the inquiry unless it tended in that direction.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Well, that was one of a dozen facts in reference to which I asked to find out about the case.

Mr. HERBERT. I suppose the gentleman asked because in his mind there were suspicious circumstances connected with it; and there was suspicion upon the question whether or not he was a British subject, whether he bought the cotton for Confederate money, and also whether or not he really owned the cotton.

Mr. BUCHANAN. The gentleman from Alabama can tell the workings of his own mind, but I think it will trouble him to tell the workings of mine.

Mr. HERBERT. I supposed the gentleman had some point in his inquiry. I gave him credit for not making an inquiry without any point, and I do not see what point there was if it was not this.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I made the inquiry because I had heard only a portion of the facts, and I was seeking to group the facts together and see if I understood them correctly. Is the gentleman satisfied?

Mr. HERBERT. I am. This bill submits the whole of this question to the Court of Claims. That court is to find whether Jones was a British subject, and whether he owned this property; and if the court finds that he was a British subject and did own the property, then it is to ascertain whether or not the Government was responsible for it.

The Government is responsible for it if the agents of the Government took it in charge and had it in charge, and if in consequence of the unlawful detention of it by the agents of the Government it was destroyed by any subsequent accident. It is not on the ground that the Government is responsible for an accident which happened by reason of an explosion of ammunition or anything of that kind. This case proceeds on no such idea. But it does proceed on the idea that the Government wrongfully detained this property from the person who claimed it, who insisted on his right to it, who offered to show to the officer of the Government by the evidence of the British consul, who went with him and offered testimony, that this was his property. And if it was his property, he claims it should have been surrendered to him, and if surrendered to him it probably would not have been destroyed.

Mr. DAVIS. Will the gentleman state what is the amount of the claim?

Mr. HERBERT. The amount is stated in the report; it is something like $56,000. There were 252 bales of cotton, and it is estimated in the report that it was worth at that time 40 cents per pound.

Mr. KERR. When was this cotton purchased by the claimant?

Mr. HERBERT. The report states it was purchased at different times during the war.

Mr. KERR. And before we took possession of that territory?

Mr. HERBERT. Yes. Long before the Union Army got there.

Mr. STEWART, of Vermont. Does it appear that the cotton was accidentally destroyed?

Mr. HERBERT. Yes. It was stored in a warehouse which was contiguous to another warehouse in which the Government had stored ammunition. That ammunition accidentally exploded and the explosion set fire to this cotton.

Mr. STEWART, of Vermont. Do I understand the gentleman to say, then, that the cotton was accidentally destroyed?

Mr. HERBERT. It was accidentally destroyed. I admit that the Government would not be responsible for an accident. What makes the Government responsible in this case is the wrongful detention of the property. The Government took possession of the cotton, had it in its possession; a demand was made for it and the Government refused to give it up. In other words, there was a conversion of the cotton by the Government when it refused to give it up, when it refused to let this gentleman remove it. Out of those facts the responsibility arises, or at least that is a question for the court to decide.

Mr. STEWART, of Vermont. The gentleman claims that the seizure was wrongful?

Mr. HERBERT. The claim is that the detention was wrongful, whether the seizure was or not. The Army had the right to seize the cotton in that warehouse because there was cotton there which they had the right to seize, and they could not at first separate it.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Was this cotton destroyed at the time of the explosion of ordnance stores at Mobile?

Mr. HERBERT. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOUTELLE. What record is there of the value of the property?

Mr. HOOKER. There is a certified report of the weight and value of the cotton.

Mr. BOUTELLE. How can that report be made? As I remember, at the time this explosion took place during General Canby's occupation of Mobile, many were killed and great havoc resulted. Under such circumstances it would seem to be difficult to have an accurate report of the value of this property.

Mr. HOOKER. There is an accurate report because the cotton was deposited with the British consul, and here is his certificate. The report gives the affidavit of Emanuel Jones, the owner.

Mr. BOUTELLE. The owner?

Mr. HOOKER. And appended to that is the affidavit of the British consul. Here is the affidavit of Jones:

I, Emanuel Jones, a British subject, of Liverpool, England, at present a resident of Mobile, do hereby make oath and declare that 252 bales cotton mentioned in the foregoing invoice is solely British property. So help me God.
EMAN'L JONES.

Sworn to before me at the British consulate at Mobile, this 27th day of August, 1864.
[SEAL.] FRED. J. CRIDLAND,
British Consular Agent.

And the invoice is given with it. It will be shown that this cotton was his and in his possession long before Mobile was in the hands of the Federal forces.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I do not understand that there was a British consul there in 1864.

Mr. HOOKER. There was.

Mr. BOUTELLE. To whom accredited?

Mr. HOOKER. Accredited by the British Government.

Mr. BOUTELLE. To whom accredited?

Mr. HOOKER. I will read the certificate:

BRITISH CONSULATE FOR THE STATES OF ALABAMA AND FLORIDA, UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

I, Frederick J. Cridland, Her Britannic Majesty's consul for the States aforesaid, residing at Mobile, Ala., do hereby certify that the foregoing writing is a true and correct copy of an original invoice of 252 bales of cotton, deposited in this consulate on the 31st day of May, 1865, by Mr. Emanuel Jones, a British subject, and sole owner of said cotton, on his application to this consulate in reference to the destruction of the same by the explosion of the United States ordnance stores in Mobile, on the 25th day of said month of May, 1865; the aforesaid copy having been compared by me with the original document now in the archives of this consulate.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my seal, at Mobile, this 18th day of December, A. D. 1877.
[SEAL.] FREDERICK J. CRIDLAND,
H. B. M. Consul.

He certifies the deposit was made there.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I fail to clearly understand to whom the British consul could have been accredited at that time.

Mr. HOOKER. He makes this certificate in 1877. I suppose he was duly accredited by the government, and he was there during the war at the time this deposit was made, I understand.

Mr. BOUTELLE. As I understand the affidavit, this statement of the owner of the cotton was made in 1864.

Mr. HERBERT. In 1865.

Mr. BOUTELLE. In 1864, I understood.

Mr. REED. In 1874, it would seem by this report.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I understood the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] to read it as "1864."

Mr. HOOKER. Jones's affidavit is made in 1864, but the statement of Cridland is in 1874.

Mr. BOUTELLE. But before whom was that affidavit of Jones made in 1864? Not before the British consul, because there was no British consul there.

Mr. HERBERT. I think "1864" is a misprint.

Mr. REED. To whom was this consul accredited at that time? That is what my colleague [Mr. BOUTELLE] asks.

Mr. HERBERT. My understanding of it, speaking only from memory, is that this gentleman, Mr. Cridland, was in Mobile, accredited to the United States, until the State passed the ordinance of secession. At some time after that I think he was accredited to the Confederate government, but it can make no sort of difference whether he was accredited to the Confederate government or to any other. Certainly the status of Emanuel Jones was not affected by the question whether Cridland was accredited to one government or another.

Mr. BOUTELLE. What I wanted to bring out was this: As this affidavit was attested by the British consul, whose action, of course, would derive all its force from the official capacity in which he stood, I wanted to learn what his official capacity was at that time. Now, of course I know nothing about this claim, but I was in that vicinity about that time, and my recollection is that at the time this explosion took place there was a great deal of havoc created in that portion of the city; there was a conflagration raging there for two or three days, during which it was dangerous for men to work in that neighborhood, and I know that so far as the United States authorities were concerned it was impossible to make any direct or accurate ascertainment of the damage done or of the amount or character of the property destroyed. It therefore occurred to me that it must have been a matter of some difficulty to ascertain and demonstrate at that time the precise character, value, and ownership of property destroyed in that conflagration.

Mr. HERBERT. In reply to the gentleman from Maine, it may be admitted that Cridland at that time was, if you please, accredited to the Confederate government; it may be admitted, if you please, that he at that time was himself disloyal; it may be admitted, if you please, that anything that Cridland said at that time was absolutely worthless. That has nothing to do with the status of this case. This case rests upon the idea that Emanuel Jones was a British subject.

Mr. KERR. Will the gentleman let me ask him a question?

Mr. HERBERT. One at a time, if you please. This case rests upon the ground that Emanuel Jones was a British subject, and that he owned this property, and his proof that the property was destroyed consists, I suppose, from this report——

Mr. BOUTELLE. Of his own affidavit.

Mr. HERBERT. His own affidavit, in support of which he produces the warehouse receipts for 252 bales of cotton deposited there prior to the time when the Union forces captured Mobile, and prior to the time when they seized this cotton. After this cotton was seized, and a demand was made, the refusal by the representative of the United States Government to give up the property when he ought to have done it, if these facts be as stated, constitutes a conversion of the property. Every lawyer understands what that means, a wrongful withholding of the property, and that act made the Government responsible.

Mr. BOUTELLE. When was this property thus wrongfully withheld?

Mr. HERBERT. It was destroyed on the 12th day of April, 1865, flagrante bello, if you please.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Certainly. That is exactly what I was going to suggest, that at the time when this withholding of this property on the part of our Government is dated, the United States troops had just occupied the city of Mobile.

Mr. HERBERT. They had occupied it for some time, and there was really a truce there.

Mr. BOUTELLE. This explosion of ordnance occurred a very short time after the occupation of the city by our troops.

Mr. HERBERT. A very short time after the Federal Government was in peaceful possession of the city.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Ordinary commercial relations had not been reestablished in Mobile at that time. It was in a state of war.

Mr. HERBERT. I understand that; but notwithstanding the state of war the Government had no right to improperly withhold the property of a British subject. They had the right to withhold the property of any citizen of the United States, but not the property of a British subject.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Against whom would this claim rest, against the military officer of the United States?

Mr. KERR. Does the gentleman hold if a British subject went into the territory of the United States while we were blockading the port of Mobile and purchased cotton——

Mr. HOOKER. No, he lived there before the war began.

Mr. KERR. And purchased that cotton, does the gentleman say that cotton would be protected?

Mr. HOOKER. He was living there all the time; he was living there when the war broke out.

Mr. HERBERT. All these questions, Mr. Speaker, this bill proposes to submit to the Court of Claims. While the report says there is no doubt about the facts, yet it appears better to leave everything to be decided by the Court of Claims, not only the law but the fact.

Mr. CUTCHEON. With the right of appeal?

Mr. HERBERT. Yes; with the right of appeal to the Supreme Court.

Mr. ADAMS This claimant having concentrated his property in Mobile with the intention of escaping with that cotton, would that fact make this Government liable? When he gathered his property in cotton at this blockaded port of Mobile for the purpose of escaping with it, does that make this Government liable? The report states:

He was engaged in business in said city at the breaking out of the war. Large sums of money were due him and paid to him in the depreciated currency of the South. In order to save himself from heavy losses he invested largely in cotton, hoping thus to save sufficient to enable him to return to his native country, which had always been his intention and purpose. His purchases were made in the interior, from time to time; but for safety of his purchases he, in the year 1863, concentrated them in the city of Mobile, and stored them in a public warehouse in the city of Mobile, in the State of Alabama.

The report shows clearly that he had concentrated there this property with the intention of escaping with it.

Mr. HOOKER. Why does the gentleman use the word "escaped?" All along he intended to return to his own country.

Mr. ADAMS. I see the report states that his purchases were made in the interior from time to time, but for safety of his purchases he, in the year 1863, concentrated them in the city of Mobile, and stored them in a public warehouse in the city of Mobile, in the State of Alabama. Now, I suppose that was a blockaded port at that time, and I suppose he did that to break the blockade. I do not blame him for trying to do so, but if this is sent to the Court of Claims it should be with authority given to the Court of Claims to consider that question and everything connected with it.

Mr. HOOKER took the floor.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. I hope the gentleman will yield to me for a few minutes.

Mr. HOOKER. With pleasure.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. There are one or two matters, Mr. Speaker, in respect to which I wish to hear from the Committee on Foreign Affairs before the vote is taken on this bill. It appears in the report this claimant was down there trading on the misfortunes, if you can so term them, of these people, and that when Confederate money began to depreciate in value he put that which he had into cotton, which cotton, after he had purchased it, was stored in the blockaded city of Mobile, Ala. This report also shows that under a state of facts, for which the Government of the United States was not responsible, this property was destroyed by accident. Now, there is no report coming from the Treasury Department in regard to this matter. If this so-called British subject had an honest claim, and one that would bear inspection, there would have been some claim made on the Treasury Department, and there would be some report from that Department upon which members of the House could act. But there appears to be no report from that Department on the subject.

Mr. HERBERT. Let me state to the gentleman that the Treasury Department stated it had no jurisdiction of the case.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. There is another point which looks suspicious. If this Mr. Jones was a bona fide British subject, when he had property destroyed by the United States under any circumstances of the kind alleged, I believe the British Government would have taken interest enough in him to present his claim to the State Department.

Mr. DINGLEY. Is not that the usual course?

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Undoubtedly. The usual course in matters of this kind is to present the case to the home government, and that government will look after the interests of its subject or citizen.

Now, I confess I have no sympathy for Mr. Jones in his loss. I would much rather, so far as I am individually and personally concerned, pay a claim to an honest Confederate soldier, who had the courage of his convictions and faced the Federal Army on the battlefield, than to take up the claim of some greedy Shylock, who claimed the protection of the British flag, and who sought to use that protection as a means of the more successfully trading upon the misfortunes of the people of this country during the war.

Mr. WEST. That is right.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. This man, they say, Mr. Speaker, was living there some years; but there is no evidence contained in the report to indicate whether he was directly or indirectly connected with some of the blockade-runners who were seeking to break the blockade of the ports of the South and prolong the war, not for the benefit of the Confederates, but for the filthy lucre they could make from running cotton through, and making their profit on it in that way. It seems to me that it is due to the Confederate soldiers, as well as to the Union soldiers, that men of this class when they present claims should expect to have them most carefully inspected; and they should be as free from suspicion as Cæsar would have his wife. If this man was there to prey upon the misfortunes of the people, whether it be the people of the South or the people of the North, he should not receive and ought not to expect to receive the recognition of this Congress.

The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HERBERT] says that all this bill seeks to do is to send this case to the Court of Claims. I understand that it is the policy of Congress, in sending claims there, that there should be some honest, legitimate ground upon which the claim rests. We all know that the docket of that court is already overcrowded with cases of just claimants, and to whom many thousands of dollars are due; and yet the interests of these claimants can not be served by the court, owing to this overcrowded condition of its dockets.

I am unwilling, therefore, to send a claim to that court unless there seems to be evidence of such a character as would justify favorable action, and that would present, as in the case of this so-called British subject, his claim in a light which would bear inspection.

Mr. BLAND. Let me ask the gentleman whether or not a person claiming to be a British subject under such circumstances has any right to come to this Government for relief? Had he not better go to his own government and have Great Britain pass upon the question first, and if he is a British subject and has a just claim, then we can act upon the matter through the proper channels on the request of the British Government.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. That is exactly the point I make, and members of the House will see by reading the report themselves that this claim in the first place is an extravagant one. The price of the cotton shows that this man was speculating in it, and he admits, as further shown by the report, that he had some Confederate money which he invested in cotton. In other words, he thought it was well to unload this money, and he unloaded it upon the people of the South and obtained their cotton in exchange for it, and now he seeks through the Court of Claims to get war prices for cotton obtained under such circumstances.

It seems to me that this claimant is in about the same position as that of a blockade-runner. This cotton was purchased, on his own showing, from a section of country in rebellion and under a blockade. He is a British subject, giving aid and comfort to the enemy by purchasing their goods and storing them in the blockaded city of Mobile. In the changing fortunes of war he lost his investment, and I for one am not willing that he shall now receive any recompense from the Government. He belongs to a class of men who deserve the condemnation of honest and brave men both North and South—a class that no language can fitly describe. At the proper time, Mr. Speaker, I shall move to lay this bill upon the table.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. Speaker, from the facts as stated by the committee in this report, for one I have no sympathy with the claimant, and certainly do not believe in the justice of his claim; and believing that this claim should not be paid, therefore I am against referring to the Court of Claims that which I believe unjust, even to our own courts to decide.

This report, sir, develops this state of facts: That this claimant had, in the course of his business at Mobile, accumulated a large amount of Confederate money, and, for the purpose of saving himself from great loss, invested it in cotton in the interior of the State. Now, sir, on the 12th day of April—but I wish first to call the attention of the House to the fact that he had previously stored this cotton in the store-room of a warehouse at Mobile. Up to this time no British consul had been appealed to; but when, by the fortunes of war, we captured Mobile on the 12th day of April, 1865, General Canby placed a guard around the warehouse where this cotton was stored. He never seized and never placed his hand upon it.

This claimant goes to the warehouse and seeks admission, as he states, but is told by the officer on guard that he can not enter. At this point certainly there is no evidence of any negligence on the part of the Government. The claimant then goes to the British consul, as he states, and the consul comes with him, and he seeks the protection of that consul for the property. The question comes up here, then, first, that certainly there was, and could have been, no accredited consul from Great Britain to the United States at the city of Mobile on the 12th day of April, 1865, nor had there been for years, unless he should take the position that the British consul, having been sent to Mobile accredited to the United States, and prior to the war of secession, had remained there during the entire war as the accredited consul, for the purpose of protecting British subjects; and I do not believe that is good law or even that it will be claimed.

But further, sir, this report reveals another important fact in determining the liability of the Government. Mind you, the Government had not used this cotton, but the further fact appears, and I read from the report, that—

> Cotton was then scarce, and eagerly sought by purchasers. The true owner, Emanuel Jones, could not ship his cotton, nor could he effect insurance on the cotton.

Mobile was then in a state of blockade——

Mr. HERBERT. Not at that time; the blockade had been raised.

Mr. BOUTELLE. When was it raised?

Mr. WARNER. It was raised on the 12th day of April, 1865, when General Canby captured Mobile. It was on the 12th day of April that this party made his claim, and I read from the report to show the dates, if the report is to be relied upon.

Mr. HERBERT. Let me state that my understanding is this: The Union troops were in possession a few days before that of the bay and city.

Mr. KERR. The protecting fort fell on the 9th, and this cotton transaction took place on the 12th.

Mr. WARNER. I am following this report, which recites the facts as I take it correctly. This report says that on the 12th of April, 1865, the Federal forces took possession of the city of Mobile.

That is the time they took possession of it. And this report says further that this man, the real owner of the cotton, could not ship it, nor could he obtain insurance abroad. I will ask any gentleman on this floor by what act the Government prejudiced this property. Did its placing this guard around this warehouse endanger the security of the property? I will submit to the gentleman that the act of the Government was the act of protecting the property. And even had there been an accredited consul of Great Britain then in Mobile at that time, he could not insure it, and as a prudent man, wishing to protect the property of a British subject, he would have done just what General Canby did, and placed a guard around the warehouse to protect it.

Then, by an unforeseen accident, in which no officer of the Government was at fault, in the wreck of other buildings this building was destroyed and this cotton. And now we are seriously asked because we took possession of Mobile on the 12th day of April, because we placed the guard around the building, and because on the 29th of May this explosion took place during the time this cotton could not be shipped and the owner could not remove it, this Government is liable.

I said I had no sympathy with this claim, nor have I sympathy with the claim of any man, North or South, made under like circumstances; and I will go no further in the protection of a British subject than I would in the protection of a loyal citizen, nor would I go any further in protecting him than I would in the protection of any other citizen at that time. This man was there and could have applied to his Government. He could have escaped from Mobile if he had desired to do so. He chose to remain. He saw fit to speculate on the misfortunes of those among whom he lived. He sought the protection of the General Government when we went there. We placed our guards around his property. By accident it was destroyed, and now we are asked to pay its value. I certainly believe this claim is not just.

Mr. HOOKER. I have listened to what gentlemen have said against the reference of this claim to the Court of Claims and in response to remarks heretofore made in support of the bill. It is said Mr. Jones went down there for the purpose of speculating on the necessities of the Southern people. He went there, as the report shows, and, as is not questioned, as a British subject before the war, before the first gun was fired. He settled in the city of Mobile and commenced a commercial business, I think as a druggist. Had he not a right to do so? Every other portion of the country was open to him. He chose the city of Mobile. The war supervened and found him there still a British subject. He is certified to in 1864 as a British subject during the war. He is certified to as a British subject in 1877. As the report shows, he was in correspondence with Lord Lyons and with other British ministers as a British subject.

It is said by gentlemen there is no foundation of justice in this claim of this British subject. It is attempted to be said that Mr. Cridland even, the British consul, was not a British consul. Why not? He was the accredited British consul and was recognized as such at the port of Mobile before the war. The war found him there. He remained there as the accredited consul of Her Britannic Majesty; and I think the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HERBERT] is mistaken in supposing he was ever accredited to any other government; for the British Government never recognized the Confederate government.

Mr. HERBERT. I merely said, admit that for the sake of argument.

Mr. HOOKER. As consul of the British Government he remained there and was doing his duty as representative of his government to protect the interests of British subjects. Did he have any power to do so? Did the mere fact of one portion of this country being at war with another portion of it destroy his power and right as British consul to protect the property of British subjects as far as he could? Did it invade any single provision of international law that he remained there as consul of the British Government under the de facto government, whatever it might be? He was there as their consul, to do his duty as such.

Mr. HERBERT. As Mr. Washburne remained at Paris.

Mr. HOOKER. Precisely as many foreign ministers retained their positions under like circumstances; precisely as in the Franco-Prussian war Mr. Washburne remained at Paris as the American resident minister accredited to France, whatever might be the government de facto, with full authority to protect the citizens of his own country. And that is all that this British consul pretended to do.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him just one question?

Mr. HOOKER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. If this gentleman was the consul of the British Government accredited to the United States, how could he be accredited to the Southern Confederacy, inasmuch as England never recognized the Southern Confederacy as a power?

Mr. HOOKER. He was not.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Then is his certificate a fraud?

Mr. HOOKER. By no means. It would be taking a very narrow view of it to think so.

Mr. ADAMS. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. HOOKER. Yes, sir.

Mr. ADAMS. A consul, as I understand, is an agent to facilitate commercial intercourse. A British consul, before the war broke out, resided at Mobile in order to facilitate intercourse between that and foreign ports. When war breaks out and a blockade is established does not the consul cease to have any consular functions?

Mr. HOOKER. I think not.

Mr. ADAMS. A diplomatic officer, I admit, is different.

Mr. HOOKER. I think a consul stands in the same attitude under international law. If he does not, then there are many British subjects in the port of New York to-day who, if the port of New York should pass into other hands than those of the United States Government, would be helpless to protect themselves against anything—against being enlisted as soldiers. As a British subject, this man was not subject to be a soldier, and the evidence before the committee is undisputed that he stood in the attitude of a British subject. Is that made out satisfactorily? Undoubtedly it is.

But it is said that Cridland's power as a consul ceased whenever the State to which he was accredited in America became engaged in war with any other portion of America.

A MEMBER. And blockaded.

Mr. HERBERT. That can not possibly be. He was there to protect British subjects and the property of British subjects. He was appealed to in 1863, when Jones made his affidavit. On the 27th of August, 1864, he swears that even in 1863 the affidavit of Jones was made. But gentlemen say—and I appeal to the good sense of the House upon this point—gentlemen say that this man went down there to speculate on the necessities of the Southern people. Why do you say that, gentlemen? Upon what authority? What proof have you? The report of your committee says that he was there when the war broke out; he was there a British subject; he was there doing business; he was there accumulating property. Did he not have a right to do that? Will this House say that because he was found there at that unfortunate time with his property, which was not very great, he must have gone there to speculate? I say that is denied.

He went there as a British subject; he settled there as a British subject; he acquired his property as a British subject; was it wrong of him to appeal to the consul in 1863 and say that he was a British subject? He was not there to inquire minutely as to the powers of Cridland. He found him there as British consul, and he remained there long after the war. This British consul certified that Jones was a British subject, that he made his affidavit in 1863 claiming this property as a British subject; that long before Mobile fell into the hands of the Federal troops he made an affidavit claiming that this cotton was his property, that he had accumulated it there, and had placed it in this warehouse for safe-keeping and taken receipts. All this, of course, without any knowledge that there would ever be a seizure of Mobile by the United States Government. But it is said that the Government is not responsible for the destruction of this property by accident. But the Government has gone so far as to say, with reference to this captured and abandoned property in the Southern States, that all citizens who may be able to establish their loyalty, even if they were in the Confederacy, shall receive out of the captured and abandoned property fund whatever they are entitled to, and the Supreme Court have gone so far as to decide that the proceeds of captured and abandoned property constitute a sacred fund, never to be mingled with the other money in the Treasury, but to remain separate there for all time to come, subject to the claim of any man who can establish his right. In point of fact a portion of this cotton was shipped to the Drexels in Philadelphia and sold, and the proceeds deposited in the Treasury of the United States.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this gentleman's cotton was in that warehouse; it was taken by the Government; he applied for it, demanded possession of it, proposed to go in and identify it by its marks, its weights, and its measures, and the receipts which he had from the warehouse. That privilege was denied to him. The Government of the United States said, "No; we will not allow you to take possession of this property; we will not hear you on the question of whether you are a British subject; but we will seize this captured and abandoned property, and you may go"—that was in fact the answer to Mr. Jones—"you may go to the Treasury and make your demand." Now, after this cotton was seized as captured and abandoned property it was destroyed by reason of the injudicious storing of a large amount of combustible property—ammunition—in an adjacent warehouse. What was its status in quo at the time of its destruction? It was captured and abandoned property belonging to the Confederacy, in the hands of a Federal officer, the proceeds of it, when sold, to be transmitted to the Treasury of the United States. Mr. Jones came to identify and claim his cotton, but he was denied the right. He insisted on removing it, but he was denied the right, and the Government of the United States held it under the captured and abandoned property law as prize of war. When Mr. Jones applied to the Treasury of the United States what answer did he receive? The Treasurer very properly said, "This cotton not having reached the Government in the shape of a sale and deposit of the proceeds in the Treasury, we will not pay you for it." When he applied to the representatives of his own government here they told him that under the treaty of 1872 he was three days too late—that he fell three days outside of the treaty. For some strange reason or other that treaty, which provided in its twelfth article for a joint British and American commission for the settlement of claims, provided that British subjects should not claim any property destroyed after a particular day in April. Mr. Jones's cotton was destroyed three days after that date, and therefore he did not come within the terms of the treaty. Now a question arises as to what his claim was. Undoubtedly the Government of the United States had his property; why not then give to a court of your own creation the right to determine whether in point of fact this property was the property of a British subject; whether it had any value, and whether the claimant had any right to it? The intimation has been thrown out that he was there to aid in the rebellion. There is not a word of proof in the case to establish that allegation. There was not a word of proof to that effect before the committee. On the contrary, the committee are fully satisfied that Mr. Jones was a British subject, who, residing at Mobile before and during the war, accumulated this property by purchase. Of course, in making purchases during the war he was obliged to use the money issued by the Confederate government; otherwise he would have been obliged to stop business altogether. He cannot be blamed for having used Confederate currency, because, otherwise, he and his family would have starved.

The widow and children of Mr. Jones are now asking simply that the Government of the United States pay for property which was taken by its officers under the strong arm of the law, without legal authority—property which, as a British subject, he had the right to hold. The bill proposes that the widow, as executrix of Mr. Jones, be allowed to go into a court of the Government's own creation, to establish the right of Mr. Jones to the property which was seized and to show that it was of the value claimed.

Mr. BUCHANAN. As the gentleman made the report in this case, I wish to ask him another question. I see it is stated in the report that "in August, 1874," Mr. Jones deposited in the office of the British consul at Mobile "an invoice of his cotton, amounting to 252 bales." The date given is August, 1874. Turning to the certificates of the consul, I find it stated that one invoice (which I presume was for only a small portion of the cotton, for the amount is only $19,631.22) was deposited with the consul on the 27th of August, 1864; but a larger invoice—an invoice aggregating nearly $60,000—was, according to the certificate of the consul, deposited on the 31st of May, 1865. Now, I see by the report that this cotton was destroyed on the 25th of May, 1865. I wish to ask whether the dates given in these consular certificates are correct, according to the investigation which the gentleman from Mississippi has given to the facts.

I will state my reason for asking this question. It appears that long prior to the seizure one of these invoices was deposited in the office of the consul or consular agent, whereas the invoice for the much larger proportion of the cotton appears to have been deposited several days subsequently to the destruction of the cotton. Hence, is it not a fact that, so far as concerns any evidence of the existence of the amount of cotton included in this larger invoice, we have simply the statement of Mr. Jones, and no other testimony? I ask the gentleman whether that is not so; if not, I shall be glad to know it.

Mr. HOOKER. There were, as the gentleman suggests, two invoices deposited. One was as early as August, 1864, and was for cotton amounting to $19,631.22. This deposit made at that time, long before the fall of Mobile, does away with the idea that Mr. Jones was seeking to deposit his property for the purpose of protection. The other invoice embraces a statement of the whole of the cotton—252 bales:

Statement of 252 bales cotton, the property of Emanuel Jones, a British subject, residing in Mobile, Ala., said cotton having been destroyed in consequence of the explosion of the United States ordnance depot, May 25, 1865.

That is the time when the cotton was destroyed—May 25, 1865. This later invoice shows the cotton to have amounted to $58,985.58, embracing, I presume, all the cotton covered by both invoices. Mr. Cridland, under date of December 18, 1877, certifies as follows:

I, Frederick J. Cridland, Her Britannic Majesty's consul for the States aforesaid, residing at Mobile, Ala., do hereby certify that the foregoing writing is a true and correct copy of an original invoice of 252 bales of cotton, deposited in this consulate on the 31st day of May, 1865, by Mr. Emanuel Jones, a British subject, and sole owner of said cotton, on his application to this consulate in reference to the destruction of the same by the explosion of the United States ordnance stores in Mobile on the 25th day of said month of May, 1865, the aforesaid copy having been compared by me with the original document now in the archives of this consulate.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Let me ask the gentleman another question. I now understand him to say that these two invoices represent the same cotton. Am I correct?

Mr. HOOKER. I think so.

Mr. BUCHANAN. By a hasty glance at the invoices it appears to me that they do, because the first invoice aggregates in quantity 132,756 pounds, and the second invoice aggregates precisely the same number of pounds. But the first invoice gives a total aggregate value of $19,631.22, while the second invoice, for identically the same number of pounds, gives a valuation of $58,985.58. In the first invoice the cotton seems to have been valued at 14½ cents a pound, while in the second invoice it is valued all the way from 28 cents to 50 cents a pound.

Mr. HOOKER. I presume the valuation put upon the cotton in the first invoice represents the market price of cotton in Mobile at that time. The valuation in the second invoice represents the estimate after the loss of the cotton by the explosion.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Exactly so. Within six days after this explosion did not the value of this cotton jump up to $60,000?

Mr. HOOKER. I do not know that it jumped up on that account.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I do not say it did. I am simply asking about the facts, leaving members of the House to draw their own inferences.

Mr. HOOKER. Cotton was very much higher in 1865, particularly after the fall of Mobile, than it was in 1864.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I would like to offer an amendment.

Mr. BRUMM. I wish to ask the gentleman from Mississippi a question. Suppose there should be to-day in the State of Mississippi an insurrection against the State authorities by the colored people there, and that they should go into the mountain fastnesses. Suppose I should go down there and furnish them with munitions of war or property by means of which they could procure such munitions. Does the gentleman contend that under such circumstances the State of Mississippi ought to reimburse me for any loss I might sustain in case the State should conquer those colored people and destroy or capture my property?

Mr. HOOKER. I think that inquiry is entirely foreign to any question before the House. Besides, the gentleman would not find any "mountains" in Mississippi; he would have to take them down there from the State of Pennsylvania. [Laughter.]

Now, this British subject did not go to Mobile for the purpose of participating in the war. The evidence is clear and overwhelming that though he was there at the beginning of the conflict, he did not participate in it, but acted as a British subject during the whole of the war. He took no part on the Union side, and no part on the Confederate side.

Mr. JACKSON. For what purpose did he make these purchases?

Mr. HOOKER. For the same purpose as anybody else would make such purchases.

Mr. JACKSON. What use did he expect to make of the cotton? Did he not expect to run the blockade with it?

Mr. HOOKER. He invested his means in this property in order that he might receive the accumulations of his investment.

Mr. JACKSON. Was not the cotton purchased for the purpose of taking it out of the country, against the orders of the United States Government?

Mr. HOOKER. I do not think so; it does not so appear by any evidence before the committee.

Mr. JACKSON. Was not this man engaged in that sort of business?

Mr. HOOKER. No, sir; there is no proof of it. This gentleman and his family were persons of as high character as any in Mobile.

Mr. JACKSON. But persons "of high character" were engaged in running the blockade, were they not?

Mr. HOOKER. Whether they were or not has nothing to do with this debate. This gentleman, so far as appears by the evidence in this case, was not so engaged. He was a British subject.

Mr. JACKSON. Were not men who purported to be British subjects engaged in that business?

Mr. HOOKER. Possibly.

Mr. JACKSON. Was not the British Government engaged in it?

Mr. HOOKER. I am not here to answer irrelevant questions which do not apply at all to the condition of affairs we are debating. So far as concerns this gentleman's investment cotton was the subject in which permanent investments were made at that time by everybody throughout the State. Everybody was seeking to invest in property which would escape the ravages of the war.

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi. Did I understand my colleague [Mr. HOOKER] to say that this man had no sympathy with either party in the contest which was then going on?

Mr. HOOKER. He took no part in it at all.

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi. That settles the case here, I think. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOOKER. Mr. Speaker, this is a subject too grave to be treated in the off-hand manner in which my colleague would treat it. I can conceive very readily that there may have been in various sections of the South citizens of other countries who did not take part in the then pending conflict at all, either on the part of the Union or on the part of the Confederacy. That was the case with this gentleman. He was at Mobile as a British subject. He claimed exemption from military service as such. Had he not the right to remain there?

My friend says that settles the question. How does it settle the question? It may settle it in his estimation, but not in mine, and not, I hope, in the mind of any reflecting member of this House.

If this claimant was there in the city of Mobile, an honest British subject, honestly acquiring property by industry and labor, and appealed to the representative of his government to protect him, he had the right to that protection. He received that protection. The property was deposited as that of a British subject.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Can the gentleman tell us whether he ever presented his claim to his own government?

Mr. HOOKER. Yes; he did present his claim to his own government. He first presented it to Lord Lyons, and afterwards he presented it to Sir Edward Thornton.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Then why was it not liquidated?

Mr. HOOKER. It is said in the report that he failed to get redress in any way for the property thus taken out of his possession. He sought to go into the Court of Claims, but was advised that it did not have jurisdiction, and from that day to this he has been knocking at the doors of the Congress for relief. He had hoped that the treaty in reference to the Alabama claims would open the way to his relief. But under this treaty British claims were limited to claims originating prior to the 9th of April, 1865, while Mr. Jones's cotton was seized on the 12th of April, 1865, and thus he was cut out of relief by three days under the limitations of this treaty. There is, therefore, no tribunal to which Mr. Jones can resort save the sense of justice of the Congress of the United States, to which he now again appeals.

Mr. BLAND. He was precluded, then, from presenting his claim under that treaty?

Mr. HOOKER. He was precluded under the treaty. All that he asks now is that this claim shall be referred to the Court of Claims, a tribunal of your own, to decide whether or not this property was that of a British subject, and whether it was seized by the United States forces and destroyed by them. [Cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. BUCKALEW. I ask the gentleman to yield to me for a few minutes.

Mr. HOOKER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUCKALEW].

Mr. BUCKALEW. I have great doubts, Mr. Speaker, about this bill, and I have grave doubts about the disposition this bill proposes to make of this claim; to send it to a tribunal which can not reach its real merits, and where the interests of the Government, so far as they are involved in this question, will not receive proper adjudication.

I have listened in vain during this debate for any information on the vital point upon which information should be given by those who support this bill. I have listened in vain to discover wherein the Government of the United States committed a wrong upon this claimant. I understand this cotton was deposited in a large warehouse in the city where it was found, and so far as I can draw conclusions from recitals of the testimony in the report of the committee, this claimant did not intend after the United States forces entered that city to remove the cotton from the warehouse where he had placed it.

He went to the warehouse where his cotton was stored and requested a subordinate officer to separate it from the other cotton which was stored there, offering to point out the specific cotton and identify it by marks, and asked that it should be separated from the other, I suppose intending to leave it in that depository, as there was probably no other suitable place in which to keep it.

Mr. HOOKER. The report states:

He appealed to Mr. Cridland, the then consul of Her British Majesty at the port of Mobile, who went with Mr. Jones to the office of the Federal general in command at Mobile, and then and there explained to said commanding officer that Mr. Emanuel Jones was the bona fide owner of said cotton, and further advised said officer that said cotton was placed in said warehouse by the advice of the said consul, to be under the care and protection of the consulate of the government of which Mr. Emanuel Jones was a citizen.

Mr. BUCKALEW. It does not follow that General Canby believed the verbal statements made to him. I think, under the circumstances, he was justified in not believing that this druggist was the bona fide owner of $56,000 worth of cotton acquired after a few years' residence. That is my theory in reference to that portion of the transaction.

Be that as it may, this cotton, as I conceive from the testimony, was left in that warehouse. If the fact be accepted as genuine that he was a British subject, his cotton was stored there for safety. What happened? Did the United States destroy it? Did any officer of the Government, from the commanding general down to the humblest subaltern, destroy it? No; it was destroyed by accident; by an explosion in an adjoining building. It was a pure accident. Suppose the Government of the United States had had no intercourse with this man about his cotton; suppose he had not got his consul to go with him and to back him up, did anything the Government of the United States did to it destroy it? No, sir.

The argument stated by the gentleman over the way is sound and conclusive. If the officers of the Government had retained possession of this cotton afterwards, and had moved it to New York or Philadelphia and sold it, and paid the proceeds into the Treasury, then they would have converted it to the use of the Government for the time being, and the claimant might have come before us with a case, and after proving that he was a British subject, and had bought the cotton for his own profit, and not to cover it from confiscation by the United States authorities, he might have had some just ground for expecting the claim to be favorably acted upon. But the cotton remained where he had placed it himself until destroyed by the accident.

Therefore it follows that nothing done by the Government of the United States caused the destruction of his cotton. Now, I do not agree with the doctrine that this cotton was converted to the use of the United States by having a military subordinate officer placed over it and by having guards around the building. I do not understand that that mere fact converted it into property of the United States. It was simply in the custody of the military authorities for the time being, and they might well, at any time before its shipment to New York or Philadelphia, have restored it to him, if he had shown his title to it and the fact of his nationality.

There is no evidence, legal or moral, to show the conversion of this property by the Government prior to its destruction. Hence, when that cotton was burned it was his property and not the property of the United States, nor was it property for which the Government was in any manner responsible. He still had the title, it was still where he placed it; nothing had been done by the Government of the United States to increase the risk of its destruction. Therefore, upon principles of justice and equity, to which this bill appeals, this property was never changed in ownership or location, never interfered with in any way by the Government of the United States, except to place a guard around it, shielding it with other property in the warehouse until it was unfortunately destroyed by accident.

The claimant, like all other persons, whether they be citizens of this Government or subjects of Great Britain, is liable to the law of irremediable loss—loss not to be compensated, because it is accidental. This is my view of the bill according to the imperfect information now before us; and waiving all the collateral inquiries which have been presented here in regard to the authority of consuls, and other points which I think immaterial, and looking alone to the merits of the claim, and believing there is no justice in it, I hope it will be rejected.

Mr. HOOKER. Mr. Speaker, I want to test the force of the position of my friend from Pennsylvania, who has just taken his seat, and I have no doubt he is earnest and honest in his objections, by a single illustration. Now, when Mr. Jones made his application for his cotton, which was under the control of the military authorities there, he was told that it had been seized by the Government as captured and abandoned property. When he protested against the seizure of his property as a violation of his private rights, and in violation of the right he had under the law to the protection of his property, which he undertook to point out to the officer in charge, he was met by the reply that all this cotton had been seized under the orders of the United States Government; that it would be sold by the Quartermaster's Department; that the proceeds would be covered into the Treasury of the United States; and that the claimant, Mr. Jones, had his remedy, which was by appeal to the Secretary of the Treasury, at Washington, for the return of the proceeds of the cotton when sold.

The cotton was not returned to him, but was kept by the Government of the United States, in pursuance of that statement. Now, in view of these circumstances, it is manifest that the Government did take possession of the property. That is conceded. It did hold it at the time of its destruction. That also is conceded, for nobody claims that it was not in the possession of the Government or under the guard of its troops; nor was it claimed by anybody else as his property but Mr. Jones. That also is conceded. While the Government officers thus held this property in storage as captured and abandoned property, acting under orders of the Government of the United States with reference to that class of property, which was known as captured and abandoned property, Mr. Jones's cotton was destroyed by this accidental fire. Is there, then, any remedy for him, conceding it to be his property, conceding that he was a British subject, and that it was the earning of his labor for years? Has he no remedy against the Government of the United States? Sir, if that doctrine prevails no foreign citizen holding property in a country at war with another could ever be protected at all. Was Mr. Jones responsible for this fire? Did the fact that his cotton was in the warehouse produce the fire, or is the loss attributable to the accidental fire that was caused by the improvident deposit of a large quantity of ammunition in an adjoining warehouse?

It was said that this demand should not be considered because it was captured and abandoned property. Did the fact, then, that it was seized as being the property of a citizen of this Government add to the responsibility of the Government? Is he remediless because he was not a citizen? Has he no right to go anywhere for redress? He can not get pay from the Treasury Department because the cotton was not sold and the proceeds deposited in the Treasury of the United States.

He could not get his relief in the Court of Claims, according to the advice of his counsel. Why? Because the Court of Claims did not have jurisdiction. What does he ask now? Simply that the Government of the United States, after this long lapse of time, shall create a tribunal which shall pass upon the question of his liability. Not that he shall be paid for his cotton, but that this court of quasi jurisdiction shall be invested with power to determine the question whether this property was his in the first place and then what its value was. The idea that runs through the bill is simply to give the court jurisdiction of all these facts and of the question of the responsibility of the Government.

Mr. DINGLEY. Will the gentleman pardon me? I desire to ask him a question at that point.

Mr. HOOKER. I yield for a question.

Mr. DINGLEY. What is there to prevent this Mr. Jones, who is claimed to be a British subject, from applying in the ordinary way to the British authorities and having the British authorities apply through the British minister at Washington to the Secretary of State for any claim that he may have for what is alleged to be an unlawful conversion of his property?

Mr. HOOKER. His own ministers have said he must rely on the treaty, which, however, unfortunately expired three days before his cotton was destroyed.

Mr. DINGLEY. But on examining the treaty we find it simply provides that all claims of British subjects of this nature that originate, mind you, before the 9th of April shall be left to this court. It does not affect any claims that originated after the 9th of April. Hence the road is entirely open to this gentleman to apply through his own Government if he has a case.

Mr. HOOKER. His ministers have not thought so, because he has repeatedly made application to them, and they thought the commission had not authority to decide upon the claim because it was shut out by the lapse of time.

If the Government of the United States has inflicted a wrong should it be unwilling to give a remedy for property seized under the false pretext that it was captured and abandoned property? Supposing it had been destroyed in transit to Philadelphia, would there have been no claim on the part of the British subject who owned it? Or suppose the funds for the sale before they were deposited in the Treasury had been destroyed. He would have been remediless as to an application to the Department. He is remediless in every respect, except by appealing to the sense of justice and equity of the United States to create a tribunal which shall pass upon the question of their liability.

Mr. McCREARY. I demand the previous question.

Mr. HERBERT. I ask the gentleman to yield to me for two minutes before calling the previous question.

Mr. McCREARY. I withdraw the call for the previous question, and yield the gentleman from Alabama two minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS] is recognized.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. I move to lay the bill upon the table, and upon that motion I call for a yea and nay vote.

Mr. HERBERT. The gentleman from Kentucky has yielded me two minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. But the gentleman from Kentucky had moved the previous question.

Mr. HERBERT. The gentleman withdrew the demand for the previous question, and then yielded to me.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has recognized the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS].

Mr. McCREARY. I moved the previous question, and pending my motion the gentleman from Alabama asked me to yield him two minutes. I then withdrew the demand for the previous question in order to give him two minutes. The Speaker, I presume, did not hear me. I hope the gentleman from Alabama will be heard.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair did not hear the gentleman from Kentucky withdraw the call for the previous question, and meanwhile recognized the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS]. But in view of the mistake the Chair has made he will submit a request for unanimous consent that the gentleman from Alabama be permitted to speak for two minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HERBERT. Mr. Speaker, the question is asked why this widow, who is an executrix, does not apply to the British Government and have that government make this demand. The answer is, she supposed the case to have been covered by the Alabama treaty. That treaty covered all cases like this that occurred up to the 9th day of April, three days before the destruction of this property, but this case was not covered by it because it was three days late. Now, the question I put to the House is this: If other cases just like this were submitted on the demand of the British Government by the Government of the United States to the Court of Claims, will this Congress, will this House refuse to submit this claim simply because the British Government is not standing behind it to enforce it? In other words, will we do justice to a claimant only when the British Government, with its fleets and its armies back of it, comes and demands that we shall do justice, or will we of our own accord let our courts decide this claim? That is the question I want to put to this House. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS] to lay this bill on the table. That motion is not debatable.

Mr. McCREARY. I move to adjourn.

The question was taken on the motion to adjourn, and it was rejected.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question recurs upon the motion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS] to lay this bill on the table.

Mr. HOOKER. I move that the House take a recess until to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. I do not yield the floor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has to yield the floor on a motion to lay on the table, because that motion is not debatable.

The question was taken on the motion of Mr. HOOKER, and there were—aye 1, noes 153.

Mr. HOOKER. No quorum has voted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point is made that no quorum has voted, and the Chair will appoint to act as tellers the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS].

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 11, noes 153.

So the motion for a recess was not agreed to.

Mr. HOOKER. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken; and there were—ayes 30, noes 131.

Mr. HOOKER. I call for the yeas and nays on the motion to adjourn.

The question was taken; and the yeas and nays were refused, only 12 members voting in favor thereof.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Now, Mr. Speaker, I insist on my motion to lay the bill on the table.

Mr. HOOKER. Pending that I move that when the House adjourn it be to meet on Friday next.

The question was taken on the motion of Mr. HOOKER; and there were—ayes 66, noes 61.

Mr. BLAND. No quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point being made that no quorum has voted, the Chair will appoint to act as tellers the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS].

The tellers took their places and proceeded with the count.

Mr. McCREARY (during the count). I demand the yeas and nays.

Several MEMBERS. Oh, no.

Mr. McCREARY. Well, I withdraw the demand.

Mr. MACDONALD. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Would a motion to adjourn be now in order?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Not until the count by the tellers is announced.

The count having been concluded, the result was announced—ayes 90, noes 71.

Mr. BLAND. No quorum.

Several MEMBERS. Oh, yes, there is.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. No quorum has voted.

A MEMBER. A quorum is not necessary.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This is not a motion to adjourn, but a motion to fix a day to which the House will adjourn; and it requires a quorum.

Mr. BLAND. I move that the House adjourn.

The question being taken on the motion to adjourn, there were—ayes 95, noes 70.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I call for tellers.

Tellers were not ordered.

So the motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

PRIVATE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED AND REFERRED.

Under the rule private bills and joint resolutions of the following titles were introduced and referred as indicated below:

By Mr. BURNES: A bill (H. R. 8507) for the relief of C. G. Jesse—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. BUTLER: A bill (H. R. 8508) granting a pension to Nehemah H. Smith—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8509) granting a pension to Lucy A. Bell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CHIPMAN: A bill (H. R. 8510) for the relief of Mary Command—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8511) for the relief of Catherine Carroll—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COMPTON: A bill (H. R. 8512) for the relief of the Ammoniated Fertilizer Company, of Washington, D. C.—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. ENLOE (by request): A bill (H. R. 8513) granting a pension to Eliza A. Bridges—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ERMENTROUT: A bill (H. R. 8514) granting a pension to Clara Geiser—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GEAR: A bill (H. R. 8515) authorizing R. T. Root to enter 240 acres of land without residing thereon—to the Committee on Private Land Claims.

By Mr. HEARD: A bill (H. R. 8516) granting a pension to Isaac Vannice—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8517) for the relief of Charles Wilson, of Missouri—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. LAFFOON: A bill (H. R. 8518) for the relief of Richard Vaughn—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. LEE: A bill (H. R. 8519) to pay for work done and labor performed and materials furnished to the use of the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. MONTGOMERY: A bill (H. R. 8520) for the relief of Phillip N. Fox—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. J. H. O'NEALL: A bill (H. R. 8521) for the relief of William A. Mathes—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PIDCOCK: A bill (H. R. 8522) restoring the name of Elijah Potts to the pension-roll—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. C. A. RUSSELL: A bill (H. R. 8523) granting a pension to Susan F. Scott—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHAW: A bill (H. R. 8524) for the relief of the legal representatives of Henry W. Archer, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. STEELE (by request): A bill (H. R. 8525) granting a pension to Benjamin Abernathy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STONE, of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 8526) for the relief of P. G. Jones—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. E. B. TAYLOR: A bill (H. R. 8527) for the relief of John S. Ellen—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. A. C. THOMPSON: A bill (H. R. 8528) for the relief of Simon Gerstmann—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. E. J. TURNER: A bill (H. R. 8529) granting a pension to Nathan B. Rarick—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WICKHAM: A bill (H. R. 8530) granting a pension to Simon F. Myers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WILKINSON: A bill (H. R. 8531) to appropriate to the widow of the Hon. Edward W. Robertson a certain sum of money—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. STONE, of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 8532) for the relief of Clifton R. Young—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. GEST: A bill (H. R. 8533) to amend an act entitled "An act granting a pension to George Schaefer," approved July 6, 1886—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PERKINS: A bill (H. R. 8534) granting a pension to Jacob Copes—to the Committee on Pensions.

Changes in the reference of bills improperly referred were made in the following cases, namely:

A bill (H. R. 7627) for the relief of John W. Athey; also, a bill (H. R. 7371) for the relief of Thomas J. Hicks; also, a bill (H. R. 7803) for the relief of T. R. Mason; also, a bill (H. R. 7892) for the relief of George Somerville—all from the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a Senate bill (S. 822) granting a pension to Sarah Errickson, widow of James S. Errickson, late seaman United States Navy—from the Committee on Pensions to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as follows:

By Mr. J. A. ANDERSON: Petition of 42 citizens of Barnes, Washington County, Kansas, for a postal telegraph—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. ATKINSON: Petition of Pomona Grange, for legislation prohibiting the adulteration of lard—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. JEHU BAKER: Resolutions of the national convention of the Per Diem Rated Service-Pension Association, held in New York, March 1, 1888—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BARRY: Petition of citizens of Tyler and of Water Valley, Miss., asking that salt be placed on the free-list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BLISS: Petition of Ellen Fitzgerald, for a special-act pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BOWDEN: Petition of Frank Wright and others, for survey for improvement of Bennett's Creek, Virginia—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. BUCHANAN: Resolution of the New Jersey State Board of Agriculture, for a reduction of postage on seeds, etc.—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. BURNES: Petition of H. F. Whiteford and others, citizens of St. Joseph, Mo., in favor of placing tin-plate upon the free-list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. COGSWELL: Petition of O. Gowen and others, of West Newbury, Mass., for the issue of fractional currency—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. COMPTON: Petition of Sarah Ellen Cady, of James C. Brooke, of Joseph T. Jenkins, of estate of Anthony Addison, of Zadock Williams, and of C. F. F. Rosenthal, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. COX: Memorial of Professor S. P. Langley in relation to the privileges of the floor of the House of Representatives—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. DOCKERY: Petition of Mary Rhea, of Ray County, Missouri, for reference of her claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ENLOE: Petition of W. P. Doran, of Hardin County, Tennessee, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FLOOD: Petition of Walter Mason and 240 others, miners of bituminous coal in Clearfield County, Pennsylvania, against the removal of the duty on coal—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GUENTHER: Petition of 107 musicians, of Washington, D. C., protesting against any interference with the liberty of the members of the United States Marine band—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. D. B. HENDERSON: Petition of musicians of the District of Columbia, protesting against legislation interfering with the rights of the Marine band—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. HOUK: Petition of Daniel Smith, for pay as second lieutenant and recruiting officer for services actually rendered the United States—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. JACKSON: Petition of workingmen of New Castle, Pa., for the passage of laws to adjust the accounts of laborers and to secure the execution of the eight-hour law—to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petition of A. Murdock and 114 others, citizens of the Twenty-fourth district of Pennsylvania, against the admission of Utah as a State—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. LAGAN: Petition of certain employés of the United States mint at New Orleans, La., for reference of their claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, petition of the heirs of Henry E. Spearing, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. LEE: Petition of J. M. Harrison and of John Mulholland, of Fairfax County, Virginia, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition for relief of the postmaster at Louisa Court-House, Va.—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. NEAL: Petition of estate of Gideon B. Thompson, of Bradley County, Tennessee, for reference of his case to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. O'FERRALL: Petition of Caroline H. Heater, of Frederick County, Virginia, for reference of her claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. POST: Resolutions of the Board of Trade of Peoria, Ill., for an amendment to the interstate-commerce law so as to require railroads to issue bills of lading for grain and to deliver the same amount at destination—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, resolutions of Branson Post, No. 462, Grand Army of the Republic, of Ipava, Ill., in favor of service pensions—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of 25 citizens of Peoria, Ill., against the repeal of the internal-revenue tax on cigars and cheroots—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. RICHARDSON: Petition of widow and executrix of Richard C. Owen, of Rutherford County, Tennessee, for reference of his case to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. RYAN: Petition of Mrs. A. L. Woodford and 15 other ladies of Burlington, Kans., for two sections of land in the Indian Territory upon which to establish a home for friendless women and destitute girls—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. SENEY: Petition of General E. T. Stickney, W. S. Eastman, and 70 others, citizens of Seneca County, Ohio, favoring schedule of duty agreed on by the wool-growers and manufacturers on January 4, 1888—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Josef Kaspar and others, against legislation to interfere with the liberty of the Marine band—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SHAW: Petition for the improvement of Elk River, Maryland—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. STAHLNECKER: Petition of citizens of Tarrytown, N. Y., for the improvement of Tarrytown harbor—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of the Gratwick, Smith & Fryer Lumber Company, of Tonawanda, N. Y., regarding the placing of lumber on the free-list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Underwood Company, of Falmouth Fireside, Me., relative to tariff on mineral waters—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolutions of the New York Produce Exchange, regarding the adulteration of food—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. STEELE: Petition of the Indianapolis (Ind.) Live-Stock Exchange, for the plain branding of all compounds used for food—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. SYMES: Petition for the establishment of a land office at Troy, Colo.—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. E. B. TAYLOR: Memorial of John S. Ellen, postmaster of Willoughby, Ohio—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. J. D. TAYLOR: Memorial and resolutions of Wolf Lodge, No. 21, of Steubenville; of Lodge No. 22, American Association of Iron and Steel Workers, of Mingo Junction, and of Mountain City Lodge, No. 56, Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, of Ohio, protesting against any reduction of our tariff, etc.—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. O. B. THOMAS: Petition of Isaac W. Roberts, for the passage of the bill to increase the pensions of soldiers who have lost an arm or leg, and to grant them arrears—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. A. C. THOMPSON: Petition of citizens of Scioto County, Ohio, for the passage of the bill to pension Samuel Spradling—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. E. J. TURNER: Petition of J. G. Hibbs and others, for increase of pension rates—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WEBER: Petition in favor of bill to create navigable waters between Lakes Erie and Ontario—to the Committee on Railways and Canals.

By Mr. J. R. WHITING: Petition of Hon. L. E. Lincoln and 156

others, citizens of Huron and Sanilac Counties, Michigan, asking that the salaries of keepers of the Life Saving Service be increased to $1,000 per year, and surfmen be paid $75 per month—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. WICKHAM: Petition of John Irvin, attorney in claim of Simon F. Myers, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. W. L. WILSON: Petition of James McGraw and others, for relief—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Mrs. E. H. Roberts, of Jefferson County, West Virginia, for reference of her claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

The following petitions for an increase of compensation of fourth-class postmasters were severally referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads:

By Mr. BUTLER: Of sundry citizens of Blizzard, Tenn.

By Mr. J. R. BROWN: Of W. W. Wilburn and others, citizens of Straightstone, Pittsylvania County, Virginia.

By Mr. CRISP: Of James Higgs and others, of Montgomery County, Georgia.

By Mr. ELLIOTT: Five petitions of citizens of the Seventh district of South Carolina.

The following petitions, indorsing the per diem rated service-pension bill, based on the principle of paying all soldiers, sailors, and marines of the late war a monthly pension of 1 cent a day for each day they were in the service, were severally referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions:

By Mr. J. A. ANDERSON: Of 17 citizens of Carlton, and of 75 citizens of Abilene, Kans.

By Mr. ATKINSON: Of citizens of Liverpool, Pa.

By Mr. C. S. BAKER: Of E. P. True and other veteran soldiers for the Union, residents of Monroe County, New York.

By Mr. JEHU BAKER: Of Charles Spies and 12 others, of E. S. Valentine and 12 others, of Leonard G. Porter and 17 others, and of Alfred Garrett and 11 others, ex-soldiers, of Bond County, Illinois.

By Mr. FUNSTON: Of ex-Union soldiers, of Pleasanton, Kans.

By Mr. HEARD (by request): Of citizens of the Sixth district of Missouri.

By Mr. HOLMES: Of T. N. Canfield and 41 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors of Boone County, and of A. T. Petitt and 40 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors of Greene County, Iowa.

By Mr. McCULLOGH: Of Henry Campbell and others, of M. R. Haymaker and others, of J. U. Lasher and others, and of John Shepler and others, ex-soldiers and citizens of Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. O'DONNELL: Of 98 soldiers of Union City, Mich.

By Mr. PETERS: Of Samuel Stout and 54 ex-soldiers of Kearney County, and of N. S. Tozer and 40 others, citizens and soldiers of Garfield County, Kansas.

By Mr. SENEY: Of William Harmon and 70 other ex-Union soldiers.

By Mr. STAHLNECKER: Of the Per Diem Rated Service-Pension Association.

By Mr. J. W. STEWART: Of Daniel Fosburgh and 35 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors.

By Mr. STONE, of Missouri: Of Phineas Reed and 43 others, citizens of Cass County, Missouri.

By Mr. TARSNEY: Of citizens and ex-soldiers of Michigan.

By Mr. E. B. TAYLOR: Of 80 ex-soldiers of Madison, Lake County; of 29 ex-soldiers of Mesopotamia, Trumbull County, and of 20 ex-soldiers of Bristolville, Ohio.

By Mr. A. C. THOMPSON: Of citizens of Washington Territory.

By Mr. E. J. TURNER: Of A. D. Booton and others, and of Harmon Robbins and others, of Kansas.

By Mr. J. R. WHITING: Of Peter Monier and 39 others, citizens of Macomb County; of J. M. Allemand and 59 others, citizens and ex-soldiers, of Mount Clemens, and of A. P. Shepherd and 31 others, citizens of Lapeer County, Michigan.

The following petitions, praying for the enactment of a law providing temporary aid for common schools, to be disbursed on the basis of illiteracy, were severally referred to the Committee on Education:

By Mr. CATCHINGS: Of 103 citizens of Warren County, Mississippi.

By Mr. McKENNA: Of 197 citizens of Alameda County, California.

By Mr. MOFFITT: Of 296 citizens of Essex County, New York.

By Mr. MORROW: Of 113 citizens of San Francisco County, California.

By Mr. PATTON: Of 148 citizens of Clinton County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. PHELPS: Of 198 citizens of Morris County, New Jersey.

The following petition, asking for the passage of the bill prohibiting the manufacture, sale, and importation of all alcoholic beverages in the District of Columbia, was referred to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic:

By Mr. TOOLE: Of citizens of East Gallatin, Mont.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, March 15, 1888.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

STEAM-SHIP ATLANTA.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting, in response to a resolution of March 1, 1888, certain reports concerning the United States ship Atlanta; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a petition of the Arizona Department, Grand Army of the Republic, praying for the passage of the disability pension bill; which was ordered to lie upon the table.

Mr. CAMERON presented a petition of the Homeopathic Medical Society of Northern Pennsylvania, of Pittston, Pa., praying for the removal of the import duty on medicine and medical and surgical appliances; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a memorial of citizens of Downingtown, Pa., remonstrating against the admission of Utah as a State with polygamy; which was referred to the Committee on Territories.

He also presented petitions of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of West Chester, Montgomery's Ferry, McKean, and Fleming, in the State of Pennsylvania, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PADDOCK presented a petition of 8 ex-Union soldiers and sailors of the Second Congressional district of Nebraska, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. COCKRELL presented a petition of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of McDonald County, Missouri, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. VEST presented the petition of R. H. Williams and others, ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of McDonald County, Missouri, praying for the passage of the bill giving pensions at the rate of one cent per day for the term of service; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. MITCHELL presented a petition of comrades of Lincoln Post, No. 4, Grand Army of the Republic, of Portland, Oregon; a petition of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Pennsylvania, and a petition of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Washington Territory, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. GORMAN presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of Maryland, officially signed, representing 2,500 members, praying for the repeal of the internal-revenue tax on all alcoholic liquors; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the petition of John T. White, late of Company A, Eighth Maryland Infantry, praying that he be allowed a pension; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. CULLOM presented a petition of the Merchants' Exchange, of Buffalo, N. Y., praying for the adoption of amendments to the interstate-commerce law to prohibit discriminations in freight charges by means of underbilling, false weights, etc., and that like penalties be imposed upon the shippers and carriers guilty of such practices; also, that foreign railroads should be made subject to all the provisions of the law, and that the penalty for its violation should be increased to $20,000, half of the fines imposed to go to the informer; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a petition of the directors of the Peoria (Ill.) Board of Trade, praying for an amendment of the interstate-commerce act, so as to require all railroads engaged in interstate commerce to issue all bills of lading for the exact amount of grain loaded in cars, and to deliver the same amount at destination; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a petition of 12 ex-Union soldiers, residents of Jefferson County, Illinois, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PALMER presented a petition of John Fuller and 86 other ex-Union soldiers, residents of Blissfield, Riga, and Burkey; a petition of George Nash, A. Dittman, and 23 other ex-Union soldiers and sailors, residents of Leonard and Dryden; a petition of Joseph H. Fish and 16 other ex-Union soldiers, residents of Saline; a petition of Sidney S. Tripp and 4 other ex-Union soldiers, residents of Saline; a petition of Charles Wright, John Barrett, and 24 other ex-Union soldiers, residents of Huron County, and a petition of George Shiebel, Lafayette Matthews, and 20 other ex-Union soldiers, residents of Huron County, all in the State of Michigan, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. DAVIS presented a petition of George P. Sawyer Post, No. 132, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Minnesota; a petition of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Gaston, Minn.; a petition of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of North Ottawa, Minn.; a petition of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Elbow Lake, Minn., and a petition of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Roseville, Minn., praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. TURPIE presented a petition of ex-Union soldiers, citizens of Indiana, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. CALL presented the petition of Serucher & Haya, Lozano, Pendar & Co., Emilio Pons & Co., and N. Martinez Ibor & Co., manufacturers of Havana cigars, in the city of Tampa, Fla., praying that Tampa be made a port of entry, and that a collector of customs with full authority be appointed at that port; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. SAWYER presented three petitions of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Berlin, Wis., praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, presented a petiton of Kinsman Post, No. 7, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Iowa, of Des Moines, Iowa, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. EVARTS presented a petition of 26 ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of New York, and a petition of 25 ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of New York, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. DAWES presented a petition of 125 citizens of the First and Second Congressional districts of Massachusetts, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. HOAR presented a letter from Mrs. Ada M. Bittenbender, superintendent of department of legislation, and petitions of the Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, favoring the entire repeal of internal-revenue taxes on alcoholic beverages; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. PLUMB presented a petition of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Kalvesta, Kans.; a petition of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Winona, Kans., and a petition of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Kendall, Kans., praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

ATTORNEYS IN PENSION CASES.

Mr. PLUMB. I wish to present, for reference to the Committee on Pensions, a letter which was sent to me by an ex-soldier in Kansas, being a letter addressed to him by a firm of claim agents in this city, the subject-matter of which I think the Pension Committee ought to take notice of. I ask the Secretary to read the letter, leaving out the name of the writer and the name of the person to whom it is addressed, in order that I may run no risk of reflecting unjustly upon people anywhere.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the letter will be read by the Secretary.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 18, 1888.

SIR: Some time ago we wrote you advising you to allow us to take your claim to Congress. Why do we not hear from you? We are thoroughly conversant with your claim and have no hesitation in stating it to be our belief that if the matter is properly presented Congress will not refuse to grant you a pension by "special act." Our fee is $25. Ten dollars we ask in advance, the balance, $15, when you receive the first payment of the pension. You will be to no other expense in the matter, as all the affidavits, etc., on file at the Pension Bureau will be submitted to the Congressional committees for examination.

During the last Congress 863 "special-act" pensions were granted; and it is expected that the number granted by the present Congress will be greatly in excess of that number. Now is the best possible time to present cases for Congressional action. It is the eve of a Presidential and Congressional election, and parties and individuals are on their metal to make a record.

Should you engage our services you may depend upon it that we shall do all in our power to secure success. Let us hear from you at once, please.

Respectfully,

——— ———.

——— ———.

Mr. PLUMB. Mr. President, I believe that large sums of money are being obtained by representations of that kind addressed to men for whom attorneys have rendered no service whatever.

I am not a member of the Pensions Committee, and can not, therefore, speak with any degree of authority; but from what I know about the practice in regard to bills before that committee, and all the other committees of this body, I feel warranted in saying that an attorney is not only not permitted to go before the committee, but that he can perform no useful office whatever in regard to the passage of any bill granting a special pension; and it is an outrage, to state it mildly, for men to be imposed upon in the way they are being imposed upon—if I have stated the facts correctly—by circulars such as that which has been read at the desk.

I ask the Pensions Committee to take that letter and consider it, and to make some report to the Senate in regard to the subject of it, in order that the ex-soldiers of this country may not continue to be swindled.

Mr. HALE. Before the Senator from Kansas sits down let me ask him if he has any objection to stating the name of the firm who wrote this remarkable letter (and I have no doubt that this is one of thousands that have been written by the same concern), thereby conveying the impression that in matters of legislation before Congress touching special bills for pensions attorneys can have an influence that will control the judgment and action of Congress?

I know nothing whatever from whom this letter is, and have no suspicion whatever who it is; but whoever wrote that letter and sent it out broadcast—as I have no doubt it was sent out—the names ought to be known here and now by the Senate, and through the papers by the country, and by the soldiers who are constantly besieged by claim-agents in and out of season, and led to pay over their money when the attorneys can render them no service.

I ask the Senator to consent that the names which are appended to the letter be read.

Mr. PLUMB. I think that that will come out better, if at all, at the time when the Pensions Committee shall make a report to the Senate on it. I might possibly be put in the attitude of reflecting unjustly upon a firm of attorneys, because it may be, although I do not believe it to be true, that they do perform some office about obtaining these pensions. I no not believe it, however.

Mr. HALE. Of course I do not wish to interfere with the Senator because he has introduced this upon his own motion, but it seems to me——

Mr. PLUMB. When the Committee on Pensions make their report the whole matter will properly come out.

Mr. HALE. There is no chance to misconstrue the letter. It speaks for itself, and I for one should be very glad to know, and I think other Senators should know the names. But if the Senator prefers, let it go in this way to the Committee on Pensions, and let that committee take into cognizance and investigation just such performances as this, because this has been going on too long. Every Senator almost every day of his service receives letters and copies of letters sent from claim agents in Washington urging and beseeching and hounding on a claimant to put cases into their hands, and to send money in advance, with assurances of the influence that the pension agents and claim agents have over these cases, when I believe they have little or no influence. It is high time the matter was looked into, and, so far as it can be, stopped or restrained.

I hope that the committee will take the subject into consideration early, and do something, if it can, that shall avail in this proceeding.

Mr. DAVIS. I should like to hear the letter read again.

Mr. HALE. Let us have it read again, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the letter will be again read, omitting the address and the signature.

The Chief Clerk again read the letter.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, that is evidently a letter from some of those pension sharks, whose names ought to be known. It is a most extraordinary document, and I do not wonder that it excites the indignation of Senators and calls for an investigation of the subject by the Pension Committee.

I wish to state that that committee never hears attorneys or agents on behalf of any individual claim, and I have never been approached by any person, either privately or publicly, with the expression of a desire that he should be heard before the committee. I hope the matter will be referred to the committee.

Mr. HALE. Let me ask the Senator from Minnesota, who is the chairman of the Committee on Pensions, in what way could a claim agent here in Washington advance the interests of an honest claimant before the Pension Committee for a special act giving him a pension?

Mr. PLUMB. Or before Congress.

Mr. HALE. Or in any claim before Congress.

Mr. DAVIS. Not in an honest way before Congress. Of course he would not be heard any more than he would if appearing before a judge.

Mr. HALE. And he would be of no account whatever to the applicant.

Mr. DAVIS. None whatever.

Mr. HALE. That is my view of it.

Mr. PLUMB. I have just been looking over the Calendar and I find that I introduced a bill for the relief of the soldier to whom this letter was addressed early in the session, and that ten days after that letter was written the bill was reported favorably by the Pension Committee. So, it becomes apparent that these people watch the Calendar of the Senate and note the introduction of bills, and address letters to the persons in whose favor bills have been introduced, endeavoring to get money out of them for cases which they have not had originated and with which they have had nothing at all to do, and which they can have nothing to do with, according to the statement of the Senator from Minnesota, the chairman of the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. COCKRELL. I desire to add to what the Senator from Kansas has said that I have in my possession at my rooms a similar communication to the one which has been read. It was written during the last Congress, and stated that this firm had been exceedingly successful in prosecuting claims before Congress; that they had discovered that this applicant's claim had been rejected; that it was a great deal of labor to prepare a case for Congress and to present a bill; that they charge $10 in advance for the preparation of the case and then so much when the case was passed through, and solicited that the claim should be intrusted to them.

I think it is a regular system on the part of the pension sharks here in this city to send these circulars out all over the country and get these cases before Congress, and the applicants for relief are imposed upon and deceived and misled by the circulars, because these pension agents can render an applicant for the passage of a special bill for his relief no good whatever—not a particle. They do not render any assistance, and they obtain the money under false pretenses.

Mr. DOLPH. I think that the same thing is largely true in regard to other claims before Congress. Congress ought to be relieved from the consideration of private claims, and if that can not be done, some law ought to be passed regulating the fees of attorneys for prosecuting such claims.

I know that I have been instrumental in securing the passage of bills for private relief and never heard that there was an attorney in the case until after the bill had been passed and a large percentage of the money received from the Government was claimed as attorney's fees. I noticed in a published statement not long since that an attorney admitted he had an arrangement to receive 35 per cent. of the amount which had been collected off the citizens of a certain State under the direct-tax law of 1861, when it should be refunded by Congress.

I think that the investigation ought to go further than a mere investigation as to the sort of letters sent out by pension attorneys, and it ought to include the whole question of attorneys for private claims before Congress.

Mr. SAWYER. While I have presented a great many private pension bills to Congress, I will say that I have never been approached either by correspondence or in person by any claim agent here. I take up the papers which are sent from the Pension Bureau, and from them I make up my mind as to what ought to be done with the particular case.

If attorneys or others should attempt to influence me the only effect it would have, if any at all, would be to prejudice me against the claim. Whenever a claim agent pretends to have such influence, it is not true. They have not the least influence in the world; and any one who gives them his money for getting a bill through Congress is simply throwing it away.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection to the reference of the communication to the Committee on Pensions, and it will be so referred.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. MORRILL. By direction of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, I report back favorably the bill (H. R. 7217) for the erection of a public building at Lowell, Mass.

Mr. HOAR. I ask the Senator from Vermont if he has any objection to calling the bill up and putting it on its passage now.

Mr. MORRILL. I have no objection, if unanimous consent can be obtained.

Mr. HOAR. I ask that the bill be put on its passage.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed now to the consideration of the bill just reported. Is there objection?

Mr. PLUMB. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas objects, and the bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. GRAY, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 34) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to loan certain scientific instruments, reported it without amendment.

Mr. GRAY. I am directed by the Committee on Naval Affairs to report adversely on the bill (S. 1573) for the relief of Sarah Morrison, dependent mother of George F. Morrison, lieutenant-commander United States Navy, a House bill on the same subject having already passed the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The adverse report will be agreed to, and the bill will be postponed indefinitely.

Mr. PALMER, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1523) for the establishment of a light-house at Cob Point Bar, at the mouth of Wicomico River, in the State of Maryland, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2085) to provide for protecting the navigation of the Illinois River by extending the system of beacon-lights to said river, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1431) making an appropriation for the erection of a light-house at Boca Grande Pass, Charlotte Harbor, Florida, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 735) making an appropriation for the erection of a light-house on Dog Island, Florida, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. HAMPTON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1078) for the relief of Florida Kennerly, reported it without amendment.

Mr. ALLISON, from the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1795) for the relief of the First National Bank of Marion, Iowa, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. FRYE, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment:

A bill (H. R. 7546) to amend sections 2595 and 2596 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and to provide a collector at the port of St. Paul, Minn., and for other purposes;

A bill (S. 1625) to amend section 7 of the act entitled "An act to amend the statutes in relation to the immediate transportation of dutiable goods, and for other purposes," approved June 10, A. D. 1880;

A bill (H. R. 1640) changing the name of the port of Lamberton, in the district of Burlington, N. J., to the port of Trenton, in said district;

A bill (S. 1786) to regulate appointments in the Marine Hospital Service of the United States; and

A bill (H. R. 1818) for the construction of a revenue-cutter for Charleston, S. C., in maintenance of the service, to replace the United States revenue-cutter McCulloch.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1882) to authorize the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Clinton, Iowa, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2345) authorizing the construction of bridges across the Cape Fear River, Black River, and the Northeast River, in the State of North Carolina, reported it with an amendment.

He also, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 5247) granting a pension to William H. Brimmer;

A bill (H. R. 2663) for the relief of Alonzo Alden;

A bill (H. R. 2662) for the relief of Mary M. Strong;

A bill (H. R. 4812) to grant a pension to Squire Admire; and

A bill (H. R. 159) granting a pension to Jane Thomas.

Mr. DAWES, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1956) to ratify and confirm an agreement with the Gros Ventre, Piegan, Blood, Blackfeet, and River Crow Indians, in Montana, reported it with an amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2267) for the relief of the Omaha tribe of Indians in Nebraska, reported it without amendment.

Mr. STEWART, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1242) for the relief of the legal representatives of Maj. William Kendall, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1871) to perfect the military record of Warren C. Alden, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1492) to place Charles V. Petteys and William T. Owsley on the retired-list of the United States Army, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. VEST, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2030) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at Forest City, Dak., by the Forest City and Watertown Railway Company, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1883) to authorize the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Muscatine, Iowa, reported it with amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2528) authorizing the construction of a railroad bridge across the Red River of the North by the North Dakota and Pacific Railway Company, reported it with amendment.

Mr. DAVIS, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was recommitted the bill (S. 1650) for the relief of Maj. Gen. W. W. Averell, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2077) to place on the pension-roll the name of William Sims, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. CAMERON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 482) for the relief of Levi Jones, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1467) for the relief of David B. McKibbin, reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1644) providing compensation to voluntary signal observers at present recognized in the Signal Service, and allowing them all the necessary instruments required for observation, reported adversely thereon.

Mr. DOLPH. Let that bill be placed on the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the Calendar, with the adverse report of the committee.

Mr. CAMERON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom the subject was referred, submitted a report, accompanied by a bill (S. 2377) providing for the issue gratuitously of certain meteorological instruments to voluntary observers at present recognized in the Signal Service; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. SPOONER, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2271) for the relief of Rodman M. Price, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs; which was agreed to.

Mr. WALTHALL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the petition of Nathaniel R. Harris, praying for a correction of the records of the War Department as to his alleged military service, reported adversely thereon, and asked that the committee be discharged from the further consideration of the petition; which was agreed to.

Mr. EVARTS, from the Committee on the Library, to whom were referred the following joint resolution and bills, reported them severally without amendment:

Joint resolution (S. R. 62) in recognition of the services of Joseph Francis;

A bill (S. 1097) to provide for the erection of a monument to the memory of Brig. Gen. William Lee Davidson;

A bill (S. 449) for the erection of a monument to the memory of Maj. Gen. Henry Knox, at Thomaston, Me.;

A bill (H. R. 3796) to purchase of the widow and children of the late General James Shields certain swords; and

A bill (S. 1929) to authorize the purchase of five manuscript volumes (being letter-books) of William Vans Murray, formerly minister at The Hague and at Paris.

Mr. EVARTS, from the Committee on the Library, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1033) providing for the purchase of "the Capron collection of Japanese works of art," reported it with amendments.

Mr. HOAR, from the Committee on the Library, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2044) in aid of the erection of a monument to the memory of General Joseph Warren, who fell at the battle of Bunker Hill, reported a bill (S. 2392) for the erection of a monument to the memory of General Joseph Warren, who fell at the battle of Bunker Hill; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, from the Committee on the Revision of the Laws of the United States, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1592) to continue the publication of the Supplement to the Revised Statutes, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. FRYE. I ask unanimous consent to report from the Committee on Commerce an original bill to take the place of the four accompanying bills, and I ask that they be postponed indefinitely, and that the original bill be placed on the Calendar.

The bill (S. 2393) to fix the compensation of inspectors of hulls and boilers in certain districts of the United States was read twice by its title.

The following bills were postponed indefinitely:

A bill (S. 1689) amending section 4414 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, fixing the compensation of inspectors of hulls and boilers in the several districts of the United States;

A bill (S. 255) amending section 4414 of the Revised Statutes, fixing the compensation of inspectors of hulls and boilers in the several districts of the United States;

A bill (S. 1271) to amend section 4414 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, fixing the compensation of inspectors of hulls and boilers in the several districts of the United States; and

A bill (S. 1444) to amend section 4414 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, fixing the compensation of inspectors of hulls and boilers in the several districts of the United States.

ADMISSION OF NEW STATES.

Mr. STEWART. I am instructed by the Committee on Territories, to whom was referred the bill (S. 12) to provide for the formation and admission into the Union of the State of Washington, and for other purposes, to report a substitute therefor.

Mr. CULLOM. I wish to state that, representing a minority of the committee, I will very soon make a written report, or present a bill, which I will ask to have considered, making some amendments to this bill, or changing the bill from what it has been reported by a majority of the committee.

Mr. BUTLER. I ask permission to state in connection with the report which has just been made that there is one provision of the bill to which I do not agree, and the right was reserved to those of us who do not agree to it to move to amend it when the bill comes up for consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill, with the amendment reported, will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. CULLOM. I wish to make one remark further. The bill that I shall report will not be adverse to the admission of Washington Territory as a State, but will be in favor of the admission without the annexation of other territory.

Mr. BUTLER. With its present boundary, I understand the Senator.

Mr. CULLOM. Yes, sir; the difference between the two propositions will be in reference to the boundary of the territory.

Mr. MANDERSON. I desire to know whether with the report of the bill for the admission of Washington Territory with the addition of what is known as the Pan Handle of Idaho there is a majority report?

Mr. STEWART. There is a majority report.

Mr. PLATT. A written report?

Mr. STEWART. There is a written report.

Mr. MANDERSON. I desire to give notice on behalf of the minority of the committee that we shall desire to file a minority report, and I ask that there be a short delay in the printing of the majority report, so that both may be printed together.

Mr. STEWART. I state in the report that the committee are unanimous in favor of the admission of the Territory as a State, and that a majority favor the boundaries prescribed by the bill. I have not named the majority.

Mr. MANDERSON. A minority of the committee will desire to submit a report in favor of the admission of Washington with the present boundaries.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What time does the Senator from Nebraska desire?

Mr. MANDERSON. A few days; say five days.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the printing of the majority report will be delayed.

Mr. DOLPH. In that connection I will say that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] has given notice that he intends to call up at an early day the bill for the admission of South Dakota. I should like to have the bill for the admission of Washington taken up immediately after the bill for the admission of South Dakota is disposed of. I think such a course will avoid another discussion of the general questions involved. I hope, therefore, the report will be printed in time to be before the Senate as soon at least as the bill for the admission of South Dakota is out of the way. If no one else does it I myself shall ask the Senate to take up the bill for the admission of Washington immediately after the bill for the admission of South Dakota is disposed of.

Mr. PLATT, from the Committee on Territories, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1196) to provide for the formation and admission into the Union of the State of North Dakota, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

MARY MORFORD.

Mr. SAWYER. I move that the bill (S. 884) granting a pension to Mary Morford be indefinitely postponed, as I reported yesterday favorably from the Committee on Pensions a House bill granting a pension to Mary Morford.

The motion was agreed to.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 2378) to correct the military record of John D. Thomas; which was read by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2379) to provide for a term of court at Sterling, Ill.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. BOWEN introduced a bill (S. 2380) for the relief of the Kansas and New Mexico Land and Cattle Company, limited; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. DAVIS introduced a bill (S. 2381) to so amend section 9646 of the Revised Statutes as to allow the pensions of officers of the Army and Navy, their widows and dependent parents, to be rated as of the rank held by such officers at the date of discharge; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. MORRILL. I introduce a bill at the request of the Director of the Mint.

The bill (S. 2382) to amend section 3510 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and to provide for new designs of authorized devices of United States coins, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. COLQUITT (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2383) to provide for the suppression of the traffic in intoxicating liquors in the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. PADDOCK introduced a bill (S. 2384) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Loren W. Hastings; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. CHANDLER introduced a bill (S. 2385) granting a pension to Caroline R. Haseltine; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PLUMB introduced a bill (S. 2386) explanatory of an act entitled "An act to settle certain accounts between the United States and the State of Mississippi and other States, and for other purposes;"

which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2387) for the relief of Mrs. Emma G. C. Abbott; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. HISCOCK introduced a bill (S. 2388) to provide for the preliminary arrest of, the demand for, and the surrender of fugitives from the justice of any of the States and Territories of the United States, who have committed treason, felony, or other crime therein, and have taken refuge in any of the other States or Territories of the United States; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. SPOONER introduced a bill (S. 2389) to provide for the erection of a public building at the city of Eau Claire, State of Wisconsin; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2390) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of William Winchell; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2391) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of Manus Hanbelt; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 474) for the relief of General G. Cluserét;

A bill (H. R. 4961) for the relief of John P. Hageman;

A bill (H. R. 7255) for the relief of A. B. Tyan;

A bill (H. R. 7934) for the relief of Dr. H. B. Matteosian; and Joint resolution (H. Res. 95) to enable the President of the United States to extend to certain inhabitants of Japan a suitable recognition of their humane treatment of the survivors of the crew of the American bark Cashmere.

BENNINGTON BATTLE MONUMENT.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The other day I presented a petition respecting the Bennington battle monument, which was referred, by inadvertence, to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. The original bill, which the petition prays a supplement to, was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs. I ask that the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds be discharged from the further consideration of the petition, and that it be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and I shall ask, as it is short and crisp, stating the facts, that it be printed, not in the RECORD, but as a document.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The order changing the reference will be made, if there be no objection. Does the Senator from Vermont desire to have the petition printed in the RECORD?

Mr. EDMUNDS. No; let it be printed as a document.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be printed as a document.

FISHERIES NEGOTIATIONS.

Mr. FRYE. I offer the following resolution, and ask for its immediate consideration:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be requested to transmit to the Senate copies of the minutes and daily protocols of the meetings of the commissioners who negotiated the treaty with Great Britain, submitted by the President to the Senate on the 20th of February, 1888.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. GRAY. That might as well go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will lie over, under the rules.

ALASKAN FUR SEALS.

Mr. DOLPH. I offer a resolution, and I desire to say a word or two upon it before asking that it go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to inform the Senate what construction is placed by the Department upon the phrase "or the waters adjacent thereto" in section 1967 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, prohibiting the killing of fur seals upon the islands of St. Paul and St. George and on the waters adjacent thereto, and whether or not American citizens have heretofore been or now are prohibited or prevented from fishing for fur seals in the waters of Alaska or in Behring Sea beyond one marine league from shore except on the islands aforesaid and the waters immediately adjacent thereto, and if so under what law or regulations this has been done and in what manner the same have been enforced.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection——

Mr. DOLPH. I do not ask for the immediate consideration of the resolution; but I have received a letter from Hon. James G. Swan, assistant to the Fish Commission, at Port Townsend, who has given much attention to the question of fish and fisheries on the North Pacific coast, which has induced me to offer the resolution. I ask that the letter may appear in the RECORD, without reading, as part of my remarks. It is not lengthy. I call the attention of Senators from the New England States, especially the Senators from Massachusetts, as being particularly interested, to this communication, and I give notice that to-morrow I shall ask for the consideration of the resolution.

Mr. BUTLER. May I inquire the character of the communication the Senator asks to have printed in the RECORD?

Mr. DOLPH. It is a communication in regard to the right of citizens of the United States to fish for fur seals in Behring Sea and the Alaskan waters.

Mr. BUTLER. May I inquire whom the communication is from and to whom addressed?

Mr. DOLPH. It is from Mr. James G. Swan, the assistant of the Fish Commission, stationed at Port Townsend, Wash.

Mr. BUTLER. I shall object to its being printed in the RECORD.

Mr. DOLPH. Then I ask that it be read at the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the communication being read at the desk?

Mr. BUTLER. I object to its being read.

Mr. DOLPH. Then I will read it myself as part of my remarks, if the Secretary will pass it to me.

Mr. BUTLER. I should like to inquire if that is not a violation of the rules?

Mr. HARRIS. Let the rule be read as amended the other day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The rule as amended will be read.

Mr. BUTLER. That rule is very rigidly enforced against this side of the Chamber, and I propose to have it enforced in the whole Senate, if I can.

Mr. DOLPH. If I may be permitted to say a word, I will state that I introduced the resolution to-day. I did not ask for its present consideration. I am simply doing what has been always allowed, by making some remarks in presenting a resolution. This letter is not addressed to Congress; it is a letter addressed to myself, which I propose to incorporate as a part of my remarks.

Mr. HARRIS. Will the Senator from Oregon allow me to suggest to him that his resolution has gone over under objection? Has it not?

Mr. DOLPH. No; I have retained the floor.

Mr. HARRIS. I understand from the Chair that it has gone over under objection. If so, his remarks are out of order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon did not ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. DOLPH. I had not taken my seat, but I retained the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon stated that he would call the resolution up to-morrow and submit some remarks upon it.

Mr. HARRIS. The resolution is not under consideration, and certainly remarks or the reading of a communication, I submit, would be out of order.

Mr. DOLPH. I do not understand the status of the resolution as the Senator from Tennessee understands it. I have retained the floor. I introduced the resolution. I said that I would not ask for its consideration to-day, but desired to say a word in regard to it, and I asked to have the communication printed as part of my remarks. In introducing the resolution I retained the floor, and I have held it ever since, except to give way for an inquiry.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is not debatable under the rule. The rule with regard to the reading of communications has never been rigidly enforced, but the Chief Clerk will read the rule as it stands.

Mr. BUTLER. May I be permitted to state——

Mr. HOAR. Will the Chair first allow the resolution to be read, so that we may have the foundation of the whole proceeding?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution lies upon the table. It will be read for information, if the Senator from Massachusetts desires.

Mr. BUTLER. May I have unanimous consent to make a very brief statement in explanation of my reasons for interposing this objection? That explanation is that I do so in——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon is entitled to the floor. Does he yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. DOLPH. Certainly; I yield.

Mr. BUTLER. I make this objection from no sort of feeling or discourtesy to the Senator from Oregon, but simply in pursuance of the rule which seems to have been invoked by some Senators when communications of this kind have been presented for publication in the RECORD. I think if that rule is enforced as to one it ought to be enforced as to all. Therefore I made the objection. I have seen upon the floor Senators who desired to have communications read and the reading was objected to when I thought the subject-matter of the communication was very meritorious. I do not know what is in this communication, but I object to its going in the RECORD, if the rules will sustain the objection I make. I should like to have the rule read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts asks that the resolution be again read. Is there objection? If not it will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution.

Mr. BUTLER. Now I should like to have the rule read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would suggest that the resolution not being called up for consideration, and lying upon the table, there is no question before the Senate, and debate can only proceed by unanimous consent.

Mr. DOLPH. I should like to ask the Chair how the resolution got upon the table, as I still held the floor and proposed to make some explanation of the resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon stated that he did not desire to have the resolution acted upon, but desired that it might lie upon the table in order that it might be taken up to-morrow to enable him to submit some remarks.

Mr. DOLPH. I beg to correct the Chair. I said I did not intend, and such was not my intention, to make any remarks to-morrow. I simply said I would ask for the consideration of the resolution to-morrow; but I said that I desired to say a word in regard to it in submitting it.

Mr. HOAR. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate that the Senator from Oregon be permitted to make the observation which he desired.

Mr. DOLPH. All I desire is that the communication be read in connection with the resolution.

Mr. BUTLER. I have no desire whatever to impose that duty upon the Senator from Oregon, but I do object to its going in the RECORD if I can prevent it. Therefore I will not give unanimous consent to permit the publication of the communication. So far as any remarks the Senator may have to make are concerned, I have not the slightest objection to his making them. I would be very glad to know what the rule is.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The rule will be read at the desk.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

RULE XI.

OBJECTION TO READING A PAPER.

When the reading of a paper is called for, and objected to, it shall be determined by a vote of the Senate, without debate.

Mr. MITCHELL. I ask unanimous consent to make a suggestion to my colleague. I am very anxious, personally, to hear the communication read. I have a similar one, and it is important; but inasmuch as our friend, the Senator on my right [Mr. TELLER], gave notice that he desires to speak to-day, I suggest to my colleague that he permit the matter to go over and come up to-morrow.

Mr. DOLPH. I will go as far as any one to accommodate the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] or any other Senator on this floor; and if the rule is that I have no right now to address the Senate, of course I yield; but if I have a right to read the letter I propose to read it. That is all there is of it.

Mr. STEWART. I suggest to the Senate that unanimous consent be granted to have the communication printed and lie on the table.

Mr. DOLPH. That is precisely what I have asked.

Mr. STEWART. Not in the RECORD, but as a document.

Mr. BUTLER. I have not the slightest objection to that course, if the Senator from Oregon desires it.

Mr. STEWART. Let it be printed and lie on the table, and then we can see it to-morrow morning.

Mr. DOLPH. Let that course be taken.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon asks unanimous consent that the communication be printed. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

FRANKING OF PUBLIC DOCUMENTS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there are no further resolutions, the order of morning business is closed.

Mr. BUTLER. If in order, I should like to have referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads a letter which was addressed by the Postmaster-General to the President of the Senate in response to a resolution which I offered and which was passed on the 24th of last month in regard to the return of public documents to a Senator when his frank had been placed upon them. The Postmaster-General, it seems, replies that upon inquiry of the postmaster of the city of Washington no such action was taken by him, and therefore this act must have been done or performed by the postmaster of the Senate.

I find upon reading the regulations of the Department and the law on the subject, that there was no authority for such action by the postmaster of the Senate. It is apparently a small matter, and yet one which might subject us to a vast amount of inconvenience. I do not know whether I am under the ban of suspicion by the postmaster of the Senate, or any other postmaster, of improperly franking public documents; but I do protest that when I have acted in accordance with law the documents I have franked should be allowed to proceed in the mail in the usual course.

I ask that the letter of the Postmaster-General be referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, and I trust that committee will give the matter that investigation which the Postmaster-General seems to think is required.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The letter will be referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, if there be no objection. The Chair hears none.

PRESIDENT'S ANNUAL MESSAGE.

Mr. TELLER. I desire to call up the resolution referring the President's message.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution submitted by Mr. SHERMAN December 19, 1887, as follows:

Resolved, That the President's annual message be referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I shall endeavor not to detain the Senate at any very great length, as what I shall have to say will not be in the nature of a general discussion of theoretical propositions, but will be rather a presentation of facts which illustrate and bear upon the issue presented.

At the commencement of this session the President of the United States sent a rather remarkable document to the Senate and House of Representatives; it was called his annual message, but it was devoted exclusively to the question of import duties and a reduction of the surplus revenues of the country. There has been since that time considerable discussion in the Senate over this message, and, it seems to me, on the part of the friends of the Administration, a disposition to avoid the real issue presented by the President.

Although we have been told by all on the other side of the Chamber who have spoken on the subject, that the message was one of great ability and entitled the Executive to great praise at the hands of the people for the courageous manner in which he had presented this matter to the public, yet I believe, without a single exception, all who have spoken in defense of the Administration and in accordance with the views of the Executive, have attempted to make it appear that it is not the kind of message that the President himself evidently intended it should be, and that everybody outside of official circles in this country and abroad has declared that it was.

It will not do for the friends of the Administration to assert that this is an attempt on the part of the Executive and his adherents to modify, revise, or correct the tariff. No such intent on the part of the President can be gathered from his message, no such intent can be supposed or has been supposed by the people who are directly interested in what is called in this country free trade. At home and abroad, everywhere, it has been received, not as an attack upon a defective tariff, not as being for the purpose of lopping off excrescences or incongruities in the tariff, but for the purpose of destroying the protective system. The President himself speaks of it as "vicious," "inequitable," and "illogical." A former Secretary of the Treasury, referring to this same system in a report at a former session of Congress, spoke of it as a "brutal method." Members who have addressed the Senate, and defenders of this message in portions of this country, whether they were in official life or in private life, have spoken in terms of opprobrium, of contempt, of detestation, not of the tariff, not in complaint of inconsistencies or incongruities in it, but have spoken in this manner of the protective system.

It is, then, and it is so understood, I think, outside of this Chamber at least, an attack, not upon the defective tariff, not upon a system good in itself but in details faulty, but it is an attack upon the system that protects American labor and American manufactures against the competition of the labor and capital of other countries.

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] presented to the Senate some time since his views on the subject, in which I think he clearly proved that all the friends in this country and abroad of free trade and enemies of the protective system have hailed this message as a free-trade document; if not accomplishing free trade now, at least as a step that would ultimately bring us to free trade.

I know that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BECK] the other day, while discussing this question, when asked if he was a protectionist, declined to answer, but declared that there were no free-traders on his side of the Chamber, and gave as his reason why they were not free-traders, not that they did not believe in free trade, not that they believed in protection, not that they thought it was the duty of the Government to protect either manufactures or labor by import duties, but because, he said, we could not avoid having a tariff of some kind, because we could not raise sufficient money by any other method. Therefore, he said, they were not free-traders, and yet he did not deny then or there that he himself would be a free-trader whenever it was practicable to have free trade; and everybody who has listened to him for the last twelve or fourteen years in this body or previously in the other House, of which he was for a long time a member, will certainly agree that he is a free-trader.

I have before me a large number of extracts from various English papers, in which, one and all, they assert that this message is a free-trade document, that it is a step in favor of free trade. I do not care to read them. I believe they are not in the extracts introduced by the Senator from Maine [Mr. FRYE]. I think they are all of them of a different character and from different papers, or if from the same papers of a different date.

I not only find that they assume that this is a free-trade document, but they assert that the Democratic party as a party has committed itself to free trade, and that the Democratic party must keep on until free trade shall be an accomplished fact in this country, and then they congratulate themselves that they are about to have this, the finest market in the world, a market of 62,000,000 people, if our estimate is correct as to the number of our population, who buy more and pay for it with greater certainty than any other 62,000,000, or any other 100,000,000 of people on the face of the earth. They say that the languishing industries of Great Britain will revive with considerable force if it shall be established that even a considerable reduction of our import duties shall be obtained through the intervention of the Executive.

I will present for insertion in the RECORD these extracts from the British press:

ENGLISH OPINIONS.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free-traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

Mr. Cleveland is entitled to credit for having spoken out and laid before Congress without reservation the real facts of the case. The stone now set rolling will not stop until it has broken the idol of protection to pieces.—London Daily News.

Mr. Cleveland demands, in effect, that there shall be a tariff for revenue purposes only. No tinkering with the tariff will suffice; no readjustment of duties will do. The only reform that common sense can accept is one which unaffectedly substitutes the principle of unimpeded imports for that of tariff regulations.—London Daily Standard.

For the present the change in the American fiscal policy will be beneficial to this country, and the prospect of it has diffused fresh hope throughout business circles.—Dundee People's Journal.

In an article on "The coal trade in 1887, and its prospects for 1888," the London Times says: "If President Cleveland's tariff reforms are carried English goods and iron and steel largely will go to the States in greatly increased proportions."

The Morning Post, commenting on President Cleveland's message, says: "The message will produce a profound sensation in Europe as well as in Amertca, and will strengthen the free-traders' case throughout the world."

The Daily News says: "Seldom has an American President had a more important or impressive lesson to teach. The fact is, that although President Cleveland makes a pretense of shutting his eyes to it, the policy of protection has been reduced to a practical and theoretical absurdity. The stone now set rolling will not stop until the idol of protection is broken in pieces."

The Chronicle says: "It is many years since such an important and suggestive message has been sent to Congress. If the policy of President Cleveland is adopted its effect on the trade of the world can not fail to be immense."

[From the Saturday Review.]

It may be taken for granted that the President has not acted without previously consulting the leaders of the Democratic party and securing their approval. He and they have taken up again the old free-trade policy of the South Carolina politicians, unconnected with what, in the jargon of American politics, was called the sectional question.

[From the Spectator.]

His terse and telling message has struck a blow at American protection such as could never have been struck by any fair-trade league, such, indeed, as would have been greatly weakened by the operations of any fair-trade league. * * * He has fired a shot at the protectionists which will be all the more effective for his refusal to discuss the theoretic issue. * * *

[From the People's Journal, Dundee.]

A great sensation has been created by President Cleveland's message, and if the policy which it indicates be carried out, it will produce almost as much effect in this country as in America. The tariff reform which the President recommends goes as far, at least, as the abolition or reduction of the duties on raw materials. Should Congress give effect to this proposal, its immediate result would be an enormous stimulus to English industry.

[From the London correspondence of the Scotsman.]

The tenor of President Cleveland's message tends to confirm a statement which was made to me yesterday by a person of high authority, that the American Government are expected shortly to remove nearly the whole of the duty on pig-iron. The statement was made some hours before the telegrams of the President's message reached London, so that it could not have been inspired by it. * * * It is also believed that the duty on lead will be materially lightened. I need hardly point out that if these expectations are realized a great "boom" in both industries will follow. In well-informed commercial circles one also finds that the belief in a considerable revival of trade is becoming every day more and more confirmed.

[From the Haddingtonshire (Scotland) Courier.]

This much is certain, that another fierce contest is impending in America over the principle at issue. If it terminates, as it may be hoped it will do, in the direction of a relaxation of those imposts that now so vexatiously hamper commercial intercourse between Great Britain and the United States, we may look to an impetus being given to our home trade that will go far to make up for the depression of late years.

[From the Scotsman.]

The President proposes a radical reduction in the duties on raw materials, or even their free importation, as a way of compensating manufacturers for the sacrifice which they are asked to make. The free importation of iron, coal, and wool would be a great boon to British producers; if it were accompanied with reductions in the tariff upon cotton, woolen, and other manufactures the artisans of this country would derive a marked benefit from it.

[From the London Ironmonger.]

Dealing with the message as it stands, it would certainly seem to indicate a greater leaning towards free-trade principles on the part of the United States Cabinet than has been observable hitherto.

"Mr. Cleveland's policy," said the Times, "may not establish free trade in the strict sense of the term, but it will to a great extent make free trade."

"The President," said the Daily News, "does not seem to perceive the effect of his own arguments, or even the meaning of his own words. His statement that the question of free trade is irrelevant is astounding and preposterous. Mr. Cleveland has persuaded himself to think, or finds it convenient to say, that the principle of fostering native industries by duties on foreign imports can be made compatible with the principle of regulating the burdens upon the people by the needs of the public service. It is pure delusion. Protection, albeit indefensible, is the height of wisdom compared with proposals which combine all the evils of interference with all the risks of liberty."

"His real meaning is that the scheme by which the artificial fabric of domestic enterprise has been built up in America is fundamentally vicious."

[From "A member of Parliament" by cable to the free-trade New York Herald.]

To convert the United States is indeed a triumph. The Cobden Club will henceforth set up a special shrine for the worship of President Cleveland, and send him all its publications gratis. Cobden founded free trade; Cleveland saved it. Such is the burden of the song all through England to-day.

[From the London Standard.]

"In readjusting the tariff," he adroitly explains, "the interests of American labor and our manufactures should be carefully considered. Relief from the hardships of the present tariff," he goes on to say, "should be devised with especial precaution against imperiling the existence of the manufacturing interests, but"—there is much virtue in the "but"—"such existence should not mean excessive profits."

Mr. Cleveland has used such praiseworthy candor in his positive treatment of the evils of the existing faulty system, that this soothing parenthesis, which the whole context proves to be a polite nothingness, may well be pardoned. When the inevitable consequences of adherence to a protectionist tariff are set forth by a man in Mr. Cleveland's position in the language which he has used, free trade becomes at once a living issue. There is an end of the truce, of the makeshifts, of the hollow compromises between the rival factions to keep the delicate subject in the background of the platforms. If the Congress does not forthwith expunge the scandals of the customs lists, the next Presidential campaign will be fought out, not on the obsolete cries of Republican and Democratic strife, but on the new question whether the people are—simply because it suits the convenience of certain manufacturing rings that foreign competition should be rigorously excluded—to be mulcted year after year of enormous sums which the Treasury does not need, and which it can not employ.

[From the London Post.]

We must regard the message of the President of the United States as being a distinct pronouncement in favor of free trade.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this State communication will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free-traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.

[From the Glasgow Herald.]

"It is a condition which confronts us; not a theory." Precisely so. Words almost identical with these have been used, and with enormous effect, in this country by Adam Smith, by Richard Cobden, by Sir Robert Peel. President Cleveland may say to others, therefore, and think what he chooses, but he has precipitated the inevitable struggle between free trade and protection in the United States, and that is tantamount to saying that he is on the side of free trade.

The London Pall Mall Gazette gave the following warning, and it has been heeded:

English free-traders would be well advised if they moderated the ecstacy of their jubilation over President Cleveland's message. Every word which they say in its favor will be used as a powerful argument against the adoption of its recommendations.

I do not intend, Mr. President, to discuss the theoretical question of the tariff. I do not propose to go into the theory of the subject. The President of the United States has said that our protective tariff was a vicious system, inequitable and illogical. He has said himself, and his Secretary of the Treasury has said that the people of the United States are laboring under its weight and borne down by the burdens of our tariff. I propose in dealing with this question to deal with it in a practical way. I propose to see what we have done that is vicious, inequitable, and illogical; but before I proceed to that I propose to show that the following statement made by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. COLQUITT] the other day, is not true:

The Democratic party is a party of principle. These principles are deep-seated, grown out of a deep root, and bear appropriate fruit. They have had great expounders in the past, and will live to bless future generations. There are two great systems of thought and opinion in this country which contend for the mastery. Of these the Democratic, in my judgment, is bound to ultimate triumph, because it asserts the rights of the people to be superior to those of any privileged class. It is time now for the distinct assertion of Democratic principles, the hearty maintenance of them, and the redemption of Democratic pledges.

Now I want to assert, having been brought up in the Democratic faith when it was more than a mere party looking for patronage, having received some of my early education in that party, that the Democratic party except for a few years in all its history has never been until recently a free-trade party. Unless for the short time that Calhoun dominated and controlled it, it never was a free-trade party; and it can not be said that those who founded and created this party and who are now held up to us as its brilliant leaders, such men as Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Benton, and Buchanan, were for free trade. It can not be said by any one that those early advocates of Democratic principles were in favor of free trade. This system, denounced by the President as vicious, has had the approval of all the great minds of this country, of all the men who were potent in the early history of our country. If you should step into a school-house and call up a boy to tell you who were the prominent leaders of our Revolutionary times and in the organization of the country immediately after the war, all the men he would name without an exception will be found to have been intelligent, active advocates of this "vicious, inequitable, and illogical" policy.

I suppose I need not say to the Senate, what everybody who reads knows, that George Washington was a pronounced protective-tariff man. I do not suppose that our Democratic friends will care much about that, because they assert that George Washington did not have correct views of the fundamental principles of the Government. But not only was George Washington a protective-tariff man, but so was Benjamin Franklin; so was Alexander Hamilton; and so were Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, and James Monroe. I venture to say here that you never had a Democratic President, until Grover Cleveland, who had not at some stage of his political history been an open advocate of a protective tariff. I do not care whether you refer to Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, James K. Polk, or Buchanan.

I do not propose to spend very much time in proving these assertions.

I desire, however, to call the attention of the Senate briefly to facts sustaining what I have said.

First, Washington, in one of his annual addresses, took high ground in favor of a protective tariff, and argued that it was the duty of the Government to protect manufactures, using this language:

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.

The same position was taken by Jefferson on several occasions. Jefferson said in his second annual message that—

To cultivate peace and maintain commerce and navigation in all their lawful enterprises; to foster our fisheries and nurseries of navigation and for the nurture of man, and protect the manufactures adapted to our circumstances—

Was the duty of Congress. Later he said:

Shall we suppress the impost and give that advantage to foreign over domestic manufactures? On a few articles of more general and necessary use, the suppression in due season will doubtless be right, but the great mass of the articles on which impost is paid are foreign luxuries, purchased by those only who are rich enough to afford themselves the use of them. Their patriotism would certainly prefer its continuance and application to the great purposes of the public education, roads, rivers, canals, and such other objects of public improvement as it may be thought proper to add to the constitutional enumeration of Federal powers.

Again he said, speaking on the same subject:

Shall the revenue be reduced? Or shall it not rather be appropriated to the improvements of roads, canals, rivers, education, and other great foundations of prosperity and union, under the powers which Congress may already possess, or such amendment of the Constitution as may be approved by the States?

Again he said:

The suspension of our foreign commerce produced by the injustice of the belligerent powers, and the consequent losses and sacrifices of our citizens are subjects of just concern. The situation into which we have thus been forced has impelled us to apply a portion of our industry and capital to internal manufactures and improvements. The extent of this conversion is daily increasing, and little doubt remains that the establishments formed and forming will—under the auspices of cheaper materials and subsistence, the freedom of labor from taxation with us, and of protecting duties and prohibitions—become permanent.

Mr. Madison said in a special message to Congress:

The revision of our commercial laws, proper to adopt them to the arrangement which has taken place with Great Britain, will doubtless engage the early attention of Congress. It will be worthy, at the same time, of their just and provident care to make such further alterations in the laws as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted or extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.

Mr. Madison said in his seventh annual message:

In adjusting the duties on imports to the subject of revenue the influence of the tariff on manufactures will necessarily present itself for consideration. However wise the theory may be which leaves to the sagacity and interest of individuals the application of their industry and resources, there are in this, as in other cases, exceptions to the general rule. Besides the condition which the theory itself implies of a reciprocal adoption by other nations, experience teaches that so many circumstances must occur in introducing and maturing manufacturing establishments, especially of the more complicated kinds, that a country may remain long without them, although sufficiently advanced, and in some respects even peculiarly fitted for carrying them on with success. Under circumstances giving a powerful impulse to manufacturing industry it has made among us a progress and exhibited an efficiency which justify the belief that with a protection not more than is due to the enterprising citizens whose interests are now at stake, it will become at an early day not only safe against occasional competitions from abroad, but a source of domestic wealth and even of external commerce. In selecting the branches more especially entitled to the public patronage a preference is obviously claimed by such as will relieve the United States from a dependence on foreign supplies, ever subject to casual failures, for articles necessary for the public defense or connected with the primary wants of individuals. It will be an additional recommendation of particular manufactures where the materials for them are extensively drawn from our agriculture, and consequently impart and insure to that great fund of national prosperity and independence an encouragement which can not fail to be rewarded.

And he repeated this same idea again in a further message, as did Mr. Monroe.

Mr. Monroe, in his first inaugural address, said:

Our manufactures will likewise require the systematic and fostering care of the Government. Possessing, as we do, all the raw materials, the fruit of our own soil and industry, we ought not to depend in the degree we have done on supplies from other countries. While we are thus dependent, the sudden event of war, unsought and unexpected, can not fail to plunge us into the most serious difficulties. It is important, too, that the capital which nourishes our manufactures should be domestic, as its influence in that case, instead of exhausting, as it may do in foreign hands, would be felt advantageously on agriculture and every other branch of industry. Equally important is it to provide at home a market for our raw materials, as by extending the competition it will enhance the price and protect the cultivator against the casualties incident to foreign markets.

In his fifth annual message he again alluded to this subject, and said:

It may fairly be presumed that under the protection given to domestic manufactures by the existing laws we shall become at no distant period a manufacturing country on an extensive scale. Possessing as we do the raw materials in such vast amount, with a capacity to augment them to an indefinite extent; raising within the country aliment of every kind to an amount far exceeding the demand for home consumption, even in the most unfavorable years, and to be obtained always at a very moderate price; skilled also, as our people are, in the mechanic arts and in every improvement calculated to lessen the demand for and the price of labor, it is manifest that their success in every branch of domestic industry may and will be carried, under the encouragement given by the present duties, to an extent to meet any demand which under a fair competition may be made on it.

Then he proceeds to argue the question that it is the duty of the Government to protect manufactures.

Again, in his sixth annual message, he used practically the same language:

From the best information that I have been able to obtain it appears that our manufactures, though repressed immediately after the peace, have considerably increased, and are still increasing, under the encouragement given them by the tariff of 1816 and by subsequent laws. Satisfied I am, whatever may be the abstract doctrine in favor of unrestricted commerce, provided all nations would concur in it and it was not liable to be interrupted by war, which has never occurred and can not be expected, that there are other strong reasons applicable to our situation and relations with other countries which impose on us the obligation to cherish and sustain our manufactures.

Mr. Calhoun, who may be said to be the father of the system favored by the Executive, and whose utterances undoubtedly the President of the United States must have studied, was originally an active, intelligent protectionist. He was found in 1816 debating this question with great ability, and I have before me in his published speeches his remarks made, when it is said he was called into the House from a committee-room with little preparation and few opportunities, to defend the protective system, and he did it in a remarkably able manner. Amongst other things, he said:

Laying the claims of manufacturers entirely out of view, on general principles, without regard to their interests, a certain encouragement should be extended at least to our woolen and cotton manufactures.

In another speech in the House of Representatives, April 6, 1816, Mr. Calhoun said:

When our manufactures are grown to a certain perfection, as they soon will under the fostering care of Government, we will no longer experience these evils.

He was then speaking of the evils of an uncertain price, referring to the trouble that had existed during the early days of the war of 1812.

The farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce; and, what is almost of equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply of all his wants. His prosperity will diffuse itself to every class in the community; and, instead of that langour of industry and individual distress now incident to a state of war and suspended commerce, the wealth and vigor of the community will not be materially impaired. The arm of government will be nerved; and taxes in the hour of danger, when essential to the independence of the nation, may be greatly increased; loans, so uncertain and hazardous, may be less relied on; thus situated the storm may beat without, but within all will be quiet and safe.

Mr. Calhoun said afterwards, speaking on this same subject:

It produced an interest strictly American, as much so as agriculture; in which it had the decided advantage of commerce or navigation. The country will from this derive much advantage. Again, it is calculated to bind together more closely our widely-spread Republic.

In 1816, when the subject of the tariff was before Congress, the then Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Dallas, the father of the afterwards Vice-President of the United States, submitted a report in favor of a protective tariff, in which he said:

There are few, if any, governments which do not regard the establishment of domestic manufactures as a chief object of public policy. The United States have always so regarded it. In the earliest acts of Congress, which were passed after the adoption of the present Constitution, the obligation of providing, by duties on imports, for the discharge of the public debts is expressly connected with the policy of encouraging and protecting manufactures. (19) In the year 1790 the Secretary of the Treasury was directed by the House of Representatives to take the subject of manufactures into consideration with a view particularly to report upon "the means of promoting such as would render the United States independent of foreign nations for military and other essential supplies." (20) In the year 1810 the Legislature again manifested a marked solicitude to ascertain the progress of the national independence in manufactures by combining the business of the census with an inquiry into the state of the several manufacturing establishments and manufactures within the several districts, Territories, and divisions of the United States. (21) But it was, emphatically, during the period of the restrictive system and of the war that the importance of domestic manufactures became conspicuous to the nation, and made a lasting impression upon the mind of every statesman and of every patriot. The weapons and munitions of war, the necessaries of clothing and the comforts of living, were at first but scantily provided. The American market seemed for a while to be converted into a scene of gambling and extortion; and it was not the least of the evils generated by the unequal state of the supply and the demand that an illicit traffic with the enemy by land and by water was corruptly and systematically prosecuted from the commencement to the termination of hostilities.

* * * * * * *

The matured state of the first class of manufactures relieves the task of forming a tariff, with respect to them, from any important difficulty. Duties might be freely imposed upon the importation of similar articles, amounting wholly, or nearly, to a prohibition, without endangering a scarcity in the supply; while the competition among the domestic manufacturers alone would sufficiently protect the consumer from exorbitant prices; graduating the rates of the market generally by the standard of a fair profit upon the capital and labor employed. It is true, however, on the other hand, that by imposing low duties upon the imported articles, importation would be encouraged and the revenue increased; but without adding to the comfort or deducting from the expense of the consumer, the consumption of the domestic manufacture would, in an equal degree, be diminished by that operation, and the manufacture itself might be entirely supplanted. It is, therefore, a question between the gain of the revenue and the loss of the manufacture, to be decided upon principles of national policy. Under the circumstances of an abundant market the interest of the consumer must stand indifferent, whether the price of any article be paid for the benefit of the manufacturer or of the importer; but a wise Government will, surely, deem it better to sacrifice a portion of its revenue than to sacrifice those institutions which private enterprise and wealth have connected with public prosperity and independence.

If there ever was anybody in the Democratic party that our Democratic friends bow down to more readily than to any other man, it is old Andrew Jackson. He was probably in his day one of the most popular of all Democrats, because, while our Democratic friends are proud to enumerate amongst those who have advocated Democratic sentiments Thomas Jefferson, there has always been a feeling that Thomas Jefferson was something of an aristocrat, but that Andrew Jackson more nearly represented the real Democracy than any other man who ever lived.

I have before me the letter that General Jackson wrote to Dr. L. H.

Coleman, which has become famous, and also his reply to the Indiana Legislature, in which he took high ground in favor of a protective system.

WASHINGTON CITY, April 26, 1824.

SIR: I have had the honor this day to receive your letter of the 21st instant, and with candor shall reply to it. * * * You ask me my opinion on the tariff. I answer that I am in favor of a judicious examination and revision of it; and so far as the tariff before us embraces the design of fostering, protecting, and preserving within ourselves the means of national defense and independence, particularly in a state of war, I would advocate and support it. The experience of the late war ought to teach us a lesson, and one never to be forgotten.

* * * * * * *

Heaven smiled upon and gave us liberty and independence. That same Providence has blessed us with the means of national independence and national defense. If we omit or refuse to use the gifts which He has extended to us we deserve not the continuation of His blessings. He has filled our mountains and our plains with minerals, with lead, iron, and copper, and given us a climate and soil for the growing of hemp and wool.

These being the grand materials of our national defense, they ought to have extended to them adequate and fair protection, that our own manufactories and laborers may be placed on a fair competition with those of Europe, and that we may have within our own country a supply of those leading and important articles so essential to war.

Beyond this I look at the tariff with an eye to the proper distribution of labor and revenue, and with a view to discharge our national debt. I am one of those who do not believe that a national debt is a national blessing, but rather a curse to a republic, inasmuch as it is calculated to raise around the administration a moneyed aristocracy dangerous to the liberties of the country.

This tariff, I mean a judicious one, possesses more fanciful than real dangers. I will ask what is the real situation of the agriculturist? Where has the American farmer a market for his surplus products? Except for cotton he has neither a foreign nor a home market. Does not this clearly prove, when there is no market either at home or abroad, that there is too much labor employed in agriculture, and that the channels of labor should be multiplied? Common sense points out at once the remedy. Draw from agriculture the superabundant labor, employ it in mechanism and manufactures, thereby creating a home market for your breadstuffs and distributing labor to a most profitable account, and benefits to the country will result.

Take from agriculture in the United States 600,000 men, women, and children, and you at once give a home market for more breadstuffs than all Europe now furnishes us. In short, sir, we have been too long subject to the policy of the British merchants. It is time we should become a little more Americanized, and instead of feeding the paupers and laborers of Europe, feed our own, or else in a short time, by continuing our present policy, we shall all be paupers ourselves.

It is, therefore, my opinion that a careful tariff is much wanted to pay our national debt and afford us the means of that defense within ourselves on which the safety and liberty of our country depend, and last, though not least, give a proper distribution to our labor, which must prove beneficial to the happiness, independence, and wealth of the community. * * *

I have presented you my opinions freely, because I am without concealment, and should indeed despise myself if I could believe myself capable of acquiring the confidence of any by means so ignoble.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ANDREW JACKSON.

HERMITAGE, February 28, 1828.

SIR: I have had the honor to receive your excellency's letter of the 30th ultimo, inclosing resolutions of the senate of Indiana adopted, as it appears, with a view of ascertaining my opinions on certain political topics. The respect which I entertain for the executive and senate of your State excludes from my mind the idea that an unfriendly disposition dictated the interrogatories which are proposed. But I will confess my regret at being forced by this sentiment to depart in the smallest degree from that determination on which I have always acted. Not, sir, that I would wish to conceal my opinions from the people upon any political or national subject; but as they were in various ways promulgated in 1824, I am apprehensive that my appearance before the public at this time may be attributed, as has already been the case, to improper motives.

With these remarks I pray you, sir, respectfully to state to the senate of Indiana that my opinions at present are precisely what they were in 1823 and 1824, when they were communicated by letter to Dr. Coleman, of Virginia, and when I voted for the present tariff and appropriations for internal improvements. As that letter was written at a time when the divisions of sentiments on this subject were as strongly marked as they now are in relation both to the expediency and constitutionality of the system, it is inclosed herein; and I beg the favor of your excellency to consider it a part of this communication. The occasion out of which it arose was embraced with a hope of preventing any doubt, misconstruction, or necessity for further inquiry respecting my opinions on the subject to which you refer; particularly in those States which you have designated as cherishing a policy at variance with our own. To preserve our invaluable Constitution and be prepared to repel the invasion of a foreign foe by the practice of economy and the cultivation within ourselves of the means of national defense and independence should be, it seems to me, the leading objects of any system which aspires to the name of "American," and of every prudent administration of our Government.

* * * * * * *

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,

ANDREW JACKSON.

His Excellency JAMES B. RAY,
Governor of Indiana.

I also have here the remarks made by James Buchanan, while a member of the United States Senate, before he became President, in which he took high protective ground. I also have here the proof that Mr. Polk, notwithstanding that under his administration the tariff of 1846 was passed, had previous to his election declared himself in favor of the protective system. He said:

I have heretofore declared to my fellow-citizens that, in my judgment, it is the duty of the Government to extend, as far as it may be practicable to do so, by its revenue laws and all other means within its power, fair and just protection to all the great interests of the whole Union, embracing agriculture, manufactures, the mechanic arts, commerce, and navigation.

He also continued in this strain to a considerable extent.

Mr. President, in 1872, when the Democratic party met in convention and nominated a distinguished Republican for their leader, the most active and aggressive protective-tariff man of the continent, Horace Greeley, they said in their platform—which I shall not stop to read—that the tariff was a question to be left to the Congressional districts, without any interference whatever from the Executive. In 1876, when the Democratic party got together and nominated Mr. Tilden, they for the first time in their history in a national convention declared themselves in favor of a tariff for revenue only, which is synonymous with free trade, because if the Government can acquire its revenue from any other source, then they are in favor of so acquiring it and cutting down the revenue to the lowest possible figure. In that campaign they were defeated.

In 1880 it would be impossible for anybody to tell what they did intend to say on that subject, but they evidently intended to go before the people, as they did in the tariff districts, asserting that they were a tariff party, and evidently intended to go, as they did, into the non-tariff section declaring that they were for free trade.

But in 1884, when there was greater probability of their electing a President than there had been at any previous time in two decades, owing to the dissensions in the Republican party, they said in substance that always the revenues had been derived from import duties in the main, and that they must continue to do so. Then they took a sort of back-handed lick at the war taxes, the internal revenue, and then they passed on to this:

But in making a reduction in taxes it is not proposed to injure any domestic industries, but rather to promote their healthy growth. From the foundation of the Government taxes collected at the custom-house have been the chief source of Federal revenue; such they must continue. Moreover, many industries have come to rely upon legislation for successful continuance, so that any change of law must at every step be regardful of the labor and capital thus involved. The process of reform must be subject in its execution to the plain dictate of justice. All taxation shall be limited to the requirements of the Government economically administered. The necessary reduction in taxation can and must be effected without depriving American labor of the ability to compete successfully with foreign labor, and without imposing lower rates of duty than will be ample to cover an increased cost of production, which may exist in consequence of the higher rate of wages in this country.

Nobody living would have supposed that the Democratic party intended there to announce the doctrine of free trade; nobody can say that they did there attack the doctrine of protection; nobody could have supposed that the Executive elected upon that platform would have ever delivered the message that the President of the United States sent to us in December last.

I stated a few moments since that with the exception of a few years the principle that has governed the legislation of this country has been that of protection to American labor and American manufactures. From 1783 to 1789 was the only period when we had in this country free trade or anything approaching to free trade, when all the circumstances are considered. In those years each State was at liberty to collect its own revenue, and until we organized under the present Constitution the power did not exist to lay imposts for national purposes; and during those six or seven years that we had free trade the people of this country saw enough of it. It swept every dollar out of the country. It took all the ready money and left the people to barter simply. The very first thing done when the Congress of the United States assembled under the Constitution was to provide a system of import duties—the first law that was passed being for the purpose of swearing men into place under the new Constitution; the second law that passed was for the protection of American manufactures, and so declared in the act. The preamble is:

Whereas, it is necessary for the support of Government, for the discharge of the debts of the United States, and for the encouragement and protection of manufactures, that duties be laid on imported goods, wares, and merchandise.

That bill was signed on the 4th day of July, 1789, by George Washington. The men who made this law were, at least one-third of them, members of the constitutional convention that had created our Constitution; and yet we are gravely told by Senators who have been addressing us within the last six weeks that there is no constitutional power to protect manufactures. The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KENNA] declared in the speech he made early in the session, in reply to one made by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN], that the method was an unconstitutional method when it attempted to protect American manufactures or American labor; that that was not the province or purpose of revenue laws; and yet this act to which I have called the attention of the Senate was presented to the House of Representatives by James Madison himself, who was then chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, or what was equivalent thereto.

Between this time and 1812 there were seven or eight revisions of the tariff, and every revision of the tariff increased the amount of import duties on the whole. Occasionally one article would be dropped a little, but on the whole the duties were increased, the purpose being to increase the revenues and give additional protection to the manufactures of the country.

Immediately preceding 1812, while the embargo was laid, there was a great lack of goods in this country. We had been dependent up to that time very largely, notwithstanding our tariff, upon European manufactures for our goods. We had manufactured in a small way as a poor people could, but not to any considerable extent. So great was the lack of goods that when the embargo was laid Congress even contemplated removing it for a time, simply that the people might stock up goods in this country.

With the embargo, with the war of 1812, came very great activity in American manufactures. It is stated by good authority that up to 1810 at no time had there been more than 5,000 bales of cotton manufactured in a year in the United States. In 1815 the number of bales manufactured was 90,000. So during the war and during the days of the embargo our people put their money in manufacturing, and manufacturing went on all over the country to a considerable extent. Immediately after the war came an influx of European goods from all sections, but more particularly from Great Britain. This influx of foreign goods was sent here for two purposes: first, because there was an overstock in Europe, and, second, as declared by the English people themselves, and notably so by Lord Brougham, for the purpose of glutting the American market; for the purpose of depressing and breaking down prices in this country until such time, as he said, when the manufacturers in this country would renew the natural order of things, and that was to stop manufacturing here and let the goods be manufactured in Great Britain.

Our next tariff was the tariff of 1816. The first practical effort made after the war was the tariff of 1816, which was largely a reduction of the tariff of 1812, which had by one single movement doubled the import duties up to that time existing. So the tariff of 1816 was a reduction, and then what followed? All over the country there was in a short time stagnation in business. All of the trading and manufacturing interests and all of the commercial interests at home on land were practically wiped out. We depended entirely, or nearly so, upon foreign goods for a time, until it became evident that the tariff must be increased, as it was.

Here let me say that during this time Great Britain not only flooded us with cheap goods, but she made every effort to take out of this country such of her laborers as had found a home here. It is a notorious fact, and it was reported to Congress, that a great number of spinners, weavers, and that class of people were taken back free by the British Government, who had been engaged in manufacturing in this country. They not only tried to discourage manufacturing here, but they undertook even to discourage cotton raising in this country, for fear we would do what they quite naturally supposed we would do if we raised cotton, manufacture our own cotton.

In 1824 the tariff was again amended. This was an increased or protective tariff. In 1828 an additional tariff was put on imported goods, and this was the high tariff; this was the highest tariff that had ever been put upon imported goods up to that time. It was not as high a tariff as we have had since; but we ought to recollect when we speak of high tariffs that that is a relative term. In 1824, when the tariff was being discussed, Mr. Webster said, "You can bring from Stockholm, Sweden, wood to this country for $8 a ton." To-day they are bringing goods from England to this country of very fine quality for from $2.50 up. You can bring a ton of railroad iron or steel and land it at New York or at Boston or at Baltimore or at any of the Atlantic cities for $2.50 a ton. So what was a high tariff then would not be a high tariff now, on account of the difference in freights. It is suggested by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. CHACE] that they sometimes bring it for nothing as ballast. They were not in those days taking away from this country as much as now, and the temptation was not as great to bring it in as ballast as it is now, but the high price of freight, added to the duty, acted as a protection to the American producer of manufactured goods.

Now we are practically at the door of every European city that is on tide water. You can to-day bring things from any portion of the European continent that touches water cheaper than you can bring them from the center of this American continent to our coast. So what was a high tariff in 1824 and 1828 is not an ample tariff to-day.

The tariff of 1828, I said, reached the highest point that had then been attained. The tariff had gradually risen. From the time we adopted the Constitution to 1828 there never had been an hour that the protective system was not in the ascendency in this country, not even in 1816, when the tariff was lowered, there was still a protective majority in both branches of Congress, and the people were committed to the protective system.

But in 1828, when Mr. Calhoun for the first time had conceived the possibility of building up a great nation with one single interest, with only one single thing as its principal and distinctive feature, and that American slavery—when he came to the conclusion that that could be done in the South, he knew, as everybody knew, that manufacturing was inconsistent and impossible with that class of labor. He knew that that degraded class of labor could only do the work of a farm hand; and then, for the first time, he turned against his compeer, Mr. Clay, and advocated free trade.

In 1830 an effort was made to reduce the tariff, and it failed. In 1832–'33 agitation continued, and Mr. Clay, who perhaps of all men in public life had been the most zealous, and I presume it will not be amiss to say the most intelligent advocate, certainly the most eloquent advocate of American protection, giving way to a weakness of his character which was exhibited on other occasions, proposed to compromise with Mr. Calhoun, and then for the first time in our history, and only while that lasted or practically lasted, was there any considerable leaning in this country towards free trade. The compromise was a gradual reduction of the tariff until it should reach 20 per cent., which it did reach in 1842.

What was the result of that? Gradually as the tariff was reduced goods came in from abroad, especially from Great Britain; gradually the manufacturers in this country suspended and shut up; gradually as that was done the price of goods was raised, and in 1837, when we had tried the lowering scheme for four years or thereabouts, the whole country was in a state of financial depression unknown before that time in the history of any people, and I presume I shall not go amiss if I say its equal has never been known since. We continued that system till 1842. I would ask any man who wants free trade, who believes that the country where you can buy the cheapest is the best, to read the history of the financial disasters in this country from 1837 up to 1842.

In 1842 there was an increased duty put upon imports by the tariff act of 1842, and what was the result of that? Everywhere where there had been stagnation and depression and want before there was a revival of business. Where labor had been striking for bread the people who were engaged in manufacturing and other enterprises were inquiring for labor, and the business of the country sprang readily from nothing to activity. We were engaged then in manufacturing, in opening up new farms, and doing the things that are always done when labor is properly rewarded in this country.

Then came the election of 1844 and the tariff of 1846. I stated that Polk had been a protective-tariff man. His enunciations had been in that direction; and in that campaign Pennsylvania was won to the Democratic column by making speeches all over the State declaring that he was a protective-tariff man, and inscribing on their banners, "Polk, Dallas, and the tariff of 1842." Everywhere it was asserted that the tariff was to be protected and not destroyed if Mr. Polk should be elected President; but no sooner had he been fairly seated than the attempt was made to destroy the tariff of 1842 and to go back to the tariff that had resulted from the compromise of Mr. Clay.

Our friends on the other side are exceedingly fond of alluding to the period from 1846 to 1860. The Senator from Georgia [Mr. COLQUITT], who addressed the Senate on Monday last, dwelt long and eloquently upon the prosperity under that tariff. Mr. Walker, who was Secretary of the Treasury, made his report in 1845. It was a free-trade paper; it was the first open, square committal of the Democratic party to free trade. He believed in it, as the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BECK] believes, that if the revenue could be derived from any other source there should not be any import duties at all. Secretary Walker made his report. That report was taken in Great Britain and published in the newspapers, and it was lauded and praised, as the recent President's message has been lauded and praised, as an able state paper.

The tariff of 1846 was not as low a tariff as some of the earlier tariffs had been, but under the circumstances and conditions of things it was the nearest to free trade that we had had, and it was put forth with the avowed purpose of coming to free trade as rapidly as possible.

What was the condition? I want to go back a moment to 1842. When Congress assembled in December, 1841, the Government of the United States was without money. There was a deficiency in the revenue. We were compelled to borrow money to pay the ordinary expenses of the Government. The revenue had faded away. Our friends on the other side of the Chamber tell us that there was no such period in the history of the country as that from 1846 to 1860. They tell us that it was the result of a free trade or low tariff. They lose sight of the fact that in the beginning of the trials of this tariff we had first the Mexican war. The Government, because of that war, had to put out a large amount of money, which stimulated all business in this country, which created manufactures, and called for activity in every branch of industry in the United States. They forget also that following on that was the famine of 1847, 1848, and 1849 in Europe. They forget that there was a market for our agricultural products then that had not existed before. They forget the further fact that we then entered immediately upon the production of fifty or sixty millions of gold a year; and fifty or sixty millions of gold a year thrown into the markets of the world had a very different effect from what fifty or sixty million dollars thrown into the markets would have now.

They forget that the discovery of gold in California inflated all classes of business; that it took from the productive ranks of people engaged in manufacturing and producing farm products a great number of men and transferred them to California, and put them at the most remunerative business that men ever engaged in. That labor was better compensated and paid in California than in any other portion of the world at any time in its history. The creation of wealth was simply enormous. Sixty million dollars a year right along was the product of that State. What became of it? It stopped a few days here and stimulated and excited the industries of the country, and then it fled across the water, never again to return to pay for the imported goods that we had bought, that we ought to have made on our own shores. And so, when 1860 came, we were practically without a dollar of hard money in this country.

They forget also that a few years after the discovery of gold in California the great Crimean war occurred in Southeastern Europe, in which Russia, Turkey, France, England, and Italy were engaged, diverting thousands of men from the pursuits of peace and creating for some years an immense demand for our agricultural products.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DOLPH in the chair). The Senator from Colorado will suspend. Two o'clock having arrived, it is the duty of the Chair to lay before the Senate the unfinished business, being Senate bill No. 977.

Mr. CHACE. I ask that the unfinished business be informally laid aside, and that the Senator from Colorado have unanimous consent to proceed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, that will be the order.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, the tariff of 1846 was so low that the imports under it were very large. The Government had been compelled under the compromise tariff of 1833 to borrow large sums of money which I will simply mention. In 1841, February 15, the Government made a loan of $5,000,000; on the 21st of July of the same year they made a loan of $12,000,000; on April 5, 1842, they made a loan of $5,000,000, and there was still a deficit in the Treasury that year. That was under the compromise tariff of 1833. Under the tariff of 1846 there were ample revenues, so much so that in the spring of 1857, there was a reduction of the tariff for the purpose of preventing an accumulation of revenue. There had been up to that time unusual activity in business circles. There had been what was called great prosperity growing out of the condition of things which I have mentioned, resulting from a demand abroad for our products and the fact that the Government had been engaged in a war, and the great production of gold in California, and the activity in consequence of putting in the market so much money. But in the fall of 1857, soon after the tariff reduction of that year, there came a panic that was not quite equal perhaps to that of 1837, but the most disastrous panic that we have ever had in this country save the panic of 1837, and from that time up to 1860—I speak to men who have recollection of the affairs of this country at that time—our manufactories closed their doors, and thus men who had supposed that they had accumulated something for old age found themselves bankrupt, and nobody suffered like the men who labored. There was distress, disaster, panic everywhere in the land, clear up to the time that the Republican party entered into power in the spring of 1861. When Senators tell us of the halcyon days of 1846 and subsequent years, prior to 1861, they overlook the fact that the country was in a state of panic for at least three or four years of that time, the result directly, in my judgment, of the low tariff, deferred and put off by the favorable and fortunate circumstances to which I have alluded.

In the fall of 1860 President Buchanan issued a proclamation, from which I will read a little extract which shows what the position of the country then was. This was on the 14th day of December, 1860, immediately after the assembling of Congress.

> The Union of the States is at the present moment threatened with alarm and immediate danger. Panic and distress of a fearful character prevail throughout the land. Our laboring population without employment, and consequently deprived of the means of earning their bread. Indeed, all hope seems to have deserted the minds of men.

I desire, for the benefit of those who wish to return to the position of 1846 and subsequent years, to call attention to the condition, financially, of the Government at that time. On the 22d of July, 1846, Congress authorized a loan of $10,000,000 to pay current expenses; on the 28th of January, 1847, a loan of $23,000,000 was authorized; on March 3, 1848, a loan of $16,000,000 was authorized; in 1850 a loan of $10,000,000 was authorized, what was known as the Texas indemnity loan; on the 14th of June, 1858, a loan of $20,000,000 was authorized drawing 5 per cent.; December 1, 1860, a further loan of $10,000,000; February 8, 1861, a loan of $25,000,000; March 3, 1861, when the Republicans came into power, the outgoing Congress authorized a loan of $10,000,000.

I wish now very briefly to compare the condition of the United States in 1860 with any time subsequent thereto. I do not care whether the comparison is made in the midst of the war with all the alarms of war and the excitements of war, or whether it is made in times of peace, the comparison will be in favor of the system of which I am an advocate. If this system is a vicious system, a wicked system, an illogical system, it is somewhat singular that the country should have prospered under it. I know it is said on the other side, "You prospered because you had great natural advantages, because the country had rich lands and rich mines," but we had the rich mines and we had the rich lands under the tariff of 1846. We had more rich lands before 1860 than we had afterwards; our mines had been as productive then as they were later, and more so in proportion to the labor expended on them. There had been greater profit in working them before 1860 than at any period subsequent thereto; and yet what was the condition of the country?

Was there plenty? Was there prosperity? Was it not true, as stated by Buchanan, that the laboring people were without the means of earning their daily bread? We had at that time in circulation in the United States, according to the best estimate that can be made, $214,000,000 of gold and silver. Of all the vast sums that had come from California this was all that was left. We had $207,000,000 of paper money, paper money that was not good in Connecticut if it was issued in Pennsylvania, and not good in Pennsylvania if it was issued in Illinois; and it was paper money that every man who took it had to have a detector at his elbow to see whether the bank had not broken over night.

Let me compare that financial statement with the statement of 1887. We have now, according to the authorities of the present Administration, $1,023,764,163 of gold and silver, more than a thousand million dollars of the two metals to-day as against $214,000,000 in 1860. We have in addition to that $346,681,016 of greenbacks, which can be readily exchanged any day in any part of the country for gold. We have $169,215,067 net of national-bank notes; and I deduct in this estimate $100,000,000 that is in the Treasury for redemption. Thus we have in all $1,539,660,246, as against $421,000,000 in 1860.

But we might have vast sums of money among our people, and yet the people might not be richer. I take now another item. The deposits in banks in 1860, all told—I mean aside from savings banks—were $253,802,129, and in the savings banks, all told, $149,277,504. Then all the money in all the banks held by all classes of people was $403,079,633. Now the national banks of the United States hold, by the official publications of the Government, $1,767,332,471. The State and private banks, the Treasury Department estimates, hold $251,734,788 more, making a total of deposits of $2,019,067,259 of money. The savings-banks in the United States that had in 1860 $149,000,000, have now $1,235,736,069. So the total money in banks is $3,254,803,328—$800,000 more than all the banks of England, Scotland, and Wales; and yet we are told that this "vicious" system has weighed down the people and destroyed their energies!

Why, Mr. President, who own the twelve hundred and thirty-five million dollars of money in the savings-banks? The men who labor; the men who toil for day's wages or monthly wages, not the rich. They own, besides, a large amount of the $1,767,000,000 that is found in the national banks on deposit. They own a large amount of that which is found in the State banks also.

We had in 1860 in the Treasury $32,979,530. We owed then somewhere in the neighborhood of $80,000,000, so that we did not have half money enough to pay our debts, and it was a time of profound peace. We had had no war since the Mexican war ended in 1847; we had had no great demand for money, and yet we had not been able to pay current expenses. How is it to-day? We have to-day—I will not venture to say to-day, because I made these figures some days since, and the accumulations go on very rapidly in the Treasury—we had, when I made the calculation, perhaps some thirty days ago or thereabouts, $663,172,732. I state here, with full knowledge of what I state, that all the great combined powers of the world have not got a fourth of that sum of money in their combined treasuries. Richer and stronger and greater in our national resources than any other nation, yet it is said that the system under which we have grown rich and strong and great is "vicious, inequitable, and illogical."

Our governmental receipts in 1860 were $56,054,599. In 1887 they were $371,403,277. Since I made these figures I cut from a paper—the Boston Advertiser—this statement, which I desire to read:

> The condition of the savings-banks of New York is a standing refutation to the cry that the country is becoming impoverished and the working people growing poorer under tariff burdens. It is an admitted fact that the amounts on deposit with the savings-banks of New York City are largely made up from the savings of the working classes of people.
>
> Reports of the eleven banks of the city for January 1 show an increase of $12,000,000 in deposit over the amount of last year, while the whole number of banks in the State show an increase of $26,000,000. These banks are said to be in an unusually safe and prosperous condition at the present time, owing to the stringent laws regulating their business.

That is in one State alone where the laboring people of this country have added to their wealth $26,000,000 deposited in savings-banks alone, and nobody can tell how many millions they have added in other ways. The Senator from Massachusetts tells me that the savings-banks of Massachusetts hold over $300,000,000. The Senator from Connecticut the other day declared that in his State the savings-banks held more money owned by the laboring people than all the savings-banks outside of the United States—in the world. I have no doubt that he told the truth, and that he was informed whereof he spoke.

Sir, we have a system of banking in this country which we call the national-bank system. Its capital is $578,462,765; its surplus fund $173,913,440; its undivided profits are $71,450,167; making a total of $823,826,372. The general impression is that these banks are owned and controlled by rich men. That is not a fact. In all the country banks laboring men have more or less part. I have a statement here from the Comptroller's report showing the number of persons who own stock in these banks and who, of course, own the surplus fund and the undivided profits. Outside of corporations there are 233,680, of corporations 7,492, total 241,172. Of this number 139,843 own $1,000 or less than $1,000 each. Thus it can be seen where the wealth of the country has gone. Seventy-three thousand two hundred and five own over $1,000 and less than $5,000, and then the balance is divided between $5,000 and $30,000.

In 1860 the value of all property, including slaves, in the United States was about $16,000,000,000. It was estimated by competent authorities that $2,000,000,000 should be deducted from that if you desired to arrive at the value of property outside of slaves. That would leave in 1860 $14,000,000,000. In 1880 the property of the United States was valued at $44,000,000,000, lacking a little. It comes nearer to $44,000,000,000 than to $43,000,000,000. So our gain in twenty years had been $30,000,000,000.

We are frequently told that the tariff prevents exports, that the tariff disturbs commerce with foreign nations. I find that our total exports from the foundation of the Government up to 1860 had amounted to about $9,000,000,000, which was the result of two hundred and fifty years of exporting, for we began to export almost with the beginning of the settlement of this country, more or less, and we exported tobacco when we had not anything else to export. Since 1860, in twenty-seven years, we have exported $14,200,000,000. We have exported within the last three years more than $2,200,000,000. And yet we are told that this system is a weight upon progress and retards and hinders our natural development.

In 1860 there was employed in manufacturing a capital of $1,009,855,715; in 1880 the capital employed was $2,790,272,606. Our production in 1850 was $1,019,106,616.

This reminds me that when the Senator from Georgia was addressing the Senate the other day he made this statement:

PRODUCTS OF MANUFACTURES.

In the matter of products the same phenomena appear. In 1850 the total value was $1,019,106,616. In 1860 it was $1,885,861,676, a gain of 85 per cent. In 1880, after twenty years of high tariff, the product was valued at $5,369,579,191, a gain of 184.7 per cent. since 1860. The same causes which enlarged manufacturing capital in 1861-'65 increased manufactured products; but compare 1870 with 1880. The product of 1870 was valued at $4,232,325,442 in greenbacks, or $2,526,937,868 in specie. If the gain from 1870 to 1880 had been 85 per cent., as it was from 1850 to 1860, the product of 1880 would have been worth $6,524,835,056, or $1,155,255,865 in excess of the actual value. Where do the benefits of the high tariff appear?

Now, let us see how the Senator arrived at that. He says the gain from 1850 to 1860 was 85 per cent. In 1850 the product was $1,019,106,616, and in 1860 it was $1,885,861,676. The difference in those years was $886,755,060, but from 1860 to 1880 we gained $3,483,717,515. We gained from 1860, twenty years, four times what we gained from 1850 to 1860; and yet by a system of arithmetic that everybody understands you can make it appear that the percentage was greatly less than it was during that previous decade.

The Senator has other figures of the same kind which I will allude to before I get through. Our production was larger relatively from 1860 to 1880 than it had been from 1850 to 1860. Our production in 1880 was as he has given it, $5,369,579,191. Our net production in 1860 was $854,256,584. Our net production in 1880 was $1,972,755,642. Our wages in 1860 were $378,878,966. In 1880 our wages were $947,953,795. Dividing this by the number of men laboring we had in 1860 $289 per hand. Dividing it by the number of hands employed in 1880 we had $347 per hand.

Then the Senator from Georgia goes into an argument to show that the percentage of increase of the laborer's wages had not been equal to the percentage of increase of the product, and therefore, he said, the labor in this country is not receiving as much remuneration proportionately as it did in 1860. The laborer does not care what relation his wages bear to the product; he wants to know how much money he has got; and if he got $289 in 1860, he can realize the difference between that and getting $347 in 1880, with a purchasing power for everything that he needs increased from 15 to 20 per cent.

We employed in manufactures in 1860 1,311,246 persons. We employed in 1880 2,732,595. The amount of material used in 1860 was $1,027,411,482, and in 1880 it was $3,381,701,277. We employed in manufactures, of women and children who can not be employed in agriculture, 713,560, who are to be deprived of every opportunity to labor if all the people in this country are to follow one pursuit, and that the pursuit of agriculture.

We hear a great deal about farmers. The Senator from Georgia waxed eloquent over the wrongs of the farming people. In 1880 the number of people engaged in farming pursuits was 7,670,493. If the proportion is continued, if the same proportionate number of people are engaged in farming as in 1880, we must have about 9,000,000 now engaged in farming. But the people engaged in farming are not all farmers. It appears by the census reports that 3,323,876 of this number are agricultural laborers working for day wages, and of the 17,000,000 people who are said to be engaged in earning their living by labor there are 10,000,000 and more, according to the census of 1880, who are engaged in earning their living by daily labor or yearly labor or monthly labor. They were the employés and not the employers. If that rule holds good there are to-day not less than 12,000,000 people who are working in the United States for wages.

In 1860 the total production of cereals of all kinds in the United States was 1,230,000,000 bushels; in 1880, 2,700,000,000 bushels. The Agricultural Report shows that the production in 1887 amounted to 3,000,000,000 bushels of grain of various kinds.

The live-stock in the United States in 1860 was valued at $1,089,329,915. In 1880 it was $1,500,464,609. The Agricultural Report put it in 1884 at $2,467,868,924, and notwithstanding the depression in the cattle business and in all classes of property included in live-stock the last report from the Agricultural Department estimates the entire value of the live-stock in the United States, including horses that are used in cities, at $3,000,000,000.

In 1860 we produced 60,000,000 pounds of wool; in 1880 we produced 232,000,000 pounds, and in 1887, 285,000,000 pounds. We have produced year in and year out on an average for the last five years, 1,619,000,000 bushels of corn, and of this we export about 3½ per cent. The rest we find a market for amongst our own people.

It is said that we have not increased our farms and our farm products in accordance with the growth of other things. If we stimulate manufactures, we necessarily draw some of the people from agriculture; and that was what was desired, and that is what is desired. A diversity of pursuits is what we want, and a great diversity is not only calculated to give all men employment, but to give all men employment according to their capacities and according to their talents and tastes. One man who will succeed admirably as a manufacturer would fail as a farmer, and he who would fail as a manufacturer might succeed as a farmer, and so that is the wisest system of political economy which gives to the people diversity of occupation and diversity of pursuit; and thus we are enabled, as I said a moment ago, to put more than 700,000 women and children at work in useful pursuits, according to their capacity, that they may support themselves.

The farms in 1860 were 2,044,077 in number; in 1880 they were 4,008,907; in 1887 they were estimated at 5,000,000, according to the Agricultural Report. Their value in 1860 was $6,645,045,007; in 1880, $10,197,096,776. There is not time to go over these items, but any man who will do so will see, in the first place, that in 1880 there were many more acres of land under cultivation, in proportion to the whole number of farms, than there were in 1860, showing that the farms have increased, their value has increased, their capacity has increased, and their productiveness has increased as the land has been better cultivated.

In 1850 we produced 38 bushels of wheat per capita. In 1886 we produced 53 bushels of wheat per capita. We produce five times as much wheat as we produced in 1850. In fifteen years prior to 1887 the increased product of corn has been 43 per cent., and now our product of corn and wheat and oats and rye is so great that if one single mill to the bushel can be added to its value it represents three millions of money, and if you can add one single cent to its value it represents thirty millions of money.

From 1850 to 1861, a period of twelve years, we imported $454,309,000 of merchandise more than we exported. Do I need to say to anybody that no country can continue that process without destruction of her material interests? You can not as a nation buy more than you sell any more than an individual can do it, and not go into bankruptcy or draw upon his capital. But during the same twelve years we exported of silver and gold $361,769,479 more than we imported. During the twelve years from 1876 to 1887 inclusive, we exported merchandise in excess of our imports to the value of $1,481,077,940, and during this time while we exported a large amount of silver we also imported a large amount of gold, so that the sum total of our imports of gold and silver exceeded our exports by more than $86,000,000.

In 1860 our exports of merchandise were $316,242,423. In 1887 they were $716,183,211. In 1860 the imports of coin and bullion were $8,550,135. In 1887 our imports of coin and bullion were $60,170,792.

The Senator from Georgia called attention to the building of railroads in this country in his effort to make it appear that in the decade from 1850 to 1860 there had been a degree of prosperity not realized since. He said:

There were 9,021 miles of railroads in the United States in 1850. The mileage in 1860 was 30,635, an increase of 239.6 per cent. during the low-tariff period. In 1870 there was a mileage of 52,914, a gain of 72.72 per cent. These figures had increased to 93,349 in 1880, a gain of 76.41 per cent. In the twenty years of high tariff, from 1860 to 1880, there was a gain in mileage of 204.7 per cent. as against a gain of 239.6 per cent. in the ten years of low tariff, from 1850 to 1860. How much the duty on iron and steel rails checked railroad building during two decades of high tariff may not be correctly estimated, but it is easy of conjecture.

A statement of that kind is calculated to mislead the casual observer. A person taking up this and looking at it without paying much attention to it would say that that proposition was correct and that we did not progress as rapidly; but what are the facts? Let us take fourteen years previous to 1860 and during that time we built 25,705 miles of railroad, or an average of 1,836 miles a year. From 1860 to 1887, a period of twenty-seven years, we built 120,347 miles, or an average of 4,460 miles a year. And yet this process of figuring of the Senator from Georgia makes it appear to the casual observer that we actually built less miles of railroad since 1860 than we built previous to 1860.

Take the last fourteen years under this "vicious" tariff and put those fourteen years with the fourteen years previous to and including 1860, and it will be seen that we built 25,705 miles of road in the period up to 1860, and during the fourteen years last passed we have built 80,718 miles of railroad, or nearly 5,700 miles a year; and for the last seven years we have built 57,637 miles of railroad, or 8,219 miles in a year; and last year we built more miles of railroad than ever had been built in any year before in our history, and more than any other people ever built.

Yet upon that system of figuring, upon that system of percentages, we only built 9½ per cent. of road, and thus year after year, when we have accumulated 200,000 miles, the percentage will be still less, and we shall have to build an enormous amount of road to keep up with this method of figuring!

Mr. President, I find that I must close my remarks without referring to many things that I had intended to notice; but I shall take occasion to refer to them at some other time. Before. however. I leave the subject I desire to call attention to some remarks of the Senator from Georgia that I think need a little explanation, and that is his system of percentages continued.

Mr. CHACE. Which Senator from Georgia?

Mr. TELLER. I refer to the Senator from Georgia who spoke in behalf of the President's message [Mr. COLQUITT].

He makes a comparison between the valuation of real and personal property by States for the decades from 1850 to 1860 and from 1870 to 1880. He takes, for instance, the State of California, and starting with $239 per capita in 1850 he finds that California had $547 per capita in 1860, $1,140 in 1870, and $1,654 in 1880, and yet he says that her percentage of gain from 1850 to 1860 was 128 per cent. and her percentage of increase between 1870 and 1880 was only 45 per cent. That is calculated to deceive. If it was not intended for that purpose it certainly is calculated to do it. The question is how much did they add, not what was the percentage, but did the people of California make more money and put it away between 1850 and 1860 than they did between 1870 and 1880? Between 1850 and 1860 they cleared on an average $308 apiece; between 1860 and 1870 they cleared $593 apiece, and between 1870 and 1880 they cleared $514 apiece; and yet the Senator's percentage is correct; and as they increase in wealth per capita their percentage will decrease, and apparently they will be making less money, although in fact they may be making twice as much.

The population of the State of Delaware between 1850 and 1860 gained $182 apiece, and between 1860 and 1870 $365 apiece, or twice as much.

The population of the District of Columbia gained between 1850 and 1860 $176 a piece, and between 1860 and 1870 $416 apiece. Thus you may take it right through and it will be found that these percentages are extremely vicious and deceiving.

A few days since a statement was made in another body which I quote from the RECORD and desire to call to the attention of the Senate. It is said to have been taken from a St. Louis paper, from the Missouri Republican. The statement is as follows:

First, as to farms. In 1880 there were 138,500 farms in Kansas, 256,000 in Illinois, 194,000 in Indiana, 247,000 in Ohio, 185,300 in Iowa, 154,000 in Michigan, and 134,300 in Wisconsin—making a total of 1,309,100 in the seven States named. Recent statistics collected by Granger associations and printed in farm journals make the following exhibit of farm mortgages in these same States:

Kansas	$235,000,000
Illinois	1,000,000,000
Indiana	665,000,000
Ohio	1,227,000,000
Iowa	567,000,000
Michigan	500,000,000
Wisconsin	357,000,000
Total	4,521,000,000

It occurred to me that that was not possible, but I read the statistics and I find that whoever got up this statement, either by accident or design, went to the record and took the value of farms as reported in the census of 1880 and actually put down here as mortgages the entire value of those farms. In the State of Illinois, if this is true, every farm must be mortgaged for $30 on acre; in the State of Indiana every farm must be mortgaged for $40 an acre; and yet accessible to every man is the Report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for 1886, in which he declared that the farm mortgages in all sections of the country, giving the tables, State by State, were much less than they were ten years before. I will not now detain the Senate with the particular details of that, but nobody need misstate, nobody need misunderstand. There are the facts. It is not true that the mortgages have shingled the farms all over, as the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. COLQUITT] stated. There will be at all times where there is a farming community mortgages on farms. Many a man buys his farm on time and the great majority of men who own farms have got them on time, and they are compelled to mortgage them. But to say that they are heavily mortgaged because of the tariff is not true and is not borne out by the records of the Departments charged with an investigation into those affairs.

Mr. President, if there was time I should like to call attention to the complaint often made that our shipping is destroyed by reason of the tariff. I desire to put in my remarks on that point simply the statistics of the United States on this subject, which show that there is practically no tariff upon that which enters into the construction of a ship, or at least the great body of materials that enter into a ship is exempt by the plain provisions of the statute and has been for years.

On the free-list are—

Felt, adhesive, for sheeting vessels.

Logs, and round, unmanufactured timber, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, and ship timber, and ship planking.

SEC. 2510. All lumber, timber, hemp, manila, wire rope, and iron and steel rods, bars, spikes, nails, and bolts, and copper and composition metal which may be necessary for the construction and equipment of vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership or for the purpose of being employed in the foreign trade, including the trade between the Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States, after the passage of this act, may be imported in bond under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; and upon proof that such materials have been used for such purpose, no duties shall be paid thereon. But vessels receiving the benefit of this section shall not be allowed to engage in the coastwise trade of the United States more than two months in any one year, except upon the payment to the United States of the duties on which a rebate is herein allowed: Provided, That vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership shall not be allowed to engage in the coastwise trade of the United States.

SEC. 2511. All articles of foreign production needed for the repair of American vessels engaged exclusively in foreign trade may be withdrawn from bonded warehouses free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

Mr. President, I will not go into the history of the decay of the shipping interest, but we shall never build ships in this country unless by some system such as England has adopted we encourage ship-building, or until the time comes, which I hope may never come, when American laborers will work in this country for the prices for which men work in Europe. When they do that, then we can build ships; but as long as we pay for that class of skilled labor twice as much as they pay in England, twice as much as they pay in France, we shall not build ships.

It is said by those who are opposed to the tariff that it does not increase the wages of laboring people, that all the advantage goes to the manufacturer; and yet they do not deny, nobody denies that to-day a skilled laborer in almost any branch of business can get twice the amount of money here that he can get in Europe; and no one will deny the further fact that he, with one-half the money, can buy as many comforts in this country as his competitor abroad can buy with the money that he gets. Meats and butter and cheese and all that class of articles are cheaper in this country, and clothing that is worn by the class of men who labor is as cheap in this country as in Europe. I desire here to put in my remarks some extracts that I have here as to the wages of labor in this country.

Relative cost of labor in a woolen mill of 221 hands in Providence and of a similar mill in Bradford, England.

Operatives.	Providence.		Bradford.
	Per week.	Total.	Per week.	Total.
Forty-five small boys and girls, fourteen years old	$3.25	$146.25	$1.50	$67.50
One hundred and four small boys and girls, eighteen years old	5.25	546.00	2.50	260.00
Fifty boys and girls, twenty-one years old	6.00	300.00	3.00	150.00
Six section hands	13.50	85.00	7.00	42.00
Two overseers	24.00	48.00	9.00	18.00
One superintendent	36.00	36.00	15.00	15.00
One boss dyer	30.00	30.00	10.00	10.00
Eight laborers in dye-house	7.00	56.00	4.50	36.00
One watchman	14.00	14.00	6.00	6.00
Two machinists for repairs	15.00	30.00	7.50	45.00
Two clerks	15.00	30.00	7.00	14.00
Total cost of weekly pay-roll		1,317.25		633.50

107.93 per cent. in favor of Providence operatives.

Machines and machinery.

Occupation.	Weekly wages.
	United States.	England.
Blacksmiths	$15.50	$8.25
Blacksmiths, helpers	10.50	3.60
Blacksmiths, y. p	3.00	2.20
Boiler-makers	13.75	7.75
Core-makers	14.00	7.75
Engineers	13.75	7.75
Finishers	11.00	8.75
Firemen	9.00	4.50
Furnace men	12.60	6.75
Helpers	9.00	5.50
Holders-on	10.25	5.00
Laborers	9.30	5.00
Machinists, men	13.00	8.00
Machinists, app. m	8.50	3.25
Machinists, app. y. p	6.00	1.75
Machinists, helpers	9.00	5.30
Molders	15.50	8.75
Pattern-makers	14.60	8.40
Riveters	15.75	7.50

Metals and metallic goods.

Occupation.	Weekly wages.
	United States.	England.
Burnishers, men	$15.00	$7.25
Core-makers, m	14.00	7.50
Engineers	12.75	8.50
Finishers	14.50	7.00
Fitters	15.00	9.00
Forgers	12.75	9.50
Furnacemen	11.50	6.75
Grinders	12.00	7.75
Hafters	12.00	6.00
Hafters, y. p	3.75	2.50
Hammermen	24.00	5.75
Hammermen, helpers	11.00	6.75
Lacquerers, w	4.50	2.35
Molders, m	15.60	9.50
Molders, y. p	10.30	3.20
Pattern-makers	17.00	9.00
Smiths	17.25	6.25

Weekly wages of compositors in the United States and Great Britain.

Great Britain, nine hours per day.		United States, ten hours per day.
London	$9.00	New York	$18.00
Liverpool	9.00	Philadelphia	16.00
Manchester	8.72	Chicago	16.00
Dublin	8.24	St. Louis	16.90
Glasgow	8.24	Cambridge	15.00
Edinburgh	8.00	Boston	15.00
Belfast	7.48

Mr. Duncan writes: "For work done by the week, in all classes of work, American wages are as nearly as possible double those paid in Great Britain."

If it is not true that the American laborer gets better pay, gets better compensation for his labor, than any other laborer in the world, why is it that since 1860 there have come to this country 9,129,945 foreigners? Why have they come? Why have they sought this region if it is not to better their condition? They are laboring people. They do not flee entirely from bad government, and they do not come, as it is frequently said here and elsewhere, to get our cheap lands. Why should more than 700,000 Canadians, with cheap land in Canada, come to the United States? They do not come for that purpose at all. Where do they go when they come? They go to the manufacturing States and the manufacturing cities, where labor is compensated, where it is well paid. I have before me the census reports showing where they go. Of the 6,679,943 foreigners in the United States in 1880, how many were found in the State of Alabama? Nine thousand seven hundred and thirty-four. In Arkansas only 10,350. Does anybody say that Arkansas and Alabama do not present an attractive field for the agriculturist? Texas only had of this great number of people a comparatively few, 114,616 only. Examination of the report will further show that Boston had 114,000 of them; that Massachusetts, without any agricultural grounds for them, had 443,491; that Baltimore had 56,136; that St. Louis had 105,013; and New York had 478,694. I ask to be allowed to put this table in my remarks.

Distribution of foreign immigrants in 1880.

(Compendium of Census, pages 483, 484.)

In the United States	6,679,943	Mississippi	9,209
		Missouri	211,578
Alabama	9,734	Montana	11,521
Arizona	16,049	Nebraska	97,414
Arkansas	10,350	Nevada	25,653
California	292,874	New Hampshire	46,204
Colorado	39,790	New Jersey	221,700
Connecticut	129,992	New Mexico	8,051
Dakota	51,794	New York	1,211,379
Delaware	9,468	North Carolina	3,742
District of Columbia	17,122	Ohio	394,943
Florida	9,909	Oregon	30,503
Georgia	10,564	Pennsylvania	587,829
Idaho	9,974	Rhode Island	73,993
Illinois	583,576	South Carolina	7,686
Indiana	144,178	Tennessee	16,702
Iowa	261,650	Texas	114,616
Kansas	110,086	Utah	43,994
Kentucky	59,517	Vermont	40,939
Louisiana	54,146	Virginia	14,096
Maine	58,883	Washington	15,803
Maryland	82,806	West Virginia	18,265
Massachusetts	443,491	Wisconsin	405,425
Michigan	388,508	Wyoming	5,850
Minnesota	267,676

Distribution of immigrants from British America.

	The United States	717,157	24	New Hampshire	27,142
			25	New Jersey	3,536
	The States	697,676	26	New York	84,182
			27	North Carolina	425
1	Alabama	271	28	Ohio	16,146
2	Arkansas	787	29	Oregon	3,019
3	California	18,889	30	Pennsylvania	12,376
4	Colorado	5,785	31	Rhode Island	18,306
5	Connecticut	16,444	32	South Carolina	141
6	Delaware	246	33	Tennessee	545
7	Florida	446	34	Texas	2,472
8	Georgia	348	35	Vermont	24,620
9	Illinois	34,043	36	Virginia	585
10	Indiana	5,569	37	West Virginia	295
11	Iowa	21,097	38	Wisconsin	28,965
12	Kansas	12,536
13	Kentucky	1,070		The Territories	19,481
14	Louisiana	726
15	Maine	37,114	1	Arizona	571
16	Maryland	988	2	Dakota	10,678
17	Massachusetts	119,302	3	District of Columbia	452
18	Michigan	148,866	4	Idaho	584
19	Minnesota	29,631	5	Montana	2,481
20	Mississippi	309	6	New Mexico	280
21	Missouri	8,685	7	Utah	1,036
22	Nebraska	8,622	8	Washington	2,857
23	Nevada	3,147	9	Wyoming	542

FOREIGNERS IN CITIES.

Boston	114,796	Cleveland	59,409
Baltimore	56,136	Philadelphia	204,335
Detroit	45,645	Pittsburgh	44,605
St. Louis	105,013	Milwaukee	71,440
New York	478,694	Chicago	204,859
Brooklyn	177,694	New Orleans	41,157
Buffalo	51,264	San Francisco	104,244
Cincinnati	71,659	Key West	5,342

The junior Senator from Georgia the other day complained of the destructive influence the tariff had on the farmers, and he cited the fact that Georgia had less property in value to-day than it had in 1860. That may be correct according to the statements made here taken from the census, and yet I do not suppose that anybody believes that is true that the wealth of Georgia is not greater to-day than it was in 1860. What could have made it poorer? It is true there was a destruction of its system of labor twenty-five years ago, but the labor was left, the land was left; everything that was necessary to make a State was there; and if the people of Georgia are poorer to-day than they were in 1860 it is not to their credit. The cotton that they raise brings more money than it brought before the war, year in and year out. If the Senator will take ten years prior to the war, he can not take any ten years since that which have not brought more money. If there is anything else that Georgia produces to sell, it has brought more money.

It is a misleading and deceiving statement to say that Georgia is not worth as much now as in 1860. Of course if you count her able-bodied colored people at a thousand dollars a head, as they did before the war, and the children from $200 up, it might make an aggregation of a good deal of wealth; but every colored man to-day is worth more to Georgia than he was before the war. There are greater elements of strength in Georgia to-day than there were before the war. She can make an "Empire State" of herself, as she has chosen to call herself for many years, much more readily with free labor than she could with slave labor.

I repeat, everything is there, the labor is there, the land is there, the sunshine and the rain are there; and if the people of Georgia (if I may say it without offending anybody) would cease to whine and complain of their condition and address themselves like men to solving the question whether Georgia is to be a fifth-rate State or a good one, we should not hear these complaints here or elsewhere.

Mr. President, I do not propose now to go further into the details of this question, because I know my friend from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] is getting impatient. Many things that I should like to say I shall omit now, and perhaps say on another occasion. When you take the last twenty-five years of our history, when you examine it everywhere, no man, high or low, is justified in speaking of the system of political economy which has wrought out such great results as have been wrought out in our case, as a vicious, illogical, or inequitable method. We have progressed faster than any other people in the world. Will the Senators who talk about free trade point me to a nation on the earth that has accumulated money as we have accumulated it? Will they point to a nation in the world where labor is so well paid, where it is so much respected, where every avenue of progress, every avenue of honor, of preferment, and of distinction is open to the laborer as it is here, where the people have engaged in such magnificent enterprises and accomplished them, where the great charities have been managed and kept alive as nowhere else? Why, Mr. President, we have sent relief abroad to suffering Ireland, and we have sent it to other nations of the world. The missionary people in this country send more than $6,000,000 a year to the heathen; and the laboring girls who work in kitchens and the boys who work in stables every year send to Ireland more than $15,000,000 to save their kindred from the effects of free trade in Ireland; and as is suggested to me by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS], their own condition is 100 per cent. better than it ever was anywhere else, or than is that of their kindred at home. More than three and a half millions of Englishmen, including Irishmen in the number, have sought an asylum in this country and are here. Do you want to apply English methods, to put your labor where the English put theirs? If they are better off there, why do they not stay there, why do they come here, and why are they coming here whenever they can, and why is it that they never return?

Oh, Mr. President, I know that the Cobden Club sends out a great many articles to show that we should be benefited by having these people turn their attention to their own home country. Let them do something for their own subjects in Ireland, where the people have been reduced some millions from what they were, and poverty and distress pervade every stage of society save the landlords, and see what they can do there. If there was time I should like to go on and show the condition of Great Britain. I should like to show that every thirty-third man there is a pauper, and in some of their great cities every fifth man is the object of public charity. They pay in Great Britain two and a half times more to support their paupers than they do to sustain their public schools. And yet we are told that the American laborer should adopt English methods, and that we should open the door so that the products of English labor may come here and compete with ours. Nay, Mr. President, not only the English laborer, but the laborer of India, the laborer of China, the laborer of Japan, the pariah of India who pays for labor to cultivate his field 6 cents a day—he is to be put in competition with American labor. The Chinaman, who works for 6 cents a day, is to be put in competition with American labor; the Japanese, who considers himself most magnificently paid if he gets 15 cents for fifteen hours' labor, a cent an hour, is to be put in competition with American labor.

Mr. President, we are told that we can compete with the world. So we can if we live as those people live. So we can if we adopt European methods; if we live without meat, without butter, and without milk; if we live as they do in London, six families in one room; where, as Mr. Chamberlain said, tens of thousands never know the luxury of milk. As laboring people we eat three times more meat than European people. We wear better clothes and spend more money on ourselves and our children as laboring people than any other people in the world; while as laborers we get more money in proportion to the payment of a dime than any other people in the world.

A distinguished Englishman, when comparing American laborers with English, said: "Where the American laborer gets 72 per cent., capital gets 23 per cent., and Government gets 5 per cent., our laborer gets 41 per cent., capital gets 36 per cent., and Government gets the balance." That is the English testimony. We get the bulk of what is paid out in manufactures. All manufactures are made up principally of labor. In some cases it is nearly all labor, 90 or 95 per cent., and on an average 80 per cent. of everything manufactured is labor, if you follow into computation the labor put upon what is called raw material.

Mr. EDMUNDS (in his seat). There is no raw material.

Mr. TELLER. A Senator suggests in my hearing that there is not any raw material. There is very little that can be called raw material. It is said, I believe, by those who are now advocating this message that wool is raw material. The farmer in Ohio does not believe that it is raw material. It has cost him care, it has cost him money, it has cost him attention to get it from the sheep's back. It is to him something more than a raw material. So you may say of everything else.

But, Mr. President, there is no time to go into that to-night, for I promised the Senator from Iowa that I would quit some time, and I propose to try to keep that promise. On some other occasion I may touch upon the question of raw material. I should like to touch upon some other questions in connection with our history as a people, and in connection with our progress.

However high the man may be, however much power there may be back of him who assails this system as "vicious, inequitable, and illogical," I am not ashamed to point to the glorious results of twenty-seven years of experiment and to show that it is neither vicious, nor illogical, nor inequitable, but that it has brought to the people of this country a prosperity, a richness, a contentedness, and a glory that no other system has brought to any other people in the world.

THE MAIL SERVICE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is the unfinished business, which is the bill to regulate the importation of foreign merchandise, and to secure uniformity in the classification and valuation thereof, and for other purposes.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland. With the permission of the Senator from Iowa, I desire to make a statement before the Senate proceeds with the consideration of the regular order of business.

Yesterday I gave notice that it was my intention to-day to call up a resolution with a view to make some remarks on the subject. I was not aware at that time that the Senator from Colorado had made a similar announcement for to-day. I therefore desire now to give notice that on Monday next I shall call up the subject which I yesterday indicated, to wit, the motion of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. PADDOCK] to reconsider the vote by which the resolution of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB] proposing an inquiry into our alleged inefficient mail service was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, with a view of making some remarks upon the subject connected therewith.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills and joint resolution, received from the House of Representatives, were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

A bill (H. R. 4691) for the relief of John P. Hageman;

A bill (H. R. 7255) for the relief of A. B. Tyan;

A bill (H. R. 7934) for the relief of Dr. H. B. Matteosian;

A bill (H. R. 474) for the relief of General G. Cluserét; and Joint resolution (H. Res. 95) to enable the President of the United States to extend to certain inhabitants of Japan a suitable recognition of their humane treatment of the survivors of the crew of the American bark Cashmere.

PUBLIC-BUILDING BILLS.

Mr. SPOONER. Some days since the Senate ordered a conference on the public-building bills for Milwaukee and Omaha, consisting of Senators QUAY and VEST and myself. Senator QUAY is absent from the city, and I understand will not return for some time. I ask that he be excused from further service upon the two committees of conference, and that another Senator be appointed in his place.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate has heard the request of the Senator from Wisconsin. If there be no objection, the Senator from Pennsylvania will be excused from service and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] appointed in his place.

VALUATION OF IMPORTED MERCHANDISE.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 977) to regulate the importation of foreign merchandise, and to secure uniformity in the classification and valuation thereof, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole, and open to amendment. [A pause.] If there be no further amendments proposed to the bill as in Committee of the Whole, it will be reported to the Senate.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 977) to regulate the importation of foreign merchandise, and to secure uniformity in the classification and valuation thereof, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate as in Committee of the Whole has had under consideration the bill the title of which has just been read, and made amendments thereto. It is now in the Senate and the question is upon concurring in the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. EVARTS. Is not the bill still in Committee of the Whole?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It has just been reported to the Senate.

Mr. FRYE. It is open to amendment just the same.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I move to amend section 14 of the bill under consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair suggests to the Senator from Vermont whether the motion to concur in the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole would not be first in order?

Mr. EDMUNDS. That is right, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on concurring in the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole.

The amendments were concurred in.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is in the Senate and still open to amendment.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I move to amend lines 5 and 6 of section 14, by striking out the words "the construction of the law respecting."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the proposed amendment.

The SECRETARY. In section 14, line 5, after the word "to," it is proposed to strike out the words "the construction of the law respecting;" so as to read:

As provided for in section 13 of this act, as to the classification of such merchandise, etc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS].

Mr. EDMUNDS. My reason for moving the amendment is, that I believe as the section now reads it will not stand judicial investigation and scrutiny as a constitutional enactment, for the section as it now is makes the finding of the board of general appraisers on a question of classification (that is, as to whether one thing is under the law, wool or cotton, for illustration), a final and conclusive determination.

I believe that is a thing which can not be decided by executive authority, and that if the owner of the wool is taxed for cotton, if that be a higher rate, so that he has any motive for complaining, he has a right to have a judicial determination of the question—I do not say by a jury, because it is a matter which very likely can be withdrawn from the consideration of a jury entirely; but that is a different question from withdrawing it from judicial consideration.

With that end in view, and proposing to offer sundry other amendments in the same line, I make this motion to amend.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator from Vermont to make all his suggestions of amendment, so that we may see the scope of the section as he proposes to amend it.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Very good.

Mr. ALLISON. He was kind enough to show me what he proposed in the way of amendment, and I should like to see the general connection of all the amendments proposed by him.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I will state, then, in the first place, as I have perhaps already stated, but I will repeat it, that the fourteenth section of the bill as it now stands makes final and conclusive upon citizens of the United States and upon the Government itself (which is just as bad for public purposes, although perhaps not unconstitutional) the judgment and opinion of an executive board of an Executive Department; that is, the judgment of the board of general appraisers is final and conclusive on every question concerning the classification of property to be taxed by a customs impost. Therefore, if the law that we pass says all wool imported shall pay 20 per cent. ad valorem, and that silk imported shall pay 30 per cent. ad valorem, if this board of appraisers decide that my wool is silk, that is the end of it.

That is quite a different question, as it appears to me, from a mere valuation of an assessor, as we all have in our States, of property which can be left to their judgment and discretion, as it must be; but I never heard of a State law, or anybody suggest that a State law, had left to tax assessors the right of determining finally and conclusively as against the citizen whether his property was land or whether it was personal property. The idea is perfectly absurd. Nobody ever thought of it.

But here, under this head of classification, the committee has got a phrase which makes this board of general appraisers the final and conclusive court to determine not merely valuations and incidents, and things of that kind, but to determine really under what head of a varying tariff law of various per cents. or specific duties anything shall go, and that is to be the end of it.

I do not believe you can pass a bill of that kind and have it the law, and if you could, it ought not to pass, for it is not right, as it appears to me. That is the scope of my observation.

Now, I propose to correct that as far as I can by the amendment I have offered, and then, in line 7, by adding, after the word "under," the words "and in consequence of;" then to strike out, on page 20, line 11 of the same section, the words "of law," so as to leave to the court all the questions that are open; again, to strike out all after "thereon," in line 19, to and including the word "court" where it first occurs in line 22; in line 23 to insert, after "shall," the words "summarily, without a jury," so as to read "shall summarily, without a jury, proceed," etc.; and to strike out the words "of law," in line 23, so that instead of leaving the board of appraisers to be the judicial determiners of what kind of property is taxed by this enactment, and whether it is taxed at one rate or another on account of its being one thing or another, there shall be a speedy judicial determination by the judges of the circuit court where the question arises, instead of leaving it to the judicial and final determination of an executive body of officers, who, in my opinion, have no constitutional power to settle a question of that kind finally.

Mr. EVARTS. Mr. President, at the adjournment last evening I stated that there were some other observations that I desired to make in Committee of the Whole on some subsequent sections of the bill. It seems my opportunity of doing so has been lost by some transaction which passed without my noticing it. But I am told that we are just as well off as if we had been in Committee of the Whole, and therefore I may be heard as well now as then.

It is to be noticed, in the scheme of this bill, that official appraisers, unassisted by merchant appraisers and without any intervention of court in the sense of a jury trial, are to be made the final determiners of the exactions which are taken under the supposed execution of law from the importers.

The transaction is this: By law certain exactions are justified and the importers are subject to the payment of those exactions, but from whatever authority an exaction shall be made contrary to law it is not made by authority of law, and the citizen suffering under that exaction, unless by some operation of this bill or otherwise, is deprived of a resort to law to save himself from a legal exaction; the general judicial establishment of the United States, and of the States, for that matter, opens to him his recourse for redress; and when he asserts that a collector has taken under this or that frame of law a certain amount of money when the law justified taking only a less sum, he is entitled to a restoration, not by favor, not by administration, but by law.

The peculiarity of the situation has been that while the Government had a right to institute its processes and methods of exacting from the importer the revenues which are by law imposed, and was not to be interrupted in that process, nevertheless when the process was completed the law and the courts were open to resort for redress; and by a long series of decisions, running back forty and almost fifty years, when these suits were first commenced, they rested upon the common-law right of the importer from whom money had been taken under exaction of law, but contrary to law, to have a direct recourse against the collector, to wit, the man who had taken from him more than the law allowed the collector to take. That was open to suit in the State courts; it could be transferred to the Federal courts; but the courts were open, and the courts had full jurisdiction of that direct, plain right, and that right was administered by the courts of law like any other right.

Then there came to be an arrangement by which this direct common-law resort against the individual who had violated the law should be reduced to a recourse against him only substantially pro forma, in order to try the question, but that no execution should issue against him, and in lieu thereof the Treasury, the Government, should assume the payment of what was thus established. The courts regarded that as a substitute for execution of the obligation of the Government, as still making it a just judicial procedure of which the Supreme Court and the inferior courts had jurisdiction, for these courts do not take jurisdiction of moot cases; they only take jurisdiction of cases in which they can enforce their judgments. This arrangement was considered in the transactions of Government as a substitute for the course by execution against the collector.

As I understand, all those provisions and arrangements of law, if this bill shall be enacted, will be repealed. If this section 14 is constitutional and consistent in its arrangements, either with or without the amendments proposed by the Senator from Vermont, it will be the only recourse there is; so far as the laws of the United States establish it, the method of recourse in this section will be the only one. If it should be held by the courts that this section is unconstitutional, then so far as I can see the aggrieved party would be remitted to his original common-law right to sue the collector as having taken by methods not known to or recognized by the law more than the law authorized the taking of.

It has seemed to me, therefore, that if this section 14 were open to serious question, as I deem it to be in substance and in bottom and in frame, it would be impossible to graft upon this scheme a constitutional method, but that the subject would have to be, by committal or by further and more deliberate consideration, the substitution of another method of pursuing and executing this general and certain and necessary right.

The observations of the Senator from Vermont have been undoubtedly well grounded; but the amendments which he has proposed do not, as it seems to me, reach what is a more fundamental difficulty in this scheme thus proposed as a summary and rapid method of executing rights.

I regard the bill, in its fourteenth section, as substantially turning the circuit courts into an appellate, appraising administrative act, and the appeal given to the Supreme Court of the United States is neither more nor less than carrying these successive appeals of what is, in its nature as thus developed up to this section and will remain under this section, if it is allowed to take operation, nothing but an administrative measure of appraisal.

Without discussing the question whether the matter of fact upon which the question of law between the United States and the importer who complains can be subtracted from a trial by jury, without considering for the moment that question, I submit that the whole jurisdiction in the courts of the United States rests entirely upon what are called in the Constitution and are known to the profession and to the judiciary as "cases." There is no constitution of the Federal courts as a tribunal to resort to for opinion or judgment or administrative action. The power of the Federal courts, even on the great constitutional question of the validity of laws of the States or laws of the United States, is nowhere accorded to those tribunals except as it arises in cases, in cases either at law or in equity; and "cases" are in their nature controversies, as the language is used in the Constitution in the same connection, between one party and another party, the assertion for judicial redress on the part of the plaintiff to be yielded under compulsion by the defendant. Whatever may be the description or arrangement of jurisdiction, there is nothing accorded to the Federal courts in the way of supervision that does not come under this proposition, for the Constitution can not be enlarged and it can not be diminished in this area of judicial power.

Now, we have the merchant or the collector, on one side or the other, as is provided for in section 14, dissatisfied with the last resort of administrative action by appraisers, which up to that time is certainly not a court in any sense, with none of the rights of parties before them, with none of the authority accorded to them. Up to that time it is a pure administration of official authority exerted by the Government against and upon the importer and his property. When, therefore, he, or the collector on one side or the other is dissatisfied with the point of law that arises, what is the appeal that is provided as a recourse to be followed up in the Federal court? Let me read from the fourteenth section:

If the owner * * * or the collector, or the Secretary of the Treasury shall be dissatisfied with the decision of the board of general appraisers, as provided for in section 13 * * * they, or either of them—may, within thirty days next after such decision and not afterwards, apply to the circuit court * * * for a review of the questions of law involved in such decision.

That is, the Secretary of the Treasury among them—

It is precisely the same question, presented in the same form and in the same action by the court, that in the earlier appeal from one appraiser to the board of appraisers is provided for. The Secretary is not suing anybody. The decision has been in favor of the importer, and the importer has in advance, by the provisions of this bill, and the ordinary processes of exaction, paid all that the Government demands, and has paid more than by this decision the Government is entitled to. There is then no action brought by the United States against the importer to recover any money from him.

Then if you go on, what is the malcontent importer to do? He shall apply "for a review of the questions of law involved in such decision." Who is defendant? What party is there? How is judgment to be given? How does it become a judicial transaction? You can not change the nature of this from its being a judicial consideration of the justness and lawfulness of the classification.

Thereupon the court shall order the board of appraisers to transmit to said circuit court a certified statement of their findings of the facts involved in the case and their decision thereon.

But there has been nothing judicial before on that subject, nothing of that nature. It is the authoritative official appraisement against a taking effect on the property or the obligation of the importer.

And the facts so found and certified shall be final and conclusive upon the court.

What is there, then, in the court? What do you make the court.

then? Nothing but its determination as a question of administration and nothing else, whether the law takes this or that classification as the proper measure of exaction.

Which statement and certificate of the board of appraisers shall constitute the record in the circuit court.

That does not alter the nature of it. Where are the parties? Where is the contest? Where is the examination or the cross-examination? There is nothing there in the nature of a court, or in the nature of a trial of right.

What, then, does the court do? It is concluded from any trial of what the elements of fact are that belong to a jury to determine, whether the classification is right or not. This is final, this is the record for the court, to wit, the transactions of the appraisers, and that is the end of what constitutes the subject-matter of litigation.

Shall proceed to hear and determine the question of law involved in such decision.

How is this decided? It is just as it was before the appraiser. It is merely a more considerate and deliberate entertainment of a step and stage of authoritative administrative appraisal—and the decision of such court shall be final, unless such court shall be of opinion that the question involved is of such importance as to require a review of such decision by the Supreme Court of the United States.

In that case the judge "may, within thirty days thereafter, allow an appeal," but "an appeal shall be allowed on the part of the United States," whether the court thinks it is proper to go up or not, on the application of an Attorney-General. On this application to the court "security for damages and costs shall be given as in the case of other appeals;" that is, when you go up.

Said Supreme Court shall have jurisdiction and power to review such decision, and may affirm, modify, or reverse such decision of such circuit court, and remand the case with such orders as may seem to it proper in the premises, which shall be executed accordingly.

What is to be executed accordingly? Nothing but a determination that the valuation is unfair, of such a rate or such a rate of exaction, and it passes upon nothing but that. But it does not give a judgment against anybody. There is not any frame-work here by which the final action of the Supreme Court or the original action of the circuit court can result in a judgment in favor of the Government against anybody or in favor of anybody against the Government.

It is, then, at the best, nothing but an advice sought for in the courts by the administrative officers of the Government or by the importer, subject to the proper payment of duties—advice to be given as to what the law is. There is under our jurisprudence, as established by the Constitution and the laws, no opportunity for resort of that kind to any court. The language of the Constitution is perfectly plain. The first section of the third article vests the judicial power in courts, and the second section defines what the judicial power is:

The judicial power shall extend to all cases in law and equity.

This is not a case in law or in equity. No lawyer, no court treats it as an array when it is in the nature of advice to be given to an appraiser concerning what the measure of classification shall be.

"Cases" only "in law and in equity" are the basis of all authority of our judicial courts. These cases must arise "under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority."

Is there any power to carry the laws of the United States, or the laws of the States, or the treaties, into the United States courts to determine whether they are conformable to law? Never until as a matter of decision between A and B as a "case in law and equity" is this transcendent power of determination over the constitutionality of acts of Congress or the validity of treaties to be appealed to. The basis and the strength of the domination of that great tribunal over these incidental questions depend upon the fact that they are not a court to be resorted to as a court of revision, as a sanhedrim on the Constitution. They have this jurisdiction of determining right between man and man in suits at law and in equity, and not otherwise.

These same cases may relate "to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction;" "to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls;" "to controversies to which the United States shall be a party"—that is, to determine where the United States is a plaintiff, as it can not be a defendant until the law makes it so; then it may become so; "to controversies between two or more States." Can two States come for advice to the Federal courts? No; there must be a lis mota, there must be an actio on the part of one against the other State; "between citizens of different States—between citizens of the same State claiming," etc.

But the fundamental proposition, the firm and the necessary basis is that they are to be cases in law and in equity, and these words are so used and are so construed by our courts in determining their own jurisdiction upon the established professional and judicial knowledge of what "cases" are.

There might have been a notion that the Supreme Court as an appellate court and the circuit court as an original court might have a sort of jurisdiction as by certiorari, as it were, to draw up a tribunal for supervision and correction, like the common law jurisdiction of the State courts or of the courts of Great Britain. But there is no such authority. These courts can have given to them no certioraris. They do not act as mere executive appendages of the cases in law and equity as they arise.

Thus it seems to me that this whole scheme is one attempting to carry a sort of presentment into this court, not for judicial action, not for conviction and determination by judgment, but to do exactly what the general appraisers are asked to do in respect to the transaction of the single appraiser, and so the Supreme Court is asked to sit directly upon a question of an appraisement as to whether wool is of one kind or another and advise the Government concerning it, and advise the importer concerning it.

It is well ascertained that our Supreme Court will not entertain trials that do not result in power of execution; but now we come to the question of original or appellate jurisdiction, and all this distribution between appellate and original power turns upon "cases."

In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a State shall be party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction.

Now, look at the appellate jurisdiction given to the Supreme Court:

In all the other cases before mentioned the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Congress shall make.

Congress, it might be supposed, could separate between law and fact and suppress fact and leave nothing but law; but is there not another equally firm constitutional provision, that of right of trial by jury, which includes the inquisition and the decision by a jury of the questions of fact that enter into the determination of the case between man and man?

There are two ways to meet this difficulty, if I am correct in this judgment. One would be to rest on the present system, which operates very well, so far as the administration of justice goes, and meets all the requirements. But it is said there are many practical inconveniences from the accumulations of suits and from delays and accruing of costs and of interest, etc. I have nothing to say about that, except that in my judgment the citizen is entitled to his rights towards the Government and the representative of the Government. The Government is amenable to recourse of law quite as readily as anybody else, and if the courts are not provided adequately to meet the just claims of suitors against the United States or its representatives in unlawful exactions, it is for the Government by legislation to provide them.

But I am willing to recognize an impediment in the judicial methods as to choice of suits of a plaintiff and the calculations and contrivances that sometimes enter into the profession and ingenuities of litigation. If that method as now provided is to be substituted by a more direct and a more speedy one, then I desire to see section 14 transformed after you have reached the stage where the final appraisement is determined, so that the importer thus called upon to pay, or to be kept out of money which he thinks should be returned to him, should then have open to him in the Federal courts a direct action against the United States, and be given such speed and such preference and such acceleration as belongs to the public occasion of the great service in collecting the revenue.

It is a perfectly simple matter, without any machinery, with no voluntary course, when the last stage has been reached of official appraisement that is not judicial, to provide that the court shall be open in a direct action against the United States, and then with an appeal to the Supreme Court; and thus you have a case that opens the entire constitutional right and the entire constitutional power, and with such rapidity as will remove much of the objection that is found against the accumulation of suits.

But the accumulation of suits in the last five or ten or twenty years, if you please, grew, in my judgment, in great part from an imperfect administration of the business by the Government itself. It was never necessary that there should be so many suits. It was never necessary that there should be an accumulation of costs or a delay in accumulation of interest to this extent. If the Government will put itself in a desire that the law shall prevail promptly, cheerfully on the part of the plaintiffs and on this responsibility of the Government, much of this diffuse and prolix litigation will pass away.

We have provided an additional judge in the only circuit where there is any clog of this nature, in the city of New York, and my word for it, under that competent judge all this mass, as it is now commented on, all these series of suits will melt away and be disposed of; and so these matters can be by administration promptly disposed of between this Government and importing citizens who are entitled to every degree of protection and favor that the law gives to them.

I therefore, in a mere cursory and prompt emendation or substitution, submit to the committee that it is a very great matter to go on with this pursuit and repeal all the existing frame-work and throw the whole matter back into the original right, or the claim that the original right exists, when, by substituting a method coming up to the exigency and the inexorable requirements of the Constitution, this can be made a judicial proceeding, with all facilities and with all aids in the promptitude of the settlement that it is competent for legislation to provide.

For myself I can say, Mr. President, although——

Mr. PALMER. If the Senator from New York will excuse me, I desire, in accordance with the notice given heretofore, to call up the resolutions of the House of Representatives on the death of Hon. Seth C. Moffatt, late a member of the House of Representatives from the Eleventh district of Michigan.

Mr. EVARTS. I will close with a single sentence, and then that can be done.

If then there must be a deliberate and circumspect adjustment of this matter, I would suggest to the committee that while the bill should be perfected in every other regard, it be recommitted to the same committee for a further revision of this fourteenth section.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE MOFFATT.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Pursuant to the notice given by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. PALMER] on the 5th instant, the Chair lays before the Senate resolutions from the House of Representatives, which will be read:

The Secretary read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 29, 1888.

Resolved, That the business of the House be suspended, that suitable honors may be paid to the memory of Hon. Seth C. Moffatt, late a Representative from the State of Michigan.

Resolved, That in the death of Mr. Moffatt the country has sustained the loss of a safe legislator, a patriotic citizen, and an able and faithful public servant.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to his memory the House at the conclusion of these ceremonies shall adjourn.

Resolved, That the House communicate these resolutions to the Senate.

Mr. PALMER. I offer the resolutions which I send to the desk for the consideration of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolutions submitted by the Senator from Michigan will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate receives with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of Hon. Seth C. Moffatt, late a member of the House of Representatives from the State of Michigan, and tenders to the family and relatives of the deceased the assurance of its sympathy in their bereavement.

Resolved, That the Secretary transmit a copy of the foregoing resolution to the family of Mr. Moffatt.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. President, the apothegm "speak nothing save good of the dead" has given rise to the epigram "false as an epitaph."

It is easy for a friend to pronounce a eulogy on a bad man. The mantle of charity covers all that is ill, and leaves affection free to create or portray an ideal, which tradition, fortified by friendship, can only partially justify.

The hand of the rustic artist may carve the fungi into attractive forms, or paint the faces of its sections with suggestive and æsthetic scenes, but dense and valuable woods admit of no such freedom of treatment.

It is so of character. Where there is nothing for charity or regard to conceal, where there are virtues manifold, one must be careful to curb the imagination, lest a departure from exactness may throw discredit on a recital of qualities which truly reported make up a symmetrical whole.

Some men attain prominence by accident, some by effort, and some grow into it as naturally as the palm among lesser trees. The first may acquit themselves well for a brief season; the second often desire the insignia without the effort, and soon pass out of public sight; the third remain, because their growth has put them there, and nature makes no mistakes.

Of the latter class was the man of whom I speak to-day. 'Twas not his fortune to figure in dramatic combinations; there was nothing startling in his career, at least to the outside world. What he achieved he had done quietly. Of slight frame and delicate organization, he was not fitted for many of those mental efforts which resemble the stroke of Richard of the Lion Heart. His was rather the scimiter of Saladin, and what he did in influencing men was done by the subtle stroke of a finely-tempered mind—not that he ever dealt in finesse or chicanery; they were foreign to his nature.

He was atmospheric in his influence. Men were prepared to love him before they saw him, and they wished to agree with him before they knew him. It was not because he was effeminate that he was not aggressive, for when occasion demanded there were none of truer courage than he. His differences were never intensified by hate nor his opposition re-enforced by malice. He was a gentle man; not in the Oriental sense, merely a mystic and a dreamer, for his life shows him to have been a worker and a man of results.

Sent to Congress by a constituency as sturdy as any, and more intelligent than most, men and women of culture and refinement, people who not only have accomplished but are still accomplishing, he had acquitted himself in a manner fully up to their expectations.

He was born forty-six years ago: not much of a space in a geological epoch or in the span of history, but it was enough to permit him to develop, to exfoliate, and to become and remain a man. There was nothing unusual in his youth; there was nothing but what he shared in common with thousands of others in his early manhood. His was steady normal growth from the cradle to the grave.

He filled many positions of dignity and trust; he was never found wanting. He was a member and speaker of the Michigan house of representatives, State senator, member of the constitutional convention, delegate to the Republican national convention, a member of the Forty-ninth and Fiftieth Congresses. To those who know with what eagerness these prizes are pursued by the men whose lungs are inflated by the winds of the prairies tempered by the Great Lakes, where to be happy one must work, where the ozone of the air and the fruits of the earth contribute to the creation of forceful and the stimulation of feeble men, this record when read would incarnate the qualities required for successful competition in the frame of an athlete. On the contrary, this man achieved all this, or rather, he grew into it, retarded, as one might think, by a frame and physique as delicate as a woman's. Nay more, he sustained himself in each of them.

He was a lawyer; but his career was never tainted by a suspicion of barratry or oppression.

He was a politician; but with him "the end did not justify the means." His political life was subjected to and will bear the measurement of the severest code of morals.

He was a friend; and those coming in contact with him needed no assurance that he was true.

He was a husband; and in that far northern home, on the banks of that beautiful lake, amid the whispering pines and mournful hemlocks, a silent widow sheds unavailing tears above the grave of a companion regardful, chaste, and affectionate.

He was a father. Children "climbed his knee the envied kiss to share;" but his ambition for them was not that they should achieve distinction or acquire wealth, but that they should have and practice virtue.

He was a religious man—not in a sectarian sense. I think creeds would have cribbed and confined him, and arrested his growth; but he had the convictions which are the bases of all religion. He believed in the great overruling Power, in immortality, and the great law of compensation which at last makes all things even.

When I first met him the psychological and social chemicals of my nature unconsciously prepared the plate and took his photograph. I have compared the outlines and the expression of my negative with my subsequent experience, and with others, and we all agree as to the correctness of the picture.

Such was Seth C. Moffatt, Representative of the Eleventh district of Michigan, who died in this city at Providence Hospital on the 22d day of December, 1887. I have not intended to overstate his virtues. I shall

> No farther seek his merits to disclose,
> Or draw his frailties from their dread abode.

His frailties I did not know. He undoubtedly had them. I hope so. They are incident to the most exalted natures; they are essential to an exhaustive portrayal of a complete and lovable character; they are the shadows which nature, no less than art, demands for her most perfect work. The hopes and fears, the joys, the sorrows, the aspirations and temptations, the defeats, the successes of forty-six years of this animated life must have swayed him at times, and in all probability he did not escape every pitfall; but the tenor of his life and the character of his sympathies assure me that his constant effort was toward consecutively higher planes of living.

Fine-fibered physique, kindly presence, responsive heart, well-balanced brain, all united in one, farewell! I know not what the future has in store for you; but I feel that when you threw off the vestments which here fetter us all, you entered upon that higher arena which the soul loves to contemplate and speculate upon, spiritually clean limbed and anointed, and that there the great Supervisor assigned you your proper place.

Among the things inscrutable on earth, and which assure us that we have a mortgage on eternity which our good friend and faithful attorney, Death, will in due time foreclose, is this, that we who mourn those who have gone before have a right to know, why a man so well equipped and impelled to give delight to others should be taken first "and those whose hearts are dry as summer's dust burn to the socket."

Surely the blank wall against which we fruitlessly beat with lacerated hands, which gives back nothing but an echo to our lamentations, and which to be passed must be tunneled by the grave, has its foundations laid partly upon other fields than those of earth, and when we emerge into the refulgent light of the other side all will be made plain.

Mr. PADDOCK. Mr. President, it was not my good fortune to know Mr. Moffatt intimately, and I shall not attempt an extended review of his too brief, but eventful life. Nor, indeed, is this necessary. Others better qualified than myself have spoken of his career from boyhood to its sad and sudden close; have told the story of his struggles, his trials, and his successes. The voices of his associates, here and elsewhere, who were bound to him by ties of affection, who honored him for his manliness, his quiet, unyielding persistence, and his unbending integrity, have been heard in generous eulogy of his strong, well-rounded, admirable character.

The history of his triumphs as a lawyer and his faithful service as a Representative of the great Commonwealth of Michigan has been presented. The tributes of warm friendships, ruthlessly broken by the iron hand of death, have been laid with tears upon his grave, and the tremulous tones of bereaved affection have paid the last honors to departed worth.

Living in one of the busiest and most progressive of our Western Commonwealths, where the struggle for preference and position is keenest, he was for more than twenty years identified with public life and the recipient of the confidence and respect of friends and neighbors. Mr. Moffatt's career was steadily upward. Successive tokens of public esteem evidenced the high appreciation in which his services to his State and the nation were held by those best qualified to judge. His unswerving integrity, his fidelity to every obligation, cemented friendships which will continue a pleasant memory to many long after beneficent Nature has effaced the marks of his newly-made grave.

Mr. Moffatt was in the full meridian of life. He had achieved success by labor. He had won his way to honorable distinction by the inherent force of his character. Men respected him for what he was, not for what he seemed to be. His homely virtues commended him to those who admired sincerity, who abhorred mere display, and by whom the shams of society and the veneer in which false pretense and deception masquerade as honesty and truth were condemned.

He was in every sense of the word a self-poised man. His natural reserve was born of an innate modesty which declined self-assertion at the expense of self-respect. With a firm grasp on his mental resources, which were large, he preferred the esteem of his wide circle of friends to the fickle applause of the galleries or the evanescent notoriety of the press. A student of the political problems of the day, well equipped to grapple with topics affecting the national welfare, he was content to leave largely to others the acrimony of partisan debate and the bitterness of political controversy.

His mind was essentially a legal one. He was conservative in arriving at conclusions, slow to express an opinion, but when his judgment had crystallized an impression into a conviction it became the guiding motive of his action.

It was said of Seth C. Moffatt by some that he kept himself in the background from excessive modesty. By others his reserve of manners was taken for indifference. He was far from indifferent. Keenly and properly sensitive of the great world around him, he was particularly regardful of the desires and interests of friends, and the demands of the State which had honored itself by repeatedly honoring him.

Mr. President, death has removed from the councils of the nation an able, an honest man, and an experienced legislator. Words of praise in the presence of the dread destroyer seem at best cold and formal. They can not tame the night of his repose nor shiver the iron chain which binds his senseless clay. He has passed from the finite to the infinite, from the scenes of success into the shadows which shroud the future.

But he is not altogether dead, sir.

Non omnis moriar—

Exclaimed one of England's greatest writers—

if dying I yet live in a tender heart or two.

To be rich; to be famous? What do these count a year hence, when other names sound louder than yours; when you lie hidden away under the ground along with idle titles engraven on your coffin? But only true love lives after you, follows your memory with secret blessings, or precedes and intercedes for you.

"Praised be our Lord for our sister—the death of the body—from whom no man escapeth," sang St. Francis from the walls of his medieval monastery. The clear vision of the saintly monk whose life had been worn away in works of charity, amidst sin and suffering, saw, perchance, beyond "the vale between the peaks of two eternities," another sphere in which flagging activities and wearied souls find new stimulus, enlarged scope for endeavor, and peaceful rest. To it there is but one portal—through that our friend has passed from sight at the end of his mortal pilgrimage.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE. Mr. President, I can not permit this occasion to pass without adding my tribute to the memory of my departed friend. I was intimate with Mr. Moffatt for twenty years, and in all those years knew of no word or act of his that I would wish to forget.

I am sure I voice the sentiment of Michigan when I say that no one of her citizens enjoyed more fully such confidence and entire respect than he to whose memory these exercises are a tribute. Michigan feels proud of Mr. Moffatt, for he was born, educated, and grew to manhood within her borders. He served her well in her Legislature, as speaker of her house of representatives, as a member of her constitutional commission, and in the Congress of the United States, and always, everywhere, was mindful of her best and truest interests, and in every position in which he was placed did his whole duty manfully and well, so that through long years of public service he grew year by year in the confidence and esteem of all who knew him.

His home was in one of the finest sections of his State, the great Traverse Bay region, a region with as intelligent and manly a population as any section of our country can boast of, and such a constituency evinced their high appreciation of the sterling qualities of Mr. Moffatt by always keeping him in prominent positions, to guard, protect, and further their interests.

The life of Mr. Moffatt is a signal illustration of what may be accomplished by one born in the middle walks of life, if he has the industry, good sense, ability, and honor possessed by my departed friend. His life was a success, for he had in all respects acted well his part. From our common school and academy he passed through our great university, of which we are so proud, to our law school, and from there commenced the practice of his profession, and within a few years attained a position among the most eminent men at the bar in our State. In the midst of a rapidly growing region of his State, his business sagacity enabled him to accumulate a handsome competency, and his manly qualities and open, generous traits of character secured him a noble wife from among the many fair daughters of Michigan. To this beloved wife and their children he was all a loving and kind husband and fond father could be. So I repeat, his life was a success, and a noble illustration of what life may be in this favored country of ours.

In that far-off home, as a citizen, a neighbor, he has left the impress of his life and character upon all who knew him, and he will be held in honored and loving remembrance. He has left his monument in human hearts, more enduring than any marble column.

Those who knew him well could not fail to be impressed with the gentleness and amiability of his character. There were no bitter ingredients in his composition; goodness, charity, and a good heart were the foundation of his broad views and sympathy with mankind. Though his opinions were clearly defined, and his convictions positive, he was utterly incapable of narrow prejudice or bitter enmity; and while he entered with vigor and enthusiasm into the business life of his favored region, still his greatest enjoyment was in the quiet and affection of his own home; and among those he loved so well he found contentment and rest. He was generous and warm in his attachments; there was nothing calculating in his friendship.

Well do I remember his cordial, hearty, greeting upon my arrival here December last, and his honest and warm assurance that he was glad I was to be here. His open and manly directness of speech won him the confidence of all.

I have spoken of my departed friend, Mr. Moffatt, as a citizen, as a legislator, and a friend. As to what he was to his own home and to his family is not for any to tell, for none can tell. The hearts most bereaved by his death know not their own bitterness only, but the rich treasure they have held and still hold, forever. It is not for even a friend to enter that sanctuary.

His faith was unfaltering in everything fundamental to Christianity, and he held with a firm grasp the old and the true, and his daily life was the best possible proof of his sincerity.

Happy for us if we each, as the shadows lengthen, are filled with the hope which sustained him, and as the evening draws on can as serenely give up our account for the day's work, feeling that it has been faithfully done.

Mr. PALMER. I now move the adoption of the resolutions.

The resolutions were agreed to unanimously.

Mr. PALMER. I move, as a further mark of respect to the memory of our deceased friend, that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, March 16, 1888, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, March 15, 1888.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. J. H. CUTHBERT, D. D., of Washington, D. C.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

REIMBURSEMENT OF TEXAS.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate of appropriation for payment of the amount found due the State of Texas for expenses of suppressing Indian hostilities under the act of June 27, 1882; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

REPAIR OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Supervising Architect relative to special appropriations for repairing certain public buildings; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

HEATING APPARATUS FOR PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Supervising Architect recommending legislation amendatory of the sundry civil appropriation act of March 3, 1887, in respect to the item for heating apparatus for public buildings; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

FENCE AROUND PUBLIC BUILDING, TYLER, TEX.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Supervising Architect of appropriation for the erection of a fence around the public building at Tyler, Tex.; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

CLAIM OF WILLIAM C. RAMEY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings of fact in the case of William C. Ramey against the United States; which was referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. CRAIN, for the remainder of this week, on account of illness.

To Mr. CARUTH, for ten days, on account of important business.

To Mr. LAIDLAW, for one week, on account of sickness in his family.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of privilege, and send to the Clerk's desk to be read an article from the New York Sun of Saturday, March 10, 1888.

The Clerk read as follows:

WASHINGTON BUCCANEERS—METHODS OF THE NEW HIGHWAYMEN OF FEDERAL LEGISLATION.

WASHINGTON, March 9.

In the varied shiftings and changes at the national capital nothing is more interesting than to note the methods, past and present, by which legislation is either accomplished or retarded. In the palmy days immediately succeeding the era of reconstruction, and subsequently for ten or fifteen years, when money was flush and corporations ran riot in Congress, it was the custom to employ a large lobby of retainers, who dispensed hospitality and otherwise intrigued and engineered for the benefit of their employers.

A marked change of corporation methods is now distinctly visible. Finding that times had changed, the corporations, shrewdly concluding that they must change with them, discharged their employés and turned them adrift. These promoters have therefore been thrown upon their own resources and are now doing business on individual account. Since the occupation of promoting legislation has gone to the wall, they now take the other tack, hoping to be "seen" and persuaded to "call off their dogs."

The pending legislation upon the Pacific railways' indebtedness affords an attractive carcass round which the vultures gather. A notable instance is the case of one Major Reddington, the proprietor of a "bucket shop" on F street, near the Treasury, whose name in full is displayed in gilt letters over the door. This gentleman alleges that he lost some forty or fifty thousand dollars by a deal in Pacifics some years ago, when he was skinned by Jay Gould, and he now thinks there is an opportunity of getting even. Major Reddington was at one time employed as a confidential clerk in the office of the Commissioner of Railroads, but was summarily dismissed by Secretary Lamar, as is alleged, for trading in Wall street upon contraband information obtained officially from Government sources, since which time he has posed as a great anti-monopolist and friend of the people.

At the last session of Congress it was made apparent that Major Reddington had conspired with various Wall street operators to manipulate stocks through representations that he had controlled the official action of certain members of the House Committee on Pacific Railroads. The names of various members were freely mentioned in this connection by Major Reddington, among them Messrs. DUNN, of Arkansas, and CABELL, of Virginia, who, when the matter came to their ears, indignantly denounced Reddington in unmeasured terms as a slanderer. However, Reddington succeeded, by means not yet clearly understood, in enlisting the services of certain Representatives on the floor, the result of which, through parliamentary obstruction, defeated the passage of the bill to fund the Pacific railways' indebtedness.

Then followed the passage of the act creating the Pacific Railways Investigating Commission, and its final reports, majority and minority, recently transmitted to Congress by the President, accompanied by a very pungent message, in effect urging favorable action of Congress as recommended by the majority report. Major Reddington now appears upon the scene in the old rôle of obstructing, by every means within his power, the passage of any such legislation, relying, however, largely upon the minority report of Commissioner Pattison, the authorship of which he claims to have directed or inspired. Aided doubtless by the stock-jobbers interested in the movement, he has embraced the opportunity to cultivate the acquaintance and if possible enlist the services of Congressmen of anti-monopoly tendencies, deceiving them into the belief that, actuated wholly by patriotic motives, he is able to supply information of great value to them antagonistic to the Pacific roads.

It is understood he claims to absolutely control Congressmen WEAVER and ANDERSON of Iowa, SHIVELY of Indiana, THOMAS of Wisconsin, and ALLEN of Mississippi. This, however, can not be true, since the members named are gentlemen of character, and would hardly put themselves in the power of a "bucket-shop" proprietor. Nevertheless he insists that such is the fact, and it seems that his programme, with the assumed assistance of these gentlemen, is to precipitate upon the House, pending the consideration of the proposed funding bill, a flood of alarming figures, tables, and alleged facts, which there will be no time to examine, and which will have the effect of producing a stampede. Of course it makes no difference whether these facts are true or false, since he considers that, for the time being, they will be "good enough Morgan" for his purposes, unless in the mean time things are made pleasant for him by the railroads. Probably these Congressmen would be astonished to learn that, when the Pacific Railways Commission was created last year, influences of a very questionable nature were brought to bear to secure Reddington's appointment as their expert accountant, but the President, being aware of his character, advised the commission not to do so. Fortunately, the commission acted upon the President's advice.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I should not have noticed this article or called the attention of the House to it (for in my judgment its falsehood is such as to be apparent on its face), had it not been copied into papers of my own State. I wish to say that I do not know this man Reddington; I never saw him in my life; have never had any communication with him directly or indirectly. I am not interested in stocks or in the stock market in any manner; and the whole matter, so far as I am individually concerned, is an absolute falsehood and lie.

But, sir, I imagine that Mr. Reddington had little or nothing to do with this article. I imagine that men who are prowling around this Capitol, in its corridors and lobbies, who are interested, it may be, in this land-grant legislation as lobbyists, have inspired the article.

They have caused it to be published in one of the greatest and most widely circulated newspapers in the United States; and it has gone all over this broad land that members of this House are dealing with men who control these bucket shops, and are officially seeking here with their votes to influence the stock market for their own benefit, and are not legislating in regard to these public matters for the benefit of the people.

Sir, these men, these land-grant grabbers, these Pacific Railroad managers who have taken, as I believe, from the Treasury of these United States under false pretenses the sum of $178,000,000, or its equivalent, and have taken 26,000,000 acres of the public lands from this Government, the very best lands that we had, are seeking now to slander and besmirch and cast suspicion upon the character of every member of the House who dares to stand up here in the face of their opposition and for the rights of the people.

I feel it my duty, sir, to say that this statement, so far as I am concerned, and so far as every member of this House is concerned, I believe is absolutely false and without a shadow of foundation. This article stigmatizes also the members of the last Congress. It casts slurs and reflections upon the Committee on the Pacific Railroads, and upon every member of that committee unjustifiably, and, I believe, without any foundation; and so believing, I think such a slander should be called to the attention of the country and reprobated; and, sir, I wish the men who instigated these slanders and libels could be known. I wish the authors of these articles could be found out, in order that they might receive the just contempt which they deserve. I know that certain members of this House have been marked for their villainous attacks, they have been menaced, and vilest slanders and lies insinuated against their characters, because they dared to introduce bills and resolutions in the interest of the people and against these corporations.

I believe, sir, it is necessary that there should be a lobby. I believe that all lobbyists are not corrupt. I believe that the people have the right, through such means, to come here and give to the members of this House information upon public matters while they are dealing with the great business interests of the country; but I deny the right of any man or set of men to sneak and crawl around that lobby like a serpent, hissing out venomous threats, in order to deter the members of this House from performing their duty in the interest of the people and against the great monopolies that have fattened and are fattening upon the Treasury of this country, and have become what they are, gigantic oppressors of the people, stretching out their greedy tentacles like the devil-fish, sucking up the blood of the people, and hesitating at no means, however corrupt. [Applause.]

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, as my name appears in the article from the New York Sun just read at the Clerk's desk, it may be proper for me to take some notice of the same; but I am not mad. [Laughter.] A marked copy of the paper containing that article was sent me through the mails a day or two since. I suppose it was sent by some one connected with the Pacific railroads who was solicitous lest I should make a mistake and go wrong on some of the proposed Pacific railroad legislation. [Laughter.] It was probably intended as a service of notice on me that the eyes of the Sun and the Pacific railroads were on everybody who might be suspected of opposition to the Pacific railroad funding schemes. The programme as developed in this article seems to be, first, to make Major Reddington appear very odious, then to connect him with everybody who has of late years opposed the legislative schemes of the Pacific railroads, thereby making them odious; and to warn those of us who are suspected of opposition in the future that the same odium will attach to us if such opposition should develop.

We are told that the gentlemen who opposed the Pacific railroad funding bill in the last Congress are the tools of this Major Reddington; that the minority report made by Governor Pattison as one of the Pacific Railroad Commissioners was inspired by Reddington, and all others are notified in advance that if they oppose the proposed settlements between the Government and the Pacific railroads that they do it under the control of this disreputable Reddington.

Mr Speaker, I know nothing of the character of Major Reddington. He may be as bad as he is painted in this article, or he may be a gentleman. I do not know, nor do I care anything about that. I happened by accident to hear some two years ago that there was some man in the office of the Commissioner of Railroads who was something of a thorn in the side of some of the Pacific railroad people, and that they were here trying to get him removed.

I met Major Reddington once this winter, and heard him talking flippantly about the Pacific railroads and about his having been a clerk in the office of the Commissioner of Railroads. I asked him one or two questions to satisfy myself as to whether or not he was the man the Pacific railroads wanted out of the Commissioner's office, and this is the only time I ever saw, and the only communication, verbal or otherwise, I have ever had with him. If he has ever intimated that he had any sort of control over me he is unworthy of belief, though I must admit that I have some doubt of his ever having made such a claim. This article says he has made the acquaintance of certain Congressmen of anti-monopoly tendencies. Mr. Speaker, I hope I rest under that suspicion. [Laughter.] If that is intended to apply to me I plead guilty, and I am happy that I am guilty of such tendencies. [Laughter.]

We probably ought to thank this correspondent for the certificate of previous good character which he seems to fear we are about to lose. He says we would hardly put ourselves in the power of a bucket-shop keeper, but rather intimates his fear that it is true by the statement that Reddington insists that it is true. His mind seems to be in a state of doubt that can only be solved in our favor by our good behavior in future. Compliments from such a source are of doubtful value. He says Reddington's programme seems to be, with the assumed assistance of these gentlemen, to precipitate upon the House, pending the consideration of the proposed funding bill, a flood of alarming figures, tables, and alleged facts. How does he expect Reddington to do this with the assumed assistance of these gentlemen? I should think he would need their actual assistance in such an undertaking.

For myself I can assure this correspondent it is not my purpose to flood the House with any new figures, facts, or tables. The facts and figures already before this House about the Pacific railroads are startling and alarming enough. I have tried several times to figure up their stealings as shown by investigations already had, and I find the amount so large that the calculation makes my head swim. This article informs us that we would probably be astonished to know that when the Pacific Railroad Commission was created last year influences of a very questionable nature were brought to bear to secure the appointment of Reddington as their expert accountant. About this I know nothing; but, sir, so many astonishing things have occurred in connection with Pacific railroads and their connection with this Government, so much has been done that is wrong and so little that is right, that nothing astonishes me in that connection now.

There is another thing that makes me doubt the accuracy of this correspondent's information.

If Reddington has the power attributed to him by this correspondent, or if the Pacific railroads thought he had such power, and it would only take forty or fifty thousand dollars to make him call off his dogs, unless these people have been radically converted from their past methods, they would have given him the money. It seems that they used to let it out by the million for the accomplishment of their legislative schemes.

Mr. Speaker, I just wish to say that the correspondent or newspaper that intimates or insinuates that I have put my vote or conduct as a member of this House at the disposal of any one, or that I have had any sort of connection with the bucket-shop keepers or stock-jobbers, is a—[laughter]—well, as you all know, I'm a mild-mannered man and not given to the use of strong language, like my friend from Wisconsin [Mr. THOMAS]; but I must say that if ever the suggestion made on this floor a few days ago by the gentleman from Florida [Mr. DOUGHERTY], that newspapers be required to confine themselves to the truth should ever prevail, the paper making such insinuations will have to suspend publication and the correspondent will go out of business. [Laughter.]

This correspondent finds it so interesting to note the changed methods by which legislation is either accomplished or retarded that I wish to commend to his investigating mind another line of inquiry that might prove interesting. Let him ascertain whether or not any of those corporations which have discharged their large lobby of retainers about Washington have employed in their stead newspapers to advocate their measures, and to attempt to besmirch and intimidate the men who may not exactly approve the legislation they may seek to put through here. There is some suspicion that such methods prevail, yet I hope not. The article from the Sun is headed, "The Washington Buccaneer." I hope there are no buccaneers in journalism. [Laughter.]

HOUSE FOLDING-ROOM.

Mr. SHAW. I desire to present a privileged report from the Committee on Accounts.

The resolution referred to the committee (on motion of Mr. SPRINGER) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives be, and he is hereby, authorized to employ twelve additional laborers in the House folding-room, for the purpose of folding speeches, to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House at the rate of $720 per annum: Provided, That the said twelve additional employés shall be dropped from the rolls of the Doorkeeper at a period not more than one month after the expiration of the present session.

The report of the committee was read, as follows:

The Committee on Accounts, to whom was referred the accompanying resolution, respectfully submit that they have considered the same and find the necessity exists for the employment of additional assistance in the House folding-room. They therefore report it back to the House with the recommendation that it be amended by inserting, in line 5, after the word "speeches," the words "and public documents," and that as so amended the resolution be adopted.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire what documents there are in the folding-room to be folded at this time. I am one of the members of the Fiftieth Congress, and I have not discovered anything to my credit there to be folded that calls for an increase of force. Neither I nor, I believe, any other new member on this floor, has seen or heard of any documents to his credit which should require an increase of force to fold them, and as to speeches, none of us have had anything of that sort except what we have bought and paid for. I confess I can not myself see any necessity for the proposed increase, and I should like to hear some other reason given for it besides the report of the committee.

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Speaker, there have been received at the House folding-room within the last thirteen days 191,000 pamphlets, and 46,300 books are yet to be folded before they can be ready for delivery to members of the House.

The proposed increase is no new matter in the House of Representatives. It has been the custom as far back as the Forty-second Congress to increase the force in the House folding-room to meet the current demand of members for public documents, and when you add to that the vast thought of this House upon great public questions which will soon be up for consideration, which printer's ink and paper will make tangible, and which will be poured into that folding-room to be folded for distribution, the necessity for this increase, it seems to me, becomes at once apparent. If there be no other gentleman who desires to be heard, I now demand the previous question.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the gentleman from Maryland what the corresponding increase of the Doorkeeper's force was in 1884. I believe this is the usual resolution adopted by the House preceding a Presidential campaign, and rendered necessary by the folding of speeches on the eve of such a campaign. I remember that we did adopt a similar resolution in 1884, but how much we increased the force I do not distinctly remember.

Mr. SHAW. The increase was twelve, I think. I have not a memorandum of it, but that is my recollection.

Mr. TAULBEE. I wish to ask the gentleman a question. I would like to know whether or not such an increase of force as is proposed by this resolution was made in the Forty-ninth Congress?

Mr. SHAW. It was made in the Forty-eighth, as I am informed.

Mr. TAULBEE. I speak of the Forty-ninth.

Mr. SHAW. I am not informed as to that.

Mr. TAULBEE. My understanding is that it was not made in the Forty-ninth Congress. I desire to ask the gentleman further whether it is not a fact that in the Forty-ninth Congress the discussion on the propositions to suspend the coinage of silver increased the amount of documents and pamphlets to be folded largely over the number so far existing in the present Congress, and in addition to that I wish to ask him whether it is not a fact that with a force no greater than that which the Doorkeeper now has that work was amply done and done in good time?

Mr. SHAW. In reply to the gentleman's question I would say that usually on the eve of a Presidential election there is an increased demand among the people for literature of the character which members of this House send out—or it may be that there is an increased desire on the part of members to send out such literature; no matter which, the labors of the folding-room are increased thereby, and we are assured, and after the most careful investigation the committee have unanimously come to the conclusion, that this increase is actually necessary to meet the current demands that are made upon the folding-room.

Mr. TAULBEE. Mr. Speaker, I think I appreciate the care which the gentleman generally devotes to his work, and I am always pleased with his efforts; but from what he has already said I am led to the conclusion that the increase of force recommended by this resolution is designed more for the purpose of meeting an anticipated emergency than to meet any emergency which actually exists.

Mr. SHAW. For both purposes.

Mr. TAULBEE. If it is true that just preceding a Presidential election there is either a greater demand for the documents which we send out from here or a greater desire upon the part of members of this House to send out such documents, and that, as a result, increased labor is devolved upon the folding-room, I have only to say that whenever it becomes apparent that that work is necessary I am as ready to vote for the required increase as any member on this floor. But I maintain, Mr. Speaker, that the records of this Congress show that there is no such present emergency, and while the committee to whom this matter was referred have pursued with honest purposes the investigation which has led them to recommend this increase, I believe the candor of the gentleman who is chairman of that committee will induce him to say that the present emergency is not so great in this Congress as it was at a corresponding period in the Forty-ninth Congress. I further think, sir, that the history of the investigations had of this same service in the Forty-ninth Congress will show that the work in that Congress, though greatly in excess of the work at this time in this Congress, was performed to the satisfaction of everybody by a force no greater than that which is now at the command of the Doorkeeper. I am therefore opposed to this recommendation until the time comes when the business of the House shall make apparent the necessity for this proposed increase.

Mr. SHAW. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER].

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, it is well known to gentlemen on this floor that the number of speeches ordered by members of the House during a Presidential year is very great. I know two members who have already ordered this session over 100,000 copies of speeches in pamphlet form, which have to be folded in the folding-room. I myself have ordered 25,000 or 30,000 copies of speeches this session—speeches of other members, not my own. I find that the force in the document-room is now several weeks behind in performing the duties required of it.

The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] wants to know whether this proposed increase of force is necessary. The answer to the gentleman's inquiry is, that the Doorkeeper of the House has asked this increase—has gone before the Committee on Accounts and stated that his force is inadequate, and that he must have this increase. The Committee on Accounts of this House, charged with the duty of looking after the interests of members and seeing that we get proper and efficient service, has unanimously reported this additional force to be necessary. If the gentleman wants any further information on this subject, he ought to go to the Committee on Accounts and ask to be heard; he ought to go to the Doorkeeper and ask to be heard. Certainly it becomes us to take the word, the official statements, of those gentlemen who are charged with the responsibility in this matter. I hope, therefore, this resolution will be adopted.

Mr. SHAW. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. WASHINGTON].

Mr. WASHINGTON. Mr. Speaker, it is barely possible that by going to the Doorkeeper, as we have been advised to do by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER], we might get some information in regard to the force in the folding-room and the needs of that department of our service. That official has been before the committee; I do not propose to go there, but I propose that this House shall have an explanation of the necessity for this increase of force. I insist that there is now a larger force here than there was at any time in the Forty-ninth Congress—more messengers, more doorkeepers, etc.—and as a private individual I can see many places around here where, in my humble judgment, men are carried on the rolls whose services could be dispensed with to-day.

I can see no necessity for additional force in the folding-room, though it may be a fact that numbers of speeches are being ordered by members who wish to distribute them. A visit to the folding-room itself will show book-keepers and others employed there whose services might be dispensed with, and whose pay, for the sake of "economy, retrenchment, and reform," might go toward the employment of men to fold books and speeches for members. I repeat that as a new member I have seen no books to my credit—none that have to be folded for my special needs, except those I have bought and paid for. Numbers of other members are in the same situation. Where are the documents alluded to, the thousands of books which have been folded? I can not find them; I have not seen them. I can see no necessity for this increase of force.

Mr. TAULBEE. Mr. Speaker, I want to occupy only a few moments——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. SHAW] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. SHAW. I will yield to the gentleman for a short time. How much time does he wish?

Mr. TAULBEE. I only desire to occupy about two minutes.

Mr. SHAW. I yield that time to the gentleman.

Mr. TAULBEE. I thought, however, I was entitled to the floor in my own right.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland is entitled to the floor for one hour. He demanded the previous question, but withdrew the demand at the suggestion of gentlemen who wanted to be heard.

Mr. TAULBEE. I am very much obliged to the gentleman from Maryland for his courtesy. Now, Mr. Speaker, I have just one suggestion to make in response to the remarks of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER]. He advocates this resolution on the theory that if there is any reasonable objection to be urged to it by me or any other member, it is our business to go before the Committee on Accounts. And he says also that if further information is wanted, we can get it by applying to the Doorkeeper. The information which I sought by the interrogatories which I put to the chairman of the Committee on Accounts has never been furnished to this House. Those questions were suggestive of what I understand to be the true situation, that this increase of force was not asked for nor had in the Forty-ninth Congress; that the business of the Doorkeeper during that Congress was greatly in excess of the work to be done in that department during this session, and that the work done in the Forty-ninth Congress, notwithstanding its excess over the present emergency, was amply done. This is the information which I sought. In the absence of satisfactory information contradicting what I understand to be the facts, I am inclined to vote against this resolution. If the chairman of the committee will tell me that he has investigated the matter, and that what I suppose to be the facts as suggested by my questions do not in truth exist, then I am willing to give the relief asked.

One further thought, and I am through. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] says it is a well-known fact that before a Presidential election there is greater emergency and necessity for increase of force in the folding-room, and that when that work begins in the folding-room we must increase that force over and above what was found necessary during the same period of the Forty-ninth Congress. Now, I am ready at any time to vote the necessary force to do this work well and in time, in order that members may have an opportunity to send documents out to their districts, but until that time comes I am not inclined to support it.

Mr. WASHINGTON. I rise to offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland has the floor.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Can not I offer an amendment?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman can not take the gentleman from Maryland off the floor.

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Speaker, in reply to the inquiries of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] I will say that I supposed I had anticipated in my remarks the information he seeks.

I stated that there had been received in the folding-room from the 1st to the 13th of March 191,295 speeches and pamphlets to be folded; and I also stated that there are 46,300 public documents or books to be folded before they are ready to be sent by members to their constituents. And I do not think it a violent presumption to state that it will require the present force and the addition the resolution proposes to make to that force in the folding-room to dispose of the work already there, so as to provide for the increase of labor which will be imposed on that department by the increased demands of the House preceding the Presidential election.

There are now employed in the folding-room 30 men, 9 of whom are detailed to service at doors and document-rooms, leaving only 21 actually employed in the folding-room.

I will say, and I have gone to some little trouble to investigate the official conduct of the Doorkeeper, that I believe he is acting with a view to the most rigid economy, and that he is faithfully discharging the duties imposed upon him. As he said, and I believe, he would not have asked for this additional force unless he regarded it necessary to the discharge of the current business in the folding-room required by members of the House.

Mr. TAULBEE. So far as the conduct of the Doorkeeper is concerned, it is not a matter connected with this thing at all.

Mr. SHAW. Except as referred to by the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. TAULBEE. I do not understand the gentleman from Tennessee to cast any insinuation in that direction. He may have done it, but I do not so understand it.

The question I wish to ask is this: Is it not a fact the same assignment to the folding-room force and the messenger force of this House has been carried out in former Congresses as it is proposed to be carried out in this? Is it not a further fact that in the Forty-ninth Congress there was an excess above 100,000 speeches brought to the folding-room to be folded during the Forty-ninth Congress corresponding to the period of the Fiftieth Congress; and that this excess was brought about by the extraordinary amount of discussion on the proposition of suspending silver coinage? Is not that the fact?

Mr. SHAW. If the gentleman from Kentucky can tell me how many speeches were folded during the Forty-ninth Congress, I will be able to answer his question. Does he know?

Mr. TAULBEE. I have not any distinct recollection, but I do remember that there was a statement submitted to this House by the Committee on Accounts, I believe, in February or March two years ago, when there was an increase of force to be voted for the folding-room. If my recollection serves me, the number of documents was vastly in excess of 200,000. There was a considerable increase in speeches on the proposition to suspend silver coinage. Gentlemen will generally recollect that in the Forty-ninth Congress there was vastly more discussion than for the same period in the Fiftieth Congress. Days were set apart for general debate, and nights were set apart for general debate, and leave was given to members to print speeches in the RECORD which amounted to vastly more than those delivered in the House. I think the House is entitled to know whether or not the documents received at this Congress by members are to be folded, and to that my question was directed.

Mr. JACKSON. I ask the gentleman to yield to me for one question—it is one for information simply. I wish to know whether the statement of the gentleman from Illinois, that some one had ordered 100,000 copies of the President's message is one of the reasons that it is necessary to give this additional force? I wish to say, as a Republican, we would like to see that carried out. No doubt it was instigated from a Republican source. We do not expect the folding-room now will be conducted with the same force as in a previous Congress, when the Republican administration had charge of the force. And we are so liberal on our side that for the sake of the public service we propose to join hands with you to enable you to provide a sufficient force to do the work of that bureau as it ought to be done.

Mr. SHAW. In reply to the gentleman, I will state that the force in the folding-room was increased by the Forty-seventh Congress by a like number as is provided in the pending resolution.

I now demand the previous question.

Mr. WASHINGTON. I want to offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The previous question has been demanded. If the House shall refuse to order the previous question then the opportunity to offer amendments will be given.

The question was taken on ordering the previous question; and on a division there were—ayes 94, noes 41.

Mr. WASHINGTON. No quorum.

The SPEAKER. The point of order being made that no quorum has voted the Chair will order tellers.

Mr. WASHINGTON and Mr. SHAW were appointed tellers.

Mr. TAULBEE. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order.

Mr. TAULBEE. I know; but I want to make a suggestion. In order to facilitate the business of the House I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Tennessee be allowed five minutes.

Mr. SOWDEN. Regular order.

Mr. WASHINGTON. I do not want to make a speech, but simply want an opportunity to offer an amendment.

Mr. TAULBEE. I hope the House will not refuse that. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. The tellers will take their places.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 137, noes 26.

So the previous question was ordered, under the operation of which the amendments proposed by the committee were adopted.

The question recurred on the resolution as amended.

Mr. TAULBEE. I move to recommit this subject with instructions that the Committee on Accounts ascertain and report whether or not the amount of work to be done in the present session of Congress is greater or less than the work for a corresponding period of the Forty-ninth Congress; also whether——

Mr. SPRINGER. I rise to a question of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SPRINGER. Is it in order to move to recommit this unless the instructions are such as can be embodied in the resolution itself? This is a motion to recommit with instructions to investigate a subject not pertinent to the resolution at all.

The SPEAKER. Whether it is pertinent or not is for the House to decide. The gentleman moves to recommit the resolution for the purpose of obtaining additional information. The motion embraces the resolution and report, and the instructions are for the committee to ascertain and report certain facts. The Chair thinks it is in order. It is equivalent to an assertion that the report as presented does not afford sufficient information to the House; and it is, therefore, recommitted for the purpose of securing additional information.

Mr. TAULBEE. Now, Mr. Speaker——

Mr. SPRINGER. This subject is not debatable; the previous question has been ordered, and I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky had better reduce his motion to writing.

Mr. TAULBEE. I will do so.

The motion of Mr. TAULBEE to recommit was read, as follows:

Recommit the resolution with instructions to report whether or not the present force is greater or less than the force at a corresponding period of the Forty-ninth Congress, and whether or not the work now done in the folding-room is greater or less than for a corresponding period of the Forty-ninth Congress.

Mr. WASHINGTON. I offer the following amendment to the proposition to recommit.

Mr. SPRINGER. I raise the question of order that it is not amendable. The previous question has been ordered, and no motion is in order except the one motion to recommit with instructions.

The SPEAKER. The previous question has been ordered upon the resolution as amended. The point of order of the gentleman from Illinois was raised in the Forty-ninth, or possibly the Forty-eighth Congress, and the Chair, after a thorough consideration of the question, decided that the motion to recommit, with or without instructions, was subject to amendment, notwithstanding the fact that the previous question had been ordered upon the main proposition, and that was so held mainly for the reason that under the rule of the House only one motion to recommit, with or without instructions, could be made after the previous question had been ordered, and the Chair thought that if, under such circumstances, the motion to recommit was held to be not amendable, it was always in the power of the opponents of recommittal to make a motion in such form that the House would undoubtedly vote it down, and thus deprive the other side, who really desired recommittal, of the power to submit a proposition which would be acceptable to the House. The Chair held, therefore, that the motion was subject to amendment, but was not debatable. Such has been the opinion of the Chair ever since, and it has uniformly so held.

Mr. SPRINGER. If you can move to recommit with instructions, and then amend the instructions after the previous question has been ordered, you open another field for dilatory motions, and also for getting at the sense of the House upon a proposition that is not admissible by the principles of the previous question.

Mr. TAULBEE. The previous question has been demanded and ordered, and this is not debatable.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is debating the point of order.

Mr. TAULBEE. I thought the Chair had decided the point of order.

The SPEAKER. The motion to recommit is an independent motion. The previous question has been ordered upon the main proposition, and it can also be ordered upon the motion to recommit, which, of course, will cut off all amendments to that motion.

Mr. SPRINGER. Without the special rule this motion would not be in order. The previous question, when ordered by the House, brings the House to a vote on the main question and the amendments pending.

The SPEAKER. The Chair decides the motion to recommit with instructions is subject to amendment. In making that decision the Chair follows the rulings heretofore on that subject. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. WASHINGTON].

The Clerk read as follows:

Add to the motion to recommit the following:

"And that in employing these additional men they be appointed by the Doorkeeper from Congressional districts not already having representation on this force."

Mr. SPRINGER. That would suit me very well because I have not any from my district.

Mr. TAULBEE. I make the point of order that this is not debatable.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Tennessee.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 95, noes 51.

So (further count not being called for) the amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recommit with instructions as amended.

The question being taken, the Speaker stated that the "noes" seemed to have it.

Mr. TAULBEE. I call for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 73, noes 80.

Mr. TAULBEE. No quorum.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] and the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. SHAW].

Mr. TAULBEE. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, 47 members voting therefor—more than one-fifth of the last vote.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Let the instructions be read.

The SPEAKER. The instructions have been read. The Clerk will read them again, if there be no objection.

The proposed instructions were again read.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 86, nays 163, not voting 75; as follows:

YEAS—86.

Adams,	Dalzell,	Lehlbach,	Post,
Allen, Mich.	Darlington,	Long,	Pugsley,
Anderson, Kans.	Dingley,	Lyman,	Randall,
Baker, N. Y.	Enloe,	Lynch,	Reed,
Baker, Ill.	Finley,	Martin,	Rowland,
Bliss,	Fuller,	McCullogh,	Ryan,
Bowden,	Gallinger,	McKenna,	Scull,
Bowen,	Gear,	McKinley,	Smith,
Browne, Ind.	Gest,	McShane,	Spooner,
Brown, Ohio	Guenther,	Montgomery,	Steele,
Brumm,	Haugen,	Morrill,	Stephenson,
Buchanan,	Henderson, N. C.	Nichols,	Stone, Mo.
Buckalew,	Hermann,	Nutting,	Taulbee,
Bunnell,	Hitt,	Oates,	Taylor, E. B., Ohio,
Burrows,	Holman,	O'Neall, Ind.	Thomas, Wis.
Butler,	Hooker,	O'Neill, Pa.	Tillman,
Caswell,	Hopkins, Ill.	Osborne,	Washington,
Cheadle,	Hopkins, Va.	Owen,	Wickham,
Cooper,	Hovey,	Perkins,	Williams,
Crisp,	Johnston, N. C.	Peters,	Wise.
Crouse,	Kelley,	Pidcock,
Cutcheon,	Kennedy,	Plumb,

NAYS—163.

Abbott,	Conger,	Kerr,	Rowell,
Allen, Mass.	Cothran,	Ketcham,	Rusk,
Allen, Miss.	Cox,	Kilgore,	Sayers,
Anderson, Iowa	Culberson,	Laffoon,	Scott,
Anderson, Miss.	Cummings,	Landes,	Seney,
Anderson, Ill.	Dargan,	Lane,	Shaw,
Atkinson,	Davidson, Ala.	Lanham,	Sherman,
Bacon,	Davidson, Fla.	Latham,	Shively,
Bankhead,	Davis,	Lawler,	Simmons,
Barnes,	Dibble,	Lee.	Sowden,
Barry,	Dockery,	Lind,	Springer,
Bayne,	Dorsey,	Macdonald,	Stahlnecker,
Biggs,	Dougherty,	Mansur,	Stewart, Tex.
Bingham,	Elliott,	Mason,	Stewart, Ga.
Blanchard,	Ermentrout,	McComas,	Stewart, Vt.
Bland,	Farquhar,	McCreary,	Stockdale,
Blount,	Felton,	McKinney,	Stone, Ky.
Boothman,	Fisher,	McRae,	Symes,
Bound,	Ford,	Merriman,	Taylor, J. D., Ohio,
Boutelle,	Forney,	Milliken,	Thomas, Ky.
Breckinridge, Ark.	French,	Mills,	Thompson, Cal.
Breckinridge, Ky.	Funston,	Moffitt,	Tracey,
Brower,	Gibson,	Moore,	Turner, Kans.
Browne, T. H. B., Va.	Greenman,	Morrow,	Turner, Ga.
Brown, J. R., Va.	Grimes,	Morse,	Vance,
Bryce,	Grosvenor,	Neal,	Wade,
Burnes,	Grout,	Newton,	Walker,
Burnett,	Hall,	O'Donnell,	Warner,
Bynum,	Hare,	O'Ferrall,	Weaver,
Campbell, F., N. Y.	Harmer,	O'Neill, Mo.	Weber,
Campbell, Ohio	Hatch,	Outhwaite,	West,
Campbell, T. J., N. Y.	Hayes,	Parker,	Wheeler,
Cannon,	Hemphill,	Patton,	White, Ind.
Carlton,	Henderson, Iowa,	Peel,	Whiting, Mich.
Caruth,	Henderson, Ill.	Penington,	Whiting, Mass.
Catchings,	Herbert,	Perry,	Wilkins,
Chipman,	Hogg,	Phelps,	Wilson, Minn.
Clements,	Holmes,	Rice,	Wilson, W. Va.
Cobb,	Hopkins, N. Y.	Richardson,	Woodburn,
Cockran,	Hunter,	Rogers,	Yost.
Compton,	Jackson,	Romeis,

NOT VOTING—75.

Arnold,	Gaines,	Laidlaw,	Russell, Conn.
Belden,	Gay,	Laird,	Russell, Mass.
Belmont,	Glass,	Lodge,	Sawyer,
Brewer,	Glover,	Maffett,	Seymour,
Butterworth,	Goff,	Mahoney,	Snyder,
Candler,	Granger,	Maish,	Spinola,
Clardy,	Hayden,	Matson,	Struble,
Clark,	Heard,	McAdoo,	Tarsney,
Cogswell,	Hiestand,	McClammy,	Thomas, Ill.
Collins,	Hires,	McCormick,	Thompson, Ohio,
Cowles,	Houk,	McMillin,	Townshend,
Crain,	Howard,	Morgan,	Vandever,
Davenport,	Hudd,	Nelson,	White, N. Y.
De Lano,	Hutton,	Norwood,	Whitthorne,
Dunham,	Johnston, Ind.	Payson,	Wilber,
Dunn,	Jones,	Phelan,	Wilkinson,
Fitch,	Kean,	Rayner,	Yardley,
Flood,	La Follette,	Robertson,	Yoder.
Foran,	Lagan,	Rockwell,

So the motion to recommit was not agreed to.

After the second roll-call,

Mr. BLISS said: I desire to vote.

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman within the Hall when his name was called?

Mr. BLISS. Yes, sir. I vote "ay."

Mr. TAULBEE. I desire to make the point of order that under the rule no member has a right to vote after the second roll-call.

The SPEAKER. That is the language of the rule, but the practice has been invariably to permit a gentleman to vote when he states that he was in the Hall when his name was called and failed to hear his name called, on the ground that in the confusion that sometimes prevails he might fail to hear the Clerk call his name, but ought not on that account to be deprived of his right to vote.

Mr. TAULBEE. The object of my point of order is to test the validity of the practice under the rule. Of course it makes no difference in this instance.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has invariably followed the practice just indicated since the rule was adopted.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I suggest that the ruling of the Chair has been sometimes more liberal than that now indicated. A member has been permitted to vote when he states merely that he was within the Hall during the call of the roll.

The SPEAKER. The present occupant of the chair has always required a gentleman to state that he was in the Hall when his name was called.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Does not the present practice abrogate the spirit and purpose of the rule? If a member is in his seat when his name is called and fails to hear it and respond, I see no impropriety in allowing him to vote. But if he simply happens to be in some part of the Hall at some time during the roll-call, whether it was at the time when his name was called or not, and he is then permitted to vote, that appears to me is to abrogate the rule in letter and in spirit.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks a gentleman should not be permitted to vote unless he was in the Hall—not absolutely in his seat, for he is permitted to vote from any part of the Hall—when his name is called on the first or second call of the roll.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. The object of the rule was to economize the time that used to be occupied under the old rule.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana will remember that before the adoption of the present rule gentlemen rose after the second roll-call and were permitted to vote if they stated that they were within the Hall before the last name on the roll was called. The purpose of the new rule was to secure the votes of members in a regular way, either on the first or the second roll-call; but notwithstanding the express language of the rule the practice has grown up to permit gentlemen to vote who say they were in the Hall when their names were called.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. If the Speaker will pardon me, I have found this to be the result, that when gentlemen know that they will have an opportunity after the second roll-call to have their votes recorded, they are inclined to be indifferent about the rule; they do not seem to care anything about it; they pay but little attention to it; and if we are to have attention paid to the roll-call, and to have members vote when their names are called, I think we must have a little more strict application of the rule than has been heretofore made.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the rule be read.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is important that this rule should be adhered to as strictly as possible. Of course the Chair takes it for granted that all gentlemen upon the floor act in good faith, and when a gentleman states that he was in the Hall at the time his name was called the Chair invariably accepts that statement. The Clerk will read the rule.

The Clerk read as follows:

RULE XV.

1. Upon every roll-call the names of the members shall be called alphabetically by surname, except when two or more have the same surname, in which case the name of the State shall be added; and if there be two such members from the same State, the whole name shall be called; and after the roll has been once called, the Clerk shall call, in their alphabetical order, the names of those not voting; and thereafter the Speaker shall not entertain a request to record a vote or announce a pair.

Mr. TAULBEE. That is the rule that misled me.

Mr. FELTON. Mr. Speaker, I was in my seat listening to the call and did not hear my name called, and consequently could not vote. Am I entitled to vote or not?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that under the practice of the House the gentleman has a right to vote.

Mr. FELTON. I ask the privilege of voting under the circumstances.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I have not the slightest objection.

Mr. FELTON. And I want to vote "no."

Mr. TAULBEE. Well, Mr. Speaker, I will object. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. The Chair has decided that under the practice of the House a gentleman who makes the statement which has been made by the gentleman from California [Mr. FELTON] shall be permitted to vote, and the Chair now holds that the gentleman has a right to vote. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE], if he wishes, can take an appeal.

Mr. TAULBEE. My only purpose in objecting was to demonstrate the rule, and I now withdraw the objection.

Mr. FELTON. Your demonstration of the rule would deprive any gentleman of his rights as a member upon this floor, and I object to it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky withdraws his objection. The Clerk will call the name of the gentleman from California.

The Clerk called the name of Mr. FELTON, who voted "no."

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to record my vote.

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman in the Hall when his name was called?

Mr. DAVIS. I was, and I did not hear my name called.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the name of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. DAVIS].

The Clerk called the name of Mr. DAVIS, who voted "no."

Mr. GEAR. Mr. Speaker, I wish to inquire how my vote is recorded.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's vote is not recorded. Was the gentleman in the Hall when his name was called?

Mr. GEAR. I was in the Hall and voted "aye."

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to vote.

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman in the Hall when his name was called?

Mr. BLANCHARD. I was.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the name of the gentleman from Louisiana.

The Clerk called the name of Mr. BLANCHARD, who voted "no."

Mr. WARNER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to have my vote recorded.

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman in the Hall when his name was called?

Mr. WARNER. I was.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the name of the gentleman from Missouri.

The Clerk called the name of Mr. WARNER, who voted "no."

Mr. CONGER. Mr. Speaker, I was in my seat during the roll-call, and did not hear my name called.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is recorded as voting in the affirmative.

Mr. CONGER. I did not vote. I desire to vote in the negative.

On motion of Mr. TAULBEE, by unanimous consent, the reading of the names of members voting was dispensed with.

The following-named members were announced as paired until further notice on all political questions:

Mr. COLLINS with Mr. FITCH.
Mr. JONES with Mr. MCCORMICK.
Mr. HUTTON with Mr. COGSWELL.
Mr. NORWOOD with Mr. DAVENPORT.
Mr. TOWNSHEND with Mr. MAFFETT.
Mr. MATSON with Mr. DUNHAM.
Mr. HUDD with Mr. CLARK.
Mr. COWLES with Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio.
Mr. MORGAN with Mr. YARDLEY.
Mr. GRANGER with Mr. ROCKWELL.
Mr. SPINOLA with Mr. THOMAS, of Illinois.
Mr. PHELAN with Mr. BUTLER.
Mr. HOWARD with Mr. DE LANO.
Mr. LYNCH with Mr. HIESTAND.
Mr. GOFF with Mr. SNYDER.

Mr. TIMOTHY J. CAMPBELL and Mr. LAIDLAW were announced as paired for one week on all political questions.

The following-named members were announced as paired for this day:

Mr. CRAIN with Mr. STRUBLE.
Mr. DUNN with Mr. HAYDEN.
Mr. HEARD with Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana.
Mr. GLASS with Mr. HOUK.
Mr. ROBERTSON with Mr. RUSSELL, of Connecticut.
Mr. GLOVER with Mr. BUTTERWORTH.

Mr. BUTLER. As announced by the Clerk, I am paired on all political questions with my colleague, Mr. PHELAN. This not being a political question, I have voted.

The result of the vote was announced as above stated.

The question then recurring on the adoption of the resolution as amended, it was adopted.

Mr. SHAW moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

POSTAL COMMUNICATION BETWEEN CANADA AND UNITED STATES.

Mr. WHITE, of New York, by unanimous consent, submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads:

Resolved, 1. That the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, requested to communicate to this House what instructions, if any, whether by circular letter or otherwise, have been given to subordinate officers of the Post-Office Department with reference to mail matter received from the Dominion of Canada, which instructions are intended to prohibit American citizens from using the United States mails upon the same terms with citizens of said Dominion living in the same vicinage and competing in the same branches of business with said American citizens.

2. That the said Postmaster-General be requested to inform this House whether any statute law prevents mailing in the Dominion of Canada seeds, plants, and bulbs grown by American citizens upon American soil, and if there is no provision of law prohibiting it, whether he has assumed to impose a penalty at the rate of $320 per ton upon seeds, plants, and bulbs lawfully mailed by American citizens in an attempt to compete with Canadian seedsmen, to whom the United States has, by a recent postal treaty, given an advantage over American seedsmen in the way of postage at the rate of $240 per ton.

3. In case the Postmaster-General shall show that orders have been given directing the examination of incoming Canadian mails for evidence of their use by American citizens, that he be further requested to inform the House by what provision of the recent postal treaty with the Dominion of Canada, or by what provision of law, the officers of the postal service of the United States are authorized to place an espionage on the said Canadian mail for the purpose of determining whether citizens of the United States are availing themselves of the beneficent provisions which are accorded to Canadians by said postal treaty.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. CANDLER, by unanimous consent, obtained leave of absence for a few days on account of important business.

URGENT DEFICIENCY BILL.

Mr. BURNES. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations to report back, with the amendments of the Senate, the urgent deficiency bill and to move its reference to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. At the proper time I wish to reserve all points of order.

The SPEAKER. That can be done now. The Clerk will read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. The bill with the amendments of the Senate will be referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and ordered to be printed. All points of order are reserved by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE].

Mr. BURNES. I move to dispense with the morning hour for the call of committees.

The motion was agreed to, two-thirds voting in favor thereof.

Mr. BURNES. I now move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering the urgent deficiency bill.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I believe the next thing in order is the morning hour for the consideration of measures called up by committees.

The SPEAKER. It is, unless the House goes into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the consideration of revenue or general appropriation bills.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Will the committees be entitled to the consideration hour after the disposition of this bill?

The SPEAKER. They will be should the bill be disposed of during the day.

Mr. DINGLEY. But this bill may occupy the whole day.

The SPEAKER. Then, as to-morrow will be Friday, the next consideration hour for bills from committees would be Saturday.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. BURNES, that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, the motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, Mr. BLOUNT in the chair.

Mr. BURNES. I ask unanimous consent that all bills on the Calendar of the Committee of the Whole be passed over until we reach the urgent deficiency bill.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection; and the House accordingly proceeded to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. This bill was returned from the Senate with amendments, which have been considered by the Committee on Appropriations, who have reported them back with various recommendations. The question is now upon those amendments.

Several MEMBERS. Let the report of the Committee on Appropriations be read.

The report (by Mr. BURNES) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1888, and for other purposes, together with the amendments of the Senate thereto, having considered the same, beg leave to report as follows:

They recommend concurrence in the amendments of the Senate numbered 4, 5, 6, 7, 19, 21, 26, 45, 46, 49, 50, 51, 53, 54, 56, and 60.

They recommend non-concurrence in the amendments numbered 1, 2, 3, 8, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 20, 22, 23, 24, 25, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 47, 48, 52, 55, 57, 58, 59, 61, and 62.

They recommend concurrence in the amendment numbered 13 with an amendment as follows:

After the amended paragraph insert the following:

"Pay of assistant custodians and janitors: For pay of assistant custodians and janitors, including all personal services in connection with public buildings under the control of the Treasury Department outside of the District of Columbia, and including the reinstatement of so many of the persons discharged or suspended since February 1 as may be absolutely necessary, and for such new buildings as may be completed and ready for occupancy within the current fiscal year, $25,000."

They recommend concurrence in the amendment numbered 63 with an amendment as follows:

Insert as section 5 of the bill the following:

"For reimbursement to the State of Texas expenses incurred in repelling invasions and suppressing Indian hostilities, found due under the act of June 27, 1882, and certified to Congress by the Secretary of the Treasury in a letter to the Speaker of the House of Representatives March 14, 1888, $927,177.40."

Mr. BURNES. I suppose we might as well concur in the report of the committee on the amendments of the Senate, unless there is some gentleman who desires information as to the action of the committee.

Mr. CANNON. What is the suggestion of the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. BURNES. I suggest we concur in the report of the committee, unless there are inquiries to be made or information desired as to the action of the committee.

Mr. CANNON. As to amendment 13, where it is recommended to concur with the amendment, and as to the sixty-third amendment, I desire they may be excepted and be considered separately.

Mr. BURNES. I do not object, if that be the gentleman's desire.

Mr. CANNON. I desire those two amendments to be excepted and acted upon separately.

Mr. BURNES. My colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MCCOMAS], desires to consider for a moment the action of the committee in reference to the amendment proposed by my colleague [Mr. O'NEILL] and I will yield to him for that purpose.

Mr. ROGERS. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry before the gentleman from Maryland takes the floor. I should be glad to be advised whether the report which we have before us embraces those items concurred in by the committee as well as those which are not concurred in.

Mr. BURNES. If I understand the gentleman, we recommend concurrence in some of the amendments of the Senate and non-concurrence in others.

Mr. ROGERS. The gentleman does not understand me, evidently. What I wish to get at is this: Does the report which you bring in with the bill indicate to the House the amendments of the Senate you propose to non-concur in?

Mr. BURNES. Certainly.

Mr. ROGERS. I have listened, and what has been read by the Clerk has only been by numbers, and those numbers do not indicate anything as to the character of the Senate amendments proposed to be concurred in or non-concurred in.

Mr. BURNES. The Senate amendments are all numbered and the action of the committee refers to those numbers, so that if you turn to the number of the amendment recommended to be concurred in or non-concurred in you will see exactly to what matter reference is made. The amendments are all printed and referred to by numbers.

Mr. MCCOMAS. The gentleman from Missouri has yielded to me, and I prefer to make my remarks now rather than when the amendment is read.

Mr. CANNON. I ask for the reading of the amendments.

The Clerk proceeded to read the amendments.

Mr. ROGERS. What are we now considering?

The CHAIRMAN. We are considering the amendments of the Senate, in which concurrence or non-concurrence is recommended by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. ROGERS. I must rise to a point of order, that, notwithstanding the strong voice of the Chair, I am unable to hear what he has said.

Mr. LONG. I suggest the amendments be taken up in their numerical order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will pursue that course.

First amendment of the Senate: Insert the following:

"To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to pay Samuel A. Robinson, inspector of plumbing for the District of Columbia, for services rendered in connection with the sanitary improvement of the Treasury building, the sum of $595 is hereby authorized to be paid him out of the appropriation of $20,000 made by the sundry civil act of August 4, 1886, to put the Treasury building in a proper sanitary condition by improved plumbing, sewerage, and drainage."

Mr. BURNES. The committee recommend non-concurrence.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Second amendment, in regard to the court-house and post-office at Leavenworth, Kans.: Insert "in a fire-proof manner."

Mr. BURNES. The committee recommend non-concurrence.

Mr. ADAMS, of Illinois. Please tell us why.

Mr. BURNES. They recommend concurrence with an amendment. The committee desires specifically to require the erection of an iron or stone stairway in this building. It was with the view to having that amendment made we recommended non-concurrence, so as to amend in that form.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Third amendment: In the same paragraph strike out "three" and insert "seven," so it will read "$7,000."

Mr. BURNES. The committee recommend non-concurrence.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Fourth and fifth amendments: Strike out "extension" and the words "sixty-five thousand dollars. And said building may be extended on the north side thereof fifteen feet and one story high," and in lieu thereof to insert, "and for extension of building on the north side thereof 15 feet and one story high $65,000;" so it will read:

"For post-office and court-house at Syracuse, N. Y.: for granite work for approaches, and completion, in excess of the limit, and for extension of building on the north side thereof 15 feet and one story high, $65,000."

Mr. BURNES. The committee recommend concurrence.

The amendment was concurred in.

Sixth amendment: Strike out the words "lease of the ground used" and insert "use of the ground occupied;" so it will read:

"For use of the ground occupied as a site for the light-house and fog-signal established at Hallet's Point, near Hell Gate, New York," etc.

Mr. BURNES. The committee recommend concurrence.

The amendment was concurred in.

Mr. BELDEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to reconsider the vote agreeing to the report of the committee, on amendments numbered 4 and 5, in relation to the post-office and court-house at Syracuse, N. Y. There is a clerical error that I want to have corrected, and I want to move a non-concurrence instead of concurrence in those amendments.

Mr. BURNES. There is no objection to that.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection the vote by which the recommendation of the committee was concurred in will be reconsidered.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. BELDEN. I now move to non-concur in the amendments numbered 4 and 5.

The motion was agreed to.

Amendment numbered 7, to strike out the word "leased" in the same paragraph was concurred in.

Amendment numbered 8, to strike out "five" and insert "three" in the same paragraph was non-concurred in.

Amendment numbered 9, to strike out the provision for Lake Borgne light-station, Mississippi, was non-concurred in.

Amendment numbered 10 was read, as follows:

Revenue-cutter service.—For expenses of the revenue-cutter service: For pay of captains, lieutenants, engineers, cadets, and pilots employed, and for rations for the same; for pay of petty officers, seamen, cooks, stewards, boys, coal-passers, and firemen, and for rations for the same; for fuel for vessels and repairs and outfits for the same; ship-chandlery and engineers' stores for the same; traveling expenses of officers traveling on duty under orders from the Treasury Department; instruction of cadets; commutation of quarters; for protection of the interests of the Government on the sea-islands and the sea-otter hunting grounds, and the enforcement of the provisions of law in Alaska; contingent expenses, including wharfage, towage, dockage, freight, advertising, survey, labor, and miscellaneous expenses which can not be included under special heads, $30,664.02.

Mr. BURNES. The committee recommend non-concurrence in that amendment.

Mr. MORROW. I move to concur in the Senate amendment.

As I understand, the deficiency bill which failed to receive the approval of the President at the adjournment of the Forty-ninth Congress had a provision in it providing for the appropriation of the sum of $20,000 to cover a deficiency that then existed in this particular service. Now, I learn that that particular deficiency which occurred last year has not been obviated by the omission of the service or expense in the Department, but that the Department was compelled to take from the appropriation for the present year that sum, or rather, perhaps, was compelled to discontinue repairs on vessels to avoid the deficiency in last year, but this action of the Department has only brought the actual deficiency forward to the present year. A deficiency of $30,663.02 is the actual and existing deficiency provided for in the Senate amendment to this bill, and in support of that item I ask that the Clerk may read Executive Document No. 112, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., January 21, 1888.

SIR: I have the honor to submit the accompanying estimate of a deficiency appropriation for expenses revenue-cutter service, 1888.

This appropriation is required in consequence of the failure of the service to receive for Alaska service in 1887 the sum contained in the deficiency bill of last year that did not go into effect, and certain increased expenses not apparent at the time the present appropriation was made.

I therefore request that the amount of the urgent deficiency required for expenses revenue-cutter service, 1888, stated in the estimate herewith submitted, at $30,664.02, be appropriated as soon as practicable.

Respectfully, yours,

C. S. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Estimate of deficiency appropriation for service of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, miscellaneous expenses Treasury Department.

Expenses revenue-cutter service, 1888:
Amount required for the current expenses of the revenue-cutter service, 1888, based on former expenditures, from which no considerable reduction can be made, which for the year 1887 amounted to	$889,034.39
Amount required for increased cost of fuel over prices paid in 1887	7,500.00
Amount required for expenses of new revenue steamer W. E. Smith, purchased March 11, 1887, and put in commission October 20, 1887	9,000.00
Amount required to complete repairs on revenue steamer McLane, not in commission in 1887	13,800.00
Amount required to meet increase in cost of the revenue-cutter service for the first three months of 1880 over the cost of the corresponding period in 1887; this increase being mostly for repairs required in 1887, which could not be authorized until 1888, in consequence of the failure of the revenue-cutter service to receive the $20,000 allowed for Alaska service in the deficiency bill of 1887 that failed of passage	26,329.63
Amount required for fiscal year 1888	945,664.02
Amount appropriated for fiscal year 1888	915,000.00
Additional amount required	30,664.02

Mr. MORROW. Now, Mr. Chairman, that report from the Treasury Department points out specifically the items that are to be covered by this appropriation. The omission to pass the bill appropriating $20,000, and the increase in the cost of coal, and the other items mentioned there, have necessitated the increase; and I hope the motion to concur will be adopted.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I sincerely hope that the action of the committee in regard to the amendment which has just been read will not be disturbed. The reason of that hope is probably better understood by members of the Committee on Appropriations on both sides of this Chamber than by those who have not been engaged in the work of considering this bill. The appropriations and expenditures for this service have increased somewhat in the last few years; and for the present fiscal year Congress appropriated $20,000 more than for any previous year.

Mr. STEELE. Let me ask the gentleman if that is not due to the fact that more vessels have been employed?

Mr. MORROW. Yes, sir.

Mr. BURNES. That may be. And we have the same information now before us that we had when the committee labored upon this bill in the first instance. It may be that when we go into conference the Senate conferees will give information that will justify concurrence in the amendment; but at present we desire to consult the Senate conferees with regard to the necessity for this additional appropriation of the $30,600 provided here.

Now, our request is certainly not an unreasonable one. I say it may be, and it is very likely to be the fact that we shall ultimately concur in this Senate amendment; but so far as we know at present we think it would be better to have a consultation with the Senatorial referees and report to the House the facts and information that may be gathered from that interview before we tie our hands irrevocably and say that this sum shall be appropriated. Because it must be observed that this $30,000 additional will make an increase of about $50,000 over and above the expenditures during the preceding year. I trust our friends on both sides of the Chamber in a spirit of fairness, justice, and candor will get all the information possible concerning this item of appropriation before undertaking to tie both the hands of the House and the conferees irrevocably as to the amendments. I hope the gentleman from California, himself, will see the propriety of taking this course, and not insist upon concurrence here without any other facts than those which were before the Committee on Appropriations, on which their recommendation was based.

Mr. STEELE. Was not the information before the Committee on Appropriations, before this bill went to the Senate, that there were many vessels needing repairs, and because the appropriations had not been wholly exhausted, the chief of the revenue service informing the committee that that was due to the fact that he had estimated just as closely as he could, so as not to be in danger of exhausting the appropriations, and that he needed much more money; but the appropriation was not made because he had not expended every cent, but had some $6,000 on hand? Was not that the reason the appropriation was refused—because the whole amount was not expended in the repair of vessels actually needing it?

Mr. ADAMS rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] has not expired.

Mr. BURNES. In answer to my friend from Indiana [Mr. STEELE] I will say we had a gentleman representing that bureau before the Committee on Appropriations and got from him all the information he appeared to be able to give us; but I have yet to learn that there was a single member of that committee who was satisfied this increase ought to be allowed.

I say, therefore, in view of the fact that those of us who have investigated the matter most closely and most fully have not yet seen good reason for concurring in the Senate amendment, it would be the part of wisdom and prudence to non-concur until we are informed by the Senate conferees of some facts which would justify such action.

I will say further that in a former bill we appropriated for the rebuilding of a steamer destroyed in this service, I believe in the Gulf of Mexico. There have been side appropriations here and there; and upon the whole ground, looking at the whole case, I think I am authorized to assure the House upon the judgment of the entire committee that concurrence now would be imprudent, if not unwise.

Mr. ADAMS. I am not familiar with the needs of this particular branch of the service except so far as I have been informed by what fell from the gentleman from California [Mr. MORROW] and the report which was read. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] now intimates an opinion on the part of the committee that there is sufficient reason for non-concurring. What I rose for was to protest against the reason he gave before; because I think it is a matter of frequent comment here, or should be, whenever these appropriation bills come into the House with amendments from the Senate, that there is a strong tendency on the part of the Appropriations Committee to say that they have not sufficient information, and therefore they want to put the item in a conference committee in order to secure that information.

I take it this House has some duty to perform with regard to these appropriations. The Appropriations Committee also has some duty to perform; and the first duty it has to perform is to inform itself, in order that the House may be informed. When the bill is first introduced it comes from the committee. The committee knows all about it and it is its duty to inform the House. When it comes from the Senate with Senate amendments it is referred to the House committee for the express purpose of getting information before the House. Therefore it appears to me the reason given by the gentleman from Missouri when he first rose—a reason so frequently given—that he wants to put the amendment in conference because he wants it investigated, should not be tolerated in this House.

Mr. BURNES. In reply to the gentleman from Illinois I will say I have investigated this matter to my satisfaction so far as the evidence laid before the committee is concerned, and I presume other members of the committee are satisfied so far as the information goes which has been presented to them. But whatever it may be, we do not know all the facts in this case. I have great hope that when we get into conference we may learn something from the Senate conferees that even the gentleman from Illinois does not know in regard to it.

Mr. ADAMS. I do not pretend to know much about it, but I suggest to the gentleman, if he is disposed to non-concur and thinks this House ought to non-concur, he ought to give some reasons in answer to the reasons which have been given us in favor of concurrence.

Mr. BURNES. I think that is a reasonable request. And I answer that for the service of the present fiscal year we appropriated $20,000 more than was ever appropriated for this service before—$20,000 more. And now, before the close of the year, $30,000 additional are asked for, and we have not had such information as to justify us in believing that $50,000 in excess of the expenditures of former years are necessary.

Mr. STEELE. Has not the committee the information before it that many vessels out of repair can not leave the wharves where they are on account of their condition?

Mr. BURNES. I certainly did not hear any such statement from the gentleman who appeared before us representing the bureau.

Mr. STEELE. That is my information.

Mr. BURNES. He presented nothing outside of the ordinary annual repairs, according to my remembrance.

Mr. DAVIS. I notice by the statement that while during the last fiscal year, they kept fairly within their limits, there will be for this year, if the next six months are like the last, an actual deficiency of nearly this amount. They have already, in six months, expended $466,000, which would make for the entire year an expenditure of $932,000, the appropriation being $915,000.

It is well known that during the remainder of the year, or for the period of six months, the amount for fuel will be larger than for the first six months, at least to the extent of $14,000. If that be correct there will be an actual deficiency of some $30,000. I think we can not possibly go on during the remainder of the year under the present appropriation.

Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR. From the remark which fell from the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] I understand—I may not be right about it, but I understand—that the real object of non-concurring in this amendment is to keep it in as trading capital.

Mr. BURNES. The gentleman has greatly misunderstood me.

Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR. I understood the gentleman to say quite emphatically that we are quite likely to agree at some time on this amendment. Now, sir, that is a fact which does exist, I will not say in this committee, but elsewhere, and I am utterly opposed to it. I believe in the Bismarckian doctrine of diplomacy, to tell the truth, to hide nothing, and to keep nothing back, in an appropriation bill or any other, for the purpose of trading in conference.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say in reply to my friend from Ohio [Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR], the lover of Bismarck and Bismarckian principles, that I am equally with himself hostile to any proposition which leaves any appropriation open for trading or trafficking between the conferees on the part of the House and the conferees on the part of the Senate. I certainly made no statement to the contrary. I certainly would not be a party to any such proceeding. I simply said it might be possible—that I thought it might be probable—that the intelligent body at the other end of the Capitol might be able to give us some reason, some argument, some fact, that would throw new light upon this subject. I hope they will be able to do so; but certainly if they do not do so, as I feel at present, I should, if a member of the conference, report back to this House my inability to concur with the Senate conferees. I do not want anything in my hands to trade on with the Senate conferees. The gentleman misapprehended me.

Mr. MORROW. Mr. Chairman, in my judgment the members of this House have a responsibility with reference to these appropriations, and I think that it is not only perfectly competent for us to inquire into the necessity for such an appropriation as this, but it is our duty to determine its necessity. I happen to be somewhat interested in this item, because, judging from the past, I fear that unless the appropriation is made certain service on the Pacific Ocean may suffer. This appropriation of $30,000, as recommended by the Senate, gentlemen will find upon inquiry is proposed because of the expense attending increased revenue-cutter service. The actual expense of that service as now conducted is not in excess of what it was before, considering the number of vessels and the number of men employed; but you have placed in that service one vessel from the Navy, the Bear, and, I believe, one or two more, and to provide for the legitimate and reasonable expenses of those vessels you must make an appropriation to meet the requirements of such service. Now, what is going to be the effect of withholding this appropriation?

The effect will be, I fear, that the Bear will be left at San Francisco, and the protection which that vessel has afforded to the whaling fleet of the North Pacific will be taken away. It is a fact that those revenue-cutters are doing an important and valuable work on the Pacific coast that should be increased rather than diminished. They take the place of naval vessels in asserting the power and authority of the United States in the Arctic seas, and they render a most important service to the whaling fleet in bringing home from those seas the shipwrecked sailors. Refusing this $30,000 means a crippling of the service somewhere, and possibly on the Pacific Coast, and that is why I say it is our duty to inquire and ascertain why these items are incorporated into a report from the Secretary of the Treasury, and why the Secretary urges that we should make this appropriation. I hold in my hand a letter from a leading merchant and ship-owner in San Francisco, indorsed by the president of the chamber of commerce and others interested there, calling attention to this deficiency, and urging the Representatives from California to see to it that this appropriation is made in order that these vessels may go up into the Arctic seas as heretofore, and thus afford a measure of protection to our people there in the prosecution of their legitimate business.

If the vessels do not go there, the result will be the smuggling of liquor into Alaska, and a large liquor traffic there means the utter demoralization of the natives, and I am sure this House is in favor of protecting Alaska from that evil. I say, Mr. Chairman, that the revenue cutters on the Pacific Coast are doing the best work that is being done for the Government in any branch of its service. Therefore, as I have said, I think it is incumbent upon us to inquire into the matter and to examine the statement which has been read from the Clerk's desk, which shows the details making up this deficiency, namely, $20,000 that was left out of the deficiency bill of last year, and a certain amount for coal and other expenses—absolute deficiencies, actual expenses, which have been incurred and which must be paid sooner or later.

Mr. RANDALL. It is no deficiency at all.

Mr. DINGLEY. I wish to call the attention of the gentleman having charge of this bill to a fact which has appeared before the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries in its investigation of the subject of the Alaska fisheries, and which has probably come to the attention of the Committee on Appropriations also. The fact is that there have been extraordinary encroachments upon the Alaska seal fisheries during the past year, which have necessitated the employment of an increased revenue service for the protection of those fisheries, and I simply desire to call the attention of the gentleman in charge of the bill to the importance of protecting these seal fisheries, and of making a sufficient appropriation for the revenue service to enable the Treasury Department to afford the necessary protection to an exceedingly important interest which yields a large amount of revenue to the Treasury. I am perfectly willing personally to leave this in the hands of the conferees, with the understanding that our vote of non-concurrence is not to be taken as a disapproval of the Senate amendments, but is given in order that they may arrange such an increase of appropriations as may be necessary for the purpose.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Chairman, the statement of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. DINGLEY] makes it unnecessary for me to say anything more on this subject, except that there has been no purpose on the part of the Committee on Appropriations to embarrass this service in the least degree. One gentleman advocates this deficiency, as it is called—though it is no deficiency at all, but is a new appropriation for the year—one gentleman advocates it on the ground that special repairs are necessary; another advocates it because, he says, a number of vessels have been added to the service, and he instances the Bear. Now, sir, the Bear was added in 1883, and we have for two years been appropriating in view of that increase, and yet for the current year we gave, as has been stated by the gentleman from Missouri, more than we gave the year before, showing conclusively that the committee do not want to do anything which will embarrass the service.

Moreover, I can say to the gentleman from California that there are two vessels on the North Pacific—the Corwin and the Bear—performing efficient service.

Mr. MORROW. The Bear is at San Francisco now.

Mr. RANDALL. Well, it is in service on the Pacific. We have added a vessel for that service. There has been no effort on the part of anybody to embarrass the service on the Pacific. I want to correct in that respect the gentleman's statement, which seemed to imply that there is a disposition to cripple the service in that section of the country. Such is not the fact.

Mr. MORROW. The gentleman will permit me to say that the Bear was not put there as a serviceable vessel until 1885.

Mr. RANDALL. Well, we have made the appropriation for two years. Perhaps I said 1883 instead of 1885, but I said immediately afterward that we had made the appropriation for two years, in view of the Bear being in that service.

The question being taken on concurring in the amendment, it was non-concurred in, there being—ayes 48, noes 60.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 11: Insert after line 27, page 5, the following:

"Coast and Geodetic Survey.—Office expenses: For copper-plates, chart-paper, printers' ink, copper, zinc, and chemicals for electrotyping and photographing; engraving, printing, photographing, and electrotyping supplies; for extra drawing and engraving, and for photolithographing charts and printing from stone, for immediate use, $6,000."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 12: On page 8 strike out the words "Suppressing counterfeiting and other crimes: To supply a deficiency in the appropriation for suppressing counterfeiting and other crimes, for" and insert "For."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

Amendment 13: On page 8, after line 17, insert the following:

"Fish Commission: For salary of the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries from date of qualification in office, February 18, to June 30, 1888, at the rate of $5,000 per annum, $1,840.68, or so much thereof as may be necessary."

The Committee on Appropriations recommended concurrence in this amendment with an amendment as follows:

After the amended paragraph insert:

"Pay of assistant custodians and janitors: For pay of assistant custodians and janitors, including all personal services in connection with public buildings under the control of the Treasury Department outside of the District of Columbia, and including the reinstatement of so many of the persons discharged or suspended since February 1 as may be absolutely necessary, and for such new buildings as may be completed and ready for occupancy within the present fiscal year, $25,000."

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I move to amend the amendment proposed by the Committee on Appropriations in regard to pay of assistant custodians and janitors, by striking out "$25,000" and inserting "$60,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary."

I have in my hand a list showing the reductions which will be required in the force of custodians in the various buildings if this adtional sum be withheld and the Department be compelled to keep within the limits of the appropriation. These reductions will involve the discharge of probably one hundred and twenty employés at various public buildings throughout the country. I ask the Clerk to read this statement, which is obtained at the Treasury Department.

The Clerk proceeded to read the following:

List showing reductions in the custodian's forces in the various buildings in order to keep within the limits of the appropriation "Pay of assistant custodians and janitors, 1888."

	Per month saved.
Albany, N. Y., custom-house, two laborers, at $50 each, per month	$100.00
Alexandria, Va., custom-house, one watchman	40.00
Atlanta, Ga., court-house and post-office, two laborers, at $30 per month each	60.00
Baltimore, Md., custom-house:
Reduce pay of assistant custodian to $1,200 per annum, thereby saving, per month	17.00
Dispense with the services of one messenger	75.00
Three laborers, at $60 per month each	180.00
One janitor, at $1,000 per annum	83.00
One watchman	70.00
Baltimore, Md., court-house, one laborer	60.00
Boston, Mass., custom-house, one assistant janitor	50.00
Boston, Mass., post-office and subtreasury:
Reduce pay of assistant custodian to $1,400 per annum	33.33
One janitor	66.00
Three watchmen, at $50 each per month	150.00
One clerk	75.00
Two laborers, at $1.50 each per day	90.00
Three elevator conductors, at $1.75 per day each	157.50
Buffalo, N. Y., custom-house, three cleaners, at $30 per month each	90.00
Charleston, S. C., custom-house:
One assistant janitor	$30.00
One assistant janitor, in charge of grounds	50.00
Charleston, S. C., post-office, one assistant janitor	30.00
Chicago, Ill., custom-house:
Reduce assistant custodian to $1,400 per annum	33.33
One superintendent of closets, $2 per day	60.00
One janitor, at $1,200 per annum	100.00
Two assistant janitors, at $50 per month each	100.00
Two elevator conductors, at $2 per day each	120.00
One watchman	60.00
Five cleaners, at $1.50 per day	225.00
Cincinnati, Ohio, custom-house:
Reduce pay of assistant custodian to $1,400 per annum	33.33
Dispense with one janitor	100.00
Two assistant janitors, at $50 per month	100.00
One elevator conductor, at $2 per day	60.00
One watchman	60.00
Five cleaners, $1.50 per day each	225.00
Cleveland, Ohio, custom-house:
One laborer	45.00
One assistant janitor	50.00
Columbia, S. C., court-house and post-office, one watchman, at $540 per annum	45.00
Columbus, Ohio, court-house and post-office, one laborer	45.00
Covington, Ky., court-house and post-office, one scrubber	30.00
Detroit, Mich., custom-house, one assistant janitor	42.00
Dubuque, Iowa, custom-house, one assistant janitor	45.00
Frankfort, Ky., court-house and post-office, one fireman	45.00
Greensborough, N. C., court-house and post-office, one laborer	30.00
Harrisburg, Pa., court-house and post-office, one watchman	45.00
Harrisonburgh, Va., court-house and post-office, one fireman	35.00
Indianapolis, Ind., court-house and post-office, one laborer	45.00
Jackson, Miss., court-house and post-office, one watchman	50.00
Jersey City, N. J., court-house and post-office, one cleaner	50.00
Kansas City, Mo., custom-house, one cleaner	45.00
Knoxville, Tenn., court-house and post-office, one watchman	45.00
Lincoln, Nebr., court-house and post-office:
One assistant janitor	50.00
One watchman	50.00
Little Rock, Ark., court-house and post-office, one laborer	40.00
Louisville, Ky., custom-house, one laborer	30.00
Memphis, Tenn., custom-house, one laborer, at $360 per annum	30.00
Milwaukee, Wis., custom-house, one laborer, at $1.50 per day	45.00
Mobile, Ala., custom-house, one janitor, at $500 per annum	41.66
Montgomery, Ala., court-house and post-office, one watchman, at $50 per month	50.00
Nashville, Tenn., custom-house, one assistant janitor, at $1.50 per day	45.00
New Orleans, La., custom-house:
Five assistant janitors, at $40 per month each	200.00
One assistant engineer	75.00
One superintendent of filters	60.00
New York City, barge office:
One doorman	60.00
Two cleaners, at $60 each per month	120.00
New York City, court-house and post-office:
Reduce assistant custodian to $1,400 per annum, saving	50.00
One messenger	60.00
One janitor	75.00
Three watchmen, at $60 per month each	180.00
Two elevator conductors, at $60 per month each	120.00
One assistant foreman of cleaners	75.00
Five cleaners, at $60 per month each	300.00
Two cleaners, at $1 per day each	60.00
New York City, custom-house:
Reduce pay of superintendent to $1,400 per annum
Reduce pay of assistant superintendent to $1,000 per annum	41.66
New York City, subtreasury, two janitors, at $60 per month each	120.00
Norfolk, Va., custom-house, one laborer	40.00
Omaha, Nebr., custom-house, one assistant janitor	40.00
Oxford, Miss., court-house and post-office, one fireman	35.00
Parkersburgh, W. Va., court-house and post-office, one laborer	30.00
Philadelphia, Pa., court-house and post-office:
Reduce pay of assistant custodian to $1,400 per annum	33.33
One messenger, at $2 per day	60.00
One janitor	58.33
One elevator conductor	60.00
Five laborers, at $1.50 per day each	225.00
One janitor	58.33
One lamp-trimmer, at $1.75 per day	52.50
Philadelphia, Pa., custom-house, two assistant janitors, at $60 per month each	120.00
Pittsburgh, Pa., custom-house:
One watchman	45.00
One lamp-trimmer, at $1.60 per day	48.00
Portland, Me., custom-house, one assistant janitor	60.00
Portland, Oregon, custom-house, assistant janitor	30.00
Poughkeepsie, N. Y., post-office, one laborer, at $2 per day	60.00
Raleigh, N. C., court-house and post-office, one assistant janitor	30.00
San Francisco, Cal., appraiser's stores:
Two cleaners, at $60 per month each	120.00
One assistant janitor, at $720 per annum	60.00
San Francisco, Cal., subtreasury, one cleaner	35.00
Springfield, Ill., court-house and post-office:
St. Louis, Mo., custom-house:
Reduce pay of assistant custodian to $1,300 per annum	25.00
One janitor	83.33
One assistant janitor	50.00
Two elevator conductors, at $2 per day	120.00
Two cleaners, at $50 per month each	100.00
One lamp-trimmer, at $2 per day	60.00
St. Paul, Minn., custom-house, one assistant janitor	50.00
One laborer	40.00
One janitor for court-room	50.00
Topeka, Kans., court-house and post-office, one laborer	45.00
Trenton, N. J., court-house and post-office, one laborer	45.00
Utica, N. Y., court-house and post-office, one laborer	50.00

During the reading of the foregoing, when five minutes had expired,

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri, said: Without requiring the Clerk to read the remainder of this statement, I will ask that the whole be published in the RECORD. Mr. Chairman, these reductions affect nearly every building in the country. I have no criticism to pass upon the House committee, as the communication on this subject was submitted to a committee located in another part of this building, and which, as I understand, the rules do not permit me to allude to more definitely. The Secretary of the Treasury requested the insertion of an appropriation of $60,000 to prevent this reduction of force. The House committee has inserted $25,000, which they claim will be ample to restore the force. I question if it will effect such a restoration, and also the restoration of the salaries of various employés which have been cut down by the order of the Secretary.

The amendment I have offered proposes that $60,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be appropriated. If the expenditure of the whole of this sum be not necessary the Secretary need not use it. The character of retrenchment undertaken in this instance is at the wrong end of the line. The people want retrenchment, but they want it at the top; they want retrenchment which will affect men who are getting $4,000 and $5,000 a year—not retrenchment which will render necessary the discharge or reduction of pay of scrub-women, janitors, watchmen, and elevator employés. I hope, Mr. Chairman, the House will adopt the amendment fixing the amount of this appropriation at $60,000. The Secretary's letter, in which he states that this amount is necessary, is here.

Mr. FELTON. I would like to know in what this reduction consists—the getting rid of supernumerary officers, or the lowering of salaries?

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. It is a reduction of salaries in the case of many employés; in other cases it is a cutting down of the force, the discharge of a certain number of watchmen, janitors, scrub-women, or persons employed in running elevators. That is the effect of it. The document I had read was obtained at the Treasury, and shows where the cut is. Now, if you could fix the amount at a certain sum and cut upwards instead of cutting downwards, I do not know but I would favor that course. I move the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Chairman, there has been no retrenchment at all by the insertion of this item, and there never ought to have been any deficiency if the law had been executed. We are now in a position which compels us to reinstate all those officials who were discharged, and who, so far as I know, were discharged without disaster to any of the public buildings. It provides for the restoring of such as are absolutely necessary.

The committee, knowing the anxiety of many members of the House in this connection, made careful investigation. It has been in correspondence with the Secretary of the Treasury and other officials, and we have a statement from them to the effect this appropriation of $25,000 will absolutely restore every one of those compulsorily removed. In addition, the Secretary of the Treasury states there has not been due diligence in the subdivisions, and the amount appropriated this year was increased over what was appropriated last year. I infer from that more care will be taken in that matter hereafter. Twenty-five thousand dollars, in my judgment, and I think in the judgment of the majority of the committee, is enough if due care be taken in the reinstatement.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Is it not true that the Secretary of the Treasury says this amount of $25,000 will restore all those who were discharged?

Mr. RANDALL. It is.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I should like to have that made clear. In my opinion this $25,000 would restore all those who have been dropped.

Mr. RANDALL. The committee have taken care to put in the words "absolutely necessary," because some members of the committee did not think some of those discharged should be restored. Still the money is given and the discretion is left to the Secretary of the Treasury. I will insert the papers in the RECORD. They are as follows:

List showing reduction in the custodians' forces in the various buildings in order to keep within the limits of the appropriation "Pay of assistant custodians and janitors, 1888."

	Per month saved.
Albany, N. Y., custom-house, two laborers, at $50 each per month	$100.00
Alexandria, Va., custom-house, one watchman	40.00
Atlanta, Ga., court-house and post-office, two laborers, at $30 per month each	60.00
Baltimore, Md., custom-house:
Reduce pay of assistant custodian to $1,200 per annum, thereby saving per month	17.00
Dispense with the services of one messenger	76.00
Three laborers, at $60 per month each	180.00
One janitor, at $1,000 per annum	83.00
One watchman	70.00
Baltimore, Md., court-house, one laborer	60.00
Boston, Mass., custom-house, one assistant janitor	50.00
Boston, Mass., post-office and subtreasury:
Reduce pay of assistant custodian to $1,400 per annum	33.33
One janitor	66.00
Three watchmen, at $50 each per month	150.00
One clerk	75.00
Two laborers, at $1.50 each per day	90.00
Three elevator conductors, at $1.75 per day each	157.50
Buffalo, N. Y., custom-house, three cleaners, at $30 per month each	90.00
Charleston, S. C., custom-house:
One assistant janitor	30.00
One assistant janitor, in charge of grounds	50.00
Charleston, S. C., post-office, one assistant janitor	30.00
Chicago, Ill., custom-house:
Reduce assistant custodian to $1,400 per annum, saving	$33.33
One superintendent of closets, $2 per day	60.00
One janitor, at $1,200 per annum	100.00
Two assistant janitors, at $50 per month each	100.00
Two elevator conductors, at $2 per day each	120.00
One watchman	60.00
Five cleaners, at $1.50 per day	225.00
Cincinnati, Ohio, custom-house:
Reduce pay of assistant custodian to $1,400 per annum, saving	33.33
Dispense with one janitor	100.00
Two assistant janitors, at $50 per month	100.00
One elevator conductor, at $2 per day	60.00
One watchman	60.00
Five cleaners, at $1.50 per day each	225.00
Cleveland, Ohio, custom-house:
One laborer	45.00
One assistant janitor	50.00
Columbia, S. C., court-house and post-office, one watchman	540.00
Columbus, Ohio, court-house and post-office, one laborer	45.00
Covington, Ky., court-house and post-office, one scrubber	30.00
Detroit, Mich., custom-house, one assistant janitor	42.00
Dubuque, Iowa, custom-house, one assistant janitor	45.00
Frankfort, Ky., court-house and post-office, one fireman	45.00
Greensborough, N. C., court-house and post-office, one laborer	30.00
Harrisburg, Pa., court-house and post-office, one watchman	45.00
Harrisonburgh, Va., court-house and post-office, one fireman	35.00
Indianapolis, Ind., court-house and post-office, one laborer	45.00
Jackson, Miss., court-house and post-office, one watchman	50.00
Jersey City, N. J., court-house and post-office, one cleaner	50.00
Kansas City, Mo., custom-house, one cleaner	45.00
Knoxville, Tenn., court-house and post-office, one watchman	45.00
Lincoln, Nebr., court-house and post-office:
One assistant janitor	50.00
One watchman	50.00
Little Rock, Ark., court house and post-office, one laborer	40.00
Louisville, Ky., custom-house, one laborer	30.00
Memphis, Tenn., custom-house, one laborer, at $360 per annum	30.00
Milwaukee, Wis., custom-house, one laborer, at $1.50 per day	45.00
Mobile, Ala., custom-house, one janitor, at $500 per annum	41.66
Montgomery, Ala., custom-house and post-office, one watchman, at $50 per month	50.00
Nashville, Tenn., custom-house, one assistant janitor, at $1.50 per day	45.00
New Orleans, La., custom-house:
Five assistant janitors, at $40 per month each	200.00
One assistant engineer	75.00
One superintendent of filters	60.00
New York City, barge office:
One doorman	60.00
Two cleaners, at $60 each per month	120.00
New York City, court-house and post-office:
Reduce assistant custodian to $1,400 per annum, saving	50.00
One messenger	60.00
One janitor	75.00
Three watchmen, at $60 per month each	180.00
Two elevator conductors, at $60 per month each	120.00
One assistant foreman of cleaners	75.00
Five cleaners, at $60 per month each	300.00
Two cleaners, $1 per day each	60.00
New York City, custom-house:
Reduce pay of superintendent to $1,400 per annum	33.33
Reduce pay of assistant superintendent to $1,000	41.66
New York City, subtreasury, two janitors, at $50 per month each	120.00
Norfolk, Va., custom-house, one laborer	40.00
Omaha, Nebr., custom-house, one assistant janitor, at $40	40.00
Oxford, Miss, court-house and post-office, one fireman	35.00
Parkersburgh, W. Va., court-house and post-office, one laborer	30.00
Philadelphia, Pa., court-house and post-office:
Reduce pay of assistant custodian to $1,400 per annum	33.33
One messenger at $2 per day	60.00
One janitor	58.33
One elevator conductor	60.00
Five laborers, at $1.50 per day each	225.00
One janitor	58.00
One lamp-trimmer, at $1.75 per day	52.50
Philadelphia, Pa., custom-house, two assistant janitors, at $60 per month each	120.00
Pittsburgh, Pa., custom-house:
One watchman	45.00
One lamp-trimmer, at $1.60 per day	48.00
Poughkeepsie, N. Y., post-office, one laborer, at $2 per day	60.00
Portland, Me., custom-house, assistant janitor	60.00
Portland, Oregon, custom-house, one assistant janitor	30.00
Raleigh, N. C., court-house and post-office, one assistant janitor	30.00
San Francisco, Cal., appraiser's stores:
Two cleaners, at $60 per month each	120.00
One assistant janitor, at $720 per annum	60.00
San Francisco, Cal., subtreasury, one cleaner	35.00
Springfield, Ill., court-house and post-office:
One laborer	40.00
One janitor for court-room	50.00
St. Louis, Mo., custom-house:
Reduce pay of assistant custodian to $1,300 per annum	25.00
One janitor	83.33
One assistant janitor	50.00
Two elevator conductors, at $2 per day	120.00
Two cleaners, at $50 per month each	100.00
One lamp-trimmer, at $2 per day	60.00
St. Paul, Minn., custom-house, one assistant janitor	50.00
Topeka, Kans., court-house and post-office, one laborer	45.00
Trenton, N. J., court-house and post-office, one laborer	45.00
Utica, N. Y., court-house and post-office, one laborer	50.00
Total	7,472.30

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., March 13, 1888.

SIR: In compliance with the request contained in your telegram of the 10th instant, that the Department inform the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives fully as to why the additional sum of $60,000 for pay of assistant custodians and janitors is necessary, in view of the limitations attached to the appropriation of $425,000 for these services in the sundry civil act for the current fiscal year, and also what reductions have been made in the force and the points at which said reductions have been made, giving the most important points, and the number and amount of the necessary increases, the Department has the honor to make the following statement, namely:

At the beginning of the fiscal year strict orders were given to the division of the Department having the matter in charge to keep the expenses within the appropriation. It is not possible to divide these expenses mathematically by months. At some seasons more is required than at others. There seems to have been certain work deferred until this year which should have been done last year, such as the removal of ashes and rubbish. This, together with unforeseen contingencies, has so encroached upon the fund available that it has been found necessary to order certain reductions, and I have thought it proper to call the attention of the Congress to this fact, to the end that an appropriation might be made to enable the Department to maintain the service at a degree of efficiency which I consider proper. I can not find that at any time an expenditure has been allowed which the public interest did not require to be made, but due watchfulness with reference to the amount of the appropriation does not seem to have been at all times exercised, and proper allowance for contingent and unforeseen expenses was not made. Hence the need at the present time of the reduction in expenditures which has been made.

The subject of the reduction was a matter of careful consideration and was made upon the report of the committee appointed for that purpose. Inclosed you will find a copy of the letter appointing the committee, and also the report submitted thereunder, which answers your interrogatory relative to the number of persons discharged and the points at which employed.

The reductions thus made have been a detriment to the service, and the remaining force is only sufficient to attend to demands that are indispensable.

In answer to your question as to why $60,000 additional is now required, the Department can not too strongly call your attention to the fact that out of the appropriation "Pay of assistant custodians and janitors," there has been expended since July 1, 1887, the sum of $20,807.97 on account of labor in running electric-light plants. The use of this money for this purpose, however, operated as a saving to the appropriation 'Fuel, lights, and water."

The component parts of the sixty thousand additional appropriation asked for, are based upon the following items, namely:

1. Amount required for reinstatement of persons discharged, which discharges were compulsory	$24,287.90
2. In addition to the above, the amount necessary to place the force in proper efficient working order is estimated at	20,000
3. The amount necessary for incidental expenses, for which requisitions have been made but not allowed, and for removal of accumulated ashes and rubbish during the winter months is	5,000
4. For the care of public buildings which will be finished before the 30th day of June next	10,000
Total	59,287.90

Relative to the points at which the Department intends to increase the force, should the $60,000 be appropriated, it can be said that there are no buildings that can be specifically mentioned, as the demand is general for an increase, and the condition of each building, in the matter of help, would receive consideration.

With the present force of assistant custodians and janitors no deficiency will be incurred; but it is proper to call your attention to the fact that the force is not now sufficient for the performance of the service required of it. The care and police of the public buildings under charge of this Department can not be effected by the force now on duty.

Your attention is again invited to Department's communications, which will be found in Senate Document No. 80, first session Fiftieth Congress, a copy inclosed for additional information in the premises.

Very respectfully,

C. S. FAIRCHILD,
Secretary.

Hon. SAMUEL J. RANDALL,
Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations,
House of Representatives.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., February 23, 1888.

GENTLEMEN: Your attention is invited to the appropriation "Pay of assistant custodians and janitors, 1888," with the request that you ascertain whether the authorized expenditures therefrom for the remainder of the current fiscal year can be met without creating a deficiency therein, and, if not, to make a careful revision of the authorizations, with a view of so adjusting them as to keep the expenses within the appropriation.

Upon the completion of the duties herein assigned, you will submit a written report covering the same, with such recommendations as you may deem expedient.

Respectfully yours,

C. S. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.

PERRY C. SMITH,
Chief of Appointment Division,
J. E. POWELL,
Inspector of Electric Lights, and
WALLACE H. HILLS,
Office of the Secretary, Treasury Department.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., February 24, 1888.

SIR: Acting under the instructions contained in your letter of the 23d instant, inviting attention to the appropriation "Pay of assistant custodians and janitors, 1888," and requesting that we ascertain whether the authorized expenditures therefrom for the remainder of the current fiscal year can be met without creating a deficiency therein, and, if not, to make a careful revision of the authorizations with a view of so adjusting them as to keep the expenses within the appropriation, we have the honor to report that we have examined the appropriations and authorizations named, and find that the authorized expenditures exceed the amount of the appropriation by $24,287.90, and would recommend that the commissions of the employés enumerated in the accompanying schedule be revoked, and that the compensation of the others be reduced as therein stated.

Respectfully yours,

PERRY C. SMITH,
J. E. POWELL,
W. H. HILLS,
Committee.

Hon. C. S. FAIRCHILD,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. RANDALL. There is an estimate for further employment.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Does it not embrace an aggregate of about $29,000?

Mr. RANDALL. It does. It embraces $29,000. They want to provide for greater efficiency and the employment of an additional force to what has been employed heretofore to the extent of $29,000. As to that the committee did not care.

Mr. LAWLER. I wish to say in behalf of the public building at Chicago, Ill., that the committee did cut off the janitor and assistant janitor of that building.

Mr. RANDALL. How many janitors have you?

Mr. LAWLER. Only one and an assistant. The custodian was compelled to deprive the mail clerks, having quarters on the top story of that building, of the use of an elevator in the night time. He discharged three of the elevator men in that building. He discharged also some of the janitors in that building, five or six.

I went to see the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and he gave me to understand it was necessary this appropriation should be $60,000 to reinstate all of these men. The work is increasing in that Chicago public building in consequence of repairs, and instead of taking away these janitors the force there ought to be increased.

Mr. RANDALL. They have discharged eleven from my city, but I do not see the public building has been removed or gone wrong.

Mr. BURNES. If there is no further discussion, I will submit the question.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally arose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, a message was received from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, announcing the appointment of Mr. ALLISON, in place of Mr. QUAY, as one of the conferees on the part of the Senate on bills of the following titles:

A bill (S. 154) for the erection of a public building at Milwaukee, Wis.; and

A bill (S. 182) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building at Omaha, Nebr.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Committee of the Whole resumed its session.

Mr. CANNON. I move to strike out the last word. Mr. Chairman, the appropriations for expenses of custodians and janitors of public buildings have been increasing very rapidly during the last three years. It may be said, it is true, that the public buildings have been increasing also. So they have, but not near so rapidly in proportion as the appropriations of money for these custodians; and in many cases where there were no public buildings there were rented buildings which required the same or possibly a much larger force of janitors and custodians than in the case of public buildings that we have authorized to be constructed at such places.

Now, amongst the last acts of the Forty-eighth Congress, while Arthur was President, was the passage of a bill containing an item of appropriation of $300,000 for the pay of custodians and janitors of public buildings. I recollect, sir, very well, and I apprehend that most gentlemen on the floor will also, that Mr. Cleveland had just been inaugurated, and that during the month of June, 1885, within a couple of months after his inauguration (the appropriations being for 1885 and 1886) papers all over the country—for it even got into the "patent insides" copied from the metropolitan papers—were all filled with clamor that in this item of expenditures for custodians and janitors of public buildings the Republican administration had been most wastefully extravagant; that the $300,000 appropriated for this purpose during Mr. Arthur's administration, for the coming year, was excessive and far more than it ought to have been. These articles to which I refer undertook to give lists, and prices paid, and salaries attached to these different public buildings, tabulating a great number of them at St. Louis, at Chicago, Philadelphia, New York, Indianapolis, all over the country, showing how they might all be cut down under the $300,000 asked for and appropriated under a Republican administration. Well, everybody was glad.

The Democrats were all glad because it was their administration. The Republicans were glad because we had been promised a great deal of reform. You may judge of my surprise, sir, then, when Congress met the next winter, that before its adjournment we appropriated for this very same purpose an additional sum of $50,000 of deficiency, making a total of $350,000 for the first year of Cleveland's administration. Then for 1887 they came in and asked for $474,000; quite a big jump, don't you see, $174,000 more than what had been appropriated in the last year of Arthur's administration, and which had been denounced as excessive and wastefully extravagant.

Congress gave $400,000 in that year, and granted in that manner an increase, as you will see, of $100,000 over the appropriation of the preceding year. Now in 1888, the present year, the Administration asked $534,000 for this same service. Still growing, you see. Congress gave them $425,000. But the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] had begun to grow restless and uneasy.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. RANDALL. If I can be recognized, I will yield the floor to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman from Pennsylvania, who made up the sundry civil bill, began to grow restless and uneasy in reference to this and various other items for the public service, which was so rapidly increasing. So that instead of the $534,000, he only recommended $425,000.

Mr. RANDALL. Which we thought was enough.

Mr. CANNON. Certainly. The gentleman thought it was enough and I thought it was enough; it was $125,000 more than the Administration had proclaimed the year before was ample for the service. But the gentleman from Pennsylvania wanted to make assurance doubly sure, and so he procured to be inserted in his bill a clause in the following language:

And the Secretary of the Treasury shall so apportion this sum as to prevent a deficiency therein.

That is, it was to be divided at so much for each month. Now, notwithstanding that provision which the gentleman from Pennsylvania procured to be written in the bill, connected with this appropriation, and as a part of the law making it, the Administration comes and asks $60,000 more for this service for the remainder of this year, admitting that they have disregarded the law, thereby making the expenditure nearly $200,000 more than it was the first year of this Administration, and in the estimates for this service for the coming year the Administration asks $626,560, double the amount that this same Administration denounced as extravagant a little over two years ago.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Will the gentleman allow me to ask if he has read the communication from the chief of the appointment division of the Treasury, showing that a great deal of this expense has been due to the introduction of electric lighting throughout this building, and as a consequence the pay of the janitors and custodians has been diverted to this purpose?

Mr. RYAN. He says that there is about $20,000 used for that.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, yes; I have observed that; but when you put in the electric lights you discontinued the use of gas, and so it is as broad as it is long so far as light is concerned. The truth is that the service has grown, I think, without any excuse, and it is extravagant, in my opinion.

I can not say how much is proper for this force. I do not know. The gentleman from Pennsylvania thinks that $25,000 is ample. I am inclined to think it is more than ample. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. O'NEILL] thinks that it ought to be not less than $60,000 more.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Well, I say appropriate that sum if necessary, but leave it to the discretion of the Secretary.

Mr. CANNON. If we had the same spirit on the part of the Administration that we understood was to prevail when it started, I would be willing to have it go in in that way, for we were then told that $200,000 less than the amount now expended was ample for the service.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Will my friend from Illinois allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. CANNON. Certainly.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. The gentleman spoke of a reduction that was made, the number of janitors that were dropped when the new administration came in. I ask the gentleman, were the places they were put out of left vacant?

Mr. CANNON. I suppose from the increased expenditures the vacancies have been filled since.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Then the squeezing process was to drop Republicans and put in Democrats after the Republicans were dropped.

Mr. CANNON. I do not complain of Republicans being dropped and Democrats being put in. But I have not much sympathy with the underhanded way in which that was done. When, under the plea of economy, they turned out the Republicans and afterwards put in Democrats, so as to escape the criticisms of the Mugwumps, I certainly have not much admiration of the whole performance.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. The answer of the gentleman is entirely satisfactory to me.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I propose for a few minutes to discuss the question before us, and not the question raised by the gentleman from Illinois about what Democratic members have heretofore said in regard to Republican extravagance. That party has had so much reputation for extravagance that it does not take much to create the impression of extravagance in reference to their management.

But I do not think there is so much politics in a mere matter of business as some gentlemen seem to think. We are here dealing with a matter of business affecting the whole country, and we ought to deal with it candidly. For one, I think $25,000 is hardly sufficient; and I think the Treasury Department gives good reasons for the appropriation it asks. Still that amount is given as the amount that can be secured here, and I am not going to antagonize the proposition.

A good deal has been said about the intention of the Secretary of the Treasury to violate the law; that is the clause in the appropriation bill of last year requiring him to apportion the fund so as to keep within the appropriation. I desire to read a few lines of his letter to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations on this subject:

It is not possible to divide these expenses mathematically by months. At some seasons more is required than at others. There seems to have been certain work deferred until this year which should have been done last year, such as the removal of ashes and rubbish. This, together with unforeseen contingencies, has so encroached upon the fund available that it has been found necessary to order certain reductions, and I have thought it proper to call the attention of the Congress to this fact, to the end that an appropriation might be made to enable the Department to maintain the service at a degree of efficiency which I consider proper. I can not find that at any time an expenditure has been allowed which the public interests did not require to be made, but due watchfulness with reference to the amount of the appropriation does not seem to have been at all times exercised, and proper allowance for contingent and unforeseen expenses was not made. Hence the need at the present time of the reduction in expenditures which has been made.

Now, as to the $20,000, the gentleman from Illinois, in reply to the gentleman from Missouri, said that placing the electric lights displaced the gas and therefore it was as broad as it was long. The statement is that this $20,000 was expended in the establishment of electric-light plants; and it is not a sufficient answer to say that electric light displaced gas and that the expense therefore was equal. It costs more than the gas; necessarily so because of the establishment of the plant. On this subject the Secretary says:

In answer to your question as to why $60,000 additional is now required, the Department can not too strongly call your attention to the fact that out of the appropriation "Pay of assistant custodians and janitors" there has been expended since July 1, 1887, the sum of $20,897.97 on account of labor in running electric-light plants. The use of this money for this purpose, however, operated as a saving to the appropriation "Fuel, lights, and water."

Mr. RYAN. That is not for establishing the plant; it is for running it.

Mr. CLEMENTS. It is for establishing and running.

Mr. RANDALL. I do not think any of this sum was taken to establish it.

Mr. CLEMENTS. That is what I understand from the Department; that this was partly for running and partly for establishing the electric-light plant. It is stated that that makes a saving to the appropriation for "fuel, light, and water," and I understand there will be turned into the Treasury some $85,000 under that head. So that when we look at this whole matter there is not that cause for criticism which gentlemen seem to wish to indulge in with regard to this branch of expenditure for public buildings. And it must be remembered while these amounts have been increased from year to year everything else has been growing; the country has been growing and public buildings are being multiplied from year to year by acts of Congress; and if they are necessary it is equally necessary to have proper watch and care for them, and everything shows there has been an honest and faithful administration.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. CLEMENTS. I ask to have printed with my remarks Executive Document 138, relating to this subject.

There was no objection. It is as follows:

Letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting reports and recommending an appropriation to pay assistant janitors and custodians of public buildings, current fiscal year.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., February 4, 1888.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith reports of the chief of the appointment division and J. E. Powell, electric-light inspector, in relation to the matter of an additional appropriation for the "pay of assistant custodians and janitors" for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888.

The recommendations therein have been carefully considered, and I can not too strongly urge upon your attention an early and favorable consideration of the necessity for an additional appropriation of $60,000 for "pay of assistant custodians and janitors" for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888. As shown by the reports, a serious embarrassment to the public service is inevitable unless some action is taken and an additional appropriation made immediately. Before taking any steps as to the reductions outlined in these reports it has been determined to invite the attention of Congress to the subject, with the request that the amount mentioned above be included in the urgent deficiency bill now before that body.

Respectfully, yours,

C. S. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.

Hon. JOHN G. CARLISLE,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., February 3, 1888.

SIR: Referring to your verbal directions to recommend further reductions of the force of assistant custodians and janitors, thus enabling the Department to keep within the appropriation for such purpose, such recommendations are herewith submitted, namely:

An immediate discharge of all employés connected with the elevator service in the various public buildings under control of this Department and the elevator service discontinued.

The approval of the above recommendation will effect a saving of $6,840 during the balance of the present fiscal year.

To provide against the deficiency which will still remain after the above recommendation is approved, I recommend the discharge of sufficient watchmen and laborers in accordance with a schedule to be prepared with a due regard to the relative importance of the public service in various buildings, the aggregate of the compensation of said watchmen and laborers to be such as will permit this Department to keep within the limits of the present appropriation. Having visited many of our public buildings, being practically familiar with the necessities of the service, I feel it my duty to add that the course recommended above will unquestionably seriously cripple the conduct of the service and result disastrously to the public business. The limits of the appropriation compel such recommendation.

I am, sir, very respectfully,

J. E. POWELL,
Inspector of Electric-Light Plants.

Hon. C. S. FAIRCHILD,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., February 4, 1888.

SIR: I have the honor to invite your attention to the necessities of the public service in the matter of expenditures payable from the appropriation "Pay of assistant custodians and janitors," for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888.

The estimates for this service for the current fiscal year, based upon the actual necessities thereof, amounting to $534,206, were prepared and submitted to Congress. The amount appropriated was only $425,000, being $109,206 less than the estimate.

In consequence of this reduction, the most careful economy has been exercised, yet it is found that during the first half of the current fiscal year the total amount expended from the appropriation was $218,296.

Extraordinary demands have been made upon the appropriation by reason of the completion of several new buildings since the beginning of the current fiscal year, and as others will be finished before the 30th of June next additional provisions will have to be made therefor, which will materially increase what appears to be inevitable, a deficiency, unless the service is curtailed by dismissals, a course undesirable and prejudicial to the public interests.

A most careful revision of these expenditures has been made, based upon an exact knowledge of the size, method of heating, lighting, cleaning, and caring for public buildings.

The salaries of employés, in many instances, have been reduced, in order to keep within the appropriation, below the rates paid by private individuals and corporations for similar service, and there is, therefore, an incessant demand for an increase of pay. Also, in many cases, the demands of the service have required that employés should work beyond the hours exacted from persons not employed by the Government; hence, a great deal of fault-finding in regard to the matter, the employés claiming that the Government was not justified in demanding such length of service, but, for the reason before stated, the Department has been powerless to grant the relief desired.

Every item of expenditure authorized from the appropriation has been closely scanned, and all possible saving accomplished, yet it is not found to be within the power of the Department to curtail further without crippling the service.

Owing to the smallness of the salary paid, the Department has not always been able to secure the services of competent engineers and firemen, men who are capable of taking care of the elaborate systems of machinery and apparatus now in use in some of the public buildings, thus inviting the danger attendant in such cases and the destruction of valuable mechanical plants.

Such action must be taken, however, to enable the Department to keep within the limits of the appropriation, and the services of elevator conductors, elevator engineers, and watchmen dispensed with, thus greatly impeding the public business.

It should be noted that a considerable portion of the appropriation "Pay of assistant custodians and janitors" has been used for the purpose of operating electric-light plants in several of the public buildings.

Wherever an electric-light plant has been introduced and used other appropriations for public buildings have been relieved more than the amount thus expended, and the result was an actual saving to the Government.

It is not deemed advisable, in view of the foregoing facts, to make a reduction of expenditures which would produce any friction in the conduct of the public service, or to adopt such a course before presenting for your honorable consideration a request to insert in the urgent deficiency bill a clause making an additional appropriation.

Special attention is invited to the estimates for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, where in detail will be found each item of expenditure proposed. An examination of that estimate will better show the necessity for the additional appropriation herein requested.

In view of the foregoing, it is suggested that an effort be made to have inserted in the urgent deficiency bill a clause making an additional appropriation for pay of assistant custodians and janitors for the current fiscal year of $60,000, which amount, in my judgment, will be required to fully meet the demands of the service.

Respectfully yours,

PERRY C. SMITH,
Chief Appointment Division.

Hon. C. S. FAIRCHILD,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. RANDALL. I think that we will be found in harmony with the Treasury Department on this particular item.

Mr. RYAN. I wish to suggest to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] that if we give the $160,000 here, and the force is increased so as to absorb that appropriation, it will be necessary, in order to maintain that force during the next fiscal year, that we shall appropriate $600,000 instead of $450,000.

Mr. RANDALL. I am not going to anticipate trouble for the next fiscal year. I am only anxious now about the current year; that what gentlemen are complaining of, namely, that persons have been discharged from the public service in their respective districts, should be met and remedied as far as the Treasury Department will take the responsibility of doing it, and we say in the law that they shall do it only where there is absolute necessity that it shall be done.

Mr. BELDEN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to make a suggestion that I think will solve this difficulty and satisfy the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES]. When the appropriation for the Syracuse post-office was exhausted the Administration sent a man there from one of the Southern States, I think from Missouri, at $10 a day, and put him in charge of the building, and if this appropriation should go through I see no reason why they can not do the same thing elsewhere. Mind you, he was a good politician and a Democrat. [Laughter.]

Mr. RANDALL. I do not remember whether the Syracuse post-office is completed or not, but I want to remind this House that this appropriation applies only to public buildings which are finished and handed over to the care of the Treasury Department.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. I do not propose now to inquire whether or not we have realized the economy in the administration of the General Government which was promised. One thing is clear, and that is that the amount appropriated for caring for the public buildings has fallen short, and it has been found necessary to discharge employés whose services were required to properly care for the public buildings, run the elevators, etc. The chairman of the committee has said that the amount asked for ought not to be allowed, because the bill of last year making an appropriation for this service provided that the sum appropriated should be so distributed throughout the year as not to permit of a deficiency; but the Secretary of the Treasury has informed us that in spite of his efforts in that behalf there is a deficiency, and as a result the elevators in a large number of the court-houses in the leading cities are stopped for want of money to pay an adequate force to run them.

The honorable chairman of the committee addressed a note to the Secretary, asking him what sum would be sufficient to enable him to restore the force which had been discharged, so far as that force might be found necessary to properly care for the buildings, take charge of the elevators, etc. The reply was, as already stated, twenty-four thousand and some hundreds of dollars. That amount is absolutely necessary. So far as my own city is concerned, I can say that one of the elevators, used for carrying judges, attorneys, litigants, and others having business before the court to the third story, where the court is held, had been stopped because there is no money to pay the men in charge of it. If there is a desire to punish the Secretary of the Treasury for having disregarded the law, let the punishment be visited on him, and not upon citizens who are interested in having the public buildings in different parts of the country properly cared for and the business of the courts continue uninterruptedly. The Secretary says $25,000 is sufficient for that purpose, and I see no reason to question the accuracy of that statement. The additional amount asked for, being $35,000, is to provide for service which he says is necessary, but not absolutely indispensable. I hope the motion for the $60,000 will not prevail, and that the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] will be adopted, allowing just what the Secretary of the Treasury says is absolutely necessary to provide sufficient force to care for the public buildings and perform other indispensable duties.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman, I have but a word to say in reference to this matter, and in saying that word I will not allude to politics in any way, because, so far as my section is concerned, the men who have been discharged are Democrats, and the men who will be appointed to succeed them will undoubtedly be Democrats, provided they are appointed before the 4th of March next. [Laughter.]

What I want to say is, that I have never been able to understand the statesmanship which pares an appropriation bill down below the amount absolutely needed, and then comes in the next year with a deficiency bill, an urgent deficiency bill, and an "extremely" urgent deficiency bill. That policy may be statesmanship, but I believe the country does not so regard it.

To-day in my own city the force in charge of the public building there is ridiculously inadequate, solely because money enough was not appropriated to carry on properly the public business. As I stated the other day, when only five-twelfths of the fiscal year had expired, our courts were stopped because of the failure of the appropriation; and to-day, were it not for the generosity of my county in giving credit to the National Government, your Federal prisoners would be walking our streets or starving in their cells. This may be statesmanship; but if it is, God save the mark!

Mr. PETERS. It is statesmanship which takes a magnifying glass to see it.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Whatever money is necessary to carry on the legitimate functions of the Government, the people are ready and willing to have appropriated; and I believe they take no stock in these circulars which are sent out from some political committee-room on the eve of an election, comparing the appropriations of one year with those of another. Why, sir, the people are not blind; they see through these matters and understand them. As these urgent deficiency bills are coming up one after another, they see more plainly than ever—I was going to say the "disreputable," but out of regard to gentleman upon the committee, I will say—the transparent subterfuge of the whole thing.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri, it was not agreed to, there being—ayes 9, noes 67.

The question then recurred on concurring in amendment 13 with the amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations; and it was agreed to.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 14: On page 9, in line 7, after the word "tunnel," insert "according to the plan recommended by the board of Army engineer officers."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 15: Insert the following new paragraph:

"Office of the Surgeon-General: For salaries of the following additional force from March 1 to June 30, 1888, namely: For one engineer, at the rate of $1,400 per annum; one assistant engineer, for night duty, at the rate of $900 per annum; two firemen, at the rate of $720 each per annum; and two laborers, at the rate of $660 each per annum; in all, $1,611.67, or so much thereof as may be necessary."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 16: On page 10, in line 11, strike out "2,500" and insert "3,000."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence), was read, as follows:

Amendment 17: On page 10, in lines 18 and 19, strike out "$5,895" and insert "$6,385."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 18: On page 10, at the end of line 19, insert the following:
"Provided, That the printing-press and material formerly in use in the office of the Surgeon-General may be used by the record and pension division of that office to expedite as much as possible the work of the division, and for no other purpose."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 19: On page 10, at the end of line 22, insert the following:
"To be disbursed under the limitations prescribed for the appropriation for mileage to officers by the Army appropriation act approved February 9, 1887."

The amendment was concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 20: On page 11, after line 11, insert the following:
"Extension of military reservation at Fort Robinson, Nebr.: For payment to John T. Sechler for private property taken by the Government in extension of the military reservation at Fort Robinson, Nebr., under the President's order of June 28, 1879, being the amount awarded by a board of officers January 5, 1888, as per their report approved by the War Department, $2,500."

The amendment was non-concurred in,

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 21: On page 12, after line 13, insert:
"For rent, hire of civilian employés, furniture, light, stationery, ice, stoves and fixtures, repairs, rent of telephones, text-books, lumber, and other expenses of offices maintained as stations of observation outside of Washington, D. C., $5,000."

The amendment was concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 22: On page 12, after line 26, insert the following:
"For payment on account of Army transportation, 1882 and prior years, as certified to Congress as due by the accounting officers of the Treasury in House Executive Document No. 19, Fiftieth Congress, first session, as follows: To the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, $32,788.48; to the Hoboken Land Improvement Company, of New Jersey, $15,800; in all, $48,588.48."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 23: On page 12, after line 26, insert the following:
"For payment on account of barracks and quarters, 1881 and prior years, to L. A. Von Hoffman and William A. Mertens (trading as R. Von Hoffman & Co.) and William H. Newman, $18,430.56, certified to Congress as due by the accounting officers of the Treasury in House Executive Document No. 19, Fiftieth Congress, first session."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 24: On page 12, line 26, insert the following:
"For reimbursement to the estate of Walter (or Walt.) Mason for stolen money under sections 2154 and 2155, Revised Statutes, as certified to Congress in House Executive Document No. 19, Fiftieth Congress, first session, $32,000."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 25: On page 12, after line 26, insert the following:

"NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS.

"At the Western Branch, Leavenworth, Kans.: For fitting up barrack for the accommodation of additional inmates, $1,000; for maintenance during the remainder of the current fiscal year, $4,500, in all, $5,500."

Mr. DINGLEY. I would like to hear the gentleman from Missouri state the reasons which induced the Committee on Appropriations to recommend non-concurrence in this amendment.

Mr. BURNES. There was no sort of estimate or information sent to the House on this subject; not an item or a line. We have proposed non-concurrence with a view of ascertaining what are the facts and what should be done.

Mr. DINGLEY. I am surprised at the gentleman's statement, because when I happened to be in Leavenworth a month or two ago I visited this National Home, Western Branch, and I found that it was crowded to repletion. General Smith, who was in charge of it, said to me it was necessary an appropriation be made for the erection of barracks, in order to provide for hundreds of soldiers in the West who are awaiting an opportunity for admission into the Home. I am therefore surprised that no official communication on the subject has been sent to the committee.

Mr. BURNES. Not a line in reference to this matter has been received by us. While I presume the gentleman from Maine [Mr. DINGLEY] is right, and while I think the Senate conferees will be able to give us some information, we certainly have not yet received any upon the subject.

Mr. DINGLEY. In view of the gentleman's statement I make no objection to non-concurrence.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 26: After the last amendment insert the following:
"Head-stones for graves of soldiers: For continuing the work of furnishing head-stones for unmarked graves of Union soldiers, sailors, and marines in national, post, city, town, and village cemeteries, naval cemeteries at navy-yards and stations of the United States, and other burial places, under the acts of March 3, 1873, and February 3, 1879, $20,000."

The amendment was concurred in.

Amendment 27: Strike out the following:
"For the purpose of making 100 feet longer the dry-dock now under contract to be built at the Brooklyn navy-yard, $100,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary."

Mr. BURNES. The committee recommend non-concurrence.

Mr. LODGE. I should like to know the reason for non-concurrence. It was not in the original bill.

Mr. BURNES. It was offered as an amendment in the House by the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs. That is how it got into the bill.

Mr. LONG. The Senate have stricken it out.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Is the motion to concur in order?

The CHAIRMAN. It is.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Then I make that motion. If I understand this provision, it is to increase in length the dry-dock provided for at 500 feet by adding 100 feet. There is no pretense, I understand, that any vessel now owned by the United States, now proposed to be constructed, or of the construction of which there is any expectation, will be long enough to require any such dry-dock as this when lengthened, as proposed, to 600 feet.

I did not know this bill was coming up to-day, and have not with me the data which I would like to present to the House on this subject, and I am justified in saying that the dock now provided for, 500 feet in length, is more than ample for all Government purposes. Of course there are a few of the largest of the foreign ocean steamships, built of enormous size for the purpose of speed and devoted almost exclusively to the carrying of passengers, which would require a dock something near the length of the one here proposed, but no Government vessel requires any such dock.

Mr. LONG. There is already a dock in New York of sufficient capacity.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Yes, I was coming to that. The dock already provided for is 500 feet long, and the only argument I have heard made in favor of increasing this dock to 600 feet is that possibly it might be utilized to repair two vessels at once. On that point I desire to express my opinion that building an enormous dock for the purpose of taking in two vessels at once is not practical or business-like. If the House will think a moment and consider the fact it is very rare that two vessels go into a dry-dock to have repairs of the same extent put upon them, it will be very obvious that the lengthening of a dry-dock for the purpose of accommodating two ships at a time is not a practical way of doing the business of the Government. For instance, one vessel has to be dry-docked perhaps for the purpose of three or four hours' work on her propeller or for twenty-four hours' work in cleaning her bottom, while another vessel is docked for repairs which may take three or four months. When those two vessels have once passed into the dock and been blocked up and the water pumped out, neither one of them can be taken out without floating up both, or if either of them had repairs going on below the water line the gates of the dock could not be opened without filling that vessel.

Again, in addition to the increase of $100,000 upon the original cost of this dry-dock there will be added an enormous increase in the expense for pumping out the water from the enlargement. If a vessel of two or three hundred feet in length is put in the dock for some ordinary repair the whole volume of water for that 600 feet of dock has to be pumped out, thus involving not only increased expenditure in the beginning but a heavy increase in the ordinary expenses of using the dock.

I understand that the pressure for the increase in the length of this dock has come chiefly or largely from the owners or agents of some of the passenger lines trading from Europe to the port of New York. But private enterprise and private capital have provided at the port of New York ample accommodation for docking ships of that character.

Mr. TIMOTHY J. CAMPBELL. At what part of New York have they provided that accommodation?

Mr. BOUTELLE. The Erie Basin.

Mr. TIMOTHY J. CAMPBELL. The only docks there are in my district, and they are not large enough to accommodate the large ships we have to provide for. I mean in regard to their length and accommodations.

Mr. RANDALL. The reason is that the water at the gates of these docks to which the gentleman refers is only about 25 feet, while these other vessels draw 28.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Very well; this brings the matter then to this point, that the object of providing the additional dock facilities in New York is for the purpose of accommodating this class of passenger steamships belonging to private corporations, sailing under a foreign flag and belonging to foreign countries.

Mr. TIMOTHY J. CAMPBELL. It is a class of people, let me say to the gentleman, who bring grist to our mills and money to our country.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Very true; but it is practically admitted that the primary object of this increased expenditure is not to provide for the wants of the Government, but to provide for the accommodation of private corporations which may happen to need this dock for the use of vessels, all of which are sailing at this time under a foreign flag.

Now, I desire to say that whether it be true or not (and my information on that point differs from the information of my distinguished friend from New York, to whom I should defer on matters affecting his locality with a great deal of respect), but whether it be or be not true, that at the present moment there are not ample dock facilities for that class of steam-ships connected with the foreign trade at New York, there is certainly no question that there is plenty of capital—private capital—waiting to be invested in that great commercial and financial center, to supply all such private wants; and I do not believe that it is the duty of the United States Government, or for its interest, or that it is proper for the Government to increase the appropriations for a dry-dock by one-fifth, and add a hundred feet to the length of a dock that is already more than long enough for all Government purposes, in order to provide for the possible wants of private foreign corporations.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HERBERT. The opposition to this amendment put upon the appropriation bill by a vote of the House proceeds, as I conceive, upon an entire misapprehension of the situation. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. BOUTELLE], who has just spoken, based his opposition mainly upon the idea that this is to come into competition—this Government dock—in some manner with private docks. There could not be possibly a greater mistake.

I have here a letter from the Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, Commodore Harmony, and another from the Secretary of the Navy, both saying that that can never be; and I read simply a single sentence from the letter of the Secretary, who favors this amendment and the passage of the bill in this regard as it was adopted by the House:

The Government property can not be used by private persons except where there is no other available resource, which almost never happens.

Now, that destroys the whole foundation upon which the gentleman from Maine rests his principal objection, and upon which it must rest. It has always been the rule that the Government docks are never allowed to come into competition with docks owned by private individuals.

Now, then, if a vessel, whether foreign and sailing under a foreign flag, or one sailing under the American flag, whether it be owned by foreigners or owned by Americans, happens to be at the port of New York, it certainly would be a great convenience to have a dock there that would enable the vessel to be repaired, in the event that repairs are necessary; because in the first instance the vessel might otherwise be worthless. It might be unable to recross the Atlantic in order to reach dock facilities in Europe, and if it were otherwise I think it would be desirable to let the vessel be docked in New York in order to enable the American workman to find employment. Why is it that gentlemen are so opposed to the idea that the vessels of whatever nation they may be, owned wherever they may be, shall not be repaired, if occasion demands, in our own docks? What has the American workman done that you should strike such a relentless blow at him as that?

Mr. CANNON. Is there want of capital, let me ask the gentleman from Alabama, at New York or in this country to construct such a dock?

Mr. HERBERT. There is no want of capital, as far as that is concerned; but I am answering the argument the gentleman from Maine has made in opposition to this appropriation. The fact is known that there is no dock in New York now that will take these larger steamers.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Will my colleague on the committee permit me to ask if he defends the increase of this dock on the ground that it is not large enough for the needs of the Navy?

Mr. HERBERT. I do; and I was taking your own argument, beginning with what you said last, for that seems to be the most important, and was then coming to the first objection.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I would like to ask my colleague if he will state whether any official authorities have recommended that this dock should be increased to 600 feet in length in view of any possible needs of the Navy?

Mr. HERBERT. I am coming to that. I say that the Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, Commodore Harmony, does and the Secretary of the Navy does. I propose to read from the letter of the Secretary, and I will hand to the gentleman the letter from the Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I will be glad to hear it.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. With the permission of the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, I should like to ask him a question. I recollect not many weeks ago there was a bill presented in this House proposing that there should be a dry-dock built at the League Island navy-yard on the Delaware River. My inquiry is, has any progress been made in the consideration of that bill?

Mr. RANDALL. Do not mix that up with this.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. I did not hear my colleague.

Mr. MORSE. The gentleman says it will follow this. [Laughter.]

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. In the same bill?

Mr. RANDALL. I did not say that.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. My colleague says it will follow this.

Mr. RANDALL. I did not say that.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. There is no place where there are greater advantages for the Navy and the docking of private ships than at League Island. There is plenty of water, plenty of room, and plenty of workmen to work on ships of that kind. Now, if the gentleman will answer my question I would like to know what progress has been made with reference to that proposition.

Mr. HERBERT. I will answer the gentleman's question by another. What has the question about the League Island navy-yard to do with this question now before the House?

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. DOCKERY was recognized, and yielded his time to Mr. HERBERT.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. I move to strike out the last word. I have a natural inclination when dry-docks are mentioned to bring this question before the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HERBERT] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. HERBERT. I hope gentlemen will not ask any further questions to throw me off the line of my argument until at least I shall have answered the questions already propounded.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. Answer mine.

Mr. HERBERT. I said there was no dock large enough to take some of the vessels that it is contemplated to run. The Erie Basin dock No. 2 is 600 feet long, but, as has been said by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TIMOTHY J. CAMPBELL] is not large enough; except perhaps for a few days at high flood tide.

Mr. BOUTELLE. What does the gentleman mean by saying that it is not large enough if it be 600 feet long?

Mr. HERBERT. It is not wide enough.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Will the gentleman state how wide it is?

Mr. HERBERT. I can not exactly state how wide it is, but I understand it is not wide enough. But even if it be wide enough there is no question about what the Secretary states and what Commodore Harmony states, namely, that never at any time is a Government dock allowed to be used for a private vessel when there is a Government vessel requiring accommodation.

Another question propounded to me was this: Do we want this dock for naval purposes? I say yes; the Secretary says yes; Commodore Harmony says yes.

Mr. RANDALL. And the New York delegation want it.

Mr. HERBERT. Of course they do. The New York delegation and the best citizens of New York want it.

The Secretary says:

I consider, however, the insertion of the item desirable. There is no question in the case of competition with private docks. The Government property can not be used by private persons except where there is no other available resource, which almost never happens.

There are two considerations which seem to make this extension of the dock desirable:

In the first place, for the ordinary use of the Government. An increase of the length of the dock by 100 feet would nearly double its capacity for our ordinary uses. It would enable us to dock two vessels at a time instead of one.

My colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Maine, has said according to his understanding this thing is impracticable. He says it is very seldom that two vessels can be put in one dock at one time.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I will stand on that statement.

Mr. HERBERT. No doubt the gentleman will, until I attempt to take the ground from under him and then the House will decide whether he stands on a firm foundation or not.

Here is a book of figures of dry-docks which has been in the Committee on Naval Affairs for almost a year. It was certainly not gotten up with reference to this question, which had not then arisen. I see represented in one of these docks, the Baltimore dock, the ships United States and Equator. In the Erie Basin dock No. 2 are represented the steamer Colorado and the bark Ophelia at the same time. At the St. John's dock are represented the steamers Hector and Nimrod at the same time.

The gentleman's argument is, it would frequently happen a vessel might want to go into dock for only twelve hours and another vessel might be in there. That might happen.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Will the gentleman allow me?

Mr. HERBERT. I have no time to yield.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Will the gentleman give the size of those vessels?

Mr. HERBERT. That has nothing to do with the question. They are within the 600 feet. It might frequently happen a vessel was in dock for three months.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BURNES. We have now heard very nearly, I think, all that can be said upon the subject. The two eminent sailors in the House have spoken, and I hope we will have a vote. I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph shall now close.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Mr. Chairman, before the debate is closed I wish to say a word.

Mr. BURNES. I ask unanimous consent that the debate be limited to five minutes.

Mr. LODGE. I object to unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman. I want to say something on this subject.

Mr. BURNES. Then I ask unanimous consent that debate be limited to ten minutes, five minutes on each side.

Mr. LODGE. I object.

Mr. BURNES. Then I ask unanimous consent that debate be limited to fifteen minutes, five minutes on this side and ten minutes on the other.

There was no objection.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Mr. Chairman, I desire simply to add to what I have already said the fact disclosed by the official reports of our Navy Department, that the longest vessel we have in the Navy to-day is 315 feet. That is the length of the Chicago. The dock which is already provided for is 500 feet in length. So far as we can judge from the operations which have been carried on under the present Administration, the tendency is not in the direction of increasing the length; the Chicago, which was one of the Roach ships, being as long as any vessel now in the Navy, or under construction. The Baltimore is the same length. The Newark is 310 feet long. The Charleston, now being constructed on the Pacific Coast, is 300 feet long, and so they run on down. Now, in view of these facts, Mr. Chairman, it does not seem to me that this proposition has any standing before us in the interest of the Navy Department. I am unable to give at this time the length of the longest ship of war in the world, but it is perfectly safe to say that no navy has afloat to-day a modern war-ship that could not be taken into this dock of 500 feet in length, and I close by submitting to this House whether it is a sound business proposition, when we have one dock at the New York navy-yard of a reasonable length, and are building near it another dock 500 feet long, that, for the possibility that we may, at some time, desire to put two ships into a dock at once, we should make an additional appropriation of $100,000 to build a dock far beyond the length that is likely to be required, and involving an enormous additional expense for pumping out a 600-foot dock every time we have occasion to take out of water, for any kind of temporary repairs, any one of the ships of a navy no one of which to-day is over 315 feet long.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. Chairman, I should vote with the greatest pleasure for any appropriation for the United States Navy which the committee can bring in, but the naval purposes of this appropriation, as disclosed by what the chairman of the committee has said, are simply to give an opportunity to put two vessels into this dock at once. Now, if there is such urgency about docking the vessels of the United States, there are other docks in other Government yards that are quite capable of being used for that purpose. One of the finest in the country is at Charlestown, in my State, a dock which is perfectly capable of being used, but which is allowed to stand entirely idle under the present regulation of the navy-yard. The only object to be gained from this appropriation is to lengthen this Brooklyn dock so as to make it more convenient for docking ocean steamers. Of course it is desirable in case of distress to have a dock for the purpose of docking large ocean steamers, but there is a dock in New York at the Erie Basin which has been referred to here and which without doubt can be deepened sufficiently to care for those vessels, and I see no reason why the capital and the labor of New York should not be employed in a private enterprise like that, instead of committing the Government to the enlargement of this navy-yard dock. It seems to me that it is better economy to spend all the money that we appropriate in building up the American Navy and adding to the number of cruisers, instead of putting $100,000 into the Brooklyn dry-dock, not for the vessels of the United States, but for the convenience of the great ocean steam-ship companies.

Mr. BURNES. I yield four minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HERBERT], and the remainder of the time to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania, the chairman of the committee [Mr. RANDALL].

Mr. HERBERT. Mr. Chairman, I repeat that there is no danger whatever that the Government of the United States, even though it should have one hundred docks, would at any time come into competition with any of the capital now invested or hereafter to be invested in New York or Boston docks. So much for that. Now, in reply to the gentleman from Maine [Mr. BOUTELLE], I will read what the Secretary says:

> Of the new cruisers, five run from 300 feet to 315 feet in length. There are seven of sizes next smaller, running from 230 feet in length to 270. These twelve boats constitute thus far the new Navy, and it will be seen that a 600-foot dock will accommodate one of the first class and one of the second class at the same time, but a 500-foot dock, if it should have one of the first class in, would not have room for one of the other boats.

So that in general it may be said that by adding not more than 20 per cent. to the cost of this dock (the dock according to the present plans will cost about $600,000) the structure can be increased in length 100 feet, adding nearly 50 per cent. to the value of the dock for naval purposes. Not only is this addition desirable for the purpose now contemplated, not only is it economical to make this improvement, but it is quite likely that as there is so rapid a growth in the length of merchant vessels, we shall, before long, build a naval vessel which will require a dock longer than 500 feet. This dock is at present under contract, but if the appropriation be made in this bill for $100,000, the dock can be made 100 feet longer. That is the whole case.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Will the chairman of the Naval Committee [Mr. HERBERT] state the length of the latest vessels provided for by the Department?

Mr. HERBERT. It is considerably less than 500 feet. I do not remember the exact figures.

Mr. BOUTELLE. It is less than 300 feet, according to the report—290 feet.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Chairman, in no event does the Government propose to enter into competition with the owners of private dock-yards. The head of the Department has stated that neither now nor in the future is that proposed. The question involved here is whether vessels of greater length than 500 feet, or drawing more water than 25 feet, can be docked in the existing docks in the city of New York. My information is that they can not. If through private enterprise a dock should be provided with sufficient depth at the gate to allow a vessel drawing 28 feet of water to float in and out on all days of the year, then the Government is to be immediately debarred from entering into competition with private docks. But the present condition of the case is that there are vessels coming into the harbor of New York which can not be taken into an American dock. The question is whether we shall exclude such vessels from being repaired in American waters, and so drive them abroad.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. BOUTELLE] to concur in the amendment.

Mr. RANDALL. I hope that will not be done.

The amendment was not concurred in; there being—ayes 48, noes 68.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

> Amendment 28: On page 13, line 22, strike out "$5,000" and insert "$2,500."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

> Amendment 29: At the end of line 27, page 13, insert the following: "And from this amount an expenditure not to exceed $360 is hereby authorized for the rent of additional rooms for said bureau during the current fiscal year."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

> Amendment 30: Insert the following: "Support Freedmen's Hospital and Asylum: For subsistence, $1,800; for repairs to steam-boilers, $900; in all, $2,700."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

> Amendment 31: Insert the following: "Reports of the Tenth Census: To complete the publication of the reports of the Tenth Census, $77,495.52."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Mr. RANDALL. Amendments 32 to 43, inclusive, are all of the same class, relating to the salaries of clerks in the offices of surveyors-general in various States and Territories. The Committee on Appropriations have recommended non-concurrence in these amendments. I ask that the question be taken upon them in gross, without reading them.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, amendments numbered from 32 to 43, inclusive, will be non-concurred in without reading.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

> Amendment 44: On page 15 in line 9, strike out "35,000" and insert "25,000."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended concurrence) was read, as follows:

> Amendment 45: Strike out on page 15 the following: "For the examination of surveys heretofore made, $10,000."

The amendment was concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended concurrence) was the following:

> Amendment 46: Insert the following: "Surveying the public lands: For the examination of surveys in the field to test the accuracy of the work and to prevent payment for fraudulent and imperfect surveys returned by deputy surveyors, $10,000."

The amendment was concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

> Amendment 47: Strike out the following: "This amount for pay of special agents and necessary expenses to carry out the provisions of section 3 of the act approved February 8, 1887, entitled 'An act to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians on the various reservations, and to extend the protection of the laws of the United States and Territories over the Indians, and for other purposes,' $10,000."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

> Amendment 48: Insert the following: "Traveling expenses of Indian school superintendent: Necessary traveling expenses of one Indian school superintendent, including incidental expenses of inspection and investigation: Provided, That he shall be allowed $4 per day for traveling expenses when actually on duty in the field, exclusive of cost of transportation, $1,000."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 49: Insert in the appropriations for the Post-Office Department the following:
"For wrapping paper, $14,000."

The amendment was concurred in.

Amendment 50: Strike out "wrapping-paper;" so that it will read:
"For balance due Bulkley, Raignel & Co., for 1,500 reams of wrapping-paper furnished per order of Postmaster-General, being a deficiency for fiscal year 1887, $2,165.77."

Mr. BURNES. The committee recommends concurrence.

The amendment was concurred in.

Amendment 51: Strike out the words "being for the fiscal year 1887;" so that it will read:
"For fitting up fire-proof record-rooms to preserve the records of the Department, $1,500."

Mr. BURNES. The committee recommend concurrence.

The amendment was concurred in.

Amendment 52: Insert the following:
"For support of United States prisoners, including necessary clothing and medical aid, and transportation to place of conviction, being for the fiscal year 1887, $20,000."

Mr. BURNES. The committee recommend non-concurrence.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Amendment 53: Strike out the following:
"Miscellaneous expenses: For miscellaneous expenses, United States courts, $20,000, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1887."

Mr. BURNES. The committee recommend concurrence.

The amendment was concurred in.

Amendment 54: Insert "or so much thereof as may be necessary;" so it will read:
"For salary of the additional circuit judge in the second judicial circuit authorized by the act approved March 3, 1887, $6,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary."

Mr. BURNES. The committee recommend concurrence.

The amendment was concurred in.

Amendment 55: Insert the following:
"Department of Justice: To pay Shirley C. Ward, of Los Angeles, Cal., $2,500 for his services to date as special attorney for the Mission Indians of Southern California, under appointment by the Attorney-General, made at the request of the Secretary of the Interior."

Mr. BURNES. The committee recommend non-concurrence.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Amendment 56: Insert the following:
"For printing and binding for the Post-Office Department, $98,000."

Mr. BURNES. The committee recommend concurrence, but at the request of my colleague [Mr. HATCH], chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, I desire to move concurrence with the amendment to the amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk to be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For printing and binding for the Department of Agriculture, $10,000.

Mr. BURNES. I desire to say an estimate has come to us from the Secretary of the Treasury approving of the request for this deficiency appropriation on the part of the Commissioner of Agriculture.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. I am not able to hear what the gentleman is saying.

Mr. BURNES. The amendment which I propose has come here from the Secretary of the Treasury at the instance of the Commissioner of Agriculture. It has the indorsement of the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Agriculture. It is a deficiency in regard to the printing and binding required for the Department of Agriculture.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to, and the amendment of the Senate as amended was concurred in.

Amendment 57: Strike out the following:
"And the Public Printer is hereby directed to rigidly enforce the provisions of the eight-hour law in the department under his charge."

Mr. BURNES. I desire to have some understanding about the time to be taken up in this debate. Let the other side take ten minutes and five minutes be allowed to this side.

Mr. McCOMAS. I only want eight or ten minutes myself.

Mr. BURNES. It is necessary this bill should pass this evening, as there are thousands who are waiting for the money here appropriated. I ask that the time taken up by the debate on this question be limited to fifteen minutes.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. What does the committee recommend?

Mr. BURNES. The committee recommends non-concurrence.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri asks the debate on the pending matter be limited to fifteen minutes.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. McCOMAS. Mr. Chairman, the Senate rejected this amendment because it reiterates existing law. How recently did this House, to please the President, re-enact an existing law authorizing the purchase of bonds? This amendment is an admonition to the Public Printer to obey the eight-hour law. After questioning Mr. Benedict I am convinced that he deserves this censure. Twenty years after President Grant signed the eight-hour law Printer Benedict confesses that out of his 2,062 employés 564 men and women work ten, eleven, or twelve hours each day for the Government.

That of the 47 stereotypers employed there 39 of them work ten hours a day; of 26 machine-men, 11 work eleven hours a day; of 66 in the Treasury branch of the Printing Office, 23 work eleven hours; of 220 employed in the first document-room, 168 of them, some of them women, work twelve hours a day; of 118 in the specification room, 85 work eleven hours a day, and six work twelve hours; of 81 in the second document-room, 75 work twelve hours; and of 85 in the third document-room, 65 work twelve hours a day.

Mr. Chairman, during several months of the year, 81 women and girls in the bindery of that office, and 230 women and girls in the folding-room average nine hours a day, while the female compositors average eleven hours a day.

On June 25, 1868, Congress enacted that "eight hours shall constitute a day's labor for all workmen, mechanics, or laborers employed by or on behalf of the Government." In March, 1888, we discover that the shadow of this Capitol falls on this pile wherein more than two thousand men and women and girls are employed by the United States in its name, and that more than one-fourth of these men, women, and girls toil from nine to twelve hours every day or night, and, what is worst of all, that the most of these toilers are delicate women, orphan girls or widows.

I denounce this as a violation of the law, and the Public Printer for violating the law. Let pass the small force of fifty-seven regulars and twenty-six substitutes, working nine hours on the urgent work of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, who swiftly pour out into leaden molds the melted lava of your eloquence on this floor before it cools in the morning air.

I speak now of the remaining 2,000 employés and of the shameful evasion of the law, whereby nearly 600 men, women, and girls are kept working for the Government from nine to twelve hours by day and by night. When he found heads of Departments evading this law President Grant, by proclamations in 1869 and 1872, warned all Departments to obey this law. President Cleveland is silent, while Benedict, under his very eyes, continues this twelve-hour employment of men and this shameful overtaxing the nerves and health of women.

The plain terms of the law and these proclamations ought to prevent this evasion.

In addition, in Martin's case, the Supreme Court said:

This statute was a direction to every official that eight hours is deemed to be a proper length of time for a day's labor, and that his contract shall be based upon that theory.

Contracts for payment by the piece, or per 1,000 ems, or per 100 sheets, or by the hour, which leads to twelve hours' daily labor, is a trick upon the law by Printer Benedict, for which President Cleveland ought to discharge him.

But these shifty evasions are coupled with Benedict's regulation, in bold defiance of law, requiring the piece-workers and hour-workers to be present nine hours, from 8 o'clock until 5 o'clock. I fear many of us are too ready to laud the eight-hour law before we come here, only to forget it after we are here.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. Let me interrupt the gentleman to ask what excuse is given for this violation of the law.

Mr. McCOMAS. I am coming to that. Benedict says he has not room enough. This is a mere pretext. There is no additional expense in wages. If the Government gives a full day's pay for eight hours, there Government employment should end. By this law the Government proclaimed that eight hours' labor is all it will afford.

Therefore, when Benedict affords, on behalf of the Government, twelve hours' work he either cheats the laborer or cheats the people of the country.

He cheats the laborer if for a day and a half of work he gives only one day's living wages. He cheats the people if to his favored employés on any one day he gives employment of a day and a half to one person when by law he was bound to call in another laborer for that half day's work.

To limit all Government employment to eight hours is no prohibition of labor elsewhere, no restriction upon longer hours in agricultural labor in the pure air. All private employments are open to private contract still.

But this public standard of eight hours has during twenty years wrought powerfully upon public opinion to induce conformity in private employment to this limit. It recognizes the absolute necessity of fewer hours caused by the encroachment of machinery.

The past twenty years tends to prove that eight hours' solid work is better work, and that the remainder of a day may be given to the family, to the libraries, the lyceums, the religious, social, or political meetings, which make a better citizen.

I believe that by the rigid enforcement of this law, the example of the Government helps to make us a stable society of healthy, vigorous, and self-ruling people. I believe the general acceptance of this law fosters intelligence and skill, tends to cheerfulness, honesty, energy, good will, and all that goes to stimulate manhood and womanhood by hope of deserved reward.

At this time the attention of the House and the country has been turned to other aspects of the labor question, and, Mr. Chairman, even in free-trade England, where we find such eminent thinkers as Huxley using this language——

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. MCCOMAS asked and obtained leave to extend his remarks.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I have not my usual sympathy for my friend from Maryland in the remarks which he has made. It occurs to me that they are not characterized by that fairness which almost invariably characterizes him. I have never heard it asserted on this floor or elsewhere that the President of the United States or the Public Printer had violated the eight-hour law in the Public Printing Office; and I undertake to say that there can be no just conclusion of that sort. There has been no violation of the eight-hour law. There can be no violation of that law in permitting a man or woman to work the number of hours he or she may desire. We have no compulsory labor laws and can not have a law to prevent men or women from working as many hours as necessity and inclination may dictate. Eight hours constitute a day's work, and I am glad of it. But volition to work twenty-four hours can not be destroyed by law.

The eight-hour law was not made for the purpose of preventing a man or a woman from working. It was to give pay for a day's work when the employé worked for eight hours. The eight-hour law, I think, has never been so construed; never been so understood. The remarks of my friend from Maryland [Mr. MCCOMAS] seem to me unjust to the President of the United States and to the Public Printer, who, in my judgment, has violated no law.

Mr. RYAN. Then what is the use of this provision here?

Mr. BURNES. In reply to my friend from Kansas [Mr. RYAN], I answer, the provision ought never to have been in this bill. It is not an appropriation. I voted against it. I am opposed to it now. But it was placed in the bill by a decisive majority on a yea-and-nay vote, and the judgment of the House shall be respected.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Does my colleague propose on the statement he has just made to absorb all the time on this side? I ask that the time be extended for fifteen minutes. I do not think the gentleman understands what the eight-hour law is.

Mr. BURNES. I understand that eight hours is a day's work when a man is hired for a day, and when he is hired for a day's work he is paid for eight hours. But these employés in the Public Printer's Office are working by the hour and prefer to work ten or twelve hours. Would you prohibit them to eight hours if their necessities lead them to work more hours than eight, as we have to do? Shall the Congress of the United States construe that law to mean that a public officer of the United States shall stop a poor fellow from working when it is necessary for him to work and he desires of his own free will to work extra time to support himself and his dependent family? If you desire such a law as that, make it; but do not undertake to charge respectable and efficient officers with violating law merely because they allow honest men to work as they deem necessary or lawful. Rather let some one present a bill for consideration that will test the judgment and conscience of the American people with regard to the construction sought to be placed on the present law.

I propose non-concurrence, and as one of the conferees will stand by the action of the House, whatever that may be.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Like a cross-eyed man, not shooting where you look.

Mr. BURNES. I shoot where I look, and look where I shoot; but at the same time when representing the House a conferee does not always represent his own judgment.

I yield the remainder of my time to my colleague [Mr. O'NEILL].

Mr. ROGERS. I would like to ask a question, and I ask it for information.

Mr O'NEILL, of Missouri. I ask unanimous consent that the time for this debate be extended ten minutes.

Mr. MCCOMAS. Say ten minutes on each side.

Mr. BURNES. I must object.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Will my colleague let me have five minutes' time?

Mr. BURNES. I do not object to that.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. O'NEILL] submit a request that he be allowed five minutes?

Mr. MCCOMAS. I ask to make the time ten minutes on each side.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. BURNES. I object.

Mr. MCCOMAS. The time can be taken on the next amendment. But suppose we say five minutes on each side?

Mr. BURNES. All right.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the Chair understand the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] does not object to five minutes on each side?

Mr. BURNES. I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MCCOMAS] asks unanimous consent that the time for debate be extended ten minutes, one-half on each side.

Mr. ROGERS. Before I give my consent to that I want to ask these gentlemen a question. Otherwise I shall object myself.

Mr. BURNES. I will allow the gentleman from Arkansas to ask a question if I have time left.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Missouri yield for a question?

Mr. BURNES. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. O'NEILL] had the floor for two minutes in the time of his colleague. The Chair understands that the gentleman from Missouri yields to the gentleman from Arkansas to ask a question in that time.

Mr. ROGERS. I simply wanted some gentleman, I do not care who, to state to me or to the House where I can find the law that directs that the employés of the Printing Office shall not work more than eight hours. And if there is not a law of that kind where is the law that prohibits a man from working more than eight hours? I want to find the law.

Mr. BURNES. There is no such law.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Not my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will submit the request of the gentleman from Maryland, that the debate be continued for ten minutes, to be equally divided between the two sides.

There was no objection.

Mr. MCCOMAS rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like to understand what is meant by "the two sides?"

Mr. BURNES. Let there be five minutes under control of the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MCCOMAS], and five minutes under the control of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. O'NEILL].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MCCOMAS] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. MCCOMAS. After this struggle to get minutes in a debate over the eight-hour law, I want to add one thing. When the law expressly says eight hours shall constitute a day's labor, and the Supreme Court says it is a direction to every official of this Government upon which he shall base all his contracts for labor, if he makes a different contract he violates the law.

Mr. ROGERS. I want to see the law.

Mr. MCCOMAS. It passed June 25, 1868, and was signed by General Grant. And the Supreme Court decision is in Martin's case, from which I read one moment ago, in which the court says eight hours are deemed to be a proper length of time for a day's labor, and that Government contracts shall be based upon that theory. This does not prevent any man from working more than eight hours.

As I was about to say when the gavel fell, I believe with Huxley, that "a population whose labor is insufficiently paid must become physically and morally unhealthy, and socially unstable; and though it may succeed for a while in industrial competition by reason of the cheapness of its produce, it must in the end fall through hideous misery and degradation to utter ruin." Because I believe this, I favor a tariff upon cheap labor, and would restrict its immigration. We are now 60,000,000 of people, and each year more than a million are added to our number. Every twenty seconds, by birth or immigration, a new claimant presents himself or herself to claim a share in our common stock of maintenance and employment. Just when we are more sharply engaged than ever with our neighbors in the struggle for existence, needing the enjoyment of the fruits of honest industry, the President and his allies over the champagne dinner coddle those consumers with fixed incomes, who toil not and spin not, in a fool's paradise.

It is high time for this body, sprung from the very loins of the people, to begin to care for those who do toil and spin, and to help this American people to solve for itself the problem of eternal competition of man against man and nation against nation.

Let us begin to help permanent content by warning this garrulous, vain, and incompetent Public Printer, and through him all officials, to obey the eight-hour law for labor. [Applause.]

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, the construction put upon the eight-hour law by the gentleman representing this House upon the subcommittee who will confer with the Senate subcommittee with regard to this amendment is one that I cannot permit to pass unanswered. Either Congress, when they passed the eight-hour law, meant to set a standard and an example that they hoped would be followed by the industries in the country, either that, or they meant to perpetrate a piece of hypocrisy and to play upon the working classes of the country. Either they meant to say that eight hours should constitute a day's work, and that men should then cease from labor, or they did not mean anything. At that time a cry had gone up all over this country, spreading from State to State, in favor of an eight-hour law, in the hope that by that means thousands and thousands of men who had been thrown out of employment by labor-saving machinery and otherwise would be absorbed again into the ranks of industry; for that is the spirit of the eight-hour law, to bring in the idle men out of the streets and set them to work.

You can not want a better illustration of the benefits of such a law than that which the pay-roll of your Public Printer furnishes, which shows that while some printers who are permitted to work over time earn over $80 within two weeks, the poor substitute, at the bottom of the list I saw at the Public Printer's, earned during two weeks $1.60. I have examined the Public Printer's books and have found hundreds and hundreds of violations of this law—hundreds of men working ten, twelve, and fourteen hours per day. What official under such a state of facts dares to say that this law can not be enforced? The enforcement of it simply involves the additional employment of 300 or 400 men. It would take in those poor fellows from the streets and give them a chance to earn their living. I say to this Congress, compel your executive officers to respect the law, not alone in your Public Printing Office, but in your Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and every other Department where similar violations of the law are going on. The men in charge of those offices were not appointed for the purpose of settling what the law is or should be, but simply to carry out the law. They should not seek pretexts to violate it; and I say to gentlemen in the other end of this building that they will find out when they go back to their constituents whether this is a trifling question or not, and whether the enforcement of the eight-hour law is a trifling matter.

Gentlemen say that the eight-hour law never was intended to prevent any man from working as long as he pleased. If that is true, will they tell us why Congress enacted it and why the President at the time and for years thereafter compelled its enforcement?

They certainly could work as long as they pleased before its passage; and the condition to-day in this case would lead us to believe that it was dead. Either enforce the law in its spirit or repeal it, and compel your Department heads to respect it.

I will add in all frankness that I think the chairman of the subcommittee having this deficiency bill in charge ought in fairness to let some other member of the committee take charge of this bill in the conference with the Senate committee. Let some member of the Appropriations Committee who is in sympathy with the views of the majority of this House go before that Senate committee and make an honest effort to impress upon them our views and convictions in regard to this bill. [Applause.]

Mr. BUCHANAN. I would like to ask the gentleman this question: Will the rigid enforcement of the provisions of the eight-hour law in the Government Printing Office cause $1 of additional expense to the Government?

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. No, sir; and the Public Printer says that if you adopt this amendment he will enforce it. I do not wish to occupy further time. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The question being taken, the amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 58: Insert the following:

"SENATE.

"To enable the Secretary of the Senate to pay E. C. Goodwin, clerk to the Select Committee on the Centennial of the Constitution and the Discovery of America, for services as such clerk from the 13th to the 19th day of December, 1888, inclusive, $42."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The Clerk was proceeding to read amendment 59 (in which the Committee on Appropriations had recommended non-concurrence) when

Mr. BURNES said: Mr. Chairman, this amendment is simply a recital of names of persons and amounts of money, being appropriations to pay judgment creditors of the Government the amounts allowed them by the Court of Claims. I ask that this amendment be non-concurred in, without reading. Non-concurrence is asked with the view of correcting any mistakes there may be in the names of the parties.

Mr. ADAMS. What is the gentleman's request?

Mr. BURNES. It is to non-concur in this amendment making these various appropriations to pay judgments of the Court of Claims. We are advised that there are errors in some of the names—misspellings and similar mistakes. We propose non-concurrence merely for the purpose of correcting any errors of that kind; otherwise, we would move concurrence.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There being no objection, amendment 59 was non-concurred in without reading.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 60: In the paragraph appropriating to George E. Hende $8,178.01, strike out "Hende" and insert "Hendee."

The amendment was concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

Amendment 61: In the paragraph making appropriation to George K. Otis, strike out "$263,595.54" and insert "$455.273."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment (in which the Committee on Appropriations recommended non-concurrence) was read, as follows:

Insert the following:

"That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay to Mattie S. Whitney, as administratrix of the estate of Franklin S. Whitney, deceased, the sum of $22,224, in full satisfaction of her claim against the United States for supplies furnished to the Army and Navy of the United States, the same being the amount found to be due her by the Court of Claims."

Mr. ADAMS. I understand the recommendation in this case is to non-concur. Perhaps the Committee on Appropriations may have discovered another clerical error. If not, and the fact is ascertained that this judgment has been rendered, I can give the gentleman from Missouri very high authority for the position that where there is the judgment of a court the House has nothing to do but pay it.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, we do not propose to non-concur in this amendment on account of any clerical error, but for the substantial reason that this is not a judgment of the Court of Claims, but merely a finding under the Bowman act, and has no place in this bill.

Mr. ADAMS. Is it not such a judgment as the Court of Claims has rendered in other cases?

Mr. BURNES. The Court of Claims under the Bowman act never renders any judgment in the proper sense; it merely certifies the facts for the consideration of Congress.

Mr. ADAMS. Has the gentleman any information as to the justice or lack of justice in this claim?

Mr. BURNES. Not at all. The justice of the claim may be perfect for all I know, but it is a claim under the Bowman act, and the policy of Congress has been uniform against appropriations in this way for such claims.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The CHAIRMAN. The next and last amendment is Senate amendment numbered 63.

The Clerk read as follows from the report of the Committee on Appropriations accompanying the bill:

They recommend concurrence in the amendment numbered 63 with an amendment as follows:

Insert as section 5 of the bill the following:

"For reimbursement to the State of Texas, expenses incurred in repelling invasions and suppressing Indian hostilities, found due under the act of June 27, 1882, and certified to Congress by the Secretary of the Treasury in a letter to the Speaker of the House of Representatives March 14, 1888, $927,177.40."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on concurring in the sixty-third amendment of the Senate with the amendment recommended by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. CANNON. I desire to be heard on this proposition. In 1882 an act of Congress was passed providing that certain States therein named, amongst them Texas, should be reimbursed for money expended and indebtedness incurred by such States and Territories in repelling invasion and suppressing Indian hostilities. That act provided as to Texas that for the period between a date named in 1865 and the passage of the act that State should be reimbursed for expenditures in repelling Indian hostilities and invasions from Mexico.

Under that act, by the finding of the Secretary of War and the Treasury Department, the State of Nebraska received $186,000, Kansas $332,000, and the bill carries also $23,000 in round numbers for the State of Nevada. This is an amendment recommended by the Committee on Appropriations to insert nearly a million of dollars for the State of Texas.

Mr. RYAN. An amendment to a Senate amendment?

Mr. CANNON. Yes; an amendment to an amendment inserted by the Senate.

Mr. RYAN. It is an amendment to a Senate amendment.

Mr. CANNON. Yes, it is an amendment to a Senate amendment, and I presume the claim is all right under this act, but I do not know that it is. The fact is, I understand, that a letter was transmitted by the Secretary of the Treasury to the House recommending the insertion of this item. It had not reached the committee-room this morning when the committee met. It may have been referred from the Speaker's table to the committee; at least I could not get access to it to examine it. How much of this million of dollars is for repelling Indian hostilities and how much for repelling invasion from Mexico, I know not. I thought in committee, and think now, it might well have examination from the subcommittee and the full committee in the general deficiency bill rather than in the urgent deficiency bill. The majority of the committee thought differently, and although we had not opportunity to examine the letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, or make any other examination, the committee authorized the insertion of this amendment. Having said this much, Mr. Chairman, which I believe to be due to myself, I will not longer occupy the time of the committee.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Chairman, I have no hesitancy in saying that it was at my instance that the proposition covered by the pending amendment came before the Committee on Appropriations, and that a majority of the committee recommended it to the House. I believe the amendment to be honest in every particular.

In 1882, as stated by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], Congress passed an act in which it was provided that the claims of certain States and Territories, including Texas, for moneys expended in repelling Indian incursions and Mexican invasions should be examined and audited in the War and Treasury Departments, and, after being so examined and audited, be transmitted to Congress for payment. This act is probably familiar to every member of this committee. In pursuance of it the State of Kansas has been allowed and paid the sum of $332,308.13; the State of Nebraska has been allowed and paid the sum of $18,081.23; and in the very bill now under consideration there is an item, which has passed both Houses of Congress at its present session and without question, which authorizes the payment to the State of Nevada of the sum of $23,180.92.

Now, Mr. Chairman, for more than a year four officers of the Army, selected and detailed by the Secretary of War, have been engaged in examining and auditing the claims of Texas. They have and can have no interest, direct or otherwise, in these claims. They are not Texans by birth, and so far as I know have no affiliation with Texas. They have carefully examined more than five thousand separate vouchers, coming from the archives of Texas, and here is their report. It is conclusive, not only because of the direct and emphatic language used, but also because of the facts detailed, which show a thorough knowledge of the work in hand. The report is as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 1, 1887.

SIR: The examiners of State and Territorial war claims detailed by Special Orders No. 222, Adjutant-General's Office, October 6, 1886, have the honor to submit the following report upon the claims of the State of Texas, presented for settlement under the acts of Congress approved June 27, 1882 (22 Stat., 111), and August 4, 1886 (24 Stat., 217).

The State's arrangement of her claims is in the order of chronological series, fifteen in number. In this report the examiners have followed this order of classification, and examined and considered first the claims presented under

SERIES 1.

The claim of this series is for reimbursement of amounts expended in payment of services of two companies of "minute men," organized October 15 and 20, 1865, under authority of an act of the Texas Legislature, February 7, 1861. (See copy marked A.)

The vouchers for this claim are two pay-rolls certified to be correct by the respective company commanders, and certified to by the judges of the county courts of the counties in which the companies were enrolled; that the service stated in the rolls was rendered in compliance with the seventh section of an act for frontier defense passed on the 7th day of February, 1861, and that the same was necessary from the alarm existing at the time.

The only expenditure for which reimbursement is claimed is that for pay, and the rate allowed by the State was to a captain, $2.50; to a lieutenant, $2, and to a private, $1.50 per day, when in actual service.

If we allow the United States Army rates for pay, clothing, forage, and subsistence for a private mounted, for the same period, and 40 cents per day for use of his horse, the Texas pay is less than the United States Army pay and allowances, and has therefore been allowed by the examiners.

The act of Congress authorizing the examination of these claims stipulates that "said accounts for and on behalf of Texas shall be confined to claims arising since the 20th day of October, 1865, and shall include the necessary expenses of defense against Mexican raids or invasions, as well as those for defense against Indian hostilities, * * * and no allowance shall be made for services of such forces except for the time during which they were engaged in active service in the field." (Act of June 27, 1882.)

For evidence that the above conditions are fulfilled in the claim of series 1, attention is respectfully invited to the vouchers and the certificates they contain, heretofore cited, and to the sworn statements of Capts. John Teague and L. L. Tackett (marked 1 and 2).

SERIES 2.

The claim of this series is for reimbursement of expenses for "frontier defense" from August 25, 1870, to June 15, 1871.

The Legislature of Texas authorized the governor to raise and muster into service twenty companies of rangers for frontier defense, to serve for twelve months; provisions, ammunition, and arms to be furnished by the State; clothing, pistol, horse, and all necessary accouterments and camp equipage by the individual; troops to remain subject to the authority of the governor, and to be paid by the State. (See copy of act of Legislature approved June 13, 1870, marked B.)

Under the authority of this act the governor directed the organization of fifteen companies. These companies were gradually consolidated into seven, which were mustered out on May 31 and June 15, 1871. (See affidavit of Mr. Newcomb of December 15, 1886, marked 3.)

ARMS.

The amount claimed for expense of arming this force is $42,922. Section 4 of the Texas act of June 13, 1870, reads as follows:

"And each member of the company to be furnished with the arm to be used by him at the price the same shall cost the State, which sum shall be retained out of the first money due him."

Vouchers to Abstract G, this series, prove that $23,539 was collected from the men for arms, and no evidence is submitted to account properly for the balance of the arms the State purchased.

SUBSISTENCE AND FORAGE.

The amounts allowed as reimbursement for expenditures by Texas on account of rations and forage do not, to the best of our belief, equal the amounts allowed and paid by the United States for similar supplies for an equal number of her soldiers, mounted, serving at the same time in the same or in adjacent localities of Texas.

PAY.

In the allowances for reimbursement for pay is included for each man an allowance of 40 cents per day for use of his horse and the United States Army allowance of that period for clothing; and it is believed that the stipulations as to pay of the act of Congress, June 27, 1882, are complied with.

Section 16 of the act of 1870 (Texas) authorizes the governor to appoint special agents to purchase pack-mules and all necessary supplies.

We have allowed these agents not to exceed the pay of a major in the United States Army.

EVIDENCE AS TO THE NATURE OF SERVICE PERFORMED.

Sworn statements from J. P. Newcomb, secretary of state from 1870 to 1874; from Captains Samson, Kelso, Richarz, Von Biberstein, Harrell, Swisher, Hunter, and Kleide, and from Lieutenant Hill, all officers of this force, are submitted as evidence of the fact that these troops were employed solely for the purposes stated in the act of June, 1882, and cited in series 1 of this report. (See copies marked Nos 3 to 13, inclusive.)

SERIES 3.—1872, 1873, 1874.

The claim of this series is for expenses of "minute men" organized for the protection of the frontier from the raids of Indians and other marauding parties under acts of the Legislature approved November 25, 1871, and April 10, 1874. (See copies marked C and I.) These acts name twenty-five counties, each of which is authorized to raise a company for twelve months' service, to consist of one lieutenant, two sergeants, two corporals, and fifteen privates.

ARMS.

The reason for not allowing a reimbursement for expenditure for arms is the fact that the State does not account for the final disposition of this property.

PAY.

Section 5 of the act of November 25, 1871, provides for the daily payment of $2 to each member of a company "for time actually taken in the field in guarding the frontier; but this time shall in no case exceed ten days in any one calendar month."

It was carefully determined that the daily cost to the United States of maintaining a mounted soldier on the frontier of Texas during the period these minute companies were in service was $2.02. In this calculation the daily expenses for pay, rations, clothing, forage, and bedding, and 40 cents for use of a horse, are included. It is believed that $2 per day to a minute officer and soldier for time of active service in the field, including, as it does, all expense for pay, subsistence, clothing, forage, and use of a horse, is a rate that fulfills beyond all question the conditions imposed in the act of June 27, 1882, and this rate is allowed in settling the claim of this series where the men themselves furnished the supplies, for which credit is allowed in their pay.

EVIDENCE AS TO THE NATURE OF SERVICE PERFORMED.

The sworn statements of J. P. Newcomb, C. M. O'Neal, R. T. Rieger, G. W. Stevens, F. C. Stewart, George Haley, A. Schwethelm, J. M. Elkins, S. B. Gray, W. H. Ledbetter, J. J. Keith, P. Crider, I. Gregory, J. F. Lasater, and J. W. Peters (see copies marked Nos. 13 to 27, inclusive) are submitted to cover service in the field in defense against invasion or Indian hostilities of all the minute companies of this series, except U Company (Montague County), whose claim is disallowed for lack of such evidence.

This series covers a period of service from January, 1872, to April, 1874.

SERIES 4.—1873, 1874.

The claim of this series is for reimbursement of expenditures on account of eight companies organized under a proclamation of the governor of Texas dated November 1, 1873. (See copy marked A.)

The reasons as given by the governor for calling out these troops were that he had information of Indian raids into certain northwestern counties, and believed that, pending the enforcement of an agreement made by the United States for the protection of Texas the northwestern counties would be subject to inroads by small bands of the several tribes which under the agreement were to be forced to remain on the Fort Sill reservation. (See copy marked E.)

The governor authorized seven companies for four months' service. Montague and Young Counties were authorized to organize a company jointly, but they raised separate companies—by what authority is unknown to us. However, May 4, 1874, the Legislature organized a board of State officials to pass upon the expenses of ranger companies, and this board audited the accounts of this series.

June 2, 1873, the Legislature passed an act amending the first section of the act of November 25, 1871, and authorizing the governor, upon satisfactory evidence of Indian raids into any frontier county, to call out a company of "minute men" for twelve months' service. (See copy marked D.)

PAY.

Allowing 40 cents per day to each non-commissioned officer and private for use of the horse he furnished, and the clothing allowance for the period for a United States soldier, the pay allowed officers and men of this series by Texas is less than that allowed and paid by the United States in the same grade and for the same time in the United States Army.

FORAGE AND SUBSISTENCE.

The cost of these supplies at the military posts of Griffin and Richardson was ascertained and taken as the standard for allowances.

EVIDENCE AS TO THE NATURE OF SERVICE RENDERED.

Hon. J. P. Newcomb, secretary of state under Governor Davis (1870 to 1874), makes affidavit that "the forces called into service were not kept longer than necessary," and that "at no time during the administration of Governor Davis, from 1870 to 1874, was the frontier free from Indian depredations, and the frontier forces called into the field were necessary." (See copy marked 3; see also affidavits of G. W. Stevens and G. W. Campbell, marked Nos. 28 and 29.)

SERIES 5.—1874, 1875, 1876.

The claim of this series is for reimbursement of expenditures on account of "minute men;" twenty-five in Webb County, in service six months; fifty in Nueces County, in service three months; and twenty-five in El Paso County, in service nine months. This force was organized under an act of the Legislature approved April 10, 1874. (See copy marked F.)

ARMS.

No claim is made for expenditures for arms, but vouchers show that arms to the value of about $1,935 were sold to the men.

FORAGE AND SUBSISTENCE.

The allowances for these supplies are based upon army prices at Forts McIntosh and Bliss during the period this force was in service. The cost of a United States ration of forage at McIntosh was 49 cents, at Bliss 36 cents. The cost of a ration of subsistence was, at McIntosh 34 cents, and at Bliss 58 cents.

PAY.

The allowances for pay have been determined upon principles explained in previous series, and they conform, it is believed, to the terms prescribed in the act of June 27, 1882.

EVIDENCE AS TO THE NATURE OF SERVICE PERFORMED.

The Legislature authorized the governor, upon satisfactory evidence being furnished him that hostile Indians or Mexicans were depredating upon the lives or property of the citizens of any county or counties upon the frontier of the State, to organize a company for each county so infested.

When the governor called out the forces of this series he possessed the "satisfactory evidence" mentioned in this act, and the presumption is that the force was employed solely to accomplish the purpose for which it was created. There is no evidence in the vouchers of its employment on any duty not military. The affidavit of ex-Governor Coke is to the effect that this force was employed solely for the purpose for which it was organized, i. e., in defense against hostile Indians and Mexicans. (See affidavit marked No. 64.)

In the special report of the adjutant-general of the State, of September, 1884, mention is made of encounters with and pursuit of Indians by this force. (See printed copy marked K.)

The governor, in a message, says: "The raids of bandits and outlaws from Mexico ceased, and persons and property were safe while it (this force) was in the field." (See Report No. 343, House of Representatives, Forty-fourth Congress, first session, page 161.)

SERIES 6.—1874, 1875.

The claim of this series is for reimbursement of expenditures on account of about one year's service of the Frontier Battalion (six companies).

This force was organized under the act of the Legislature approved April 10, 1874, which gave the governor authority to raise a battalion of mounted men, to consist of six companies of seventy-five men each; the commissioned officers to be: One major, at $125 per month; one quartermaster, at $100 per month; one captain, at $100 per month; and two lieutenants, at $75 each per month, to each company. Sergeants received $50 per month, corporals and privates each $40 per month. (See copy marked F.)

In section 23 of this act it is stated "that this force is not designed as a standing force, but shall always be under the command of the governor, to be operated by his direction in such manner, in such detachments, and in such localities as the governor may direct."

Section 25 authorizes the governor "to keep this force in the field as long as in his judgment there may be a necessity for such a force, and soldiers who may volunteer in such service shall do so for such term, not to exceed four years, subject to disbandment and reassemblage by order of the governor."

Section 28 provides that "each officer of this battalion shall have all the powers of a peace officer, and it shall be his duty to execute all criminal process directed to him, and make arrests under capias properly issued of any and all parties charged with offense against the laws of the State."

This section is quoted to exhibit the dual purpose of this force, and the important fact that under the Texas statute it could be lawfully employed for purposes of State police. Of such police service there is, however, no evidence in this series.

ARMS.

The claim for expenditure for arms amounts to $9,832.50.

Section 27 of the act (Texas) provides that the State shall furnish to each officer and private of this battalion an improved breech-loading cavalry gun at cost, the price of which shall be deducted from the first money due the battalion.

No evidence is submitted to show non-compliance with the above terms or for any final disposition of arms, horses, mules, wagons, or pack-saddles.

PAY.

The allowances for pay have been determined upon principles previously explained, and they conform, it is believed, to the provisions of the act of Congress of 1882.

SUBSISTENCE AND FORAGE.

The cost of an army ration of forage and subsistence delivered 1874-'75 at Forts Richardson, Griffin, McIntosh, and McKavett was carefully determined for each post and taken as the standard of comparison for determining allowances for expenditures claimed in this series to have been made for these supplies. It was found that for the four posts named the average cost to the United States for a ration of forage was 46 cents, and of subsistence, 35.04 cents. By referring to Abstracts D and E, this series, it will be seen that the amounts therein allowed are less than the amounts allowed and paid by the United States for similar supplies during the same time furnished an equal force of the United States Army in the same country.

In some of the vouchers an officer of the company appears as a creditor of the State for supplies he has purchased, and for which in most cases the original bill or subvoucher is not furnished. Where the State paid an officer-creditor, its action was accepted as evidence of a proper purchase, and the voucher was rated or allowed.

EVIDENCE AS TO NATURE OF SERVICE PERFORMED.

The sworn statement of Hon. Richard Coke, governor from January, 1874, to December, 1876, is that "during this time there was organized and put in the field on the frontier of Texas a battalion of rangers known as the Frontier Battalion, * * * for the purpose of protecting the frontier of Texas against Indian invasions and Mexican depredations; that said force was continuously in active service upon said frontier during my administration, in defense of said frontier; that said service was necessary, and that said force was not engaged in any other service for the State of Texas during this time."

Similar affidavits from G. W. Stevens, Ira Long, N. O. Reynolds, J. W. Martin, and L. P. Seiker, members of this force, are also submitted. (See copies of affidavits marked Nos. 30 to 35, inclusive.)

A special report of the adjutant-general of Texas, dated September, 1874, contains information relative to the operations of this battalion from May, 1874, to August, 1875. (See printed copy, marked K.)

SERIES 7.—1874, 1875, 1876, 1877.

The claim of this series is for expenditures on account of McNelly's company of Washington County volunteer militia, in service from July 14, 1874, to October 31, 1876.

In Abstract G it is stated that the disbursements are for services under act of July 22, 1876. This is believed to be an error, and it is believed that the authority for raising this company is in the act of April 10, 1874.

ARMS.

The amount claimed as expense for arming this force is $2,105, but for these arms, as well as for horses, mules, wagons, and harness, satisfactory evidence of final disposition is not furnished.

PAY.

The pay claimed is that allowed and paid by the United States, with 50 cents added as compensation to the private soldier for use of his horse. As no claim is made for clothing, and as such daily allowance to a United States soldier exceeded 10 cents, this per diem of 50 cents is allowed.

FORAGE AND SUBSISTENCE.

The claim for forage is settled upon the basis of the cost of a United States ration of forage in the years 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, at Fort McIntosh, Texas.

That for subsistence is similarly determined. Thirty-four and nine-tenths cents, 29.70 cents, and 30 cents, was the cost to the United States of a ration of subsistence during the period this company was in service. The difference between the amount allowed on the vouchers and what could be allowed under the stipulations of the statute is $1,101.75 in favor of the State.

EVIDENCE AS TO NATURE OF SERVICE PERFORMED.

Report No. 843, House of Representatives, Forty-fourth Congress, first session, pages 8 to 17, inclusive, 79, 80, 82, 85, 90 to 96, inclusive, 175 to 178, inclusive, contains accounts of operations of this company against armed Mexican cattle thieves. (See, also, copies of Captain McNelly's reports, marked No. 36 to No. 63, inclusive.)

SERIES 8.—1877, 1878.

This claim is for reimbursement of expenditures on account of a "special company of State troops," in service from January 27, 1877, to December 31, 1878.

This company was organized under an act approved July 22, 1876, and entitled "An act to suppress lawlessness and crime in certain parts of the State." (See copy marked G.)

The preamble is as follows:

"Whereas in several counties in the western part of the State the people are being depredated on in person and property by bands of criminal and lawless men, too strong to be suppressed by the civil authorities unaided, and by bandits and robbers from Mexico: Therefore, for the purpose of maintaining law and order, and giving security to that section against foreign invasion and domestic disturbance, and for that purpose to aid the civil authorities, be it enacted," etc.

The aggregate strength of this company was by the act limited to 53 men, and the period of service stated to be six calendar months, or longer should the governor deem it necessary. General Order No. 14 (State of Texas), dated January 18, 1877, modifies the act by limiting the aggregate strength to 25 men, "in order to utilize to the best advantage the appropriation for the suppression of lawlessness and crime in certain portions of the State." (See copy marked H.)

For the purpose of showing the general nature of the service for which this company was organized, we quote here some of the sections of the act of 1876, defining its duties:

"SEC. 6. That the officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates of said company shall be clothed with the powers of peace officers, and shall aid the civil authorities in the execution of the laws.

"They shall have authority to make arrests, and in such cases they shall be governed by laws regulating and defining the duties of sheriffs when in discharge of similar duties.

"They shall, before entering upon the discharge of their duties, take an oath before some authority legally authorized to administer the same, that each of them will faithfully perform his duties in accordance with law. * * * In order to arrest and bring to justice men who have banded together for the purpose of committing robbery or other felonies and to prevent the execution of the law, the officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates of said company may accept the services of such citizens as shall volunteer to aid them. * * *

"SEC. 7. When said company, or any member or members thereof, shall arrest any person or persons charged with the commission of an offense or offenses, they shall convey said person or persons to the county or counties where he or they stand charged with the commission of an offense, and shall deliver him or them to the proper officer, taking his receipt therefor; and all necessary expenses thus incurred shall be paid by the State."

From the foregoing it is inferred that the means at the disposal of the civil authorities were not sufficient to execute the laws of the State, and the Legislature very properly authorized the call into service of this company of her militia to aid these authorities in arresting and punishing the "criminal and lawless men" who, in defiance of her laws, were depredating on the lives and property of her citizens. But it does not appear to your examiners as a just and impartial conclusion for the United States to bear any part of the expense incurred on account of this proper action on the part of Texas.

In certain vouchers to this claim there is evidence that this company was employed upon police duty.

If it was engaged in defense of the frontier against raid or invasion, no evidence is submitted of that fact; and the claim of this series is disallowed, as not fulfilling, specifically, the conditions imposed in the act of Congress of June 27, 1882.

SERIES 9.—FRONTIER BATTALION, 1875-'76.

The claim of this series is for reimbursement of expenses incurred between June 1, 1875, and September 1, 1876, on account of five companies of the Frontier Battalion.

The act of organization is the act of April 10, 1874, discussed in the review of series 6.

ARMS.

Pistols to the amount of $1,500 were purchased, but no evidence of final disposition is submitted.

SUBSISTENCE AND FORAGE.

In settling the claim for expenditures on account of these supplies, the costs at the following military posts were taken as the standard of comparisons:

The cost of an army ration, with transportation from St. Louis included, was, in the years 1875-'76, at Fort Griffin, 29.2 cents; at Fort Concho, 28.45 cents; at Fort McIntosh, 29.70 cents; and at Fort McKavett, 26.83 cents; the average for the four posts being 28½ cents.

The amount allowed upon the claim for subsistence, on proper vouchers, is less than the amount allowed and paid in 1875-'76 by the United States for similar supplies (at prices quoted) for an equal number of her soldiers then serving at the posts above named.

The allowance for forage was similarly calculated, but the quantities fed by Texas were much less than the army allowances.

PAY.

The allowances are calculated in the manner described in previous series, and conform to the stipulations of the act of 1882.

EVIDENCE AS TO NATURE OF SERVICE PERFORMED.

The sworn statements of ex-Governor Richard Coke, N. O. Reynolds, Ira Long, G. W. Stevens, and J. W. Martin are submitted in evidence of the fact that this force was employed in active service in the field in defense against Mexican raids or invasions or Indian hostilities and for no other purpose. (See copies marked Nos. 30 to 34, inclusive.)

The commanding general, military Department of Texas, in his annual report for the year 1876, says:

"In regard to expeditions after hostile Indians, all the Indians who come into or temporarily occupy this State are, and have been for years, hostile.

"They never come around the settlements except to rob and murder, and the peculiarly wild, rugged, and inhospitable character of the immense and almost unknown portion of Texas extending from the one hundredth meridian in a line due west to El Paso del Norte, a distance of 400 miles, and from the Red River south to the Rio Bravo, a distance along that meridian of 460 miles, makes it next to impossible, with the limited force at my command to do more than guard a few important settlements along the Rio Grande, protect, and occasionally pursue a raiding band, etc. * * * Some of the settlements along the Rio Grande have been almost abandoned by the stock rancheros because of the want of safety to life or property."

The above is quoted as evidence of the fact that in the opinion of this military commander the United States troops in Texas were insufficient to give the necessary protection to her people.

For results of the operations of this force in 1875-'76 see special report of the adjutant-general of Texas, of September, 1884, exhibits 7 and 8. (Printed copy marked K.)

SERIES 10.—FRONTIER BATTALION, 1876-'77.

The claim of this series is for expenditures on account of the service from September 1, 1876, to September 1, 1877, of six companies of the Frontier Battalion, organized under the Texas act of April 10, 1874.

ARMS.

Seven thousand one hundred and ninety-three dollars was expended for arms, but no evidence is submitted to account properly for their final disposition.

SUBSISTENCE AND FORAGE.

The cost of an army ration purchased in St. Louis and delivered at the military posts in Texas at or in the vicinity of which this force was employed, was found to be for 1876-'77, at Fort Clark 25.67 cents, at Fort McKavett 25.89 cents, and at Fort Griffin 25.92 cents. The average cost was taken as 25.82 cents.

The amount expended by Texas, for which proper vouchers were presented, exceeds, at the rate of 25.82 cents per ration, the amount to which the State is entitled under the terms of the act of 1882, and the excess is deducted from what was allowed in scaling the vouchers, in order that the allowances should conform to the statute.

Forage was settled upon a like basis, but this command did not consume the final Government allowance.

PAY.

The allowances for pay were adjusted upon principles explained in previous series.

EVIDENCE AS TO THE NATURE OF THE SERVICE PERFORMED.

Some of the vouchers to Abstract I of this series are conclusive evidence that detachments of the forces of this period were employed upon "peace" duty, or that of State police, namely: Voucher No. 12 is for the expense of photographing a murderer. Attached to voucher No. 14 there is a printed notice, dated March 27, 1877, that the Frontier Battalion will aid in hunting stolen stock. Vouchers Nos. 20, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, and 27 are for expenses incident to State police duty. Voucher No. 29 is for expenses consequent upon the removal of a county seat. Vouchers Nos. 38, 42, 46, 69, 71, 74, 79, 81, 82, 84, 86, 88, 89, 90, 97, and 103 are for expenses incident to the pursuit, capture, or conveying to jail of criminals who had broken the laws of Texas.

Voucher No. 57 is for fees of a justice of peace, and No. 44 for detective service.

The problem is to determine the time of active service in the field for defense against Mexican raids or Indian hostilities solely.

Ex-Governor Coke's affidavit, as bearing upon this series, is to the effect that for three months from September 1, 1876, to December 1, 1876, at which latter date he went out of office, "said force was continuously in active service upon said frontier * * * in the defense of said frontier; that said service was necessary, and that said force was not engaged in any other service for the State of Texas during this time." (See affidavit marked No. 30.)

The affidavit of L. P. Seiker, as bearing upon this series, is to the effect that the duty of this battalion up to August 31, 1877, "was solely and entirely to protect the border counties of Texas against hostile invasions and raids by Indians and Mexicans." (See affidavit No. 35.)

The affidavits of N. O. Reynolds and J. W. Martin cover the entire service of Companies D and E for this series as solely for frontier defense. (See affidavits Nos. 33 and 34.)

The special report of the adjutant-general of Texas of September, 1884 (marked K), page 44, Exhibit 9, and Executive Document No. 13, House of Representatives, Forty-fifth Congress, first session, pages 13, 161, and 177, contain some information concerning the operations of this battalion.

Vouchers Nos. 38, 42, and 46, Abstract I, series 10, indicate that Company A was employed subsequently to April 15, 1877, in escorting prisoners. Voucher No. 103, Abstract I, series 10, is conclusive evidence that Company E was employed subsequently to December 28, 1876, in assisting the sheriff and escorting prisoners.

Vouchers Nos. 69, 71, 74, 79, 81, 82, 84, 86, 88, 89, 90, and 97, Abstract I series 10, are conclusive evidence that Company C was employed subsequently to December 15, 1876, in assisting the sheriff in capturing and escorting civilian prisoners.

In view of the above facts your examiners are of the opinion that the entire claims for these three companies (A, C, and E) from December 1, 1876, should be disallowed for the reason that, upon all the evidence, they believe that the conditions as to service prescribed by the act of June 27, 1882, are not fulfilled; i. e., that "no allowance shall be made for services of such forces except for the time during which they were engaged in active service in the field * * * in defense against Mexican raids or invasions, as well as those for defense against Indian hostilities."

Your examiners being unable to find any evidence to the contrary, adopt the presumption supported by the evidence previously referred to, that the remainder of this force (Companies B, D, and E) was employed solely for the duty required in the act of 1882.

SERIES 11.—1877-'78.

The claim of this series is for reimbursement of expenditures on account of six companies of the Frontier Battalion, in service from September 1, 1877, to August 31, 1878, under the Texas act of 1874.

Reimbursement is allowed for expenses incurred by a detachment of Company C, Frontier Battalion, consisting of one lieutenant and about twenty men, engaged from November 10 to December 18, 1877, in defense against an invasion from Mexico, which resulted in the killing of Judge Howard and others at San Elizario on the 17th of December, 1877. (See, for evidence of the service of this detachment, Executive Document No. 93, Forty-fifth Congress, second session, House of Representatives.)

The allowances for forage and subsistence are based upon their cost to the United States for her Army at Fort Bliss in the year 1877, as follows: 64.8 cents for a ration of forage and 42½ cents for a ration of subsistence.

The pay allowed is the United States Army pay of that period.

While the statement that "State police service" was incidental and subordinate to that of protecting the frontier is not questioned (see affidavit of L. P. Seiker, captain and quartermaster, Frontier Battalion, marked No. 35), it is held by your examiners that the act of 1882 requires that the expenses to be reimbursed must be solely for "the necessary expenses of defense against Mexican raids or invasions, as well as those for defense against Indian hostilities."

For lack of evidence to enable the separation of the expenses incident to "State police service" from those incurred in defense against Mexican raids and Indian hostilities, the balance of the claim of this series is disallowed.

SERIES 12.—1878-'80.

The claim of this series is for reimbursement of expenses on account of six companies of the Frontier Battalion, service from September 1, 1878, to February 29, 1880 (eighteen months).

Allowance is made in this series for expense of two scouts in pursuit of depredating Indians, namely, one by Captain Peak and fourteen men of Company B, Frontier Battalion, of twenty-eight days' duration, and one by Sergeant Hageman and six men, of seven days' duration.

Allowances for forage and subsistence are based upon their cost for the United States Army in January and February, 1880, at Fort Concho, namely, corn, $1.09 per bushel, and a ration 20.52 cents.

The allowance for pay is that of the United States Army in the year 1880.

The evidence of the nature of service performed by these detachments is contained in the following reports: Adjutant-general's report (Texas), December 31, 1880, page 33, and special report, 1884, page 49. While it appears from these reports that there was considerable scouting against Indians by detachments from the Frontier Battalion, the number of men engaged and the time they were in active service in the field are not in all cases definitely stated. For this reason consideration can be given to and allowances made for the two scouts only above referred to, and the remainder of the claim is disallowed.

SERIES 13.—1880-'81.

The claim of this series is for reimbursement of expenses of five companies of the Frontier Battalion, the service from March 1, 1880, to February 28, 1881 (one year).

The allowances of this series are on account of expenses of small detachments scouting against Indians: One officer and detachments; Companies A and C, twenty-five days scouting with General Grierson, United States Army, in August and September, 1880, against Victorio; and twenty days in October, same year, assisting General Terrasses against Victorio; two scouts, of twenty-two days in January and February, 1881, by Baylor and Nevill. (See report of adjutant-general (Texas) dated December 31, 1880, pages 25 and 33, and special report of same officer, dated September, 1884, page 50.)

The allowances for forage and rations are based upon the cost to the United States of these supplies at Forts Bliss and Davis, namely: Forage. 37.24 cents at Bliss per ration, and corn 3½ cents at Davis; subsistence at Bliss 42.04 cents, and at Davis 34.30 cents, per ration.

SERIES 14 AND 15.—1881, 1882.

The claims of these series for reimbursement of expenses of six companies of the Frontier Battalion, their service from March 1, 1881, to June 27, 1882 (about sixteen months), under the Texas act of April 10, 1874, are disallowed, for the reason that satisfactory evidence of service in defense against Mexican raids or Indian hostilities is not furnished to enable the separation of this kind of service from that of State police.

REMARKS UPON THE SERIES IN GENERAL.

In their investigation of these claims of Texas your examiners have found that they are for moneys paid out by the State and not for any assumed indebtedness.

They have found no evidence of reckless or extravagant expenditure of public money; on the contrary, they have noticed the observance by the officers of the State of a careful economy in organizing and maintaining troops. The full United States allowance of forage was rarely fed, and all the constituents of a Government ration were not always purchased.

Texas was at the disadvantage of having to purchase supplies for her troops in various localities of the State, instead of at the commercial centers of the Union, and to pay for them with depreciated warrants.

The State submits no claim incident to the building of military posts, and her expenditures for camp and garrison equipage are surprisingly small.

So far as the evidence submitted shows, the forces for and on account of which the expenditures were made were called into service by the proper authorities of the State, the Legislatures and governors, and the presumption is that these authorities did not unnecessarily occasion such expenditures, but that the time and circumstances made them a necessity.

No evidence is found upon which to base an assumption that the authorities calling out the troops acted with the conviction that the expenses incident to their calls would be reimbursed eventually by the General Government.

The geographical position of Texas, the desperate character of the population on both sides of the Rio Grande, the presence of hostile Indians within and along her borders, made life and property insecure, and the active service of a military force necessary for their defense.

In conclusion, it is respectfully submitted that our examination of these claims has been a careful one; that upon points made by the claimant for which the proof was not clear we have leaned to doubt rather than to assurance; and that to the best of our belief our statement of these is a conscientious, just, and impartial one, under the provisions of the acts of Congress approved June 27, 1882, and August 4, 1886.

The oath provided for in section 2 of the act of August 4, 1886, was duly taken and subscribed by the examiners.

The examiners find that the State of Texas is entitled under the provisions of the act of Congress of June 27, 1882, to the amount of $927,242.30 of her claims for $1,867,259.13.

JAMES BIDDLE,
Lieutenant-Colonel Fifth Cavalry, United States Army, Senior Examiner.
HENRY J. FARNSWORTH,
Major and Inspector-General, Examiner.
EDWARD HUNTER,
Captain First Cavalry, Examiner.
FRANK WEST,
Captain Sixth Cavalry, Secretary to the Examiners.

The SECRETARY OF WAR.

I ask of every member a careful and a critical examination of this report. Its import is too plain to be misunderstood. The language employed is without ambiguity, and there is, in my opinion, no room, not the slightest, for any misunderstanding as to the meaning intended to be conveyed.

It concludes with the statement that "the examiners find that the State of Texas is entitled under the provisions of the act of Congress of June 27, 1882, to the amount of $927,242.30 of her claim for $1,867,259.13. This is the result of many months of careful and thorough examination by this board of Army officers.

The report, with accompanying vouchers, was then transmitted to the Secretary of War, and by him, after examination, transmitted to the Treasury Department. The Third Auditor of the Treasury then takes charge of the matter, and the claim is again, item by item, carefully examined and audited, every voucher undergoing the strictest scrutiny. But this is not all. The examination does not stop here.

The report of the Army board, with the vouchers presented by the State of Texas in support of her claims, now passes to the office of the Second Comptroller and is once again critically examined and audited. Nothing is taken for granted. The officials engaged in this work—the board of Army officers, the Third Auditor's Office, and the Second Comptroller's Office—all act independently of one another, and it can not be suspected that a fraudulent or unjust claim is being manufactured against the Government.

The result of all this examination, for so long a time and by so many different officials, was that when the claim reached the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury it amounted to $927,177.40, being only $64.90 less than the allowance of the board of Army officers.

Mr. CANNON. My statement was that the document had not yet been printed, nor has it as yet, so far as I am informed, reached the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. SAYERS. If the gentleman from Illinois will only permit me to proceed I will answer his proposition before concluding. Mr. Chairman, under the act of 1882, to which I have referred, and upon which the claim under consideration depends for its validity and authority to be here, the claims of Kansas were allowed and paid without objection, and properly so. Kansas ought to have been paid, and if I had been a member of this House I should have most cheerfully voted for her payment.

Nebraska's claim was allowed and her appropriation made in the Forty-ninth Congress, and no one was heard to question its propriety; and now, in the bill before us, there is an appropriation, which has passed both Houses without objection, to pay the claim of Nevada.

Mr. RYAN was recognized, and yielded his time to Mr. SAYERS.

Mr. SAYERS. I thank my friend from Kansas for his kindness. Mr. Chairman, I say here, without intending to violate any duty to the Committee on Appropriations, that the claim of Nevada was accepted by the committee, without inquiry, upon the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury. But the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] says that because the report of the Secretary of the Treasury did not reach this House until to-day, therefore this claim should not be allowed. The truth is—the truth is, I repeat, that the report of the Secretary was before the Committee on Appropriations and was read to the committee, and I then and there said to those present that if there was in the mind of a single member an idea or feeling that this was not a just claim, I wanted them to repudiate it, and I would not insist upon its being put upon this appropriation bill.

But, Mr. Chairman, though it is growing late, I desire to read for the information of this committee a certain order and report made by the commanding general of the fifth military district. They will furnish information which demonstrates most conclusively the condition of affairs in Texas at those dates. This order and report are as follows:

HEADQUARTERS FIFTH MILITARY DISTRICT, STATE OF TEXAS,
Austin, Tex., April 15, 1869.

GENERAL ORDERS No. 75.]

In order to insure effective co-operation between the troops and the citizens, and provide better protection for the frontier counties against Indian incursions, the commanding officers of the following posts, namely, Fort Brown, Ringgold Barracks, Fort McIntosh, Fort Duncan, Fort Clark, Fort McKavett, Fort Concho, Fort Davis, Camp Stockton, Fort Quitman, Fort Bliss, Fort Griffin, Fort Richardson, Greenville, Lampasas, and San Antonio, will cause to be made an enrollment of the citizens of the counties embraced within the limits of their respective posts, under the provisions of circular letter dated February 22, 1868, and paragraph I, General Orders No. 4, current series, from this headquarters.

The enrollment of each county will include such number of citizens as the post commander may deem expedient. They will be organized in detachments of about twenty-five men, each detachment having a captain selected by the post commander.

Upon the receipt of reliable intelligence that Indians are in their vicinity, any number of enrolled men may turn out, promptly notifying the post commander of their action. Should he disapprove of their remaining out, they will at once return to their homes; if he approve of their action, a commissioned officer of the Army will at once be sent to assume command of the party. Until his arrival, or instructions from the post commander, the captains of detachments will be held responsible for the conduct of their men.

While out on this service the enrolled men will, upon the approval of the commanding officer of the post, be supplied with forage, subsistence, and ammunition, and, in case of necessity, arms may be loaned temporarily when they can be spared.

The detachments will furnish their own horses, and will not receive pay for services under this order.

Detachment rolls will be kept at the respective posts, and duplicates will be sent to this headquarters.

By order of Bvt. Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds.

CHAS. E. MORSE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Official:
C. S. MORSE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS FIFTH MILITARY DISTRICT, STATE OF TEXAS,
Austin, Tex., March 7, 1870.

GENERAL: I have the honor to invite the attention of the general-in-chief to General Orders Nos. 75 and 136, series of 1869, copies inclosed, and to remark in this connection that it seems impossible, without the hearty co-operation of the citizens, to operate effectually against small bands of Indians that of late have been committing depredations more frequently than usual within the frontier lines of Texas. These marauding bands are called Indians, but in fact consist sometimes exclusively of Indians, sometimes of whites and Indians, and sometimes of Mexicans and Indians, all equally outlaws and savages. From its peculiar geographical position Texas becomes the receptacle of a larger proportion of desperadoes than any other portion of our country, and the sparseness of the population facilitates their usual vocations of stealing and killing.

As stated in my report of September 30, 1869 (extract inclosed), the organizations authorized in the above-named orders had not met with a very prompt response from the citizens. Lately they are turning out more freely. The orders were of course somewhat experimental. The frequency of Indian raids during the last few months has afforded me the opportunity of many interviews with the citizens from various portions of the frontier. Their testimony is almost universal that the raiding bands are much better armed than the citizens generally. The citizens positively assert that the Indians are from the reservations, but on this point it is difficult to procure satisfactory evidence. The fact of their being well armed is, however, fully established.

I have thus far loaned the organization about one hundred arms, and feel it my duty to continue to loan where the organizations give evidence of being in earnest. No pay has been promised to the members of these organizations, but I am satisfied that most of them can not afford to spare the time necessary for effective Indian fighting without any compensation. The inhabitants of the exposed counties are generally the poorest people.

From all the information which I have thus far been able to procure I believe that an effective organization in each frontier county could be formed of from twenty-five to fifty men, which would be sufficient to co-operate with the troops, by paying the men the same amount that is now paid the soldiers of the Army, one or two of each organization receiving the pay of sergeants; the pay to run only for the time actually out, to be properly attested by a commissioned officer of the Army. We have on hand large amounts of clothing left over from the rebellion, and much of it of inferior quality. It could not be put to better use than to issue a suit to volunteers for every ninety days' service, which would be quite an incentive to frontiersmen to enroll themselves.

I have the honor to request authority, if the above views are approved, to offer the members of frontier organizations pay, as above specified. Also that the loan of arms already made be approved and its continuance sanctioned.

The citizens of Texas declare that their animals, identified by the brands, are found in the possession of Indians on the reservation north of Red River. Whether these animals are stolen by the reserve Indians or by wild Indians and traded to the former is a question.

I am the more urgent in my request to pay civilian organizations because I believe it impossible to act effectively against small bands of Indians with regular troops alone.

So far as I can learn the troops on the Texas frontier have killed more Indians the last year than in any previous year, but this has been accomplished by long marches into the Indian country (in one instance, when forty Indians were killed, by a march of 600 miles from Fort McKavett into the Indian country on the headwaters of the Brazos River, in October last), and has not had the effect of checking the raids of small bands within the line of posts.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Brevet Major-General, United States Army.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL U. S. A., Washington, D. C.

These two papers, together with the extract taken from the report of the commanding general of the Department of Texas for the year 1876, and which appears in the report of the board of Army officers, I am quite sure will satisfy every candid mind that there was a necessity, an urgent necessity, demanding the protection of the Texas frontier.

Mr. LANHAM. Let me ask my colleague if it would not be well enough to have the concluding portions of that read now?

Mr. SAYERS. I will have them printed.

Mr. RANDALL. It would be better to have all of the papers printed.

Mr. SAYERS. I will do so.

Mr. RANDALL. I want to say that the remark of the gentleman was perhaps a little too sweeping in this, that it might be implied that the committee had all voted in favor of putting this amendment in this bill. I voted in committee against attaching the amendment to the bill, not but that I thought the claim a just one, but because it ran so far back, beginning soon after the 20th of October, 1865, and continuing up to 1882, when the law was passed, and there was not time for me to examine and go over these claims. They were in manuscript and not printed.

I do not want to be understood as saying that the claim is dishonest in any particular. The only reason was because I had not time to examine it.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. LANHAM was recognized and yielded his time to Mr. SAYERS.

Mr. SAYERS. What the gentleman from Pennsylvania says is true; but I submit to the gentleman from Pennsylvania and I also submit to the gentleman from Illinois this point: Would either one of them, if this claim should be defeated, have those piles of vouchers and certificates, upon which this claim is based, brought into the committee-room and there examined one by one to see if they tallied with the report of the Army officers, with the report of the Third Auditor of the Treasury, and with the report of the Second Comptroller?

Mr. RANDALL. The gentleman will remember that this report only came in yesterday.

Mr. SAYERS. That is what I have told the House, and I intend to be entirely frank with the House as regards this matter.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania says that this claim runs back to 1865. Where is the warrant of authority for its introduction here? The authority is to be found in the act of June 27, 1882, passed by both Houses of Congress, and which received the approval of the President. In that act express provision will be found authorizing inquiry into expenditures made by Texas for frontier protection so far back as the year 1865. When were the expenditures made by Kansas, Nebraska, and Nevada?

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, this claim, aggregating nearly a million of dollars, it seems to me would be better in some other bill than the urgent deficiency bill; and I suggest this point to the gentleman from Texas. I think it ought to be in a separate bill.

Mr. SAYERS. I think not. If it is just, it can be paid here just as well as anywhere else.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. If that were done the papers that the gentleman claims fully substantiate the amount of the claim could be printed and the members of the House could be as well informed upon the subject as he himself, and there might be no objection to its passage. But it is asking a great deal of a member to vote a million of dollars away upon the say so of anybody, I care not how honorable he may be. I understand that it is not a proper claim to go into this bill at all. Why not, therefore, if the documents support it, put it into an original bill, or let it go into the general deficiency?

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Chairman, these reports will appear in to-morrow's RECORD.

Now let me say a word in conclusion, because I do not wish to longer detain the House. From 1865 down to 1882, from the Rio Grande to the Red River, the Indians were invading our whole frontier, murdering our men, carrying away our women and children into captivity, and destroying our property. If it was right that Kansas should be paid without objection, if it was right that Nevada and Nebraska should also be paid without objection, then I submit to this committee and to the Representatives of the sovereign States of this Union, that it is only right, fair, and just that Texas, too, should be paid, as her claim is here presented.

She does not demand one cent but what she feels she is entitled to. Mexican bandits and Indian marauders, as stated in the report of the commanding general in the Department of Texas, were continually invading our frontier settlements. Texas was compelled, poor as she was, from 1865 to 1875 to rely, in a great measure, upon herself for protection against these fiends in human flesh, and with the money placed in her treasury by her own people to protect the frontier from the Rio Grande to Red River.

Take but a glance at the map of that State and see for yourselves what a long line it was to defend, and that, too, by a people illy able during those evil years to bear so heavy an expense.

Those only who have lived near tribes of hostile Indians, with firearms of the most approved manufacture in their hands, can properly appreciate the anxiety, the hardship, and the danger of the frontier life. Texas protected herself as well as she then could, and she now confidently relies upon that sense of justice which, I am sure, animates the Representatives of her sister States upon this floor to repay her in a measure for what she was necessarily compelled to expend during those years for the protection of those whose courage and power of endurance have made our western counties to bloom and to blossom as a rose.

Mr. CANNON rose.

Mr. BURNES. I should like very much that the committee should rise, and that we finish this debate on a future day.

Mr. CANNON. I only want to say a single word, to go with the remarks of the gentleman from Texas. This is an urgent deficiency bill. The general deficiency bill will pass later, about the close of the fiscal year. In theory this, the small deficiency bill, contains items necessary to carry on the Government now.

I do not combat the justice of the gentleman's claim. I do not know whether it is just or not. I merely wish to say its place, if just, is on the general deficiency bill.

I state further that so far as I know and am informed when the committee took action upon this amendment the report from the Secretary of the Treasury was not and never had been before it. On the contrary it was on the Speaker's table and it had not been referred. I say further as I understand not only the rules of the House but the law, that at the time the committee took action on this amendment it had no jurisdiction, not the slightest, to act upon it; because the estimate which the law says shall reach the committee before it has jurisdiction was upon the Speaker's table.

Now, then, let this amendment come in order. Let it be printed. Let it go to the Committee on Appropriations; let it be referred, carrying $1,000,000, as it does, to a subcommittee; let the full committee consider it and let it be reported if due, as I suspect it is, although I do not know it is, on the general deficiency bill, because it has no place and no business on the urgent deficiency bill.

Mr. ADAMS. Will my colleague yield to me for a question?

Mr. CANNON. Yes, sir.

Mr. ADAMS. I ask whether at the time the committee took action on this claim, an amendment to Senate amendment 63, the committee had not before decided in connection with amendment 62 that the judgment or the finding of the Court of Claims gives the Committee on Appropriations no reason for passing a claim against the Government.

Mr. CANNON. That was under the Bowman act, and the Committee on Appropriations has never taken jurisdiction of claims under the Bowman act.

Mr. ADAMS. Does the report of the board of Army officers give the Committee on Appropriations any more reason for approving a claim than a finding of the Court of Claims?

Mr. CANNON. I think not.

Mr. BURNES. I call the attention of the committee to the fact that this claim of Texas is audited under the law by the same officers and transmitted in the same way as all the claims of the other States have been audited and transmitted. Therefore it would be in my judgment a wrong on the State of Texas to place her on a different footing from other States. It would be unjust discrimination against a sovereign State of the Union—a deprivation of a right repeatedly granted to other sovereign States on precisely similar conditions.

Mr. LANHAM. Let me read——

Mr. BURNES. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the paper to which the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] alludes; and to have printed the estimate sent here by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. CANNON. But that estimate which the gentleman proposes to have printed was not before the committee.

Mr. BURNES. It was not in one sense perhaps; but it was physically before the committee.

Mr. RANDALL. It was not there by reference.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the letter from the Secretary of the Treasury and the paper held by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM]. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

[These papers will be found among those printed in connection with the remarks of Mr. SAYERS.]

Mr. COX. I desire to move to reconsider the vote by which action was taken on amendment 31, on page 23, relating to reports of the Tenth Census. I do so for the purpose of asking unanimous consent to print statements which have come to me as chairman of the Census Committee since this was acted upon.

There was no objection.

The statements are as follows:

Letter from the Secretary of the Interior, recommending an appropriation to complete the publication of the reports of the Tenth Census.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, December 5, 1887.

SIR: The act of Congress approved August 7, 1882, providing for the publication of the reports of the Tenth Census, appropriated for such purpose the sum of $678,624.61, to be expended by the Public Printer, under the direction of the Superintendent of the Census.

Under this appropriation 18 of the 22 volumes, constituting the final report, have been issued.

Owing to the exhaustion of this appropriation, the work on the unpublished reports was suspended some months since.

In order to complete the unfinished work, which embraces volumes Nos. 17, 19, 21, and 22 of the final report, 3,000 copies of an extra edition of the report on wages paid in manufacturing industries, and 25,000 copies, revised edition, part 2, of the Compendium of the Tenth Census, besides binding work on reports already printed, the Public Printer estimates that the sum of $77,495.52 will be required. The estimate in detail of the Public Printer follows:

Vol. 17, part 2—Water-Power	$11,143.44
Vol. 19, part 2—Social Statistics of Cities	12,802.00
Vol 21—Defective, Dependent, and Delinquent Classes	10,642.00
Vol. 22—Mechanical Reports and Ice	11,470.32
Total four volumes	46,057.76
3,000 copies vol. 20—Statistics of Wages	7,108.13
25,000 copies part 2 of the Compendium	15,894.50
To finish binding work already printed	8,435.13
Total	77,495.52

In this connection it may be proper to add that of the unpublished matter more than 99 per cent. is stereotyped. The copy for the remainder is in the hands of the Public Printer.

Without provision being made for the completion of this work, not only must these valuable reports, costing thousands and thousands of dollars, be lost to the public, but the series of volumes constituting the final report becomes irregular and incomplete.

The foregoing statement is respectfully submitted for the consideration and action of Congress. A communication of similar tenor and even date has been transmitted to the honorable the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,

L. Q. C. LAMAR, Secretary.

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE PRO TEMPORE.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, March 8, 1888.

SIR: Agreeably to your verbal request of the 5th instant, I have the honor to submit the following statement relative to the unpublished reports of the Tenth Census.

Four quarto volumes of the final report are yet to issue, namely:

Volume No. 17, part 2, Water-Power of the United States, Prof. W. P. Trowbridge, of the School of Mines, Columbia College, New York, chief special agent. This volume embraces five separate monographs, as follows:

Water-Power of the Northwest, by James L. Greenleaf, C. E.;
Mississippi River and some of its tributaries, by James L. Greenleaf, C. E.;
Mississippi River on the west, below Dubuque, by Dwight Porter, Ph. B.;
Ohio River and Ohio State Canals, by Dwight Porter, Ph. B.; and Water Supply of Certain Cities and Towns, by Walter G. Elliot, C. E., 740 pages, stereotyped.

This report treats of the hydrology of certain portions of the country in a manner not shown in any other publication of the Government.

The investigations on which the results, as shown, were based were conducted by experts especially selected for the work assigned them, and their efforts have met with hearty indorsements from all sections of the United States.

Volume 19, part 2, of the report on Social Statistics of Cities, Col. George E. Waring, jr., of Newport, R. I., chief special agent, is devoted entirely to the cities of the Southern and Western States, which are treated in the same manner as are the cities of the New England and Middle States, in volume 18, part 1, of the same report. The volume contains 835 pages and is stereotyped.

Volume 21, The Deaf, Dumb, Blind, Insane, Idiotic, Homeless Children, Paupers, and Prisoners of the United States on June 1, 1880; stereotyped. This report contains the most comprehensive presentation of statistics relating to the defective, dependent, and delinquent classes that has been gathered in this or any other country; 577 pages of solid tabular matter, compiled under the direction of Mr. Fred. H. Wines, of Springfield, Ill., special agent, and is one of the most valuable of the entire series; its publication has been eagerly looked for, especially by the medical fraternity, for a long time past.

Judging from the great demand for this work, it would not be unreasonable to state that in the absence of reliable data of a like character its value appears to have increased rather than diminished by the delay in publication.

Volume 22, the last report of the series, is devoted to machinery used in manufactures, and ice statistics, with the exception of thirty-five galleys of a paper on marine engines and steam vessels. This volume is stereotyped, and embraces monographs on—

Engines and Boilers, Charles H. Fitch.
Marine Engines and Steam Vessels, Charles H. Fitch.
Steam and Water Power used in Manufacture of Iron and Steel, Herman Hollerith.
Shop Tools, F. R. Hutton.
Pumps and Pumping Engines, F. R. Hutton.
Wool and Silk Machinery, K. Neftel.
Ice Statistics, Henry Hall.

A small edition of the monograph on Shop Tools has already been issued in paper covers, pursuant to a provision of an act of Congress approved July 7, 1884.

With the exception of the report devoted to the unfortunate classes, it is altogether improbable that the next census will undertake to investigate the subjects contained in these unpublished volumes. The information contained therein has been gathered and compiled at great labor and expense by agents of the office, trained and experienced in the various departments to which they were assigned.

The reports are in great demand, as the hundreds of requests filed in this Department attest.

Apart from the four volumes named, Congress, by act approved July 7, 1884, directed the publication of 25,000 copies of revised edition of the Compendium, which is in two parts. Part first has already been issued but not distributed, and 3,000 copies in paper covers of a report on Statistics of Wages, by Joseph D. Weeks.

The urgent deficiency bill (H. R. 6437) as passed by the Senate yesterday, contains an amendment as follows: "Reports of the Tenth Census: To complete the publication of the reports of the Tenth Census, $77,495.52." This amount the Public Printer estimates is sufficient to complete the unpublished volumes herein referred to, including part second of the Compendium and the small edition of wages report in addition to defraying the cost of binding 11,916vo lumes already printed, but, owing to the exhaustion of the appropriation, not bound.

The completion of the entire work as provided for in the Senate amendment to the bill referred to, is earnestly desired by the Department.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,

WM. F. VILAS, Secretary.

Hon. SAMUEL S. COX,
Speaker pro tempore, House of Representatives.

Mr. BURNES. I move that the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BLOUNT reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, and for other purposes, with amendments by the Senate, had come to no resolution thereon.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. RANDALL, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported back Executive Document 206, a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Secretary of the Navy of appropriation for reconstructing building No. 7 at the navy-yard, Brooklyn, N. Y.; and the committee was discharged from the further consideration of the same, and it was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. RANDALL also, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported back Executive Document 182, a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, with accompanying papers, a letter from the Supervising Architect in regard to the bill (H. R. 7227) for paving and grading around the site of the post-office at Lincoln, Nebr.; and the committee was discharged from the further consideration of the same, and it was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

AMENDMENTS OF REVISED STATUTES.

Mr. WEAVER, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 8558) to amend certain sections of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to patents; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Patents, and ordered to be printed.

BOUNTIES TO MISSOURI TROOPS.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 8559) authorizing and directing the proper accounting officers of the Treasury to pay to persons whose services in the Department of the Missouri were recognized by the commission authorized by the joint resolution of July 12, 1862, a bounty of $100; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri, also introduced a bill (H. R. 8560) to establish a Department of Labor; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Labor, and ordered to be printed.

BUSINESS FROM THE COMMITTEE ON PRIVATE LAND CLAIMS.

Mr. McCREARY. Mr. Speaker, by a resolution adopted on the 24th of February, this day was set apart for business reported from the Committee on Private Land Claims. It has been used by the Committee on Appropriations, and I now ask unanimous consent that, in lieu of this day, Saturday, the 31st day of March, be assigned to the Committee on Private Land Claims, under the conditions expressed in the resolution assigning this day. We have a large number of important bills, delegations are here from the West pressing them, and we think it desirable that an early day shall be fixed for their consideration.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The House then, on motion of Mr. MILLS (at 5 o'clock and 21 minutes p. m.), adjourned.

PRIVATE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED AND REFERRED.

Under the rule private bills and joint resolutions of the following titles were introduced and referred as indicated below:

By Mr. BAYNE: A bill (H. R. 8535) for the relief of Thomas A. McLaughlin—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8536) for the relief of Benjamin M. Clark—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BELDEN: A bill (H. R. 8537) granting an increase of pension to Ira C. McClenthen—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8538) granting a pension to William M. Bradford—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. J. E. CAMPBELL: A bill (H. R. 8539) for the relief of Rebecca B. Scott—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. CLARK: A bill (H. R. 8540) for the relief of Bernard Drinks—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DUNN: A bill (H. R. 8541) for the relief of Thomas I. Frith—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FUNSTON: A bill (H. R. 8542) to pay the claims of Conrad Henning, August Seigenfuhr, and John Head—to the Select Committee on Indian Depredation Claims.

By Mr. T. J. HENDERSON: A bill (H. R. 8543) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Charles Richter—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LAGAN: A bill (H. R. 8544) for the relief of the heirs of Martin Kenofsky—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. LYMAN: A bill (H. R. 8545) for the relief of Samuel Purcell—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. NEWTON: A bill (H. R. 8546) for the relief of the legal representatives of William C. Buffington, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. NUTTING: A bill (H. R. 8547) granting a pension to Patrick Fitzpatrick—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8548) to increase the pension of John B. Swoaf—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8549) granting a pension to Louisa Rogers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8550) for the relief of Rodman M. Price—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8551) for the relief of Ira L. Hann—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8552) for the relief of Anna Ella Carroll—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ROMEIS: A bill (H. R. 8553) granting a pension to Arabella Davis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SCOTT: A bill (H. R. 8554) granting a pension to Louis A. Bright—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STONE, of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 8555) for the relief of Nicholas Dailey—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WADE: A bill (H. R. 8556) granting a pension to Polly Anne Carr—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BUTLER: A bill (H. R. 8557) for the relief of Dr. David Bell—to the Committee on War Claims.

Changes in the reference of bills improperly referred were made in the following cases, namely:

A bill (H. R. 7854) for the relief of the legal representatives and successors in interest of Sarah J. Verdier—from the Committee on the Judiciary to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6036) to pay Waddy T. James and others for horses killed in the service of the United States—from the Committee on War Claims to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as follows:

By Mr. A. R. ANDERSON: Petition of Samuel King and others, of Bethlehem, Iowa, praying that salt be placed on the free-list—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, evidence in support of bill for relief of Benjamin L. Belvill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. C. L. ANDERSON: Petition of B. F. Bustin, administrator of Tennessee Rivers, Mississippi, for reference of claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BAYNE: Petition and papers relating to House bill for the relief of Thomas A. McLaughlin—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, resolutions of the Pittsburgh (Pa.) Grain and Flour Exchange, in favor of regulating the interstate-telegraph systems—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of 465 veterans of the National Soldiers' Home, at Hampton, Va., for the passage of House bill No. 7765—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BLANCHARD: Memorial of the mayor, city council, and citizens, for the erection of a public building at Alexandria, La.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, papers in the claim of Phillip Dopf, of Louis E. Reynolds, of Jedediah Waterman's estate, and of John Mahoney, of Louisiana—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BLISS: Petition of citizens of New York, for the relief of Maria N. Abbey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BUCHANAN: Petition of 142 citizens of Philadelphia, Pa., and Atlantic City, N. J., in favor of increased pay for keepers and surfmen in the Life-Saving Service—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, petition of Senator William H. Carter, of Burlington, and 14 others, citizens of New Jersey, for the better legal protection for women and girls—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. T. J. CAMPBELL: Papers in the case of the heirs of John W. Judson—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CLARK: Petition of H. Shuy and others, of Oshkosh, Wis., against repeal of internal-revenue tax on cigars and cheroots—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CHIPMAN: Resolutions of the Detroit (Mich.) Musicians' Benevolent and Protective Association, in favor of the joint resolution introduced by Mr. COX, in reference to the employment of Army and Navy bands—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CONGER: Resolutions of Local Assembly No. 2709, Knights of Labor, of Marion County, Iowa, urging the passage of the so-called tonnage bill now pending—to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. COOPER: Petition of R. J. Cutler and others, citizens of Utah, for increase of tariff on wool and revision of the tariff on worsteds—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CUTCHEON: Petition of Rev. M. S. Woodruff and 29 others, male citizens of Big Rapids, Mich., for better legal protection for women and girls—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DALZELL: Petition of Victory Lodge, Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, with respect to protective tariff—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DARLINGTON: Petition of 48 citizens of Chester County, Pennsylvania, against the admission of Utah with polygamy—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. R. H. M. DAVIDSON: Petition of cigar manufacturers of Tampa, Fla., that Tampa be made a port of entry—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. DUNHAM: Petition of 21 citizens of Chicago, for the passage of Rockwell and Lodge bills, providing for the adjustment of laborers' accounts—to the Committee on Labor.

Also, resolutions of the Chicago Board of Trade, against the bill for appropriation of $200,000 for necessary expenses to enable the United States to take part in the Paris Exposition—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. DUNN: Petition of Thomas J. Frith, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FUNSTON: Petition of Conrad Henning, August Siegenfuhr, and John Head, for payment of claim for Indian depredations—to the Select Committee on Indian Depredation Claims.

By Mr. GEAR: Petition of Knights of Labor of Mount Pleasant, Iowa, for the passage of the tonnage bill—to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. GIBSON: Petition for an appropriation to improve Wicomico River, Maryland—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. GIFFORD: Petition of John H. Harris and 82 others, citizens of Fall River County, Dakota, for larger appropriations for surveys of public lands—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, petition of Dwight C. Pierce, of Ipswich, Dak., for a law to renew letters patent No. 129984, issued to himself—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. J. S. HENDERSON: Petition of the Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, in favor of the repeal of the internal-revenue tax on all alcoholic beverages—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HUNTER: Petition of Morris Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Kentucky, for the repeal of the limitation of the arrears-of-pension act—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LAGAN: Papers in the claim of Phillip B. Fauke, administrator of H. E. Spearing, of New Orleans, La.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. LAWLER: Protest of the Turn Verein Vormaerts Society, of Chicago, Ill., against the passage of the bills now pending restricting immigration—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. LEE: Papers in the claim of W. Vandegrist—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Emma E. Green, wife of Thomas H. Green, for relief—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MCCOMAS: Petition of Lewis C. Cookerly, of William F. Viers, of heirs of Hezekiah Dean, of William A. Wroe, of Stephen M. Lyddane, of Jasper M. Jackson, of Howard Griffith, of James F. Peerce, of William T. Aud, of administrators of John W. Stouffer, of George W. Anderson, of heirs of Samuel T. Magruder, of Henry A. Pumphrey, of William T. Lewis, executor of John H. Lewis, and of Richard W. Holland, of Maryland, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MCKINLEY: Petition of citizens of Ohio, asking for speedy action on the subject of protection to the wool-growers and woolen manufacturers of this country—to the Committee of Ways and Means.

Also, petition of ex-Union soldiers, for the passage of House bill 4339—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of citizens of Galveston, of Tom Green County, and of Howard and Glasscock Counties, Texas, protesting against any reduction of the duty on wool—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MCRAE: Petition of Joab E. Brooks, son of James M. Brooks, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MAISH: Petition for the passage of Mr. LODGE'S bill providing that Government employés shall have the benefit of the eight-hour law—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. NEWTON: Papers in the claim of William C. Buffington, of Ouachita Parish, Louisiana—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of heirs of William C. Buffington, for reference of their claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. OSBORNE: Memorial of the Pennsylvania State Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, that the Bureau of Animal Industry be continued, etc.—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, memorial of the same, for laws prohibiting the manufacture and sale of adulterated lard and other adulterated food products—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. PLUMB: Protest of A. Martin and 28 others, citizens of La Salle County, and of John Schilling and 28 others, citizens of Ottona, Ill., against a repeal of the internal-revenue tax on cigars and cheroots—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. REED: Petition of the musicians of Washington against interference with the liberty of the Marine band to furnish music outside of their regular duties—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. RICHARDSON: Petition of George W. Lorance, administrator of S. D. Travis, of Rutherford County; and of W. L. and J. C. Shafner, executors of J. H. Shafner, and of E. M. Clure, executor of Susan Carriger, of Lincoln County, Tennessee, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. RUSK: Petition of James Carey Thomas, M. D., and 215 other male citizens of Baltimore, Md., for better legal protection for women and girls within the Territorial, admiralty, and maritime jurisdiction of the United States—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SCULL: Petition of Edmund Shaw and 30 other male citizens of Altoona, Pa., asking for better protection for women and girls—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SYMES: Petition of citizens of Colorado, against the reduction of the tariff on wool—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. TAULBEE: Papers in the case of Hibbard Williamson, for relief—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WASHINGTON: Petition from the Tennessee School for the Blind, for the payment of their war claim—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WISE: Petition for the improvement of the Appomattox River, at Petersburg, Va.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

The following petitions for an increase of compensation of fourth-class postmasters were severally referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads:

By Mr. WILLIAM WHITING: Petition of 109 citizens of the Eleventh district of Massachusetts.

By Mr. J. R. BROWN: Of J. G. Hendricks and others, citizens of Cedar Falls, Pittsylvania County, Virginia.

By Mr. CARLTON: Of Charles H. Johnson, A. C. Stovall, and others, of Elbert County, Georgia.

By Mr. CRISP: Of J. W. Whiddon and others, of Irwin County Georgia.

By Mr. R. H. M. DAVIDSON: Of citizens of Graceville, Fla.

By Mr. ELLIOTT: Seven petitions of citizens of the Seventh district of South Carolina.

By Mr. LEE: Of citizens of Orange County, Virginia.

By Mr. MCRAE: Of citizens of Moulton, Columbia County, Arkansas.

The following petitions, indorsing the per diem rated service-pension bill, based on the principle of paying all soldiers, sailors, and marines of the late war a monthly pension of 1 cent a day for each day they were in the service, were severally referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions:

By Mr. JEHU BAKER: Of Henry D. Hughes, E. J. Enloe, and 6 others, ex-soldiers of Bond County, Illinois.

By Mr. BUNNELL: Of 650 soldiers and citizens of Canton, Bradford County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. BURROWS: Of citizens of St. Joseph County, Michigan.

By Mr. CLARK: Of A. J. Sherwood and others, of Seymour, and of Hollis Stedman and others, of Berlin, Wis.

By Mr. CONGER: Of soldiers of Zearing, Story County, and of 161 members of John C. Ferguson Post, Grand Army of the Republic, and others, of Knoxville, Iowa.

By Mr. COOPER: Of J. B. Corbin and 37 other ex-soldiers, of Marion County, Ohio.

By Mr. DARLINGTON: Of ex-soldiers and sailors, of Chester County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. GIFFORD: Of Theodore Elfes and 34 others, of Centralia, of James Jackson and 16 others, of Ree Heights, and of 9 ex-Union soldiers, of Pleasant Valley, Dak.

By Mr. HERMANN: Of ex-Union soldiers, of Vancouver and La Comas, Wash.

By Mr. HIRES: Of soldiers and sailors of the late war.

By Mr. JACKSON: Of John W. Kerr and 22 other soldiers, of Lawrence County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. KENNEDY: Of T. H. Selders and 21 other citizen soldiers, of Rushsylvania, and of F. M. Drake and 75 other soldiers, of Belle Centre, Logan County, Ohio.

By Mr. MCKINLEY: Of Union soldiers, of Stark County, Ohio.

By Mr. McSHANE: Of soldiers and citizens of Nebraska.
By Mr. MORRILL: Of J. Stickel and 52 others, of Centralia, Kans.
By Mr. NELSON: Of Frank Forstein and others, of P. F. McCalls and others, of H. E. Davis, and of Henry F. Sanford and others, ex-Union soldiers.
By Mr. O'DONNELL: Of 12 soldiers, of Eton Rapids, Mich.
By Mr. PATTON: Of 56 ex-soldiers, of Centre County, Pennsylvania.
By Mr. SAWYER: Of 26 soldiers, of Genesee County, New York.
By Mr. A. C. THOMPSON: Of 50 ex-Union soldiers, of Richmond, Lawrence County, Ohio.
By Mr. WADE: Of ex-soldiers and sailors, of Indian Springs, Mo.

The following petitions, praying for the enactment of a law providing temporary aid for common schools, to be disbursed on the basis of illiteracy, were severally referred to the Committee on Education:
By Mr. BUCHANAN: Of 108 citizens of Burlington County, New Jersey.
By Mr. BURROWS: Of 367 citizens of Cass County, Michigan.
By Mr. CHIPMAN: Of 177 citizens of Wayne County, Michigan.
By Mr. COOPER: Of 130 citizens of Union County, Ohio.
By Mr. MAISH: Of 107 citizens of York County, Pennsylvania.
By Mr. OSBORNE: Of 498 citizens of the United States.
By Mr. PATTON: Of 201 citizens of Centre County, Pennsylvania.
By Mr. WILLIAM WHITING: Of 423 citizens of Franklin County, Massachusetts.

The following petitions, asking for the passage of the bill prohibiting the manufacture, sale, and importation of all alcoholic beverages in the District of Columbia, were severally referred to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic:
By Mr. BREWER: Of 120 citizens of the Sixth district of Michigan.
By Mr. J. E. CAMPBELL: Of citizens of the District of Columbia.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, March 16, 1888.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.
The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a petition of the Minneapolis (Minn.) Board of Trade, praying that an appropriation be made for the improvement of the Mississippi River between Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn.; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a petition of 296 citizens of the District of Columbia, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of the Farmers' Institute, at Manhattan, Kans., praying for the passage of laws prohibiting the adulteration of food; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. CULLOM. I present a petition and quite a number of letters from prominent citizens of Chicago, praying that a pension be granted to Frances M. Wilkinson. I move that the petition and letters be referred to the Committee on Pensions.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CULLOM presented a petition of the Board of Trade of the city of Chicago, praying for the construction of a ship-canal around Niagara Falls, in the State of New York, to connect the waters of Lakes Erie and Ontario, in order that free and uninterrupted deep-water navigation along our entire northern lake border may be provided; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented the petition of Edwin C. Arnold, secretary of the Methodist Episcopal ministers' meeting, representing 75 ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the Chicago district, and 46 other citizens of Evanston, Ill.; a petition of J. B. Babcock and 5 other male citizens of Marengo, Ill., and a petition of 34 male citizens of Cook County, Illinois, praying for better legal protection for women and girls within the Territorial, admiralty, and maritime jurisdiction of the United States; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of 133 residents of the Ninth and Thirteenth Congressional districts of Illinois, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of 13 ex-Union soldiers, citizens of Frankfort, Ill., and a petition of 28 ex-Union soldiers, citizens of Mulberry Grove, Ill., praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of McDonough Post, No. 103, Grand Army of the Republic, located at Macomb, Ill., praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill, and the repeal of the limitation as to arrears of pensions; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. CAMERON presented a petition of 139 citizens of the Sixth, Twelfth, Eighteenth, Twenty-fifth, and Twenty-sixth Congressional districts of Pennsylvania, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented the petition of Judge S. P. Johnson and 15 other male citizens of Warren, Pa., and a petition of 14 male citizens of Lawrence, Pa., praying for better legal protection for women and girls within the Territorial, admiralty, and maritime jurisdiction of the United States; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Sullivan County; a petition of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Roaring Brook and vicinity; and a petition of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Bradford County, all in the State of Pennsylvania, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PADDOCK presented a petition of 17 ex-soldiers and sailors of the Union Army and Navy of the Second Congressional district of Nebraska, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. SAULSBURY presented the petition of Webster M. Raines, of Washington, D. C., formerly a resident of the State of Alabama, praying compensation for the use of certain property situated in Eufala, Ala., by the Government during the late war; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE presented a petition of 49 ex-Union soldiers, citizens of Port Austin, Mich., and a petition of citizens of Lapeer County, Michigan, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of Rev. M. S. Woodruff and 29 other male citizens of Big Rapids, Mich., praying for better legal protection for young women and girls within the Territorial, admiralty, and maritime jurisdiction of the United States; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of 118 citizens of the Second, Sixth, and Eighth Congressional districts of Michigan, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. FARWELL presented a petition of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Illinois, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented the petition of Robert E. Hemphill, late a private in Company H, Fourth Indiana Cavalry, praying for the removal of the charge of desertion from his military record; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. SHERMAN presented eleven petitions of 806 ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Ohio, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions, as follows:

Five petitions of citizens of Ohio;
A petition of citizens of Waldo and Norton, Ohio;
A petition of citizens of Madison, Lake County, Ohio;
A petition of citizens of Cleveland, Ohio;
A petition of citizens of Hocking County, Ohio;
A petition of citizens of Coalburgh, Ohio; and
A petition of citizens of Geneva, Ashtabula County, Ohio.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a petition of citizens of Ohio, praying that all disputes and differences that may arise between the Government of the United States and the Government of Great Britain may be submitted to and adjusted by arbitration; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. VEST presented the petition of Nathan Williams and other citizens of Kidder, Mo., praying for the removal of the duty on salt; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the petition of Philip Schreiner and other ex-Union soldiers, citizens of Missouri, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BUTLER presented the proceedings of the Chamber of Commerce of Charleston, S. C., favoring the completion of the jetties at the entrance to Charleston Harbor; which were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CALL presented a petition of ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Florida, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of delegates from Volusia County, Florida, assembled at New Smyrna, in that State, praying that an appropriation be made for the improvement of the bar at Mosquito Inlet; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. ALLISON presented a petition of 22 ex-Union soldiers and sailors, citizens of Zearing, Iowa, and a petition of the Kinsman Post, No. 7, Grand Army of the Republic, of Des Moines, Iowa, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. EVARTS presented a petition of the New York Committee for the Prevention of State Regulation of Vice, praying that the legal age of consent for females in the national capital be raised to at least eighteen years; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. HISCOCK presented a petition of 196 citizens of the Twenty-eighth Congressional district of New York, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of veterans of the State of New York, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition, numerously signed by members of the New York State Agricultural Society and citizens throughout the State of New York, praying for the passage of the bill to eradicate pleuro-pneumonia among cattle; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. BROWN presented the petition of W. W. Mackall, praying for the removal of his political disabilities; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. PLUMB presented the petition of Thomas Carney, of Washington, D. C., praying for an amendment of House bill 6364, to provide for the sale of land allotted and patented to certain members of the Black Bob band of Shawnee Indians, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

He also presented a petition of certain Shawnee Indians in regard to lands allotted and patented to them; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. REAGAN presented the petition of G. W. Hawkins, delegate of the Chickasaw Nation, praying for restoration to that nation of a sum of money erroneously omitted from their trust fund now held in the Treasury; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. VEST, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7262) for the erection of a public building at Texarkana, situated on both sides of the line between the States of Arkansas and Texas, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2179) authorizing the Kansas City, Texarkana and Gulf Railway Company to bridge the Red and Little Rivers, in the State of Arkansas, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1889) to authorize the Tennessee Midland Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Tennessee River, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2024) to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Mississippi River at or near Clarksville, Mo., and for other purposes, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3215) to authorize the construction of the Ohio Connecting Railway Company bridge, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2043) authorizing the removal of certain obstructions in the Hudson River opposite Poughkeepsie, in the State of New York, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. HARRIS. The Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 2017) to incorporate the Rock Creek Railway Company of the District of Columbia, direct me to report it back without amendment.

The same committee directed me in January last to report a Senate bill on the same subject, which is Calendar No. 156, being the bill (S. 1054) to incorporate the Rock Creek Railway Company of the District of Columbia. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate that the House bill may take the place of the Senate bill on the Calendar, and if that is done I shall then move to indefinitely postpone the Senate bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senate bill 1054 will be indefinitely postponed if there be no objection, and the House bill reported this morning from the Committee on the District of Columbia will be substituted in its place on the Calendar.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask that the House bill be placed on the Calendar in the same position the Senate bill occupied.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection, and that order will be made.

Mr. PALMER, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, submitted a report of the majority of the committee to accompany the bill (S. 2083) to provide for the establishment of a Bureau of Animal Industry, and to facilitate the exportation of live-stock and their products, to extirpate contagious pleuro-pneumonia, and other diseases among domestic animals, and for other purposes; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. COCKRELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6800) for the relief of John Powers, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1970) to authorize the Kansas Valley Railroad Company to construct and operate a railway through the Fort Riley military reservation, in Kansas, and for other purposes, reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1438) to authorize the Kansas Valley Railroad Company to construct and operate a railway through the Fort Riley military reservation, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1903) granting the right of way through the Fort Riley military reservation, Kansas, to the Chicago, Kansas and Western Railway Company, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1969) granting right of way to the Junction City and Fort Riley Street Railway Company into and upon the Fort Riley military reservation, in the State of Kansas, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. CAMERON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1599) correcting the military record of Lieut. James O'Rourke, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1041) granting a pension to Mary E. Walker, M. D., reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3290) to amend section 685 of the Revised Statutes relating to the District of Columbia, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. HAMPTON. I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs to report a bill to authorize the construction of a counterpoise battery on the bank of the Potomac River below Washington. The bill has been framed by the Military Committee, and I will present at another time a report to accompany it.

The bill (S. 2394) to authorize the construction of a counterpoise battery on the bank of the Potomac River below Washington was read twice by its title.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER IMPROVEMENT.

Mr. PADDOCK. I am directed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by me on the 13th instant, to report it favorably without amendment. I ask for its immediate consideration.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Improvement of the Mississippi River and its tributaries be, and is hereby, authorized to send for persons and papers, subpœna witnesses, and employ a stenographer, in the prosecution of the inquiry now in progress by said committee to determine whether the plan of improvement proposed by Senate bill 742 shall be substituted for or be made supplemental to the method of improvement now being carried on by the Mississippi River Commission; and that the expenses of the same shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. HALE. I introduce a bill authorizing the President to appoint and retire John C. Frémont as a major-general in the United States Army. In presenting this bill I wish to say that I hope the Committee on Military Affairs will give the measure an early consideration. The life of a generation has passed since General Frémont was connected as an eminent leader with party strife. Since that time he has rendered prominent services both in military and in civil life, and I am certain that every Senator upon either side of the Chamber who has known this distinguished officer in his later years, in his winter of life, which is truly frosty but kindly, can have nothing but high regard and affection for him. I should hope that no voice would be raised against a favorable report upon this bill and its passage through the Senate.

The bill (S. 2395) authorizing the President to appoint and retire John C. Frémont as a major-general in the United States Army, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. BLAIR introduced a bill (S. 2396) to provide a method for settling controversies and differences between railroad corporations engaged in interstate and territorial transportation of property or passengers and their employés; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. BLAIR. This bill passed both Houses in the last Congress, but failed to become a law. I have modified the bill in such a way as, in compliance with the provisions of the act, not only to authorize but require the parties to enter into arbitration; and I have added a section providing that—

No strike by such employés shall be ordered or shall be lawful in such case until after the railroad or railroads or the managers thereof shall have been requested to appoint an arbitrator and to enter into arbitration as provided in the first section of this act, and shall have failed for five days to comply with such request.

I move that the bill be referred, like the former bill, to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN introduced a bill (S. 2397) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of James W. Kilpatrick; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland, introduced a bill (S. 2398) to provide for a light-house at Holland's Island Bar, near the entrance to Kedge's Straits, in the Chesapeake Bay, Maryland; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. ALLISON introduced a bill (S. 2399) to remove the charge of desertion against Henry Crangle; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. DOLPH introduced a bill (S. 2400) authorizing the construction of a railroad bridge across the Clearwater River, in the Territory of Idaho, between its mouth and the boundary-line of the Nez Perce Indian reservation, by the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2401) authorizing the construction of a railroad bridge across the Snake River by the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. GORMAN (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2402) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Navy to grant leaves of absence to employés in the United States navy-yards; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. HOAR introduced a bill (S. 2403) to adjust the accounts of the Department of Agriculture; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. COCKRELL introduced a bill (S. 2404) granting a pension to Anthony M. Fullerton; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying petition, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. SAWYER introduced a bill (S. 2405) for the reduction of postage on seeds, cuttings, bulbs, scions, etc.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. BUTLER introduced a bill (S. 2406) to provide for the admission of the State of Utah into the Union; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Territories.

Mr. PLUMB introduced a bill (S. 2407) to authorize the conveyance of certain Absentee Shawnee Indian lands in Kansas; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. CHANDLER introduced a bill (S. 2408) to fix the location upon the present site of the Congressional Library building; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Additional Accommodations for the Library.

Mr. HEARST introduced a bill (S. 2409) providing for the purchase of a site and the erection thereon of a building suitable for army purposes in San Francisco, Cal.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

AMENDMENT TO SUNDRY CIVIL BILL.

Mr. CAMERON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

HOT SPRINGS LEASES.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be directed to inform the Senate how many leases for bath-house and hotel purposes to parts of the reservation at Hot Springs, Ark., have been made, and to whom, and the form of lease now in use; also how many and which of said leases have been improved and the value of said improvements; whether any of said leases, or any interest in them, have been assigned, and, if so, to whom; and, if known to the Department, upon what consideration, when such leases will expire, and whether they are renewable without further legislation, and also whether they are terminable at the will of Congress.

He will also inform the Senate what number of bath-tubs is used by each house, and also whether any hot water is carried off the reservation, and if so by what authority and for what purpose, giving number of houses and tubs supplied, and whether any of the hot water is used for any but bathing and drinking purposes, and if so by what authority.

The Secretary will also inform the Senate whether there is any combination of the bath-house owners, and if so, whether such combination is prejudicial or otherwise to the public interest; and also whether he can give the number of persons resorting to these springs annually for the benefit of the waters.

FOX AND WISCONSIN RIVER DAMS.

Mr. SAWYER submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Attorney-General be, and he is hereby, instructed to report to the Senate the amount of balance of pay due to the commissioners appointed by the court (and their names and the amount due to each) to examine and report on the damages against the Government occasioned by the erection of dams on the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers, in the State of Wisconsin, and now on file in his office, which have not been heretofore reported to Congress, and if he knows of any reason why they should not be paid, and also all claims against the Government not heretofore reported that have been allowed or rejected by said commissioners.

FISHERIES NEGOTIATIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution offered by the Senator from Maine [Mr. FRYE], coming over from a previous day.

The resolution submitted yesterday by Mr. FRYE was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be requested to transmit to the Senate copies of the minutes and daily protocols of the meetings of the commissioners who negotiated the treaty with Great Britain, submitted by the President to the Senate on the 20th of February, 1888.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. GRAY. I move that the resolution be amended by inserting, in the first line, after the word "requested," the customary words, "if in his judgment not incompatible with the public interests."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I should like to ask the Senator from Maine if it is customary to call for an instrument of that description relating to negotiations with a foreign country.

Mr. FRYE. I am informed that it is; and that in the consideration of a treaty the Committee on Foreign Relations is entitled to all the papers touching that treaty which can be sent to it under a resolution of this kind. They can be sent as Executive matter, of course, if the President pleases so to send them.

Mr. SAULSBURY. All I wanted was that the usual course should be observed in this case.

Mr. FRYE. I understand this to be the usual course.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution as amended.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

ALASKAN FUR SEALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following resolution, submitted yesterday by Mr. DOLPH; which was read:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to inform the Senate what construction is placed by the Department upon the phrase "or the waters adjacent thereto" in section 1967 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, prohibiting the killing of fur seals upon the islands of St. Paul and St. George and on the waters adjacent thereto, and whether or not American citizens have heretofore been or now are prohibited or prevented from fishing for fur seals in the waters of Alaska or in Behring Sea beyond one marine league from shore except on the islands aforesaid and the waters immediately adjacent thereto, and if so, under what law or regulations this has been done and in what manner the same have been enforced.

The resolution was agreed to.

HOT SPRINGS RESERVATION.

Mr. TELLER submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the joint resolution of the House No. 117, to enable the Secretary of the Interior to utilize the hot water now running to waste on the permanent reservation at Hot Springs, Ark., and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"Provided, That the new bath-houses which may be so erected shall not be owned or controlled by any person, company, or corporation which may be the owner or interested in any other bath-house on or near the Hot Springs reservation; and if the ownership or control of any such bath-house be transferred to any person or corporation owning or interested in any other bath-house on or near said reservation, the Secretary of the Interior shall, for that cause, deprive said bath-house of the hot water, and also any other bath-house in which any such person or corporation shall be interested, and shall cancel any lease from the United States which any such person or corporation may hold or be interested in."

And the Senate agree to the same.

H. M. TELLER,
A. S. PADDOCK,
E. C. WALTHALL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. H. BANKHEAD,
J. H. ROGERS,
W. H. WADE,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was concurred in.

VALUATION OF IMPORTED MERCHANDISE.

Mr. ALLISON. I move to proceed to the consideration of Senate bill No. 977.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no further morning business, the Calendar under Rule VIII being in order, the Senator from Iowa moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 977) to regulate the importation of foreign merchandise and to secure uniformity in the classification and valuation thereof, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate resumed the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the pending amendment, submitted by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS], which will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. In section 14, line 5, after the words "as to," it is proposed to strike out the words "the construction of the law respecting;" so as to read:

As provided for in section 13 of this act, as to the classification of such merchandise, etc.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, near the close of the consideration of the bill yesterday the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS] made some observations respecting the necessity of striking section 14 from the bill. I do not know that he made any such motion. This section of the bill is a very important one, and the committee gave the subject involved in the section very full consideration, and as finally embodied in the bill I believe it was agreed to by every member of the committee.

I think the Senator from New York in his criticism of this section yesterday failed to see the connection, and the necessary connection, between this section and the sections immediately preceding it. Sections 11, 12, 13, and 14 are to be considered practically together, as proposing a new scheme for the valuation and classification of imported merchandise.

I think it was made perfectly clear to the committee having charge of this subject that the growth of the country has made it absolutely necessary that some different machinery from that now in operation should be embodied in our statutes. As the practice now is, I think I speak advisedly when I say it is found impossible for the existing Government machinery as respects the collection of duties to go on with the necessary speed required for the safety of the Government and also for justice to the importer.

What is the present machinery? Let me state it in brief. When an entry is made at the custom-house the collector and naval officer, if there be one, take the invoice and make an estimate of the amount of duties to be required of the importer. When that estimate is made it is the duty of the importer to deposit with the collector the amount thus ascertained in the first instance or give bond for its payment. Then the importer is permitted to take the merchandise embraced in the invoice into his possession, with the exception of one package in ten, and that one package out of every ten is sent to the appraiser's store, where the local appraiser makes appraisement of the goods.

If the importer is dissatisfied with that appraisement, he makes known that dissatisfaction to the collector, and the collector is then required by law to submit the invoice and the merchandise in the appraiser's store to a general appraiser on duty in New York, if the importation is made there, and to a merchant appraiser to be selected by him, and these two, the general appraiser and the merchant appraiser, together reexamine the packages and make an estimate of the value of the merchandise. If they disagree, then the collector, under existing law, is required to decide between them; that is to say, the collector then becomes an appraiser or an umpire between the general appraiser and the merchant appraiser. Under existing law and under the law since 1842 the merchant appraiser becomes a sworn officer of the Government and is paid by the Government. When this process has been finished, it is conclusive under existing law upon the importer and upon the Government, unless the Secretary of the Treasury shall choose to order another appraisement.

At this point I wish to call the attention of the Senator from New York to the fact that during all the years that have gone by the importer is bound as to the question of value by the action of these executive officers of the Government; and it has been uniformly held that he has no right to a trial by jury or to the processes of the courts as respects the appraisement.

Mr. BUTLER. May I ask the Senator a question for the purpose of information?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. BUTLER. Do I understand the Senator to say that the merchant appraiser and the regular appraiser and the collector find the facts in the case, and that their finding is conclusive on all parties?

Mr. ALLISON. They find the value of the merchandise, and their conclusion as respects value is binding upon the Government and upon the importer; that ends that matter. After that is done the collector of the port is required to liquidate the entry, which means that the collector shall take the statute law and decide under what schedule the importation is made and shall estimate and fix the rate of duty required of the importer. What is that? The Senator from New York seems to think that that is not a judicial proceeding. Of course it is not a judicial proceeding, but it is a duty that is in its nature to some extent a judicial duty, because it is the collector's business to construe the law and fix the amount to be paid under it. If the importer is satisfied with his construction of the law, that is the end of it; but if the importer is dissatisfied—I am speaking now of the existing law, and not of the proposed bill—he must give notice of such dissatisfaction, stating in detail why he is dissatisfied, and within thirty days take an appeal to the Secretary of the Treasury. The Secretary of the Treasury then is required to review the decision of the collector as respects the classification of the goods and the amount of duty, and if he shall agree with the collector and the importer is still dissatisfied he has ninety days within which to commence a suit against the collector for the recovery of the amount which he supposes he was improperly required to pay.

Now, as a matter of practice, the Secretary of the Treasury himself does not engage in an examination in detail of each one of these cases. That examination is made by subordinates in the Treasury Department. The custom is for these protests and appeals to be made to the Secretary and then to have what would be called a test suit begun, and in this way it has turned out in practice that now there are more than four thousand suits pending in the city of New York in the circuit court.

Mr. BUTLER. May I ask the Senator a question now?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. BUTLER. In the prosecution of that suit of which the Senator speaks do the parties begin de novo before the court or are they controlled by the finding of facts by the board of which he has spoken? In other words, is there any tribunal before which testimony can be taken?

Mr. ALLISON. When the collector makes the final liquidation the importer is required to deposit the amount of that liquidation with the collector, and the amount is at once covered into the Treasury. Then the suit is against the collector for overpayment of duties; and when that suit is begun the question is tried de novo and before a jury as respects classification, the question of value never entering into these suits, and a jury is summoned and witnesses are examined and cross-examined, counsel appear, etc., and some of these suits have taken from two to three months to try under the existing law.

A test suit is begun, but there are protests and appeals lying behind this test suit where suits are not begun, but where the questions involved depend upon the suit that may be finally decided in the Supreme Court of the United States. There are four thousand of these suits now in the circuit court for the southern district of New York, and the Secretary of the Treasury, in his last report, states, I have no doubt truthfully, that the present generation of men will pass away before these suits are disposed of. There lie behind these suits about thirty thousand protests and appeals in all the by-ways and closets and pigeonholes of the office of the collector of the port of New York, these protests and appeals involving many millions of dollars and depending upon the fate of these four thousand suits yet to be tried.

Mr. ALDRICH. The Senator from Iowa will allow me to state that besides these protests and appeals there are about an equal number of unliquidated invoices involving difficult questions, from which are likely to arise thirty thousand more protests and appeals.

Mr. ALLISON. That is the situation as respects the administration of the present law.

The Senator from New York said yesterday that at the last session of Congress we provided for another circuit judge in the southern district of New York in order that these cases might be tried. Although that circuit judge has held court continuously since entering on his duties, these cases have increased from two to three hundred in number since that circuit judge was appointed.

The Committee on Finance on investigating the subject believed that if this course of procedure was to continue the Government would be swamped in its efforts to collect the revenue, either by the refunds it would be compelled to pay or by other methods which would eventually take large sums out of the Treasury. So we set about the ascertainment of how in any way we could improve the situation; and we have, as the result of our investigation and deliberation, presented these four sections. What are they?

We substitute for the merchant appraiser a permanent appraiser, who also is, like the merchant appraiser, an officer of the Government. The Senator from New York made no criticism upon that part of our bill.

Mr. EVARTS. My observation was directed entirely to the constitutional method as prescribed in those sections.

Mr. ALLISON. We have provided for general appraisers to take the place in the first place of the merchant appraiser and the collector, and then we have provided a board of general appraisers, who shall take the place of the Secretary of the Treasury in revising the conduct of the appraisers as respects value, and we have made the decision of this board of appraisers final and conclusive as respects value.

We have changed the existing provision of law, which provides that the collector shall first classify the merchandise, but instead of an appeal from the collector to the Secretary of the Treasury we make the appeal from the collector to the board of appraisers in the first instance; but in order that the importer may have a fair opportunity of having his case properly tried we allow him, by the fourteenth section, if he is dissatisfied with the action of the board of appraisers, to take his case into the circuit court of the United States, and have whatever question of law is involved decided by the circuit court of the United States, and if the circuit court of the United States think it is a matter of sufficient importance it can certify the question to the Supreme Court of the United States, who shall act upon it finally.

That is the substance of the provisions of the fourteenth section. The Senator from New York says there is no "case" involved. It is very easy, if this bill is defective in that respect, to make amendments which will put it in due form. This is not an unusual or extraordinary provision in statutes having reference to the collection of revenue. If you will look at the old statutes you will see that they are full—not very full, but there are many instances wherein the summary proceedings herein provided for are recognized and have been for a long time recognized. As far back as 1813 a statute was passed making the certification of the Comptroller of the Treasury conclusive, and allowing the Comptroller to issue his mandate or writ and have it served upon the property of a delinquent after a finding; and in 1820 that statute was so modified as that after the accounting officers of the Treasury had found the amount due the Solicitor of the Treasury, or the legal agent of the Treasury, whoever he might be, could issue his warrant and levy upon the real and personal estate of the party who had this account against him, and upon the filing of that writ in the office of the clerk of the district court where the party resided it was made a lien upon all his real estate within the jurisdiction of that district.

Mr. PLUMB. Will it interrupt the Senator if I ask him a question at this point?

Mr. ALLISON. No.

Mr. PLUMB. What remedy has the Government if the appraisers or any of the instrumentalities now provided by law make an under-appraisement or construe the law in such a way as to collect too small a duty on an article? What is the remedy of the Government under the present law in that case? If there is any error whatever in regard to the valuation or classification of goods against the Government, is there any remedy?

Mr. ALLISON. There is no remedy, except the single remedy that the Secretary of the Treasury may order the collector to have a reappraisement.

Mr. PLUMB. Then the officers of the Treasury Department, whether the Secretary of the Treasury or others, are the final authority; and if the decision is against the Government the Government has no remedy by appeal or otherwise against the action of any of its own officials.

Mr. EVARTS. Allow me to suggest that the Senator from Kansas will perceive that we are passing a general law which applies to the collection of duties. Now there is an action against the Government by the importer to take the money improperly collected out of the hands of the Government. That brings up the question of the respective rights of the Government and the importer. That brings up the question of classification. The court applies the rule of law to the question of classification.

Mr. PLUMB. I understand this all relates as to what the rights of an importer would be in the case of an alleged mistake made by the Treasury officials whereby he is subjected to damage. I was only seeking to ascertain by my question from the Senator from Iowa whether the Government had any remedy against an error made by its own officials.

Mr. ALLISON. No remedy. Of course, if the importer commences suit, or if the Government commences suit in case it has not got the money, the Government can appeal from the decision of the lower court.

Mr. PLUMB. But take the case where an importation is made of dutiable merchandise which may be classified one way or another and always subject to difficulty about valuation. Suppose the appraiser or other officer having the performance of this duty improperly classifies or improperly appraises, or both, whereby the importer gains an advantage of the Government. The importer, of course, will not appeal, and I understand he only pays into the hands of the collector the amount of money which this classification and this appraisement with the application of the duty to it results in determining that he should pay. What is the remedy of the Government in a case of that kind in the absence of any allegation of collusion between the importer and the appraiser, where there is only a mistake, where goods subject to 30 per cent. duty are classified at 15, and whereby goods worth 30 per cent. are appraised as being worth half that? That is the point I want to get at. I want to see if there is any remedy the Government has which approximates in any direction the remedy which the importer has.

Mr. ALLISON. In the case stated by the Senator from Kansas the Government must rely upon its own executive officers, the Secretary of the Treasury having plenary power in that respect.

Mr. SHERMAN. I wish to correct both Senators. In the case of classification the bill is very plain. It provides:

SEC. 14. If the owner, importer, consignee, or agent of any imported merchandise, or the collector, or the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be dissatisfied with the decision of the board of general appraisers, as provided for in section 13 of this act, as to the construction of the law respecting the classification of such merchandise and the rate of duty imposed thereon under such classification, they or either of them—

The Secretary or the collector or the importer—may, within thirty days next after such decision, and not afterwards, apply to the circuit court of the United States within the district in which the matter arises for a review of the questions of law involved in such decision.

Mr. ALLISON. That is the proposed bill.

Mr. PLUMB. But I was speaking about the law as it is at the present time.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think the present law as to the mere point of valuation is that there is an appeal. In the matter of classification either party may appeal.

Mr. PLUMB. May the Government commence suit?

Mr. ALLISON. The Government may commence suit.

Mr. EVARTS. Either party that is out of money may commence the action.

Mr. ALLISON. If the duties are not paid the Government can sue.

Mr. PLUMB. But if the duties are paid the Government can not sue. I am speaking of a case where an importer accepts the conclusion of the appraisers, and also practically the Secretary of the Treasury accepts the same conclusion.

Mr. HOAR. May I have the attention of the Senator from Iowa? Suppose the appraisers appraise things too high and the Government fails to appeal, what is the remedy, if the appraisers decide wrong, under the present law?

Mr. SHERMAN. An appeal to the circuit court.

Mr. ALLISON. The appraiser does not decide the question of classification; the collector makes that decision. If the collector makes a decision wrongfully, the Secretary revises his decision. That is the existing law, as I understand it. When the Secretary shall have revised that decision that is a law unto the Government.

Mr. PLUMB. It does not make any difference, so far as my question is concerned, whether the final decision in the case against the Government is made by the collector or by the Secretary of the Treasury. I want to know if the Government in the case of a decision by the Secretary of the Treasury as to a certain classification and a certain appraisement of value has any remedy against that decision. The importer may have the benefit of the judgment of the appraiser; he may have the benefit of the judgment of the collector; he may have the judgment of the Secretary of the Treasury, and if dissatisfied with any one of them he may appeal to the circuit court of the United States. The question is whether the Government can appeal.

Mr. ALLISON. In the case put by the Senator from Kansas the Government must rely upon the integrity and intelligence of the board of appraisers and the collector, to begin with, and of the Secretary of the Treasury in the next place; and if these responsible officers make a decision concertedly, that is the end of that particular case, so far as the Government is concerned.

Mr. GEORGE. I have before me a very conclusive answer made by the Supreme Court of the United States to the question propounded by the Senator from Kansas, and as it is only a short extract I will be glad to read it.

Mr. ALLISON. I will give way for that purpose.

Mr. GEORGE. The point made is that there may be improper valuations by these boards, and therefore there ought to be a revision of them.

Mr. ALLISON. What is the case?

Mr. GEORGE. The Kentucky railroad tax cases, reported in 115 United States Reports. The Supreme Court says:

It is still urged, however, that there is, notwithstanding what has been said, no security that the final action of the board of railroad commissioners—

Who are the parties authorized by law to make the valuations—

in valuing and assessing railroad property under this statute may not be unequal, unjust, and oppressive, and that either by error of judgment, through caprice, prejudice, or even from an intention to oppress, valuations may be made which are excessive, bearing no reasonable relation to what is fair and just, and fixed arbitrarily, based neither upon actual evidence nor an honest estimate. But the same suppositions may be indulged in, in opposition to all contrary presumptions, with reference to the final action of any tribunal appointed to determine the matter, however carefully constituted and however carefully guarded in its procedure, and whether judicial or administrative. Such possibilities are but the necessary imperfections of all human institutions, and do not admit of remedy; at least no revisory power to prevent or redress them enters into the judicial system, for, by the supposition, its administration is itself subject to the same imperfections.

Mr. ALLISON. Now, laying aside for a moment the suggestion made by the Senator from New York that there are no parties, as I understood him, it is quite easy by a single word or two to make it perfectly clear what we understand already to be the "case," namely, that the parties here are the importer, if he is dissatisfied, the plaintiff, the United States defendant; or the reverse. I will not stop to read the statute of 1820 to which I have alluded, but I will call the attention of the Senator from New York to the fact that the law of 1820 (which the Supreme Court has decided in two or three cases to have been a constitutional statute) allows the plaintiff to go into court and have the court pass upon the act of the accounting officers, but there is no suit. The framers of the act of 1820 did not think it was necessary to make out two people in order to have a suit. They said that the man who found fault with the accounting should file his bill of complaint. It did not say "against the United States," but everybody understood it was against the United States, and the matter could be considered in the courts of the United States. That was decided in the Hoboken case. One section of that statute authorized the party dissatisfied with the action of the accounting officers to file a bill of complaint; it did not say against whom. I am merely applying the verbal criticism made by the Senator from New York to that statute. It is not stated there against whom that bill of complaint shall be filed, but it seemed to be well understood by the courts that inasmuch as it was a dissatisfaction with the acts of the Government of the United States the complaint must be filed against the United States. They so understood it, and I think the courts would clearly and plainly so understand this particular section.

Now, let me call attention to another statute similar to this fourteenth section as respects the construction. In 1874 the anti-moiety act, so called, was passed. There are two sections in that anti-moiety act which provide for summary remedy, sections 17 and 18, not even requiring the remedy to be in the courts; it might be before a judge of a court.

SEC. 17. That whenever, for an alleged violation of the customs-revenue laws, any person who shall be charged with having incurred any fine, penalty, forfeiture, or disability other than imprisonment, or shall be interested in any vessel or merchandise seized or subject to seizure, when the appraised value of such vessel or merchandise is not less than $1,000, shall present his petition to the judge of the district in which the alleged violation occurred, or in which the property is situated, setting forth, truly and particularly, the facts and circumstances of the case—

What "case?" Just the kind of a case we have in section 14 of this bill—and praying for relief, such judge shall, if the case, in his judgment, requires, proceed to inquire, in a summary manner—

Just as we propose here—

into the circumstances of the case—

That is the seizure; that is what that particular "case" is—into the circumstances of the case, at such reasonable time as may be fixed by him for that purpose, of which the district attorney and the collector shall be notified by the petitioner, in order that they may attend and show cause why the petition should be refused.

So in the next section. There is a jurisdiction conferred on the court. Has anybody doubted that that was proper jurisdiction? It has stood as a law, and I believe there are numerous cases where it has been enforced, and it would have been resorted to in more cases but for the fact that the sixteenth section of that same act practically repealed certain provisions as to the burden of proof. So I must be permitted to say that I do not think there is very great force in the criticism that there are not enough parties here. We certainly have a "case" when we have a dispute as respects the classification of merchandise. But the committee in making these provisions, I think, were of opinion that we could by law impose just such restrictions and limitations upon the importation of merchandise as we might choose, and I believe the statutes of all the States are in accord with this view. I do not know of a single State statute where there is a trial by jury as respects the amount of taxes that shall be imposed on the citizen. Our statute-books are full of laws placing limitations upon the importation of merchandise. For illustration, I remember some years ago we had a bill in the Senate that came to us from the House of Representatives which was very fully argued, whereby it was undertaken by law to absolutely prohibit the importation of Chinese into this country. That permitted ten and afterwards fifteen to come in on a single vessel. That bill was debated in this body for many days, and in all that debate I do not remember a single suggestion that there was any constitutional question involved. It was admitted by all the constitutional lawyers then in this body that we had the power to absolutely prohibit the importation of Chinese persons. The only objection made to that bill at that time was that it was a denunciation of a treaty with the Chinese Government, which was by some deemed an unwise thing to do at that time. There was no question of constitutional power.

If we can prohibit the importation of persons, can we not put limitations upon the importations of goods? We do now in various ways. We have a prohibitory duty upon the importation of refined sugars. It seems to me perfectly clear that we can say by our statute under what conditions persons shall import goods. I agree with the Senator from New York that they ought to be reasonable conditions and in furtherance of the commerce of our country.

I quote a decision made by Judge Story on this very question of what we can do in that direction. The question arose under the act of 1818. Judge Story says:

I do not feel myself called upon to discuss these objections minutely, however ingeniously they were urged, because it seems to me that they may be disposed of by the single remark, that as Congress has the constitutional power "to lay and collect taxes and duties," and "to regulate commerce with foreign nations," it possesses the incidental right to prescribe the manner in which the duties shall be levied and the value of the goods shall be ascertained, and the conditions upon which the importation shall be permitted. (Tappan in error vs. United States, Mason's Reports, page 396.)

The statute which is proposed here does not relate to a single article of merchandise now in the United States. We have expressly excluded that idea. It relates only to importations hereafter to be made.

Now, as respects the question of trial by jury in tax cases, I think the Senator from New York has not examined that question freshly and with the care that he generally examines such questions. Here I have Judge Cooley on that point, and I will read a paragraph from his work on taxation:

LAW OF THE LAND.

There is a constitutional guaranty which has come to us from Magna Charta, which declares that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property except by the judgment of his peers or the law of the land. The alternative provisions of this guaranty have sometimes been supposed to mean the same thing, and the guaranty itself to entitle every person to have any demand made upon him submitted to the determination of a jury of the vicinage.

That I understand to be the principal criticism made by the Senator from New York on this fourteenth section—that we make no provision for a trial by jury. Now, let us see what Judge Cooley thinks on this subject.

Such a construction applied in tax cases would work a thorough and radical change in the principles on which taxation is now supposed to rest. It would cripple the legislative power, and subject the action of the department whose function it is to make laws on its own views of the questions of public interest and public policy which the laws involve, to a review and possible reversal at the hands of a jury. It would not so much strengthen the judicial department as it would weaken the legislative; for the courts themselves, though juries sit with and as a part of them, are compelled to recognize a large degree of independence in the action of these assistants. Such independence is often useful, and never can be seriously detrimental when a verdict determines a single controversy only; but to make juries the assessors of the claims of the state upon individuals could only introduce anarchy; one jury reaching one conclusion regarding the public needs and the justice of its demands, and another another, until the state would be without general rule, and must fall to pieces from the incurable insufficiency of its government. Such a construction of a clause agreed upon as an important provision in a charter of government can never have been intended.

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BECK] calls my attention to a case in 7 Wallace, page 126. That was a case, by the way, which was argued by the honorable Senator from New York when he was Attorney-General of the United States, and in his brief he asserts, I think, very cogently and tersely the rule. He says, on page 125:

The common law implies no contract on the part of the Government to repay money erroneously collected into the public treasury for public dues. This point sustained, the appeal fails.

The opinion of the court, on page 126, declares:

The written protest, signed by the party, with the definite grounds of objection, were conditions-precedent to the right to sue, and if omitted all right of action was gone. These conditions were necessary for the protection of the Government, as they informed the officers charged with the collection of the revenue from imports of the merchants' reasons for claiming exemption and enabled the Treasury Department to judge of their soundness and to decide on the risk of taking the duties in the face of the objections. There was no hardship in the case, because the law was notice equally to the collector and importer, and was a rule to guide their conduct in case differences should arise in relation to the laws for the imposition of duties. The allowing a suit at all was an act of beneficence on the part of the Government. As it had confided to the Secretary of the Treasury the power of deciding in the first instance on the amount of duties demandable on any specific importation, so it could have made him the final arbiter in all disputes concerning the same. After the passage of the law of 1845 the duties in controversy were paid. (Nichols vs. United States, 7 Wallace, pages 126 and 127.)

The Supreme Court of the United States in 1845 decided that it was within the clear constitutional power of Congress to withdraw entirely from the courts this whole question of taxation, and after that decision the law of 1845 was passed. The books are full of these decisions, but I will not take time to read more. The courts uniformly hold that it is within the discretion of Congress to say upon what conditions and limitations they shall levy taxes and impose duties. As Chief-Justice Marshall said, many years ago, the power to tax involves the power to destroy, and we have exercised it even to that extent in many instances at home. Who does not remember that in 1866 we passed a law taxing State-bank circulation 10 per cent.? What was the object of that? It was to destroy the State-bank system, and it did it effectually.

Now we can, under the Constitution of the United States, having the power to levy taxes and impose duties without limitation or restriction, make such regulations and laws respecting them as we choose in the wise exercise of our power here to do. In the exercise of this power we have proposed in this fourteenth section that the importer aggrieved because of an erroneous decision of law as respects the rate of duty or the classification of merchandise may resort in the first instance to the circuit court, and then have an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States in a proper case.

It does seem to me that these provisions taken together are a better protection to the importers of the United States than is the existing law. We give them a full and complete remedy in the first instance for the ascertainment of the proper amount of duties.

These provisions are intended to give the importer the benefit of experienced men, who will receive a high compensation, because this bill does provide a high compensation for them. They will have the advantage of men who will be in the nature of things experts as respects the classification of merchandise, and then after these successive appeals if they should be dissatisfied they have the power to go quickly to the circuit court of the proper circuit and have a review of the law of the case.

It appears to me that these provisions are just to the importer and alike just to the Government. The Secretary of the Treasury says it will take a generation to dispose of the pending suits; but under these provisions we shall within a reasonable time be rid of the vexations that have grown up under existing statutes respecting the importation of merchandise.

So, Mr. President, I believe that this fourteenth section is an effective section for the purposes intended, and that it is in no degree and in no wise unjust to any honest importer in this country.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, if the Senator from Iowa will pardon me——

Mr. ALLISON. I have closed.

Mr. HOAR. I should like, without going into a discussion of the general question, to read a few lines only from a decision of Chief-Justice Shaw, in the case of Lincoln vs. City of Worcester, September 18, 1851, in 8 Cushing's Reports, page 61. It sums up this whole matter of systems of taxation and of the right to go to a jury or a judicial tribunal in regard to a matter of taxation:

We are not aware that any decided case has given sanction to the principle that assumpsit against the town or city will lie to recover back money, on the ground of any irregularity, error, or mistake, in fact or in law, in the mode of making the assessment. On the contrary, we think it is now definitely settled by a series of decisions that in such case the party's only remedy is by application to the assessors for abatement. (Revised Statutes, c. 7, section 37.) If the party obtain no satisfactory relief there, he may complain to the county commissioners for a revision. (Section 39.)

Who are, of course, not judicial officers.

And it has recently been decided that if there be any error or mistake in matter of law in the proceedings of the commissioners, a writ of certiorari from this court will lie to correct them. (Newburyport vs. County Commissioners, 12 Met., 211.)

* * * * * * *

If such an action could be maintained, it would in effect be to transfer the duty and business of forming a valuation and assessing and levying taxes from the domestic tribunal to which the law has committed it to a court of justice, settling facts on evidence by a jury, and with very inadequate means for the performance of that duty to the satisfaction of anybody. Deciding, therefore, that such action will not lie is not deciding upon a mere question of form of remedy where a real grievance is shown; but it results from a view of the fundamental principles on which the whole system of public taxation is founded.

That as absolutely covers this question, it seems to me, as it does ordinary taxation.

Mr. EVARTS. Does the Senator from Massachusetts undertake to say that by the law of Massachusetts there is no judicial protection to any of its citizens against a tax exaction contrary to law?

Mr. HOAR. I have not said anything which would give ground for that question.

Mr. EVARTS. I thought I had occasion to ask it.

Mr. HOAR. What I undertake to say is exactly this: that where the citizen has come within the jurisdiction of the taxing power so that he is taxable either for personal estate or for real estate under the system of taxation, his remedy for an excess of taxation, as, for instance, if he is taxed for forty cows where he owns but one, if he is taxed for forty acres of land where he owns but one, if the real or personal property is held by the taxing power to belong to one class and not to another, so that a higher tax is imposed upon him, his remedy is by an appeal to the assessors, who are not judicial officers, but taxing officers, for an abatement. If he complain of their judgment he next goes to the county commissioners, a board of officers who are not judicial, but who are officers for a revision of the assessment; and if they decide against him their decision is final and conclusive as to all the world on all questions of value, and on all questions of fact; but if there be an error in law, pure and simple, he may apply to the supreme court, who, by writ of certiorari, will direct the proceedings to be brought before them, and so far as there be error in law—not error in fact, or error in value—they will revise the decision and order the commissioners to apply the true rule of law. For instance, suppose the commissioners in the town where my colleague resides should rule that his presence in Washington in the discharge of his official duties should have changed his residence so that he was not taxable in that town, and the town authorities should appeal from the action of their assessor, or suppose a person who had left Massachusetts was still taxed there, the question of law involved in settling that as a matter of domicile could be carried to the supreme court, but no question of the value of the property taxed, no question whether the man did or did not own the property on which taxes were due could he carried to the court. That Chief-Justice Shaw says is not a mere method of remedy provided by the existing statutes of Massachusetts; but is a matter fundamental to every kind of public taxation whatever.

Mr. EVARTS. That brings the law of Massachusetts, in the judgment of Chief-Justice Shaw, in consonance with perfectly well-established principles. The point now made is whether our importers are to be precluded from an appeal to judicial protection against illegal exaction; that is, whether the law shall allow an appeal to the courts. What I am now discussing about the fourteenth section is that it does not provide for that in a constitutional manner, and that the courts will not have jurisdiction under it.

Mr. BECK. Mr. President, I was a member of the subcommittee on Finance that was charged with the investigation of this important subject touching the collection of our revenues and the best method of securing uniform and honest taxation on true valuations. I do not propose to enter into an elaborate discussion of the question. I am content to stand on the law of the case as stated by the chairman of the subcommittee, the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON], supplemented as it has been by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR]. The decisions which have been read settle the legal questions involved. All the authorities agree that the power we propose to exercise is clearly constitutional. Therefore I do not care to elaborate the legal propositions.

Relative to questions of expediency, the committee had an immensely complicated duty to perform. It was discharged as well as we knew how to discharge it. The investigation was originated in the Treasury Department by Mr. Manning when Secretary of the Treasury. The work he did in order to get clear of the acknowledged evils of the existing system was to me perfectly marvelous. I never knew as much intelligent and well-directed labor performed by any man as Mr. Manning performed. He devoted all his great energies to it as long as he was able to do anything. Unfortunately he was stricken down in the midst of it. The committee consulted with him freely on all proper occasions, and worked in perfect accord with him; and his successor has kept up the work and furnished every facility in his power—personally and through his officials. There has been no politics or division among us. All that the committee desired was to do what would best secure uniformity in the collection of revenues, and fair, equal taxation, by preventing fraud. We went to work and continued our labors to the end with an eye single to that purpose. Not one political question or movement in that direction was ever suggested during all the time we were at work, as far as I can now recall.

We found a great many evils in the old system that were almost confessed even by those who objected to our propositions. They were so flagrant that unless something was done to remedy them it was doubtful whether honest importers could continue in the business, or whether the Government could collect its revenue at all with any semblance of justice. For example, it had almost become the rule, under a construction given by a former Attorney-General, that when a cargo or lot of goods landed and sought entry under a pro forma invoice, the regular invoice having been detained, six months was given within which to present a regular invoice, in nine cases out of ten the goods were gone and could no longer be reached, and when the regular invoice came it was of course fixed up to correspond with the pro forma invoice. Instead of having their invoices come on with their goods, men relied on the pro forma invoice and fixed up one afterwards within the six months allowed by law; there were no penalties for undervaluation under pro forma invoices as there are under regular invoices, so that fraudulent importers and their consignees and agents here relied on the pro forma invoice as the surest, safest, and easiest way to avoid penalties and advances in taxation, till what was granted to mitigate a hardship became a convenient method of perpetrating frauds.

Under the unscrupulous practices of foreign manufacturers and their agents and consignees here we found that the importing business of the country had been in great part transferred from legitimate American traders to men who were simply the agents of the manufacturers abroad, and that the agent here who could by hook or crook manage to cheat the Government most successfully was the man most sought after by his employer abroad as the most valuable consignee or silent partner. There was no sort of scruple about taking any sort of oath, so that the consignee could get his goods through the custom-house lower than anybody else. The unscrupulous ingenuity of these people thwarted all the efforts of our consuls abroad. They persistently refused to give our officials any information. They said the goods had no fixed market value at home, that they were made for this market, and they could not give our officers the price of them in the money of the country of manufacture, but they were made for delivery here. They were willing to give a certain rate in dollars and cents, delivered in New York, taking the chances of getting them through at low rates. Of course honest and respectable American merchants could not compete with them. We have by the bill we seek to pass endeavored to correct the worst, at least, of these evils, and I believe we have succeeded. If we have not, I, for one, much as I believe in low tariffs and liberal commercial arrangements, would make even more stringent laws, as nothing can be so injurious to trade as fraud, chicanery, and the shameless cheating which is perpetrated under the present system by men who have no interest except to make all they can out of us.

The present methods of ascertaining the true value of goods and of securing uniformity in rates are fatally defective. Now, the goods must be valued by a merchant appraiser as the principal factor. Proof was made before us that the merchant appraiser nine times out of ten is in combination with the importer. I may be a merchant appraiser for a friend to-day and he for me to-morrow. The result is that by combinations of that sort dishonest people, who do not hesitate to cheat the Government, get their goods in cheaper than honest men can. There can be no fair trade, and there is no respect for authority when these conditions exist. The leading idea of the committee—we all agreed on that—was that we should invest our officers with all the power possible, to enable them to ascertain what were the true facts in regard to the true value of the goods at the principal ports of the country from which they came on the day they were shipped, and we would require the foreign manufacturer to tell the truth or quit the trade. We did not care whether the shipper was a consignee, a manufacturer, a purchaser, or whether he received the goods by gift from somebody, or paid the fair market price. We sought to tax all goods of like character equally.

We have by this bill placed in the hands of our officers the power to ascertain the real value of the goods on the day they were shipped in the principal ports of the country from which they came, so that the United States may charge the same duty on all goods of like character and value when they reach the port of New York, or any other port of the United States, no matter how the importer got them—whether he purchased them for less than somebody else could goods of the same class or not. We have tried to fix it so that all imported goods of similar character shall pay the United States the same tax when they reach here. In short, we sought to secure, so far as it can be done by law, absolute justice and fair dealing among all importers of the same classes of goods brought to this country, and that each one should pay, as nearly as possible, the same tax to the United States. In order to do that we found that a change in the present system of appraisement and valuation was indispensable.

Instead of allowing the importers to pick out their own merchant appraisers by combinations and reciprocal bargains to manipulate their goods, we have sought to vest that authority in the hands of a non-partisan body of men; for this system is intended to apply and extend to all time, no matter what party is in power, so that there shall be no feeling among importers or merchants that politics has anything to do with this business. The appraisers are to be men selected regardless of party, or rather shall be men of high standing selected from both parties, so that merchants, dealers, and importers, whatever may be their politics, as well as honest merchants and manufacturers abroad, whatever may be their political feeling, may understand that the United States are not looking to politics in this business, but are endeavoring to select the best men possible for the duty to be discharged. Of course the system proposed will break up many existing organizations. That was one object we had in view. We provide that when our officers have thoroughly investigated a matter and passed upon it with care, the facts they find shall be conclusive; but if they have made a mistake as to the law in classification an appeal is allowed to the courts, so that if any question in regard to an error of law comes up the courts can settle it in a summary way.

Under the present system there is a body of men—many of them no doubt respectable—calling themselves lawyers, who hang around the great custom-houses of the country, playing the game Bussfuss played in the famous case of Bardell vs. Pickwick, taking cases on spec. After the entry has been liquidated and the merchant has got his goods, and the consumer has paid the price, then these gentlemen who are willing to take a fee of a half or a sum equal to half to avoid champerty, perhaps two-thirds of what may be recovered, take the chance of a suit to get the money back. Thus thousands and thousands of suits are brought against the United States, in which there is no real merit, that are often decided on the testimony of false witnesses, by a packed jury, or on the merest technicality. We intended to break up that system as far as we could, and we will do it by this bill, no doubt very much to the disgust of a very enterprising body of men.

I do not believe the United States should ever have a controversy with individuals if it can possibly be avoided. Therefore anything that stops suits meets my approval. We have done another thing, and perhaps the most important of all, and that is, as far as we could, to see to it that there should be uniformity at all the ports in the collection of our taxes. That good result I think this body of appraisers will bring about; I have no doubt of it. So that a man bringing his goods into Boston, Philadelphia, New York, New Orleans, or San Francisco, or transporting them to Chicago or elsewhere in the interior, shall pay the same tax, as the same body of men, or some of them, determine the rates of taxation everywhere. Three of them are always to be at the port of New York, and others at different ports of the country; and they can be called together at any place, or transferred by the Secretary of the Treasury from time to time. And we provide that there shall be a record kept of their proceedings, so that a thing once classified at any port shall pay the same duty at every port and be classified in the same way.

I regard it as more important than all else that the same duty shall be paid by every importer everywhere on similar goods, so that every purchaser in the country so far as the United States is concerned shall feel that he has not been taxed more than his neighbor who is dealing in the same article. The remedy we have adopted takes away inducements to fraud in every regard as far as we could devise means to that end, and makes the duties uniform at every port in the United States; it takes away many of the inducements that are now held out to foreign importers and their consignees and agents here to get things into the great port of New York at an undervaluation. The testimony showed in some consignments fraudulent agents carried goods to Hartford, Conn., because they had got hold of somebody there who would classify their gloves, I think it was, much lower than the appraisers in New York would. We were told by custom-house officers that that class of goods have gone to Hartford and come back to New York in twenty-four hours appraised at a lower rate than they would have been in New York. These and many other ingenious frauds we discovered as being systematically practiced.

I will not take up the time of the Senate by going over the testimony in detail or even stating what boards of trade in New York and Boston told us. The volume of testimony now on the desks of Senators illustrates the very remarkable workings of the present system and shows the great need of thorough reform. I believe the bill presented by the committee is a great improvement on the old law. Of course some modifications of it and of tariff taxation will have to be made, else taxation may be increased under the decisions of the Supreme Court construing the law of 1883. I do not know whether the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL], or myself, or the Finance Committee is responsible for the language of that law, but the court has construed its language to mean that all coverings of imported goods come in free of duty.

There are thousands of things that are brought in which have important and expensive coverings, and great injustice is now done. We have provided that goods shall be taxed, including all the coverings that may be offered for sale along with the goods covered, at the principal port of the country from which they are exported, to get clear of that obviously improper condition of things. The change will raise the tariff on some classes of goods. But that is all within the power of Congress. We can adjust our taxation so as to declare what amount or per cent. anything that may arrive shall be taxed, so that the change will work no wrong and make no increase. The change we make in regard to coverings was absolutely necessary in order to avoid great loss, and, I may say, great absurdity in construction. When the tax bill comes from the House there need be no trouble in inserting a provision to take care of any increase of duties on that account.

Mr. President, I do not propose to make a speech. I will only add that we worked at this measure very carefully; I think every change we made is an improvement. Strong efforts were made to induce us to give rewards and moieties to men who were doing our work as inducements to detect and expose frauds. That we steadily refused to do. We believed that we ought to find officers who are competent and honest, and if they are not we ought to dismiss them. We did not believe it was wise to go back to the old moiety system and reward officers in that way. When that question was up in 1874 I remember reading in my speech on that bill the report of the Senate select committee which had considered that matter in 1872. I will read it to the Senate, as it met my approval then and now. The select committee of the Senate on Retrenchment on July 4, 1872, made a report. The majority report used this language in regard to moieties:

> Moieties should not be allowed to officers of the customs except in the case of smuggled goods seized. It is the duty of these officers to assess and collect the duties on imports. It is their business not to permit any frauds upon the revenue. Attempts will be made to introduce merchandise upon our markets without payment of duty at all. Whoever defeats an attempt at smuggling should be allowed at least one-half the net proceeds of the goods condemned. But when goods are entered at the custom-house there should be no cheating in quantities or values. It is the duty of the officers of the customs to prevent that. Their salaries should be adequate to all the labor they perform and all the responsibility they assume. Still, in spite of diligence and fidelity, they will be sometimes circumvented. But the Government should not bribe them to be defrauded by holding up to them great fortunes for detecting the fraud. The husbandman who pays his harvester a meager salary for gathering grain, but offers him one-half for gleaning all that his own rake passes over, should not be surprised to learn that his servant rakes slovenly.

We agree that it was better to pay good salaries than hold out such inducements and tempt our servants to wink at dishonesty as a means of making money. Not desiring to occupy the time of the Senate, that is all I care to say.

Mr. HISCOCK. Mr. President, the bill under consideration proposes radical changes to the existing law. Under its provisions, if it is enacted into a law, many hundred millions of customs duties will be collected, and the fortune and prosperity of citizen and city will be involved. The bill comes here recommended unanimously by the Finance Committee. It was prepared after careful examination by a subcommittee of that committee, non-partisan in its character. The members of that subcommittee brought to their aid in the preparation of the bill the collector of the port of New York and many of the distinguished merchants of that city and Boston, and of other ports of entry. It has passed under the criticism of the Chamber of Commerce of New York, and I doubt not has been examined by all of the members of the Board of Trade of that city personally interested in foreign commerce. The merchants of Boston have examined it, too.

The members of the committee have taken great pains to place this bill in the hands of every person that they could imagine would be interested in its provisions. For some time it has been upon our Calendar, and I say, without fear of contradiction, that up to the present time not one word of protest has been received against it from merchants, from importers, from a member of a board of trade, or from the various boards of trade collectively, or from a member of the chamber of commerce of any of our great cities. Look through our files and you find no petition, remonstrance, or protest against it. No man has appeared before the committee of the Senate to protest against this bill. The only utterance that has found its way into print, so far as I know, against it is the anonymous brief issued by what may be a corporation or an association of individuals in the city of New York. Some man signs his name to that protest as the president of it. The members of that organization have not appeared here by committee; they have not appeared before the committee of the Senate that has had charge of this measure to ask for a hearing and to point out its demerits. Who compose this organization we do not know; it is without a body and doubtless without a soul. An unsubstantial, imaginary existence, so far as we know, alone protests against the passage of this bill.

It has been urged upon this floor that it is a restriction upon commerce, and that we were attempting to put obstacles in the way of commerce. What I have said about this bill being here by the unanimous report of the Committee on Finance is a sufficient refutation of that. What I have said about the collector of the port of New York acting with the committee in the formation of this bill is a refutation of that. That which has been said by the distinguished Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BECK], that it had the approval of Mr. Secretary Manning, is a refutation of that. But more than all this, the merchants of New York City, of Boston, of Baltimore, of Philadelphia, of Chicago, all over this broad land, importers favor the passage of this bill.

Now, sir, I concede that all this does not bear upon one question which is discussed here, but it does bear upon the charge that we are attempting to restrict commerce and that this is aimed to injure commerce; and most decidedly it bears upon the question of whether we should pass the bill or not if there is no constitutional objection in the way, and I dismiss this part of the case with that observation.

We are told, sir, that this bill is unconstitutional, first, because it does not provide a "case" by which importers as litigants may go before the courts; that the mode here provided of appealing, if you please, of removing the valuation and the classification into the courts, is not in form an action technically; and our attention is called to the language of the Constitution on this point, which speaks of "cases arising" under the provisions of law and against this officer and against that. My understanding of that word or phrase of the Constitution is that it is something broader than a mere technical action, as we understand it. It is something as to which parties have a difference. It is not so narrow in its meaning as to refer only to an action, as we understand it, or as it was understood at the time that provision of the Constitution was adopted. It is something in dispute. It is something as to which there are two parties, the one claiming his rights in this direction, the other controverting them. That, as I understand it, is all that is meant by this provision of the Constitution, and we provide in this bill that these proceedings may be removed into the circuit court by an order. Was it not competent for us to provide for that removal by a writ of certiorari?

The old judiciary act enacts that where Congress has failed to provide some legal remedy or form of remedy that prescribed by the State shall be adopted, and the review of all such tribunals as the board of appraisers provided in the pending bill in my State of New York, as in many others, is by writ of certiorari issuing to the inferior tribunal or to the board of officers that have the matter in their jurisdiction, removing the cause for review into a superior court. Does it make any substantial difference that we have provided that it shall go there upon an order? What is the writ of certiorari but an order issued from the court commanding the record to be brought into the court for its consideration and review? And we have provided here in simpler language, using the one word, that it shall be removed there by "order."

I dismiss now and here, then, this criticism that we do not provide for a mode of litigating the questions, "cases" if you please, in the manner as seems to have been contemplated by the Constitution, and go to the other questions which have been raised.

We are told that these provisions of the present bill are unconstitutional, first because we deny the right of trial by jury as to the valuation and classification of the goods upon which taxes are to be levied and collected under its provisions. We are told that it is unconstitutional because we deny or refuse the power to the court to pass upon questions of fact that are involved. Mr. President, for one, I deny that it is incumbent upon Congress in levying taxes, or in providing methods for their collection, to provide any manner, any method whatever by which the proceedings shall be reviewed by the courts. I say that Congress is supreme in the matter of taxation and collecting revenue, and that is the only question which is involved here; that having given to a board of taxing officers jurisdiction of the subject-matter, it is not incumbent upon Congress to provide for a review of their action either as to the law or to the facts by an appeal to the circuit or to the Supreme Court of the United States.

It is not my purpose to go over all the cases on this point. The books are full of them. The distinguished Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] has referred to many, and others will be referred to in the progress of the discussion, and there is not a case in which an action has been sustained by the courts that did not depend upon a statute giving to the plaintiff the right to maintain it. There is no common-law action in the Federal courts. And shall I be told that if we refuse an action to the importer, if we make the decision of the board of appraisers final both in reference to the law and the facts, the whole system fails? Is that the argument? And shall it be said that it is incumbent upon Congress to provide for a review of all taxation which may be levied, by the courts of the United States?

That is not the law in a single State of the Union so far as I know, and in no case will the courts interfere to suspend the collection of a tax, even if there has been fraud or malfeasance practiced on the part of the board that levied it. The tax will be collected. The party may have his remedy against the board that levied it for malfeasance or for fraud, but so far as the Government is concerned he has none, and he has no power to recover it back from the Government.

I have here before me one case, in which the decision was delivered by Mr. Justice Clifford, where the question was up of the right of a party to maintain his action to review the levying of taxes upon him or his property by a collector of internal revenue, and there this language is used by that distinguished jurist:

> Remedies of the kind given by Congress may be changed or modified, or they may be withdrawn altogether, at the pleasure of the lawmaker, as the tax-payer can not have any vested right in the remedy granted by Congress for the correction of an error in taxation.

The remedy is given to him as a matter of grace entirely. The Government say, "We will give you a chance to review according to certain methods." It is true that in most of the cases which have been referred to the question arose where there was a failure to file the proper notice, or to file some notice which was essential for bringing the matter up for review, jurisdictional; and in all those cases the court said, "Having failed to file this notice, you have lost your action." Why? Because your action is a matter of grace to you on the part of the United States. You have no vested right to your action whatever; it is given to you by the grace of Congress; reserving the right to take it away from you when it seems proper, and Congress is the judge of that. You have no property or vested right that is involved. The law-making powers may give you the right of review by action or in this way, but whenever they please and as they please they have the absolute right to remove the restriction.

There is not one of these cases that I have found, and I have examined, I imagine, nearly all there are bearing upon this question, where the court has not decided it upon this distinct doctrine that the right to bring the action rests upon the statute; it rests upon the grace of the Government; it rests upon the act of Congress; and the act of Congress may be repealed and the grace may be withdrawn.

It has been held in one of the cases which has been referred to that the decision of a board of appraisers is final as to the question of valuation. Does not that cover the whole question? Why, then, is not their decision final as to all the facts which bear upon the matter of classification? Where is the distinction to be drawn between the two? Upon that point we have the decision of the highest tribunals in the country.

Mr. President, this is an important question, as it seems to me. The whole taxing power of the United States is involved in it. The question is presented here whether we can enact into law rules regulating the collection of taxes and provide that the decision of the officers who levy and collect them shall be final, or it is incumbent upon Congress to grant an appeal to or provide a review by the courts.

Bear in mind in this connection that the courts depend for their jurisdiction upon Congress. If it is absolutely necessary and indispensable as to every taxing law passed by Congress that we shall provide for a review of the taxing tribunal or of the taxing board by the courts, then that review is by tribunals whose jurisdiction is by the Constitution to be fixed and changed by Congress at its discretion.

Possibly some of the amendments which have been suggested here are unimportant in practice it is; they may be in the minds of some members of the Senate, but to me it is a surrendering of the power of Congress to tax as it pleases when it has jurisdiction over the subject, by what methods it pleases, by what officers it pleases, in a public debate in the United States Senate, and placing upon our record that Congress has not the power to collect customs taxes and all other taxes for that matter in this country without submitting the questions involved in the levying and collection of those taxes to a trial in our courts and before a jury. I do not know how long then it would be before the claim would be made that an injunction would lie, to be issued by a court, restraining the levying and the collection of taxes, and the taxing power of the Government be destroyed, putting it in the power of suitors to tie it up, thus striking at the very existence of the Government.

I concede, from a careful review of the decided cases and the principles upon which they were decided, that there is not one of them in which the facts are precisely as those presented by this bill. I grant that the question has not been presented whether it is necessary in a tax law to provide in terms for an appeal to the courts. It has been stated by the distinguished Senators who have presented amendments to the bill that that precise case has not been presented; but there are cases, numberless almost, where the right of action depends upon a statute, and the courts say it is in the power of Congress to repeal that statute and leave the party without any remedy whatever; that it is a matter of grace on the part of the Government that the party has his right of action. All of these cases have decided the principle which I maintain: that the power to tax, the power to levy imposts, is not constitutionally crippled by being subjected to an interference on the part of the courts, depending for their jurisdiction upon the same power which creates the taxing statute in the first instance.

Sir, a clause of the Constitution has not been pointed to by the Senators from New York and Vermont that contains a provision that the courts must be invoked in the administration of our tax laws. In all the provisions of the Constitution combined there does not lurk that fundamental weakness, so great and dangerous that we have but lately passed through a crisis when it might have imperiled the Government. On the other hand, the Constitution provides that Congress shall have the power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises; not by and with the aid of the courts, but alone. That great authority and responsibility was conferred upon the law-making power—not upon the judiciary, nor to both combined; in times of war, yes, in times of peace—if it were, the Administration might be so slow as to suffer the Executive Departments to languish without their necessary support and the public debts as they matured to be dishonored. It was committed to Congress to regulate commerce with foreign nations. That responsibility is not divided with the judiciary either. Congress in exercising both these functions may call to its aid the courts in construing the statutes it passes, under the provisions of the Constitution, that it may create courts, defining their jurisdiction; that is just to the citizen and those with whom we have commercial relations abroad, but it would be vicious, if not a crime, to concede that it was in obedience to constitutional command or in deference to limitations upon its power, and for one, I would regret to see the Senate voluntarily abdicate, so far as it can, the jurisdiction of Congress; it would be nothing else, if when challenged, as it is here to-day, the amendments offered by the Senators from New York and Vermont should be adopted.

Mr. President, I believe it is a duty upon the part of Congress to enact into law the bill which has been presented by the Committee on Finance. As to a restriction upon commerce, can it be said that we are attempting to interfere with the free interchange of commodities under our laws? Why, sir, when customs laws are established by a government (and it seems to be conceded that some sort of customs laws must exist, and should properly exist on the part of the Government, to some extent at least), it is the duty of that government to provide such measures for the levying and the collection of the taxes that the merchants of the country and the merchants of foreign countries will not be compelled to enter into a race with every thief and every criminal as to which one shall cheat the most in respect to the entry of his goods for the levying of taxes upon them.

The honest merchants have the right to demand that we shall give them laws they may live under, trade under, export to this country under, and be honest. They have the right to demand laws that will detect fraud and fraudulent undervaluations. They have the right to demand of us that we pass laws, and see to their execution and enforcement, that will permit them to make their conscientious, honest invoices to the country, and, as I said a little while ago, so that they will not be compelled to compete with every dirty scoundrel who crosses the sea in respect to the importation of goods. That is the question involved between the bill which is pending here and the law as it stands upon the statute-book.

It has been ascertained by the committee, it has been ascertained by the Secretary of the Treasury and by the collector of New York and by previous Secretaries of the Treasury and previous collectors, that under the law the fraudulent importer, the dishonest man, can secure an advantage over the honest importer and the honest man and practically drive him from the market. Therefore it is that the committee have gone through this bill section by section in respect to the invoices that shall be prepared, in respect to the prices that shall be entered upon the invoices, in respect to all of the facts that have been read and commented upon so often here—it is unnecessary for me to refer to them—and they have gone one step farther and put into the bill provisions which render it easy on the part of the Government and on the part of rivals in trade to ascertain fraud, if it has been practiced, and defeat it.

No, sir; this bill is not aimed against commerce. It is a protection to commerce, as I have stated, in that it provides that all importers, both here and abroad, shall stand equally before the law, and that this Government will not permit a premium to be offered to fraudulent practices and devices.

This is the reason why, without a single exception, the New York merchants approve or have not opposed it. Both the Senators from Massachusetts are upon the floor. I appeal to them if a whisper of opposition to this measure has come from the merchants or importers who enter their goods at the numerous ports of entry in that great State. The Senator from Rhode Island is upon the floor. Has he heard a whisper of opposition on the part of those people residing in his State or out of it who avail themselves of the ports of entry in that State for the delivery of foreign merchandise? All along our seacoast and in our interior towns, wherever there are men engaged in foreign trade, wherever there is foreign trade, this bill has been scattered; and there is not, as I have said, a man who has filed in the Senate, or has had presented to the Senate, his protest against it.

Yet if the bill is unconstitutional I suppose we must abandon it. It is desired by honest men everywhere, and is only attacked by an anonymous pamphlet. One name is signed to it I grant, but I can go through the report of the testimony which has been submitted to the Senate and disclose to the Senate five hundred cases of undervaluation in which that importer or the consignee raised his own schedule, and then it was raised subsequently. The only one who signs that protest against the bill was, I will not say guilty, for it may have been a mistake, but he was the man interested in these undervaluations. Whom he represents no one knows, as I have stated; he represents an anonymous association which may be a myth. The probability is that he himself is practically the only one interested in the question. At least he is the only one who has had the hardihood to put in an appearance either before the committee or before the Senate.

I suppose that if the bill is unconstitutional it must fail, but I beg Senators to hesitate before they vote that it must fail because either the right of a trial by jury of a question of fact or the trial of a question of fact by the court is denied to the importer, to the merchant, to the consignee, or whoever is interested in that question.

Mark you, sir, as to any question of law, we allow that, as a matter of grace, to be taken to the courts. Understand me, I do not yield it as a matter of right, but as a matter of grace we allow parties to go to the courts upon all questions of law. These appraisers may not be skilled in questions of law, but they should be skilled in questions of fact. One of the suggestions made here yesterday was that it was proposed to have the question tried before the court whether particular articles were woolen goods or cotton goods or wool or cotton; and I suppose it is to be claimed here that the Government is compelled under the Constitution to send to the courts in reference to taxation all questions of fact as to whether certain articles are woolen goods or cotton goods, wool itself or cotton itself, which has been entered at the custom-house. That I deny.

Yes, the question is whether it must be sent to the courts to decide whether an article imported is iron or sugar, and the argument is that unless you submit that question to a jury this proposed law is unconstitutional. That is the argument on the part of one of the distinguished Senators who oppose this bill, and upon the part of the other that you must submit the question to a court or else your taxing law is unconstitutional. It seems to me that I have not overstated the gravity of this question, and I have failed to state and illustrate its ridiculousness.

Many questions arise under the statute which need interpretation by distinguished lawyers and judges; send them to the courts as a matter of grace and wise administration. This bill proposes that because hundreds of millions may be involved in the decision of them. In a question of the construction of a statute let the courts pass upon it; but as to the facts, whether the goods are cotton, or woolen, or worsted, or silk, or whether they are iron, or steel, or lead, or copper, let that fact be found and be certified by this board of appraisers.

There is a great deal involved in this bill in reference to relieving the Government. The bill practically provides for a summary disposition of most of these questions, or provides at least for such disposition as will result in summary action upon them. These appraisers will look at the goods that are entered, and they will pass upon them and tell what they are, whether they are of wool, or cotton, or silk; every one will be entirely satisfied. But if there must be suits over the questions, as it has been argued there must be under the peculiar language of the Constitution in using the word "cases," then the suits must be tried. Under the law, samples must be preserved; they may be lost and witnesses may die, and days, weeks, and months will be consumed in the trial of these questions of fact, whereas if they were passed upon in the first instance by a tribunal or by a board or by officers in whom every one had confidence summarily finding the facts and stating them and filing them in the collector's office, all this vexatious delay, all the long litigations would be obviated, and the claims which are constantly being presented to Congress for the repayment of duties which have been collected on the part of the Government would cease to be longer presented.

The merchants desire to have the bill passed. Why? They want it because it provides for a speedy determination of every question between them and the Government. They do not want litigations which in the end assume a speculative character. Speedy determination is what they desire, and if the Government has imposed too high a rate of duty upon their goods they have the right to demand a law which will quickly restore it to them. Not one of them has been found to protest against this measure.

Mr. President, with the vast interests involved in this bill, would you undertake to calculate the number of distinguished lawyers in the United States who have reviewed it line by line and section by section? But, sir, they have not reviewed in the interest of defeating it. They have reviewed it in the interest of their clients, and it has been presented to them, I doubt not, in many cases, I know in some, in which the merchant has said, "How about the administration of the law under this provision?" and client and counsel have sat down together and reviewed and gone over it, line by line and section by section, and not a word of objection has come from those gentlemen who in that way have discussed and examined the measure. In several instances words of commendation have come, and with the bill in their possession, after having examined it in that way, a failure to criticise on their part seems to me is an approval of the measure.

Mr. EVARTS. Mr. President, I have no occasion to reply in any considerable degree to the topics introduced by my colleague [Mr. HISCOCK] with regard to this bill. Probably my colleague does not intend to represent me as in any attitude of hostility to this measure.

Mr. HISCOCK. Oh, not at all.

Mr. EVARTS. As he is in favor of it, I am trying to make it a bill that will carry out his views. If the final action of this body were to settle the constitutional question in debate here, I might be very indifferent to it. What I am endeavoring to provide against is a failure of the bill after it passes the Senate and the other body and is approved by the President. I want this section to be so framed that the bill will be in force and be a law.

It is nothing to say that the importers and the merchants have not weighed and raised the question as to its being a constitutional measure. I will even go further and say that if you will leave it to the judgment of the importers and those who desire the protection of law, they would prefer this ready, and prompt, and rapid method of having their questions settled by the Supreme Court of the United States, and I will agree that they would like to plant the circuit court and then the docket here with a supervision of the question of the classification as promptly, as readily, as easily as the question is now passed upon before the appraisers. I will yield all that, and say that every one of these importers would regret to see this section changed. That is not the question I am arguing.

I put the question distinctly to the chairman of the subcommittee, the Senator from Iowa, who has charge of the bill from the Finance Committee, what the consequence was of the bill if it were passed and section 14 was held to be unconstitutional. I said to him, you repeal all the present arrangements of our law regulating, curbing, defining, restraining, correcting the pursuit of this judicial recourse. I said to him, in my judgment all that falls, and he agreed with me, as the Senate will agree.

I then put the further proposition that if it be so, and if this enactment does not take the place of that as law, then the importer, or the aggrieved party is to be exactly where he was at common law, with a right to sue anybody who has taken his property away contrary to law. It is not contrary to law in regard to the method of appraisement, but it is contrary to law if, when the statute said that 10 per cent. should be paid, 40 per cent. has been paid. Then the 30 per cent. is taken contrary to law, and the man stands in his natural position as a citizen, that whoever has committed that wrong against him is to be made responsible to him; and all the statutes which throw a protection around him are no protection if the law has not authorized him to do what he has done.

I am trying to make this a bill that will answer the purposes of the suppression of fraud. It is idle to talk about criticisms upon the Constitution. If it be good, very well; but if it be bad, the consequences can not be determined here.

Let us understand what is the subject-matter within discussion now of this measure, which is purely a constitutional question. It does not touch at all the questions that are referred to in the general observations of the commentator, Judge Cooley. He is dealing there, as every one who has read his language knows, with whether the intervention of protection by a jury is necessary in the processes by which taxation is placed and is levied.

So, too, with the judgment in Massachusetts, which has been cited. It is precisely to the same effect, and not beyond that; and I understand the Senator from Massachusetts to agree that when there is anything taken from a citizen contrary to law there is a remedy, and he has referred to a remedy which is familiar to common-law jurisdictions, and that is by certiorari directly to revise the very thing by a board or an inferior tribunal. But in our jurisprudence, under the Constitution of the United States, we have no common-law power. We can not, by certiorari or an analogy to certiorari, thrust into a court of the United States what would, under the general jurisdiction of common-law courts, properly be brought there in a summary manner.

The difficulty is that the whole frame-work of our jurisprudence and jurisdiction, a wise, a great, and a substantial line of definition of the basis of the whole judicial power of the United States, is that our courts shall be open to persons having litigations there, describing all the circumstances which give opportunity to have recourse to the Federal courts. There is not one word of constitutional power that does not use the phrase "cases at law or in equity," depending sometimes upon the subject-matter and at other times upon the relation of citizenship between plaintiff and defendant.

That these subjects have not been overlooked, let me call attention, not at length, to the undisputed disposition of questions which have arisen:

> For the judicial power to extend to a violation of the Constitution it must be "a case in law or in equity" in which a right under such law is asserted in a court of justice. Seeking protection under a law is a case arising under that law.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> A case in law or equity consists of the right of one party as well as of the other, and it arises when its correct decision depends on the construction of the Constitution or laws of the United States. It is a suit instituted according to the regular course of judicial procedure; it is limited to such as are between parties, or are of a judicial nature, and does not include political questions. When the subject-matter of a controversy is political, it is beyond the domain of the judiciary, as where it involves the existence de jure of the Government, or the legality of some act or proceeding purely governmental. Cases at law include suits in which legal rights are to be ascertained and determined as distinguished from those where equitable rights are administered, etc.

We can not discuss this matter at large about the jurisdiction of State courts or about a review by certiorari, because we are within the strict limits of the Constitution, and the transcendent power of passing on the great topics that are accorded turns distinctly upon this matter.

If section 14 opens a court between parties for the enforcement of a right by one party against another that by the judgment of the court is to be disposed of and settled, there is a "case" in which there is a prosecution by one party against another for a judgment which is to end in an execution, or in the case of the Government there is substituted the obligation of the country. I say if the Senate can settle that question, it is not of very great importance to me or to the interests that I am contending for, because I am not contending for any interest of a private nature, or of a public nature in the sense of rights of individuals; I am only invoking adherence to constitutional obligation, and nothing else.

The Senator from Iowa has said that there were decisions to be found in our reports that did not come up to that proposition, and I waited to hear what they were. The first one is that of the Swartwout defalcation, where, under a statute passed in the very earliest legislation of this country, a warrant was issued sequestrating the property of Swartwout on a defalcation according to the method there provided. The question was judicially whether that was constitutional, and it was held to be constitutional only because it was the mode of beginning a suit by the Government against the person interested, which gave him an opportunity to come in and as a defendant to meet there by the proceeding of a counter-suit what was thus commenced only by this peremptory sequestration.

I have not looked at the case for many years. I need not advert to the discussion there, whether, as it was and had been, a matter consistent with the common law, as it was supposed, as administered for a long period of years, that exchequer sequestrations against a debtor of the king or a defaulter to the king might be and were sufficient, according to that system, and therefore it might be held that our constitutional inhibition would not apply to a special sequestration of that nature, but all went off on the ground that this was the beginning of a suit, and that it did not determine the right, but it did commence a right which the other party could come in and defend, and in defending use such methods of counter-suit, of equity or otherwise, as were suitable.

Another case is referred to in which I had the honor to take part as Attorney-General, and which is reported in 7 Wallace. That was a case from the Court of Claims, and I will state the only question so far as it is material here. It does not touch the question that I am discussing, but the question there will be easily understood. If an excessive tax had been imposed upon an importer by legal arrangements or statutes, it was a condition to his pursuing his remedy at law that he should have made a protest and given notice and taken what are the ordinary steps which belong to the administration of justice and right. A party who had not that right came into the Court of Claims and undertook to get a judgment in the Court of Claims on the ground that from the very nature of the subject the court was open, and that in that court this condition did not prevail. The court held that it did prevail; that is, that the condition was necessary to a recovery anywhere, and then as a general observation that the law might make any regulations of that nature that it saw fit in regard to the exaction of taxes. That I will not dispute here, for it relates to the processes of procedure antecedent to a right of suit. That disposes of that case, and it was rightly decided, I have no doubt; at any rate it was decided according to the views which I there presented.

The question is wholly here whether this is a suit at law or in equity, brought into jurisdiction in the way and in the manner the Constitution requires. I have been unable to trace the specific amendments proposed by the Senator from Vermont, no doubt pressed with a view of relieving the measure from unconstitutionality, in the very brief and limited attention that can be given to it. Let me have it understood, however, that closing our courts against those subject to the exactions of revenue is one thing. I am not even discussing that question; I am only saying that you have opened a method here that is not constitutional, and you have then left it to stand upon the only method, that at common law. There is not anywhere found in the preceding sections or in the subsequent sections any denial of the right of an aggrieved person to have a suit.

Mr. ALDRICH. I am sure the Senator would not make that statement if he had read the bill carefully. If he will read the twenty-first section, I think he will find just that denial.

Mr. EVARTS. Very well; that does not affect my argument.

Mr. ALDRICH. Undoubtedly it is denied by the twenty-first section.

Mr. EVARTS. Then the situation is different from what I supposed; but it does not touch what is my present argument. If the fourteenth section is stricken out, then there is no recourse to the courts. That is absolutely prohibited, as you understand. That is one question, and to that I will agree. Whether the Senate intends to pass a law of that kind without substituting a judicial determination, we are not called upon to determine now. You have not intended to shut out a recourse to law for a grievance of that kind, for you do undertake to provide a sufficient remedy. If you do not provide a sufficient remedy, then the judicial question would be whether it is constitutional to preclude a right of suit from the general right of a citizen.

Mr. ALDRICH. I should like to ask the Senator if he does not think that precise question was decided in the case of Cary vs. Curtis, in 3 Howard?

Mr. EVARTS. I shall take up that case in a few moments. So either way it is of the greatest importance that it should be understood whether this is a valid provision for recourse. If it does give a good one, and it should be so held by the courts, that is very good. There would then be an inconvenience, as I think, from the fact that these reconsiderations of the classifications would obtrude themselves very rapidly into the courts. But that is not a matter of constitutional consideration.

I am willing that there should be a very limited right of recourse. Down to the end of section 13 you have so provided that rapidly things are to be brought to a head and to a final conclusion between the importer and the Government. If you provide, as you do, that only within thirty days the dissatisfied party, the Government or the importer, can go into the courts, to that I have no objection. Then, on the matters we are now deliberating about, I have no objection to any rapidity that can be given to the course of this litigation that it is in the power of the Government to afford in respect to its judicial attention and disposition of the questions involved.

But we ought not to deceive ourselves when we have full knowledge that a judicial question can not be disposed of as a pro forma right. A recourse for a grievance to a court of justice is to have the right of the aggrieved party passed upon and determined according to law, and judicial methods, and judicials conclusions. All of us have a right to that. Importers have it just the same as any other citizens. Foreign countries have a right to see that our courts are open properly to their subjects for suits, and, as we all know, a denial of that forms a subject of reproach, and of negotiation, and of redress, which we would have from other nations, and which we are bound to accord to them. Therefore we must have somewhere or other a judicial determination, as it seems to me, in order to accord with the ordinary principles of our freedom, and our legislation, and our Constitution. Procedure and method may be simplified and accelerated, and required to be attended by all careful and vigilant consideration and disposition by the aggrieved party.

I would be quite willing that the decision of the circuit court in such a case should be final. It is not necessary that every suitor should have a right to all appeals, and after these processes of the official appraisements are satisfied in their different stages, as we are an upright Government, with upright officers, as we assume at least to be, I would be quite satisfied that there should not be any further agitation of the question, leaving it to be relieved by Congress, if it was found that there were diverse decisions in different courts, because it is not a matter, after all, which relates to anything but the regulation of the exaction of taxes, which is a plenary topic, always open for discussion in Congress.

If I have made this understood, it will be seen that it is purely a question as to whether this is a valid judicial power accorded to the courts, and that is what I am now presenting. I do not now discuss the question whether it is a fair discharge of duty towards the aggrieved suitor. I can easily see how simple that question is, and how Senators must vote upon it.

It is not necessary, as my colleague has suggested, to assume that if we can not pass the fourteenth section, therefore we can not pass the bill, and that we can not suppress fraud, and can not collect taxes and regulate appraisements. Not at all. There is but the narrowest possible question involved, and that is whether you shall put the fourteenth section on a footing that shall carry out the propositions which you wish to carry out, and that all this valuable legislation shall be made vigorous in this last point as well as in all the others.

On the subject of the decision made in 1839, I have in convenient form before me references to as much as is necessary to bring out exactly what did occur. In 1836 there was a decision in the case of Elliot vs. Swartwout, reported in 10 Peters, and decided in January, 1836. After that there came a new law passed on the 3d of March, 1839, which required collectors of customs to place to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States all moneys they received from unascertained duties or for duties paid under protest. It is not necessary to call attention to that provision beyond a single observation. Before that time the collector, upon being notified that he had in his hands money illegally extracted from an importer, was obliged to pay it out of his own pocket if it should turn out that it was received because of illegal exaction. Under that provision the claim was that the collector could keep that money and not turn it into the Treasury, because it might appear that he must account for it personally to the aggrieved importer. This law was passed, therefore, to meet that difficulty, and the Swartwout defalcation had taken place under that existence of habit and of law. Then the question was whether that did not destroy all recourse at law, because the law had prevented Swartwout from keeping the money. The majority of the court in Cary vs. Curtis, in 3 Howard, however, held that it did not end these suits against the collector. Let me call attention to the dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice Story and Mr. Justice McLean from this decision of the majority, for it is in language not only better than I can use but is with the authority of a great judge on this vital question. Says Mr. Justice Story:

> The question, stripped of all formalities, is neither more nor less than this: Whether Congress have a right to take from the citizens all right of action in any court to recover back money claimed illegally, and extorted by compulsion, by its officers under color of law, but without any legal authority, and thus to deny them all remedy for an admitted wrong, and to clothe the Secretary of the Treasury with the sole and exclusive authority to withhold or restore that money according to his own notions of justice or right? If Congress may do so in the present case, in the exercise of its power to levy and collect taxes and duties, and thus take away from all courts, State and national, all right to interpret the laws for levying and collecting taxes and duties, and to confide such interpretation to one of its own executive functionaries, whose judgment is to be at once summary and final, then I must say that it seems to me to be not what I have hitherto supposed it to be, a Government where the three great departments—legislative, executive, and judicial—had independent duties to perform each in its own sphere; but the judicial power, designated by the Constitution to be the final and appellate jurisdiction to interpret our laws, is superseded in its most vital and important functions.
>
> I know of no power, indeed, of which a free people ought to be more jealous than that of levying taxes and duties; and yet if it is to rest with a mere executive functionary of the Government absolutely and finally to decide what taxes and duties are leviable under a particular act, without any power of appeal to any judicial tribunal, it seems to me that we have no security for the rights of the citizens; and if Congress possess a constitutional authority to vest such summary and final power of interpretation in an executive functionary, I know no other subject within the reach of legislation which may not be exclusively confided in the same way to an executive functionary, nay, to the Executive himself. Can it be true that the American people ever contemplated such a state of things as justifiable or practicable under our Constitution? I can not bring my mind to believe it, and therefore I repeat it, with the most sincere respect for my brethren who entertain a different opinion, I deny the constitutional authority of Congress to delegate such functions to any executive officer, or to take away all right of action for an admitted wrong and illegal exercise of power in the levy of money from the injured citizens. I am further of opinion, as I shall endeavor presently to show, that Congress never had contemplated passing any such act, and that the act of 3d March, 1839, chapter 82, section 2, neither requires nor, in my humble judgment, justifies such an interpretation.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> If Congress have a right to say, and have said, under the provisions of that act, that no officer of the customs shall be liable to any action for money extorted by him under color of his office without authority and against law, then these provisions are equally applicable to all courts and furnish the rule of decision for all; and Congress have an equal right to apply a like provision to all other acts of all other officers done under color of office, and the trial by jury may, in suits at common law, be completely taken away in such cases, and the right of final decision be exclusively vested in the Executive, or any other public functionary, at the pleasure of Congress.

This dissenting opinion made an impression not only upon the public conscience and upon the public interests, but upon Congress that was in session at the time; and what followed? This act was passed under the immediate impression of the repugnance of any such legislation to the authority of the court, as pronounced by the dissenting judges, Story and McLean. The act was immediately passed, of February 26, 1845, referring to section 2 of the act of 1839, declaring that nothing contained in that section should take or be construed to take away or impair the right of any person or persons who had paid or should thereafter pay money—

> As and for duties under protest to any collector of the customs, or other person acting as such, in order to obtain goods, wares, or merchandise imported by him or them, or on his or their account, which duties are not authorized or payable in part or in whole by law; to maintain any action at law against such collector, or other person acting as such; to ascertain and try the legality and validity of such demand and payment of duties, and to have a right to trial by jury touching the same, according to the due course of law.

I do not want the fourteenth section to contain anything but a provision that the parties aggrieved by the final result of the official appraisement shall have opened to them the circuit courts, under such guaranties of immediate recourse, of prompt disposition, of final disposition, if you please, as may be provided. But the principles announced in the language of Story are sound and true, whatever may be thought of the technical and actual power that may be exerted, that it is against the right to have official power suppress the citizen's recourse to justification by law.

I leave out entirely the question whether there needs to be in this court any question of fact determined or any trial by jury. I only wish you to say that when you have come to the final official disposition of the matter, if a citizen has suffered an exaction contrary to law the court may be opened to him to have such recourse as will give a case judicially open for determination, to result in a determination of the plaintiff's right against some defendant who represents the Government.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, I am compelled to vote against the bill very much to my regret. To my mind it is a very plain infraction of the Constitution. It is not only the bill itself, but the arbitrary principles upon which it is supported that compel me to resist it.

It is contended that the Government has a right to select a non-judicial tribunal for a proper construction of the law and of the exercise of authority under it. However courts may have decided the question and the extent to which the power of taxation may go, I am sure that it can not be questioned that Congress, the representative of the people, should be careful not to vest arbitrary power over the property of the citizen in any private citizen or executive officer—power to be exercised without appeal, power to make a final valuation of property, and to say that property which is worth only a dollar shall be valued and taxed as a thousand dollars, and to take possession of that property by virtue of that action and dispose of it as if a judicial tribunal, after a fair trial, had so decided to have the law declared, that the citizen and the courts shall be bound by this action, and that the officer thus violating the law himself can not be held amenable upon proof of his wrongful act in any judicial tribunal neither then nor thereafter. Why, Mr. President, what grounds of public policy are there to justify, if this body had the power, the exercise of it in this manner?

I deny that the established decisions of the courts have gone to this extent. The interpretation of the law, as stated by the learned Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS], is, in my judgment, entirely correct; and while there may be expressions of opinion by judges of courts which would extend the doctrine much further than he has stated, yet it is true that it has not been finally decided—certainly not by the Supreme Court of the United States—that when, under color of law, but in violation of the statute law, an officer has seized the property of the citizen and disposed of it wrongfully, that citizen has not the right to say, "You can not justify yourself under the law, because the law does not authorize you to value my property wrongfully, or to tax me on a different kind of property from that which I have, and the statute which says I shall not have the right to hold you amenable for a trespass, for an unlawful act, is of no force or effect, because it is contrary to the very fundamental principles of the Government."

You leave the collector to collect the tax; but the arm of the judicial power can not be stayed. When the wrong is consummated you can not deny the right to redress and say, "You have not done this under the authority of law; you have violated law, and that provision which says that a man shall not be responsible for wrongs-doing must fall to the ground and can not be sustained." The complaint of the citizen in that case before the judicial power is that the law authorized the officer to collect a certain sum of money, and he demanded an amount which the law forbade him to demand, and he seized and sold the property because of the failure to pay an unlawful demand.

If for argument's sake we should admit that such a law could be made, as a mere exercise of power, on what ground of public policy can such a robbery be justified?

Mr. President, let us apply the principles which the Senator from Iowa has asserted in defense of this bill to a case which might occur. Let us suppose that the distinguished Senator had gone to China, and that the provisions of the bill excluding the Chinese from this country contained a similar provision to that of this bill, authorizing the collector of the port of San Francisco to decide who was a Chinaman and who was not, and that upon the Senator's return that collector should say, "You are not the Senator from Iowa; you are a Chinaman;" and in the terms of the law say, as the statute here says, "My decision in this case is final and conclusive upon the question; the facts found and certified by me shall be final and conclusive upon the courts." The Senator from Iowa applies for a writ of habeas corpus and says, "I am not a Chinaman; I am the Senator from Iowa;" and the court replies to him, "But your law says that the finding of the collector shall be final and conclusive upon the facts, and I am bound to decide that you are a Chinaman."

Mr. President, the mere statement of such a proposition shows how impossible it is that such a conclusion can be sustained. This is precisely the case presented by this bill, and this is the law which is sought to be enacted by it. It makes no difference that the one is the property rights of a citizen, and the other his right respecting his personal liberty, and his personal rights; both are rights, and both equally under the protection of the law and the judicial power.

But the Constitution does not contemplate a board of appraisers or any non-judicial body of persons as having the power of final and conclusive judgment, and you can not make the opinions of four or five executive officers or any other number binding upon the department which is intrusted with the power of deciding as to the rights of citizens.

That is not all that is remarkable here. In my opinion, it is a bill which imposes great burdens upon the consumers of imported goods in this country. It increases in a material and vexatious manner the cost of importations. It provides, in the first place, that you shall not buy in any district abroad in which there is not a consul resident, because your are required to have the certificate of a resident consul.

It is true there is another provision of the bill which says if you can swear that it was impracticable, and prove that it was impracticable to have the invoices and bills of sale submitted to a consular resident they may be admitted to entry in the district, and it might be, where there was none to submit it to, the importer would be relieved from the penalty of not complying with this provision; but wherever there is a consular resident, at whatever distance he may be from the place of purchase, you must send to him the bills of sale or invoice or history of the original and private transaction between the parties, not to show the market price, but to show the actual transaction between the two individuals. Of what value is that except for the purpose of convicting some person of a fraud? It is the market value in that place that should be the test. While there may be some other obscure and contradictory provisions of the bill making the market value the basis of valuation, that is unquestionably the force and effect of the first and second sections of the bill.

Then, when the goods arrive at a port of this country, the bill imposes conditions that are unnecessary and vexatious. When these goods have been brought upon the shore, you are not content with a simple provision that bond shall be given. If the officer be an honest one, what difficulty is there, upon the entry of a cargo of goods in any port—unless the whole body of that community be fraudulent and corrupt, unless the judge and all the officers and the ministerial power of the court can not be relied upon—what difficulty is there in ascertaining under process of law in each case by a jury of merchants the market value of the goods? The United States judge is there to reverse any verdict of a jury or any action of a ministerial officer. If the evidence be against the verdict, the United States court has the power to set it aside. Why, then, these long and minute and vexatious provisions, except on the assumption that you can not find honest and capable men amongst the merchants or importers whose verdict can be relied on, and the further assumption that by virtue of being appointed an appraiser a man becomes both honest and intelligent in the performance of his duty? This is not true in any respect, either as to the merchants or the appraisers. There can be no objection to having a board of appraisers, but there can be no good reason given for making their judgment and their action and that of the Secretary of the Treasury final and conclusive as to the rights of the citizen.

Mr. President, this bill, in my judgment, invites more fraud than was possible to be committed under the former system. It deprives the judicial power and the citizen of that immediate access to relief which is proper to be had, and it gives immunity to arbitrary and fraudulent methods.

It is said that there have been too many complaints, too many suits. Why should not every man be allowed to complain to the courts and the access to the courts be made easy and cheap? Why can not you have honest judges, intelligent judges; why can not you have lawyers who will sustain the courts in the honest administration of the laws? It is a profession which has always sustained free government and protected private rights in all nations of the world. Why not place them on a footing where the laws can be administered with justice, with intelligence, and with celerity? What is the difficulty in providing additional courts of the United States, if necessary, in order that the citizen may have the right to have his cases disposed of as rapidly as they occur? Let us so legislate that such remedial measures may be had as will accelerate the progress of causes in court. Let the power be made summary, if necessary, in the courts to expedite these causes and not allow them to be delayed and accumulate. In my judgment that is the true path of reform in this direction, and that is the proper method.

There is no difficulty in ascertaining the market value abroad of every article of production; there is no difficulty in ascertaining it in the port of entry. The history of a transaction between two individuals at the place where the purchase was made ought not to be of any value, because these two parties may have bargained at an advantage to one and a disadvantage to the other, or it may have been a fair bargain; but, whatever it was, it was the market value of that article in the place of production according to the common consent there, the demand and supply, that should be the basis of any correct valuation.

Mr. President, for these reasons I shall support the amendment proposed by the Senator from New York, and I am by no means satisfied that the provisions of this bill, while they may be an improvement in some respects, are not upon the whole a serious injury to the foreign commerce of the country and to honest and fair importation.

Mr. BECK. I do not wish to prolong the debate, but the Senator from Florida seems to forget some things that the committee unearthed. His illustration as to determining whether a man was a Chinaman or an American is pretty far-fetched. We are not dealing now with the rights of men as they enter into this country. We are providing a system by which the Government will not be defrauded of its duties on articles imported into this country, that one man shall not pay a lower tax than his honest competitor pays, who is subject to the same tariff. That is the very purpose that we have in view, that men shall not be taxed unequally on their property here, but that all shall be subject to the same general taxation, and to provide hereafter for securing uniformity of taxation and honest dealing, and not allow rogues to get the advantage of honest men.

Complaint is made that we are trying to impose some regulations now that are more stringent than those which have existed heretofore. The subcommittee went to New York and had before us Mr. McMullen, the appraiser, and one of his chiefs of division, who has charge of the invoices, gave us an illustration, which is much better than an argument. In his testimony this occurred:

In the invoice division Mr. McMullen presented the chief of division, Mr. H. F. Bowers, who exhibited to the committee certain invoices and papers which he explained, one by one, as being improperly certified, as follows:

"In this case [exhibiting a paper] the consul at Brunswick, in Germany, certifies to an invoice dated at Hanover, which is in his jurisdiction, that the goods came from Barmen. There are two invoices from Barmen, and no certificate from the consul there; and one from Zittau, in Saxony. There is no consul there, but there is one at Dresden, near there.

"By Mr. BECK:

"Q. That is not under the jurisdiction of the consul at Brunswick?

"A. No, sir. Here is one from Waldkirchen, in Saxony.

"By the CHAIRMAN:

"Q. Is that near Brunswick?

"A. No, sir; it is nearer to Leipsic. Here is one from Forbach, in Baden; here one from Linden, near to Hanover; here another from Barmen; now one from Hanover, an invoice of 14,071 marks, being the total amount consolidated. It is certified to by the consul at Brunswick, William C. Fox.

"By Mr. BECK:

"Q. And it has no other consular certificate upon it?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. What value do you attach to a certificate of that sort on invoices coming from cities outside of the consul's jurisdiction, and where there is a consul who should certify, but does not?

"A. We can not attach any importance to it, because the consul who certifies can not know anything about it. He can not know anything about goods not produced in his own district."

Why did he say that? Because there are fraudulent invoices into the United States sent by the consignors abroad to their agents here who seek to undervalue, and they avoid all the honest consuls. The consul within whose jurisdiction the goods are bought knows all about them. They could get ten or twelve invoices from different places, but instead of that they go to a man who knows nothing about the matter, and upon one general invoice at the port of shipment they are received in the United States.

It appeared to us that it was not proper to let that be done. We ought to hold the proper consul to responsibility. Nobody calls on him, nobody sees him, nobody treats him with any consideration, and he is left there standing solitary and alone in a great city with all the power of these men and their agents employed to put him down, until he can not get any information except that which he drags out by course of law. The consul who is ready to certify to anything is taken care of; he is "hale fellow well met" with them, and all their friends and relatives, and they all run to him and avoid the others, and they object to any checks to prevent that being done. The committee thought we ought to require what is here imposed, the Senator from Florida to the contrary notwithstanding.

Mr. CALL. Is it to prevent one consul boycotting another one?

Mr. BECK. Not one consul. I say it is to prevent merchants in eight or ten districts being able to avoid absolutely the consul who knows all about the merchandise because he knows the men who produce it, and apply to convenient tools to sign their invoices of goods that came from ten districts to one man who is a pliant tool of theirs.

Mr. CALL. Let us look at that. A merchant or manufacturer abroad must make his invoices according to the market value.

Mr. BECK. Some men can not be imposed on, while others can.

Mr. CALL. All invoices must be verified before consuls, but why a consul at a particular place?

Mr. BECK. I think the Senate understands this, even if the Senator from Florida does not. We have desired to require the man who through his official position does know about these invoices to certify them, and not allow the consignor to avoid our own proper consuls because they are vigilant men, and consolidate the goods produced in eight or ten different districts and take them to some one man they can find who does not know anything about them and cares as little as he knows, and then send them to our officials instead of certificates from the eight or ten different districts.

Mr. CALL. The bill does not provide that the consul resident at the place of production shall be any more honest than the man resident in the district where the goods are bought or where they may be gathered from many districts. There is nothing in the bill on that subject. You can not secure this result if you tried to do it. Therefore the Senator from Kentucky is entirely wrong. The bill can have no such effect. It is one of its curious provisions that it assumes that the consul in a remote place, with but little business, will be honest and intelligent, and a consul in a larger and more important place will be dishonest and incapable.

Again, the existing law does not require that the collector shall be bound by the action of the consular agent abroad, bound by his fraud or his ignorance. The existing law—if you choose you can amend it and make it more direct—requires and should require the collector at a port of entry here to obtain reasonable and satisfactory evidence of the value of the goods, and if he is an honest and capable man he can do it; there is no possible trouble about it; and the history of the transaction of the purchase of the goods from the manufacturer abroad will afford little or no light upon the fact as to what is the market price in the place of manufacture from which the merchandise was exported.

These propositions are perfectly plain. They have nothing to do with the merits of this case. Neither is it true that the Congress of the United States have an absolute power in the exercise of taxation to take from a man one kind of property under pretext of its being another kind. Nor is it true that you can authorize a tax collector to take from the people a tax to which they are not subject by law, or that you can preclude him from a remedy by saying, "You shall not sue that collector."

When I was on the floor a few moments ago I failed to read from the report from which the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE], for whose learning as a lawyer I have very great respect, read as an evidence that the taxing power might be committed to executive officers, who could exert it lawfully or unlawfully, and that there was no redress, no power of redress, and that the Supreme Court had so decided. I had not looked critically at this question. I had not read this bill until it came up for discussion yesterday; but I knew that, while there were a great many expressions of opinion by courts to which various colors might be given, there was no such principle established as that, and I read in the very case from which the Senator from Mississippi read the following statement of the court:

But whatever relief courts of justice may afford against the injuries apprehended, when in fact they have resulted, is secured to the plaintiffs in error by the very statute of which they complain.

And then it goes on:

For the valuation of railroad property under that act and the assessment of the taxes thereon are not final in the sense that they constitute a charge upon the property subject to the tax, or a liability fixed upon the corporation owning it. That result can be attained, and the tax actually collected, only by suit, as provided in the fifth section of the statute, either against the officers of the companies for penalties incurred by a failure to pay the taxes levied, or for the recovery of the taxes themselves by action in the Franklin circuit court, or in the courts having jurisdiction in the counties, for the taxes payable to them, respectively.

The case is thus brought directly and distinctly within the decision in Davidson vs. New Orleans, 96 U. S., 97, 104, where it was held "that whenever by the laws of a State, or by State authority, a tax, assessment, servitude, or other burden is imposed upon property for the public use, whether it be of the whole State or of some more limited portion of the community, and those laws provide for a mode of confirming or contesting the charge thus imposed, in the ordinary courts of justice, with such notice to the person or such proceeding in regard to the property as is appropriate to the nature of the case, the judgment in such proceedings can not be said to deprive the owner of his property without due process of law, however obnoxious it may be to other objections.

Now, the question occurs as to the validity of the clause contained in this proposed statute of the United States to the effect that the judgment of a majority of this board of appraisers in the execution of this law shall be final and conclusive upon the courts of the United States when the party aggrieved stands before the court and says the officer is authorized to levy a tax upon a particular kind of property, a particular amount. He has not done it. He has acted contrary to the law on the proof which I here present of the facts. This property was of a different kind, of a different value, and I am here now to deny the validity of his act done without the authority of law.

Mr. ALDRICH. Will the Senator from Florida let me read a few words from a decision of the Supreme Court?

Mr. CALL. I shall be glad to hear it.

Mr. ALDRICH. In the case of Hilton vs. Merritt, reported in 110 United States Reports, page 107, the court says:

The plaintiffs in error contended further that a denial of the right to bring an action at law to recover duties paid under an alleged excessive valuation of dutiable merchandise is depriving the importer of his property without due process of law, and is therefore forbidden by the Constitution of the United States. The cases of Murray's Lessee vs. Hoboken Land and Improvement Company, 18 How. 272, and Springer vs. United States, 102 U. S. 686, are conclusive on this point againt the plaintiff in error.

Mr. CALL. That is entirely true, but that does not support the Senator's proposition to any extent whatever. It is certainly true that a law does not take away property because it does not furnish a man a remedy in court; but if the Senator from Rhode Island, being the collector of any port within his State, takes my property and I say and the court says he takes it without the authority of law, the point is whether or not I can hold him responsible for it because Congress either has not provided a remedy or because it has said he shall not be responsible.

In the first case the court would hold under the general authority already given to it without a special remedy in the act, that I had a right as a citizen to hold him responsible for this action in some court, with an appeal to the Supreme Court if it involved a question of Federal law. The proposition which this bill asserts is that when a citizen, a non-judicial officer, violates the law and Congress enacts that he shall not be responsible for the taking of property without authority of law if he should himself declare certain facts to be true which justify his action, whether this decision of his own in favor of himself can be made binding on the courts.

We have not a government of arbitrary powers, and we should not have a government of arbitrary powers. We depend upon the honesty of the citizens as a body; and if in the great city of New York, or in New Orleans, or in Boston there can not be found integrity enough to enforce the law honestly, with a Federal judge to interpret it, then the foundation of our Government is entirely gone, and all the arguments by which this bill is maintained here may be made in support of the exercise of arbitrary power against the consent of the people.

But this is not all. This bill contians a section which ought not to be allowed by any law. Section 19 provides—

That no allowance for damage to goods, wares, and merchandise imported into the United States shall hereafter be made in the estimation and liquidation of duties thereon; but the importer thereof may, within ten days after entry, abandon to the Government all or any portion of goods, wares, and merchandise included in any invoice, and be relieved from the payment of the duties on the portion so abandoned: Provided, That the portion so abandoned shall amount to 10 per cent. or over of the total value or quantity of the invoice.

It confiscates the goods of a man if the damage done is 10, 20, 40, or 50 per cent., whatever it is. What reason is there, after having taken all this trouble to bring in the invoices, after having gone 50 or 100 miles to a consul and gone to the expense of having it inspected and certified, and after having paid duties and insurance and brought the goods into our port, for confiscating his property? Is there no means of honestly arriving at the damage which occurred to the goods of this man? And if they have been damaged why should he not have them on the payment of duties on the goods which are susceptible of use and sale?

It occurs to me that the bill ought to be more carefully considered. I am well aware that the committee have had very great difficulties in dealing with the subject. I have no doubt they have considered it carefully; but it seems to me it involves questions in reference to the administration of the revenue laws which ought to have further and more careful examination.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is now on the amendment of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS].

Mr. EDMUNDS. I ask for the yeas and nays on that. It is a very important question.

Mr. SHERMAN. I should like to have the amendment stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 14, line 5, after the words "as to," it is proposed to strike out the words "the construction of the law respecting;" so as to read:

SEC. 14. If the owner, importer, consignee, or agent of any imported merchandise, or the collector, or the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be dissatisfied with the decision of the board of general appraisers, as provided for in section 13 of this act, as to the classification of such merchandise and the rate of duty imposed thereon under such classification, they, or either of them, may, within thirty days next after such decision and not afterwards, apply to the circuit court of the United States, within the district in which the matter arises, for a review of the questions of law involved in such decision.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I must ask the indulgence of the Senate for a moment, because the amendments which I have proposed to this section are in my opinion extremely vital and important to its being made capable of standing the test of any kind of constitutional validity.

As the section now stands, the decision of the appraisers as to the identity of the goods, whether falling under one section of the law or another, or whether the law they apply to them has been repealed or not, is absolutely final. Their decision as respects the value of the property which is within their jurisdiction as appraisers may be made final. We all understand that. But I have never yet heard of a law, or a court that upheld a law of any such nature, that authorized any executive officer to possess really the whole taxing power of the country, and which the Constitution imposes upon Congress. Congress must select the objects of taxation and describe them. The executive department must execute that act of Congress upon the things described, and not upon something else. When they have found the things described, then the law-making department may repose in them the final judgment as to how much they are worth, and then the law places the rate that is to be affixed to that valuation.

Now, this section as it stands, I say, leaves to the final decision of the appraisers every question of fact concerning the goods submitted to them, whether they fell under one law or another law; whether they are, for instance, silks or woolens; whether they are cottons or leather. Whatever it may be that enters into the identification of the property to which the law applies a given rate fixed by the law, is by the section as it stands made absolutely final as found by the appraisers; and all that is left to the court of original jurisdiction, the circuit court, when the matter is brought to it, is any question of law that may arise upon the written papers that the appraisers have made up and stated concerning the case—nothing but the question of law.

You have got, therefore, as I suppose, a "case" in the language of the Constitution in a court of justice of original jurisdiction, in which that court has no jurisdiction whatever over any question of fact whatever, which is of course ridiculous and absurd. There can not be a case pending, a controversy, in a court of original jurisdiction, without one party or the other or both parties being entitled to prove the grounds upon which they invoke the intervention of the court and its judgment upon the facts as they may be found.

That is the distinction, and that very distinction is maintained in the case from which my friend from Florida has just read, where the court in distinct terms say that the valuation by the appraising and collecting officers upon the goods described is final and conclusive and is made so by the law; but the classification and identification of those goods is quite another thing. That a court of justice must deal with. That is a thing which, in my opinion, can not constitutionally be taken away from a court of original jurisdiction; and if you have a judicial intervention at all it must be a judicial intervention that depends upon a case, and that case must depend upon facts that the parties on the one side and the other may assert and controvert and prove and disprove, and you can not have a judicial trial in a court of original jurisdiction without it.

Now, if for that you substitute this section, it appears to me to be a vital infirmity that will not stand the test of judicial investigation for a moment. To put it where it will work for the object the committee have in view, clearly and safely, I have proposed these amendments, and having done it my duty is done.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, at first when this amendment was shown to me I supposed it to be a harmless amendment, not changing materially the construction of the law; but if Senators will look at the language proposed to be stricken out, they will find that the effect of striking it out is to change the whole character of the section.

The main object of this bill was to leave to appraising officers, learned in these business matters, the final decision of facts, giving, however, to the courts the determination of questions of law that might arise in the administration of the law. That was the plain object. When this bill was first proposed, in its first draught, it did not contain any provision for a reference of these questions of law to the courts. Therefore it was that in the Committee on Finance the principal matter in controversy was upon that point, and it was originally made, as the Senator from New York [Mr. HISCOCK] has already explained, so that questions of law arising in the administration of the tariff laws might be carried to the courts.

Now let us look at the effect of the amendment of the Senator from Vermont. The section as it stands provides:

> If the owner, importer, consignee, or agent of any imported merchandise, or the collector, or the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be dissatisfied with the decision of the board of general appraisers, as provided for in section 13 of this act, as to the construction of the law respecting the classification of such merchandise.

The Senator from Vermont proposes to strike out the words "the construction of the law respecting," so as to leave all questions of classification of merchandise to be carried to the courts. There is the precise defect of the present law. Classification is a compound question of fact and law, and so far as it affects the construction of the law, this bill as prepared by the committee does carry that to the courts in a way that I think is proper and legal; but, if all questions of classification may be carried to the courts, you carry all questions of law and fact as well that arise in the course of a contest over an importation. Let me illustrate: Here is a tariff law and here are classifications. Take, for instance, the classification of sugar. There are half a dozen classes of sugar.

> All sugar above No. 13 and not above No. 16 Dutch standard, 2.75 cents per pound.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> All sugars not above No. 13 Dutch standard in color shall pay duty on their polariscopic test as follows, etc.

If the language of the committee is left, the question as to whether that sugar was of No. 13 or No. 16, more or less, is a question of fact to be determined by the appraisers.

Mr. EDMUNDS. And the question whether it was sugar at all.

Mr. SHERMAN. As to the question whether it was sugar or rice, of course that presents a different issue. That would be a question where the law would step in. But here is a question simply of valuation. This classification depends upon valuation. Suppose it is valued at 7 cents a pound, it would be subject to a certain rate of duty. If it be of the valuation of 9 cents, it would be subject to a higher rate of duty. This is a question of fact. The object of the bill is to separate the question of fact in the classification from the question of law.

For instance I can give cases of classification. Suppose the question arises whether a certain article of steel or iron is a bloom or an ingot, whether it is in the nature of pig-iron or rolled iron; there is a difference of classification whereby the rate of duty is changed, and it would be for the courts to say whether the article was more properly described as rolled iron or pig-iron, as a bloom or an ingot. That is a legal question, because upon the decision of that legal question will depend the rate of duty. But where the question is a mere matter of fact, properly a matter of fact, it is left to the decision of the appraisers; and the striking out of these words, therefore, simply destroys the effect of the section as it appears to me.

From the decisions submitted to the committee and from my own cursory examination of those decisions, I am inclined to think the courts will maintain that Congress has a right to allow administrative officers to determine all questions of fact arising in the exercise of the power of taxation. That is done in every State. It is done in Ohio, where the local appraiser estimates the value of my property. I have a right, if I choose to complain of it, to go to the county commissioners; and if they should decide against me, I have a right to go to the auditor of the State, and there is the final end. It can not get into the courts at all. It is a question of valuation.

The object of this section is to leave all questions of value dependent simply upon fact to the decision of the proper executive officers, and all questions of classification which depend upon law or the construction of the law to be carried to the courts. If these words are stricken out, the result will be to carry every question of classification, whether it depends upon fact or upon law, directly to the higher courts, and it will break down the system.

Mr. BUTLER. May I ask the Senator from Ohio one question in regard to that matter?

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly.

Mr. BUTLER. If the amendment of the Senator from Vermont prevails, will the present evils continue?

Mr. SHERMAN. I think all the present evils we are trying to get rid of will continue, or many of them, at least.

Mr. HISCOCK. Mr. President, I think it has been well said by the Senator from Ohio that every evil of which the merchants complain, of which the importers in this country and the exporters from abroad who are honest complain, will exist in full force if these words be stricken out of section 14. The board of appraisers the very moment this takes place are forced by necessity to organize themselves into a court, with a stenographer and lawyers to fight out the question of the classification of goods, with a view of a record being made and so on, and it will be transferring to them what is now tried in the circuit courts before a jury, and the scheme of amendments propose still another trial.

The merchants say they are willing to accept a summary decision of the questions of fact by the men who will be appointed under this bill. Their own knowledge as experts may be largely depended upon in nine cases out of ten to protect them, and they are willing to take the judgment of the appraisers on the questions of fact involved in classification. I say that is the disposition of the principal merchants with whom the committee came in contact; and this bill was first prepared by the committee without any review by the courts of questions of law. And I perhaps may say, without divulging secrets, that it was upon the earnest solicitation of one or two members of the committee that the provision was put in by which questions of law may go to the courts and the parties complaining have their remedy there. It was in deference to that appeal that the committee inserted that provision.

It is a common thing to make an illustration in demonstrating against a statute which is too strong, too improbable for a court ever to construe the statute upon. The illustration has been put of the board of appraisers saying that property is wool when it is cotton, that it is rice when it is sugar. You can not assume anything of the kind. I say that no such illustration as that can ever be used in construing the statute. When a board diverge as far as that from their duty they are trespassers. It is precisely the case as in a State when a board of appraisers assess real estate as personal property under the statute in reference to personal property; they are without jurisdiction, they are trespassers; the courts hold that they are trespassers, and the injured party has his right of action against them as trespassers.

The assessing officer must have, under the statute, jurisdiction of the subject-matter, and he can not have the jurisdiction to assess as personal property real estate. He is outside of the law when he does it. He is guilty of malfeasance against the Government, and he is guilty of trespass against the party who is injured by it. The courts never take these extreme cases which may be imagined by fruitful brains; they never construe statutes to fit such illustrations.

I suppose that to be true beyond any sort of question. The board of appraisers assess cotton as wool? That would be obviously wrong. If they do it they are as I have suggested trespassers as against the party injured. They will have no right to do it; they will have no power to do it; they will not do it, and the courts will never construe this law upon the assumption that they would do it as a reason for declaring it unconstitutional.

But take the case of woolen and worsted goods, or part wool, part cotton, and part silk; the question of classification there involves a question of fact as to what they are. There comes up also the question, what are they known to be under the law-merchant; what does the law of trade recognize them to be? These are facts that we say the board of appraisers shall pass upon, certify them up to the court. There will be no differences practically between the importers and the board in one case out of ten, or in one case out of a hundred. Under another section, which has been added to the bill by an amendment of the Senator from Iowa, appraisers are authorized to take testimony, and that testimony is to be placed on file, and they must find upon that testimony what the facts are.

This bill would be absolutely constitutional if this fourteenth section were eliminated from it. If it may be eliminated from it, it is not necessary under any circumstances or in any case that a taxing law should have in it a provision authorizing an aggrieved party to appeal to the courts; and I urge that when any government after the course this debate has taken surrenders that power by adopting the amendments proposed, it weakens itself, and it has never been yielded by any State in this Union heretofore, or by the Federal Government, and for myself I have no fear of a taxing law being held unconstitutional because it does not provide for an appeal to the courts to settle questions of law any more than I have a fear of its ever being held unconstitutional if it does not provide a way for the revision of questions of fact by the courts.

Mr. PALMER. I desire at this time to ask unanimous consent of the Senate that 2 o'clock on Thursday, the 22d instant, be fixed as the time for the consideration of Senate bill 2083.

Mr. EDMUNDS. What is that bill?

Mr. PALMER. The title can be read at the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The title will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (S. 2083) to provide for the establishment of a bureau of animal industry, and to facilitate the exportation of live-stock and their products, to extirpate contagious pleuro-pneumonia and other diseases among domestic animals, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Michigan asks unanimous consent that this bill may be made the special order for Thursday next at 2 o'clock. Is there objection?

Mr. COKE. I make objection to that.

Mr. ALLISON. I object to any further interruption of the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa calls for the regular order.

Mr. EDMUNDS. It is always interesting to hear Senators who have their hearts set on accomplishing a given purpose intimate that they do not care so much about the Constitution, and express the hope and the belief that the Constitution will never be found to stand in the way of doing anything that they believe to be for the public good, and that no court can be got to so interpret that Constitution or a law as to deprive the sweet will of the people expressed through constitutional channels of doing exactly what they want to do. That is not my way of reading the Constitution; and however much the merchants of New York may desire this bill passed just as the committee has reported it, the first time any New York merchant is dissatisfied with the action of this board of appraisers, then he will be pretty certain to raise the question of his constitutional rights; and we shall be remitted, therefore, sooner or later (and undoubtedly very soon, because in great affairs questions of dispute will arise where the importer is dissatisfied or where the United States are dissatisfied—whichever it may be—at being cut off by an unconstitutional law as a citizen, because the Government can give away its rights), we shall, I say, be remitted to the courts for a decision.

Upon what ground can it be maintained that the executive branch of the Government of the United States, or of any State, under any constitution that has ever existed, or now exists, can have reposed in it by law the disposal of the private property of citizens? Is it "due process of law"—the Senator from New York [Mr. HISCOCK] admits that it is not—to authorize a taxing officer to impose a certain tax upon horses and another upon cows, and in doing that to decide that my cow is a horse, and make his decision final and conclusive? The Senator from New York admits that that can not be done.

That is nothing but classification; and that is not disputed; but when you come to silk and worsted goods, where the difference to the sight of the untutored man is not so clear as it is between a horse and a cow, and you have got therefore a more difficult question to decide, then the Senator says you may leave it to the appraisers to determine whether my property is woolen goods or is worsted goods, and their decision may be final, so that the constitutional right depends upon the easiness or the difficulty of deciding the question of fact. That is the kind of constitutional law we are treated to in this debate this afternoon!

I confess that with my experience I am not adequate to apprehending that species of argumentation. I was under the impression that the laws and the Constitution would be just the same applied to a doubtful or disputed question of fact as they would be applied to a plain question of fact that common men might decide.

Now, my friend from Ohio says, and my friend from New York says, that the laws and constitution of every State give the right of classification which is given in this fourteenth section finally and conclusively, or might do so, and in most States they do so, to the assessor. I deny it. I challenge the production of the constitution or the law of a single State in this whole Union in which any such power is finally reposed in the board of State assessors, by whatever name they may be called. What is left to them finally to decide, and all that is left to them finally to decide, is the question of the value of the things that the law says, being ascertained to be the things named in the law, the assessors are to determine and assess their valuation and then apply the rate that the law fixes to that valuation.

This is not valuation. It is the classification of things that the law under the Constitution reserves to Congress to do; and it being the duty of Congress to do it, it does do it, and declares that this class of things shall pay such a duty and that class of things shall pay another duty, and so on; and it is the duty of these agents to arrange that classification, but they can not arrange it finally if there is any private right at all left under the Constitution.

I say then that the argument of my friend from Ohio, that it will be inconvenient in respect of classifying sugars under one standard or another, does not prove that you can uphold it under the Constitution. That does not help it any. You can not pass an unconstitutional law because it would be more convenient to have it passed if you could. That does not help us out. And he has stated the strongest case that can possibly happen of inconvenience, and probably—although I am not so sure about that, because that might fall under the head of valuation possibly, and therefore their decision would be final; but supposing it to fall under classification, there is a case of difficulty in determining whether the sugar is of one kind or of another kind, whether it is melada or molasses, for instance, or what not, and you might have a series of cases that these appraisers are bound to determine under the section as it stands, and all the inconvenience you have got is that if the collector is dissatisfied, or the Secretary of the Treasury or the importer is dissatisfied, there is an appeal immediately within thirty days to a court, which, in a summary way, proceeds to determine that question of classification.

That is all there is to it, and the question is whether you wish to risk what to my mind, with great deference to others, is a plain and palpable undertaking to assert an excess of power that we do not possess, merely because it may tend to avoid a practical inconvenience.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, this fourteenth section has given the committee more difficulty than any other question involved in this bill; and I think, in view of the statement made by the Senator from New York [Mr. HISCOCK], it is due to the committee that I should say a little more in that direction.

The question of how far we should go respecting the exercise of judicial power under this bill is a subject which was discussed in the committee a long time before the Senator from New York became a member of it; and it was always with me a question of serious difficulty—speaking now only for myself—and when I reported this bill without any provision respecting judicial determination on appeal it was expressly understood in the committee that that was a point which was reserved and not finally disposed of. I say this in justice to myself.

Therefore no one or two men can be singled out from the committee as being especially devoted to this as against other members of the committee. And so careful and so diligent was the committee as respects this question of the power of appeal that a great many provisions were drawn respecting it; not only the committee but other gentlemen were consulted, members of the Senate, and I introduced a provision in the committee which was much more liberal, I will take the liberty of stating now, than this provision in the bill, but I was overruled and the provision that is inserted here was adopted by votes other than my own. So I do not wish to be understood myself as standing in the attitude of not giving every importer in the United States a proper remedy as respects his importation before the judicial tribunals of the country.

Now, whilst I say this in view of what has already been said respecting this provision, and in some sense defending myself as against the implication at least that I was not in favor of a liberal provision in this regard, and having said this, I wish to add a word with respect to the pending amendment.

Mr. ALDRICH. Will the Senator before he leaves that point allow me to ask whether his difficulty with the provisions of this section grew out of his belief in a want of power on the part of Congress over the subject, or whether it was not rather as to what was a wise public policy to adopt?

Mr. ALLISON. I am willing to answer. I knew perfectly well that the Supreme Court of the United States in a proper case before them substantially decided by a majority (Justices Story and McLean dissenting from the opinion) that the details of tax laws and their assessment and collection were questions wholly and solely within the power and jurisdiction of Congress. The Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS] says, sotto voce, "They have not decided any such thing." I know that the opinion of the court in that case went off upon another point, but the justice who delivered the opinion of the court clearly and distinctly stated, I think, in that opinion, which I have not before me and I regret it, that the taxing power was a legislative power, that it was within the scope and jurisdiction of the legislature, that is, the Congress of the United States, and that it was not a judicial power in any sense. Therefore, in the exercise of that power, after studying these cases with the time I had for such purpose and with the best ability of which I am capable, I am led to believe that we can go even further than the provisions of this bill respecting the measure which we shall adopt for the purpose of collecting our revenue. But the question of our power is one thing and the question of the expediency of the exercise of that power is another thing. I was not of the opinion from the beginning that it was wise to cut off entirely all judicial remedy as respects these questions.

But I want to say one word further now, and that is that I think both the Senator from Vermont and the Senator from New York misapprehend in a certain degree the extent and scope of this bill. They seem to regard it now as a question, at least so far as it respects section 14, where a citizen is pursuing a legal remedy against the Government of the United States because of unjust and illegal exactions. That is not the theory of this bill. The theory of this bill is that the whole matter is a continuing process between the importer on the one side and the Government on the other, and that the final adjudication as respects the amount of duties to be paid and the classification of the merchandise is to be decided by the courts. That is the theory of this bill, and the Senator from New York in argument seemed to regard it as though the Government had taken from a man his property and that he was denied the privilege or power of going to a court for the purpose of its recovery. No such question is involved in this bill, and no such question was contemplated by Judge Cooley when he made the declaration in the paragraph which I read from his work on taxation this morning.

What is this process? It is that at a certain stage one party wants his merchandise, and the other takes as security for duties a certain amount of money. After that point is reached—and it is reached when the collector makes the liquidation—then both parties go on, whether before the board of appraisers or the courts, and they go on until there is a final adjudication between them as to what is the proper amount. That is all. So I can not see the difficulty that the Senator from Vermont sees in this provision about the certification of facts.

Who is to determine the question of fact? The Senator from Vermont says that it ought to be done by the courts, and that it is necessary for the courts to do that in order to reach a just conclusion as to the application of the law. We provide that, as I understand it, in this section. We say that the board shall certify, not their decision, but shall certify the facts upon which they base their decision. That is to say, if they decide that an importation was wool when it ought to have been cotton, they must certify to the court the facts upon which they made that decision, not the decision itself. Am I wrong or right, I ask the Senator, in that respect?

Thereupon the court shall order the board of appraisers to transmit to said circuit court a certified statement of their findings of the facts involved in the case and their decision thereon; and the facts so found and certified——

Mr. EDMUNDS. "The facts so found." They find the fact that the wool is worsted, and therefore bears a higher rate of duty. That is conclusive on the court, and you have got in your case in a court of original jurisdiction, or no case at all except a question of law which can almost never arise, depending upon the statement of an executive officer.

Mr. ALLISON. Let us see:

Thereupon the said court shall order the board of appraisers to transmit to said circuit court a certified statement of their findings of the facts.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Exactly; that is their special purpose.

Mr. ALLISON. No, sir; their special purpose is what I said before, "and their decision thereon." So that in the transmission of this case as it stands, according to my interpretation of the section, the court has all the facts that were before the board, and while as to that I may be a little wrong, they have all the facts certified up by the board and before the court. But what do we intend them to do? We intend to exclude the idea that runs through the argument of the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS], that this court shall take up that question de novo and summon before it all the witnesses that were before the board of appraisers, summon before it the samples and the threads and the boxes that were reserved in the appraiser's stores, and summon before it such witnesses as they see proper, and thus make a regular and continuous litigation respecting it. We sought to devise some phraseology—we may have been unfortunate in it—that would get rid of that idea. Therefore we said, after a good deal of discussion in the committee, "Let us take the findings of fact as the board of appraisers find them, after going over the whole question, and let the court take their findings of fact thus disclosed, and upon them make up their decision as to the proper application of the law."

Mr. EDMUNDS. That is exactly what your section provides and nothing more.

Mr. ALLISON. Now, the Senator from Vermont wants to strke that out. Why? He strikes that out, as I understand him, because he wants the court to draw before it whatever it may choose to draw—if you please, all the witnesses that were before the board of appraisers, all the records that were before that board, and in addition this court shall receive any other contradictory evidence or statements that may be presented.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The Senator does not state me correctly. I want it stricken out because I believe (with great deference to everybody else) that it is manifestly and boldly unconstitutional. I only stand now on its, to my mind, apparent unconstitutionality upon the ground that you have not here a judicial investigation of any matter. You have only, to put it in plain terms, authorized an executive officer to make up just such a statement of facts as he pleases, to express his opinion upon it, and send that into a court for the information of the court, not upon the facts, but upon the law as applicable to the special finding of the executive officer. If there is any assertion of right under the Constitution of the United States, it seems to me that here ought to be a clear case of it.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not argue that question, but I want to defend this provision, wherein it was the intent and purpose of the committee, as I understood it, that these facts, not the decision of the board, but the facts upon which they make up their decision——

Mr. EDMUNDS. Their findings.

Mr. ALLISON. Their findings of fact; of course lawyers know what that means; the finding of a referee of the facts that were before him is presented to the court. The board are obliged to certify that to the court, and the certification is conclusive. It is like the report of a referee in a law case; and it seems to me, with all due deference to the Senator from Vermont, that there is a full disclosure with respect to the facts that are before the court.

Mr. PLUMB. There seems to be some little difference here. This provision, as interpreted by the Senator from Iowa, speaking for the committee, does not go half as far as the provisions of the statutes of the United States in regard to the disposal of public lands go in regard to the dispossession of men of their property. There is no appeal from the judgment of any officer of the United States in the decision of any land case, and yet such decisions involve the disposal by such an officer, or by the officers of the Interior Department on appeal, of the property of a settler, whether it be a homestead case, whether it be a pre-emption case, or whether it be a case of private entry. Not only the question of the right of the party to enter the land under the law, but the disposition of the improvements which he has put upon the land, are all within the purview solely of an Executive Department of the Government, and the only relief to any person so situated in respect to the public land is an appeal from the register and receiver of the local land office to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and from him to the Secretary of the Interior.

Further than that, in a case where an entry is set aside by the act of the Executive Department, the question as to whether the party shall have his money returned to him is dependent upon the character of the entry, and the question whether that character is affected by fraud or otherwise is determined absolutely and unqualifiedly beyond the power of appeal by the Commissioner of the General Land Office himself.

I can see no ground for the objection raised to this provision of the pending bill unless it may arise from a tender feeling for those on the other side of the water who export goods to the United States, which demands that they should be treated much more liberally than settlers on the public lands of the United States. I can see no reason why as stringent a rule as is applied to the people of the United States should not be applied to these foreign importers. To me it is the unwholesome feature of this whole thing, that while we seem to be sincerely desirous of legislating for the benefit of those people with whom we have less to do on the whole, we entirely ignore the constitutional rights, in the phrase of my friend from Vermont, of those people who are the subjects of our own laws, who bear the burdens as well as the benefits of those laws.

Mr. President, beyond that is a fact which I can certify as having had from the lips of one of the largest importers in the United States, who is a citizen of the United States. He says the modus operandi in regard to these collections is that the duties once paid are added to the price of the goods, and that price is collected from the consumer; but there is a "jack-leg lawyer"—I use his phrase, that may be a phrase of contempt probably—hanging around the custom-house who for a percentage undertakes to collect back some of the money paid as duties. He gets a percentage of what he may be able to get judgment against the Government of the United States for on account of the collection of duties by the collector, and he agrees to carry on that kind of business, and he does it by all sorts of ingenious appeals to the courts and by finding all kinds of flaws in the statutes.

I do not mean to say this in disregard of the fundamental provision which so much affects the Senator from Vermont. I only desire to present here the parallel of our dealings with the importers of the United States and those of our own citizens with whom we have to deal in a much larger way, and as they have been dealt with by law on the public domain; and then to show, according to the testimony of this importer of whom I speak, exactly what it amounts to—that the importer gets the money back by reason of having added it to the price of his goods, and then he puts the case out to nurse on shares with some lively attorney, who for a percentage of what he can collect undertakes to bring up not a real case, not a case that has merit on its face, but something which he thinks he can, by some ingenuity, torture into an appearance of oppression or overcollection, and get by means of that some judgment from the courts upon it in a case which on its face would warrant the inference not that there has been an overcharge or an improper classification or an improper valuation, but something that by some ingenuity he thinks he may be able to obtain from the Treasury; and thus there is held over the Government of the United States for years in the course of time a means of depleting the revenue for the mutual benefit of the attorneys and the importers.

Mr. President, if it were in my power to put the law as I believe it is not only legal to have it but as it is eminently proper that it should be, I would provide that there should be no appeal upon any point whatever beyond the Secretary of the Treasury. I would put an importer upon the exact platform that the man who deals with the Government of the United States in regard to public lands is put. Whether that involves the exercise of judicial power or not I do not say; but I remember very well that the Supreme Court, in what is known as the Craig case, a case that is famous in its way, held that where Congress devolved upon the register and receiver of a land office in Colorado the duty of fixing the boundaries of a grant which would give some hundreds of thousands of acres of land they acted judicially, and their action was not subject to revision. I imagine that if the register and receiver, appointees of the President of the United States, may act judicially, so may the appraisers at the port of New York or of Boston for the purpose of determining rights of property no more extensive and no more sacred than those which affected the hundreds of thousands of acres of public land which were determined by the decision of the register and receiver in the Craig case. The decision in the Craig case is not the only one which has been decided by the court. There have been many other cases of the same kind where they so held as in that notable case.

For that reason the provision as it came from the committee does not, in my judgment, go far enough, and it would be, as I think, a great wrong to the people of the United States and to the Government of the United States to establish a rule such as is sought here by the Senator from New York and the Senator from Vermont, as applicable to these people who have already been favored too much.

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, I desire to put upon record as bearing upon the question of the power of Congress a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, although I must confess I do it with some diffidence, as the remarks of the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS] have already thrown doubt upon the wisdom of that tribunal in interpreting the Constitution of the United States. But I suppose it is the most perfect tribunal we have, and for the time being at least its decisions furnish an authoritative interpretation of the law.

Mr. EVARTS. Does the Senator say that I have thrown any doubt upon the decisions of the court?

Mr. ALDRICH. I understood that in the course of reading the dissenting opinion of Judge Story in the case of Cary vs. Curtis the Senator claimed that the position taken by Judge Story was the true interpretation of the Constitution, and therefore that the opinions of the majority of the court are incorrect and unjust.

Mr. EVARTS. That is the Senator's inference. I said that the principles of justice and right that he there announced were permanent and true, now as then.

Mr. ALDRICH. In the case of Cheatham and others vs. The United States, reported in 92 United States Reports, the court say:

> All governments in all times have found it necessary to adopt stringent measures for the collection of taxes and to be rigid in the enforcement of them.
>
> These measures are not judicial; nor does the Government resort, except in extraordinary cases, to the courts for that purpose. The revenue measures of every civilized government constitute a system which provides for its enforcement by officers commissioned for that purpose.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> In these respects the United States have, as was said by this court in Nichols vs. United States, 7 Wall., 122, enacted a system of corrective justice as well as a system of taxation in both its customs and internal-revenue branches.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> It will be readily conceded, from what we have here stated, that the Government has the right to prescribe the conditions on which it will subject itself to the judgment of the courts in the collection of its revenues.
>
> If there existed in the courts, State or national, any general power of impeding or controlling the collection of taxes or relieving the hardship incident to taxation, the very existence of the Government might be placed in the power of a hostile judiciary.

The court say further on:

> We regard this as a condition on which alone the Government consents to litigate the lawfulness of the original tax. It is not a hard condition. Few governments have conceded such a right on any condition.

In the case of Murray's Lessee and others vs. The Hoboken Land and Improvement Company, reported in 18 Howard, the decision having been given by Mr. Justice Curtis, the court say:

> It may be added, that probably there are few governments which do or can permit their claims for public taxes, either on the citizen or the officer employed for their collection or disbursement, to become subjects of judicial controversy, according to the course of the law of the land. Imperative necessity has forced a distinction between such claims and all others, which has sometimes been carried out by summary methods of proceeding, and sometimes by systems of fines and penalties, but always in some way observed and yielded to.

In the same decision the court say:

> It is equally clear that the United States may consent to be sued, and may yield this consent upon such "terms and under such restrictions as it may think just."

In another case the court say:

> Congress has the clear right, under its powers to lay and collect taxes, duties, etc., to prescribe the manner of levying duties, and the conditions on which importations of foreign goods shall be allowed.

I have a number of other cases here, but I will not take the time of the Senate to read them.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, before closing this debate I desire to say a few words more.

I shall be very glad for some one who maintains the contrary view to state the difference between the violation of the law by an executive officer, which gives him the authority to act in respect to the value of property, and a violation of the law in respect to the kind of property.

A man does not obtain redress against another one who has taken from him property by virtue of an assessment that it is worth $10,000 when it is only worth $1,000, because of the assessment. It is because of the violation of the law; because he has acted without authority; because he has done that which the law has forbidden.

What is the difference between the responsibility of a man who has violated the law in respect to the kind of property and in respect to its value? The judge in the decision which has been just read attempts to make a distinction. I had supposed that the Supreme Court of the United States had never said that a man who had a trespass committed upon him by an officer acting without law, either in respect to the amount of the valuation or in respect to the kind of property, was exempted from responsibility for that violation of the law. I had supposed that the proposition would address itself to everybody as a plain one, that a citizen should not be deprived of his property without authority of law, and that if there be no authority of law in the case of the valuation the exercise of arbitrary power without law should not be excusable any more than in the case of the classification of the kind of property, and that in both cases he might have redress.

The judge in that case says, I think without a show of reason, that the classification involves the value, but still the classification shall be open to review, while the value shall not; and we are asked now, because of that lame and impotent conclusion of that court, to carry out as a principle of legislation the proposition that the property of the citizen shall be taken without redress, and that the judgment of a private individual shall be conclusive in regard to his rights in the courts of justice.

Shall we as legislators affirm to the importers and the consumers of this country that the property imported into this country under the color of our laws shall be taken without law and in violation of law in respect either to classification or to kind, and that the owner of it shall be denied redress in the courts by a distinct declaration that the judgment of a private individual, whether wrong or right, true or false, shall bind that court to refuse him the right of redress and recovery?

The Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB] says distinctly that under the land laws the Commissioner of Public Lands, the receiver, and the Secretary of the Interior can bind or destroy a man's right. That is not true. A court of justice is not bound to recognize their action, except in so far, in their judicial discretion, as they may say that it binds the United States in cases in which they are required to perform ministerial duties.

I supposed every one knew that those executive officers can decide no man's right. They can affect rights by delivery of possession of Government property; but what is judicial power? The Constitution says that in deciding between the rights of citizens, either in respect to the Government or in respect to individuals, all judicial power shall be vested in the courts of the United States, the judges of which shall be appointed for life, and confirmed by the Senate. No other persons can exercise judicial power. All decision of private right is the exercise of judicial power.

To undertake to say, by whatever line of reasoning it may be defended, that a man's property may be taken from him by an officer who is to levy 1 per cent. and yet makes a levy of 20 per cent., and that it is no violation of the law, and that the officer's action is conclusive, can not be maintained anywhere. It is simply a tradition of that old and arbitrary authority of government which this Government is intended to forbid and deny to every one.

In the phrase "all judicial power" was comprehended the protection of the private rights of every citizen in this country, however humble, no matter who he may be; and no executive power can deprive him, and no legislative power can deprive him, under the Constitution, of the judicial interpretation and decision of his rights.

While I concur entirely with the learned Senator from Vermont as to the provision in regard to classification, this opinion of the court in the cases cited by the Senator from Iowa undertakes to say that the collector of the port of San Francisco, if authorized by Congress, might decide that he was a Chinaman, and that that decision would be binding upon the courts in reference to the fact whether he was or not. The Senator from Kentucky undertakes to answer that by saying we are not deciding as to personal rights. But we are deciding in regard to personal rights, and nothing else, for the rights of property are those which are included, and they arise because they are attached to the persons, and are exercised by them, and the powers of the courts and the laws are invoked under our Constitution from the fact that persons having rights are before them. There is no difference in respect to public policy, and no difference in respect to the denial of right to the citizen whether his property is taken by a violation of law in respect to valuation or classification.

Mr. BUTLER. I move that when the Senate adjourn to-day it stand adjourned to meet on Monday next.

Mr. EDMUNDS and others. Oh, no.

Mr. ALLISON. I hope that motion will not be interposed at this juncture. Probably later on we may agree to it, if we can get a vote on the bill.

Mr. BUTLER. It depends upon how long this discussion is going to continue.

Mr. HARRIS. I hope the Senator will withdraw the motion until we get through with the bill.

Several SENATORS. Withdraw it.

Mr. BUTLER. If we can vote, I will withdraw the motion for the time being.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion is withdrawn, and the roll will be called on the question of agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS].

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. EVARTS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN], and therefore can not vote.

Mr. FAULKNER (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY].

Mr. KENNA (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SABIN]. I was requested to announce that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] is paired with the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON]. I do not see either Senator in his seat.

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. CALL. I am paired with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. PALMER]. If he were present, I should vote "yea," and I understand that he would vote "nay."

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland (after having voted in the negative). I voted just now, but I find that the junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] is not present. I am paired with him, and therefore withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 5, nays 47; as follows:

YEAS—5.

Edmunds,	Gray,	Saulsbury,	Walthall.
Eustis,

NAYS—47.

Aldrich,	Colquitt,	Hearst,	Reagan,
Allison,	Cullom,	Hiscock,	Riddleberger,
Bate,	Davis,	Hoar,	Sawyer,
Beck,	Dawes,	Ingalls,	Sherman,
Berry,	Dolph,	Jones of Arkansas,	Spooner,
Blair,	Farwell,	Mitchell,	Stewart,
Butler,	Frye,	Morrill,	Stockbridge,
Cameron,	George,	Paddock,	Teller,
Chace.	Gorman,	Pasco,	Turpie,
Chandler,	Hale,	Payne,	Vance,
Cockrell,	Hampton,	Plumb,	Vest.
Coke,	Harris,	Pugh,

ABSENT—24.

Blackburn,	Evarts,	McPherson,	Ransom,
Blodgett,	Faulkner,	Manderson,	Sabin,
Bowen,	Gibson,	Morgan,	Stanford,
Brown,	Hawley,	Palmer,	Voorhees,
Call,	Jones of Nevada,	Platt,	Wilson of Iowa,
Daniel,	Kenna,	Quay,	Wilson of Md.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not know whether the other amendments I had proposed were taken down at the desk or not.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. No other amendment is pending.

Mr. EDMUNDS. As the vote just taken, after the discussion, discloses the fact, and the valuable fact I will add, and not the classified fact, that the Senate does not wish to make the changes in this section that I proposed, to save time, with the leave of the Senate, I will withdraw the other amendments of the same character to the fourteenth section.

Mr. SAULSBURY. In section 14, line 20, after the word "court," I move to insert:

Unless upon the petition of any party interested, stating the facts which he desires reviewed, the court shall deem it proper to review the case upon such facts.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY].

Mr. SAULSBURY. It seems to me that a party might state in his petition the facts which had been found against him, and if those facts were presented to the court the court might deem it a proper case to review those facts. It would not be mandatory upon the court. It would still be left, according to my amendment, in the discretion of the court to grant the party relief. It seems to me that any appraiser or importer ought to have that measure of relief upon the question of fact in the case.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to call the attention of the Senator in charge of the bill to line 24 of section 12, which requires that if the owner, importer, consignee, or agent of the merchandise shall be dissatisfied with the decision he "shall forthwith give notice to the collector in writing of such dissatisfaction."

That, as I understand, is the foundation of the whole right of appeal or of further inquiry on the part of the importer. The word "forthwith" in that connection seems to me to be a little vague. It leaves the question for judicial construction as to what "forthwith" means, whether it is within three weeks, or three hours, or on the instant.

To meet the case where a man is sick, or is absent in another city, and may not be able to attend to his rights, a case which may arise very often, I suggest that instead of the word "forthwith" the words "within six days" be substituted. I know it is the desire of the committee, as well as of the Senate, to secure to the honest importer every possible convenience which the fair administration of the law will permit, and it seems to me there could be no great objection to having a brief number of days fixed, instead of using the word "forthwith."

Mr. ALLISON. The only point respecting that is that this is the present law; and the word "forthwith" has been construed, I believe, by the Treasury Department, if not by the courts, as the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] will remember, to mean within twenty-four hours; that is, the law gives one day.

Mr. HOAR. That is a very short time. This suggestion has come to me from the representative of a very important body of merchants, and from a person who heartily sympathizes with the general purpose of the bill, representing, indeed, the persons on whose application the original investigation was ordered by the Senate. I do not mean to antagonize the committee, but I should be gratified if it would adopt my suggestion.

Mr. ALLISON. We do not change the law in this regard. I would rather have the word "forthwith" remain in the bill.

Mr. ALDRICH. That has been the law for over forty years. We never heard any complaint from the importers of New York in that regard.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair does not understand whether the Senator from Massachusetts proposes an amendment.

Mr. HOAR. I will not press the amendment against the judgment of the committee, who have very thoroughly investigated the question, because I am quite sure the Senate would not adopt the amendment if I should move it against the judgment of the committee under the special circumstances; but I beg leave to say that I think, as far as I can understand the matter, that justice and reason would require fixing the time, and that it should be a more liberal time than "forthwith."

Mr. EDMUNDS. I wish to ask the liberty of calling the attention of the committee, or the Senator in charge of the bill, to the twenty-fourth section, which is the repealing section, repealing a great many sections of the Revised Statutes and sections of later laws. The last clause of the section reads:

But such repeal shall not affect pending actions or causes of action which have already accrued.

I wish to simply call attention to the fear, which undoubtedly is entirely an unwise one, from the experience we have had here, that that saving clause is not at all adequate to the necessities of the public service.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there further amendments to the bill in the Senate?

Mr. ALLISON. In section 24, line 4, which is the repealing section, after the words "twenty-eight hundred and forty-three," I move to strike out the words "twenty-eight hundred and forty-four." I move this amendment to prevent the repeal of a section which I think perhaps ought not to be repealed.

In response to the Senator from Vermont with respect to the inadequacy of the saving clause at the end of the section, I will say that it was taken from what was understood to be Judge Lowell's bill in relation to a customs court, and that was intended to be a complete saving clause of all the existing causes of action under that bill if it became a law.

Mr. SHERMAN. What is the matter contained in the section which the Senator from Iowa proposes to reserve from repeal?

Mr. ALLISON. It relates to the authentication of merchandise in the absence of the consul or where there is no consular district. It was inserted by mistake.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. EVARTS. The vote on the amendments offered by the Senator from Vermont to section 14 precludes me from attempting to raise in any other form a determination by the Senate on the constitutional questions which I have discussed. If those amendments could not be adopted, and if the bill as it reads in section 14 is to be hazarded on the constitutionality of it to be judicially determined, I will make no further impediment to its passage.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and was read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had concurred in some and non-concurred in other amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, and for other purposes, had concurred in the thirteenth, forty-sixth, fifty-sixth, fifty-eighth, and sixty-third amendments of the Senate with amendments; that it asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. BURNES, Mr. SAYERS, and Mr. MCCOMAS the managers of the conference on the part of the House.

INTERRUPTION OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

Mr. PLUMB. I offer at this time a resolution and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read, if there be no objection.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Whereas an almost or quite total interruption of freight traffic has occurred upon the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, and Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railroads, railroads which are engaged in interstate commerce, and by reason of which interruption commerce between States is impeded and prevented:

Resolved, That the Committee on Interstate Commerce of the Senate, or a subcommittee thereof, be, and it is hereby, directed to inquire whether such interruption of commerce is occasioned by the failure of such railroads, or either of them, to adopt necessary precautions or means for carrying freights delivered or tendered to them for transportation; or if they have been otherwise neglectful of their duties as common carriers, whereby said interruption has been brought about; and to make such further inquiry as may be necessary to determine the responsibility for the interruption of commerce mentioned; and to report by bill or otherwise.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. CULLOM. That is a pretty important subject and very responsible duty that is proposed to be imposed on this committee. I desire to inquire of the Senator from Kansas if it is the purport of the resolution that the committee shall go away from Congress and out into the country where those events have occurred?

Mr. PLUMB. I intend to leave to the committee itself, after it has entered upon the work in a preliminary way, to determine what it had better do, and then to ask the necessary authority from the Senate to do what it thinks it had better do.

Mr. HARRIS. Would it be agreeable to the Senator from Kansas to let the resolution be printed and lie over until the next meeting of the Senate?

Mr. PLUMB. I shall not object to that course if any doubt exists in the mind of any one about the propriety of the resolution.

Mr. HARRIS. I do not want to object to the resolution, nor to have that course taken unless agreeable to the Senator, but I think it would be better to have the resolution printed and let us look at it.

Mr. PLUMB. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will lie over.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had, on the 14th instant, approved and signed the act (S. 147) for the relief of S. D. Barclay, G. D. Adams, and William H. Kimbrew.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask unanimous consent that Order of Business 557, being the bill (H. R. 2927) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at Memphis, Tenn., be made the special order for Wednesday next, at 2 o'clock. I do not think it will take exceeding an hour or so to consider the bill, and as a question of time it is very important that it should be considered at an early day.

Mr. PLATT. I must object. At an early day——

Mr. CULLOM. I desire to inquire if there is not an order made by unanimous consent that the Senate shall go to the Calendar for two consecutive days after the morning business?

Mr. HARRIS. There is, and that order is to follow the immediate passage of the valuation bill. Therefore, I ask that Wednesday next, which leaves Monday and Tuesday untouched for the purpose suggested by the Senator from Illinois, be fixed for the consideration of the bridge bill.

Mr. PLATT. There was no——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state the question. The Senator from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that the bill (H. R. 2927) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at Memphis, Tenn., may be made the special order for Wednesday next at 2 o'clock. Is there objection?

Mr. DAWES. I object.

Mr. EUSTIS. I suggest to the Senator from Tennessee that my colleague [Mr. GIBSON], who is upon the Committee on Commerce, has made a minority report with reference to that bill.

Mr. HARRIS. Which is now printed and lying on my table.

Mr. EUSTIS. I am not sure that my colleague will be here on Wednesday. In case he should not be present, I should like to have some understanding to let the bill go over.

Mr. HARRIS. I will say to the Senator from Louisiana that, while I am very anxious to consider the bill at the very earliest moment possible, I shall not take advantage of the absence of his colleague unless it extends beyond a reasonable time.

Mr. EUSTIS. That is satisfactory.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair did not understand the Senator from Tennessee to move that the bill be made a special order, but to ask unanimous consent.

Mr. HARRIS. I have asked unanimous consent for the present.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That has been objected to.

Mr. HARRIS. Then I move that the bill be made the special order for the time I have indicated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee moves that the bill the title of which has just been been stated be made the special order for Wednesday next, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. PLATT. Is that debatable?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is.

Mr. PLATT. If it is, I desire to say——

The PRESIDENT ro tem pore. The Senator will pause. The Chair was under the impression that the motion was debatable. Rule X provides that—

Any subject may, by a vote of two-thirds of the Senators present, be made a special order.

There is no restriction apparently on the right of debate, except it be found in this language:

And all motions to change such order or to proceed to the consideration of other business, shall be decided without debate.

The Chair would hold that the motion was debatable, unless otherwise instructed.

Mr. PLATT. Upon a former day I gave notice that, at the conclusion of the bill which has occupied the attention of the Senate to-day, I would move to take up the bill for the admission of South Dakota; and it was understood, as I supposed, by the Senate at that time unanimously that that bill was to be taken up, and then that two days were to be given to the Calendar, the bill being laid aside informally for that purpose. I must insist upon making that motion. I will not interfere with the Senator from Tennessee if I can get that bill before the Senate as the unfinished business; but I think I am entitled to have a matter of this importance taken up at this time in accordance with what I supposed was the understanding of the Senate.

Mr. CULLOM. I think that was the understanding.

Mr. HARRIS. I will state to the Senator from Connecticut that I understood what the Senate unanimously consented to was this, that immediately upon the completion of the consideration of the undervaluation bill two days should be given to the consideration of the Calendar under Rule VIII, and the Senator from Connecticut gave notice that he would reserve the right to move to take up the South Dakota bill.

Mr. PLATT. I said that any consent which I gave would be subject to that reservation, to make that motion at this time. I had previously stated, as the Senator will recollect, that if the bill should be taken up I should have no objection to its being laid aside informally, in order that we might go to the Calendar for two days. I supposed that was the understanding of the Senate.

Mr. HARRIS. My objection to the suggestion of the Senator from Connecticut is, that if his bill is really made the unfinished business or given the right of way, then it can not be laid aside for the consideration of my bill except by unanimous consent. I do not believe it will take two hours to dispose of the bill that I am anxious to have considered, but I want it to have the right of way, so that one single objection can not defeat its consideration.

Mr. PLATT. There will be no trouble about that.

Mr. DAWES. I dislike very much to interfere with or postpone any wish of the Senator from Tennessee, but it was suggested a day or two since that a great deal of time was spent in controversy and antagonism over what measures should take precedence in the consideration of the Calendar, and it was suggested with such weight to the Senate that it was better to take the Calendar in its order rather than to spend any considerable time in seeing which particular bill should be taken out of order that I was compelled myself to yield in any desire I had to ask the Senate to consider out of its order an important bill. I wish, therefore, the Senator from Tennessee would suppress this new view of his on the order of business. I think we had better proceed with the Calendar. I dislike very much to oppose the Senator's new view of the just way of proceeding with the order of business.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY.

Mr. ALLISON. Pending this matter I move that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Monday next.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa moves that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Monday next. The question is on that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

AMENDMENT TO A BILL.

Mr. TELLER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 1430) to forfeit certain lands heretofore granted for the purpose of aiding in the construction of railroads, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

URGENT DEFICIENCY BILL.

Mr. DAWES. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator from Massachusetts to withdraw that motion for a moment that I may ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the urgent deficiency bill, in order that a conference may be ordered.

Mr. DAWES. I withdraw the motion for that purpose.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, and for other purposes, and asking for a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments disagreed to by the House of Representatives, disagree to the amendments made by the House of Representatives to other amendments of the Senate, and agree to the conference asked by the House.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. HALE, Mr. ALLISON, and Mr. COCKRELL were appointed.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 31 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, March 19, 1888, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, March 16, 1888.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. J. H. CUTHBERT, D. D., of Washington, D. C.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read.

Mr. TAULBEE. Mr. Speaker, the Journal seems to omit that part of the proceedings relating to the point of order raised upon the right of members to vote after the second roll-call. As I understand the Journal to be the only approved record of the House, it seems to me proper to mention this seeming omission.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk consulted the Chair as to the propriety, or rather as to the necessity, of inserting that matter, and the Chair told him that it was not necessary to insert it, as there was not, according to the Chair's understanding, any point of order distinctly made. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] objected to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. FELTON] to be allowed to vote, and afterwards withdrew his objection. But the Chair will examine the Journal and cause the ruling to be inserted in proper form.

Mr. TAULBEE. One word more, Mr. Speaker. According to my recollection, the point of order was raised and sustained by the Chair, but the Chair stated that it was the custom of the House to allow members to vote in such cases by unanimous consent. To the request for unanimous consent objection was made and afterwards withdrawn.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will cause the ruling to be inserted in the Journal.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, in regard to the point of order I think the Journal clerk was perfectly right. There could have been no point of order made at that time upon which the Chair could have ruled, because the vote was not announced upon the pending proposition; so that the matter must have been stated just as it occurred and just as it was stated by the Clerk. Before the vote was announced the Chair could not have entertained a point of order upon which an appeal could have been taken. It was simply a correction of the roll as we passed along.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] objected to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. FELTON], and thereupon the Chair ruled that under the practice which had prevailed in the House since the adoption of the new rules by the Forty-sixth Congress the gentleman from California had the right to vote, but the Chair suggested that the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] might take an appeal to the House. The gentleman from Kentucky declined to take an appeal and withdrew his objection.

Mr. SPRINGER. I think that was an inadvertence on the part of the Chair, because no appeal could have been taken at that time, as there was another vote pending and which had not been announced.

The SPEAKER. The other vote could not have been announced until it was decided who had the right to vote. If the vote had been announced, of course the vote of the gentleman from California [Mr. FELTON] would have availed nothing.

Mr. TAULBEE. Mr. Speaker, I do not consider this point of very great importance at this time; but, as I remember the proceedings, the point of order was made when the gentleman from New York [Mr. BLISS] proposed to vote. On that request of the gentleman from New York I raised the point of order that, the second roll-call having passed, the Chair could not entertain a request for unanimous consent for a gentleman to vote, and I thought the Chair decided that the rule prohibited the entertainment of such a request. Thereupon the gentleman from New York [Mr. COX] asked that the rule be read and it was read by the Clerk, and the Chair then, in addition to stating the provision of the rule, decided that under the common law or practice of the House it had been usual for gentlemen to vote under such circumstances by unanimous consent. Thereupon the gentleman from California [Mr. FELTON] proposed to vote, and the Chair put the question, stating that he could vote only by unanimous consent, and I objected, but afterwards withdrew the objection. That is my recollection of what occurred.

OLD PRODUCE EXCHANGE BUILDING, NEW YORK.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Secretary of War of an appropriation for the purchase and remodeling of the old Produce Exchange building in New York; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

CAPTURED AND ABANDONED COTTON IN ARKANSAS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, in response to a resolution of inquiry relative to claims for proceeds for certain abandoned cotton captured in La Fayette County, Arkansas; which was referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

UNITED STATES PENITENTIARY, UTAH.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, with inclosures, a letter from the Attorney-General relative to additional prison accommodations in the United States penitentiary in Utah; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

PRINTING AND BINDING FOR BUREAU OF AGRICULTURE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Commissioner of Agriculture of an appropriation for printing and binding for that Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

EXPENDITURE OF JUDICIARY APPROPRIATION.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Attorney-General, in response to a resolution of inquiry relative to the expenditure of the judiciary appropriation; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

ADA E. LAWRENCE VS. THE UNITED STATES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings of fact in the case of Ada E. Lawrence, administratrix, against the United States; which was referred to the Committee on War Claims.

ROBERT W. RENICK.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings of fact in the case of Robert W. Renick; which was referred to the Committee on War Claims.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. DAVENPORT, for one week, on account of important business.

To Mr. GUENTHER, for ten days, on account of important business.

To Mr. PENINGTON, until Tuesday, the 20th instant, on account of important business.

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I am directed by the Committee on Ways and Means to ask for unanimous consent for leave to sit during the sessions of the House.

Mr. BURROWS. I object.

SERVICE-PENSION BILL.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to submit a memorial and have it printed in the RECORD, without the names, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions. It is the petition of 176 Union soldiers for the passage of the service-pension bill.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection.

The petition is as follows:

To the honorable Senators and Representatives in Congress assembled:

We, the undersigned, surviving soldiers and sailors of the Union Army and Navy, heartily indorse the per diem rated service-pension bill, based on the principle of paying all soldiers, sailors, and marines a monthly pension of 1 cent for each day they were in the service during the war of the rebellion—that is to say, the soldier who served ninety days shall receive a monthly pension of 90 cents, the one who served a year a monthly pension of $3.65, and the one who served a thousand days a monthly pension of $10, and at that rate for each fraction of a year to a day; and we urge upon Congress its immediate passage.

REDUCTION OF REVENUES.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Ways and Means the body of a petition from citizens, merchants, and manufacturers of Massachusetts, in regard to the reduction of national revenues.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. I ask unanimous consent to present a petition also, and to have it printed.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts has been recognized. Is there objection to the request?

There was no objection.

The petition referred to by Mr. MORSE was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, and referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

It is as follows:

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The undersigned, citizens, merchants, and manufacturers of Massachusetts, realizing the necessity of a reduction of the national revenue in order that the public income may correspond to the reasonable expenses of the Government, respectfully petition your honorable body to so revise the existing tariff laws as to place upon the free-list the largest possible number of commodities that are used as raw materials by the manufacturing interests of this country.

It is our belief that by such a change our industries would be greatly benefited; that our export trade in manufactured articles would be largely increased, and that, consequently, American workingmen would obtain the advantages resulting from more continuous work at better wages.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MILLS. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. This being Friday, the regular order is the call of committees for bills and reports of a private nature.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. I understood that I had unanimous consent, when I made a similar request, to present a memorial and have it printed.

The SPEAKER. It was not granted to the gentleman. The Chair had first recognized the gentleman from Ohio, and then the gentleman from Massachusetts, after which the regular order was demanded.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. But before the demand for the regular order I made my request.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania had not sent up any memorial. He was not recognized for that purpose prior to the time that the gentleman from Texas demanded the regular order.

Mr. BREWER. These are all in the same form.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman from Texas demands the regular order, and of course the Chair has no option but to recognize that demand.

Mr. BREWER. I mean that they are all in the same form, which would obviate the necessity for printing more than one of them.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the call of committees.

BRIDGE ACROSS BLACK RIVER, ARKANSAS.

Mr. CRISP, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 6563) to authorize the Batesville and Brinkley Railroad to build a bridge across the Black River, in Arkansas; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE TENNESSEE RIVER, KNOXVILLE.

Mr. CRISP also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 7783) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Tennessee River at or near Knoxville, in Tennessee; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE NEAR CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

Mr. CRISP also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 7564) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Tennessee River at or near Chattanooga, Tenn.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE RED AND LITTLE RIVERS, ARKANSAS.

Mr. CRISP also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 7676) authorizing the Kansas City, Texarkana and Gulf Railway Company to bridge the Red and Little Rivers, in the State of Arkansas; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE TENNESSEE, AT LAMB'S FERRY, ALABAMA.

Mr. CRISP also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 7899) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Tennessee River at or near Lamb's Ferry, Alabama, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE, DULUTH HARBOR, MINNESOTA.

Mr. DUNHAM, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 5191) for the construction of a bridge across the canal entrance to the harbor of Duluth, Minn.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ACROSS BAY SUPERIOR, MINNESOTA.

Mr. DUNHAM also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 5192) for the construction of a bridge across the Bay of Superior from Rice's Point to Minnesota Point, in the State of Minnesota; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSOURI AT FOREST CITY, DAK.

Mr. DUNHAM also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 6699) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River, at Forest City, Dak., by the Forest City and Watertown Railway Company; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ACROSS BAYOU D'ARBONNE, LOUISIANA.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 2412) authorizing the Little Rock and Alexandria Railway Company to maintain and construct a bridge across the Bayou d'Arbonne, in Louisiana; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSISSIPPI AT MUSCATINE, IOWA.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa, also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 6570) authorizing the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge over the Mississippi River at or near Muscatine, Iowa; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSOURI, IN MONTANA.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa, also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 3070) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River, in Montana; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSISSIPPI AT HICKMAN, KY.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa, also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 7340) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River, at Hickman, Ky.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN RIGNEY.

Mr. CUTCHEON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back adversely the bill (H. R. 3899) to authorize the President to appoint, with the advice and consent of the Senate, John Rigney, a sergeant in the Army, to be made second lieutenant; which was laid on the table, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

AARON E. WELTY.

Mr. CUTCHEON also, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back adversely the bill (H. R. 107) for the relief of Aaron E. Welty, of Olney, Ill.; which was laid on the table, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

RIGHT OF WAY THROUGH LAKE TRAVERSE RESERVATION, DAKOTA.

Mr. GIFFORD, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported a bill (H. R. 8561) to accept and ratify an agreement made by the Sisseton and Wahpeton bands of Sioux Indians, and to grant a right of way for the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway through the Lake Traverse reservation, in Dakota; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JEARUM ATKINS.

Mr. GREENMAN, from the Committee on Patents, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6994) for the relief of Jearum Atkins; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

EVALINA P. BROWN.

Mr. WALKER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 7025) granting a pension to Evalina P. Brown; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

HENRY C. RICHARDSON.

Mr. HUNTER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3706) granting a pension to Henry C. Richardson; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

WILLIAM BURK.

Mr. HUNTER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 6245) for the relief of William Burk; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MRS. ABIGAIL SULLIVAN.

Mr. HUNTER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6577) granting a pension to Mrs. Abigail Sullivan; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MRS. THEODORA M. PIATT.

Mr. HUNTER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R 2282) to pension Mrs. Theodora M. Piatt; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

GENERAL W. E. WOODRUFF.

Mr. HUNTER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 335) granting a pension to General W. E. Woodruff; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PENELOPE MORTON.

Mr. HUNTER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3690) granting a pension to Penelope Morton, widow of Lieut. James Morton; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JANE BROWN DUNN.

Mr. MATSON (by Mr. MORRILL), from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 8159) granting a pension to Jane Brown Dunn; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MRS. ELIZABETH G. SCOTT.

On motion of Mr. MORRILL, by unanimous consent, the Committee on Invalid Pensions was discharged from the further consideration of the bill (S. 944) increasing the pension of Mrs. Elizabeth G. Scott; and the same was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

WILLIAM LEMONS.

Mr. HENDERSON, of North Carolina, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 2928) granting a pension to William Lemons; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

A. R. ELLIOTT.

Mr. SIMMONS, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 7862) to pay A. R. Elliott, postmaster at Bowman, Ga., for money stolen from post-office; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

OWNERS, OFFICERS, ETC., OF BRIG OLIVE FRANCES.

Mr. LANHAM, from the Committee on Claims, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 820) for the relief of the owners and officers of the brig Olive Frances, and others on board said brig; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

LABAN HEATH & CO.

Mr. MANSUR, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 57) for the relief of Laban Heath & Co.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

W. C. F. NINDEMANN.

Mr. TIMOTHY J. CAMPBELL, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 7801) for the relief of W. C. F. Nindemann, formerly a seaman in the Navy; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOSEPH W. PARISH.

Mr. SHAW, from the Committee on Claims, reported a bill (H. R. 8562) for the relief of Joseph W. Parish; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CLAIMS UNDER BOWMAN ACT.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky, from the Committee on War Claims, reported a bill (H. R. 8563) for the allowance of certain claims for supplies taken and used by the United States Army, reported by the Court of Claims under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1883, known as the Bowman act; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

HEIRS OF THOMAS BLACK.

Mr. LAWLER, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 2876) for the relief of the heirs of Thomas Black; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the amendments and accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

TERRITORY OF IDAHO.

Mr. MANSUR, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Territories, reported back with adverse recommendations bills of the following titles; which were laid on the table, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. 1962) to annex a portion of the Territory of Idaho to Washington Territory and Montana Territory; and

A bill (H. R. 4429) to annex a portion of the Territory of Idaho to Washington Territory.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. LANHAM. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House for the purpose of considering the Private Calendar.

Mr. BURNES. I beg the indulgence of the House for a moment. If the urgent deficiency bill is not considered to-day, it will be impossible for me to give my attention to it. I ask unanimous consent that we proceed at once to consider and finish that bill.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. Can we not arrange that the Private Calendar shall go over until to-morrow?

Mr. BURNES. I think we can finish the urgent deficiency bill in a half hour.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas moves that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering the Private Calendar. Pending that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] asks unanimous consent to proceed to the consideration of the urgent deficiency bill, not to interfere with private business after the consideration of that bill is concluded.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Does the gentleman limit the time to be occupied by the urgent deficiency bill to a certain time? The gentleman has the right of way for the appropriation bill every day. I do not like to have the Private Calendar lose the only day that we have to devote to it.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman from Missouri not consent that we shall have as much time for the Private Calendar to-morrow as is taken to-day for the deficiency bill?

Mr. BURNES. I have no objection to that arrangement.

Mr. HOLMAN. I have already asked the permission of the House to take up the general homestead bill to-morrow. I hope that will not be interfered with.

Mr. RICHARDSON. The effect of agreeing to the request of the gentleman from Missouri will be to crowd out the Private Calendar, and I must object.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. If only an hour is occupied by the deficiency bill to-day, that will merely take an hour from the consideration of the land bill to-morrow.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana objects to that part of the request for unanimous consent which relates to assigning a part of to-morrow to private business.

Mr. BURNES. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering the urgent deficiency bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is under the impression that the House must either first dispense with private business or refuse to go into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of private business before that motion would be in order.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Does it not require a two-thirds vote to dispense with private business?

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read portions of two rules which relate to this matter.

The Clerk read the concluding paragraph of Rule XXIV, as follows:

Third. On Friday of each week, after the morning hour, it shall be in order to entertain a motion that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House to consider business on the Private Calendar; and if this motion fail, then public business shall be in order as on other days.

The Clerk also read Rule XXVI, clause 1, as follows:

Friday in every week shall be set apart for the consideration of private business, unless otherwise determined by the House.

The SPEAKER. The effect of these two rules, the Chair thinks, is this: Each Friday is set apart for the consideration of private business; but if the House, on motion, refuses to go into the Committee of the Whole House for the purpose of considering that character of business, then the House proceeds with public business as on other days. There is an apparent conflict between the two provisions; but that seems to be the most reasonable construction, and it is the one the Chair has heretofore acted upon. The gentleman from Texas has made the motion that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering the Private Calendar, and the Chair will submit that motion to the House.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. No one desires more than I do to proceed with public business——

Mr. TAULBEE. I rise to a question of order. I submit that the pending motion is not debatable.

The SPEAKER. The motion is not debatable. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Texas.

The question being put, the Speaker stated that the "noes" seemed to have it.

Mr. LANHAM. I call for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 85, noes 89.

So the motion was not agreed to.

Mr. BURNES. I now move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering the urgent deficiency bill.

COMMERCIAL UNION WITH CANADA.

Mr. HITT. If the gentleman will withhold that motion for a moment, I ask unanimous consent to make a report from the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

There was no objection.

Mr. HITT, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported back with a favorable recommendation the joint resolution (H. Res. 129) to promote commercial union with Canada; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

POSTAGE ON SEEDS, ETC.

Mr. ENLOE. I ask unanimous consent to make a report from the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads; and I ask that the gentleman from New York [Mr. WHITE] may have leave to file the views of the minority. I am instructed to report a substitute for the bills H. R. 3258, H. R. 1681, and H. R. 1386.

The SPEAKER. A substitute can be reported for only one bill.

Mr. ENLOE. The other bills can be laid on the table.

There was no objection.

Mr. ENLOE, from the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, reported back the bills (H. R. 3258) to reduce the postage on fourth-class matter, (H. R. 1386) reducing the rate of postage on seed, plants, cuttings, bulbs, roots, and scions, and (H. R. 1681) regulating the rate of postage on bulbs, scions, plants, and seeds; and, as a substitute for the bill H. R. 3258, a bill (H. R. 8564) to change the classification and reduce the rate of postage on seeds, plants, bulbs, and scions; which was read a first and second time, referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. For which bill is this a substitute? I ask that it be treated as a substitute for the bill H. R. 3258, and that that bill be placed on the Calendar.

The bill H. R. 3258 was referred with the substitute to the House Calendar.

The bills H. R. 1386 and H. R. 1681 were laid on the table.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. PEEL, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported a bill (H. R. 8565) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the year ending June 30, 1889, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

URGENT DEFICIENCY BILL.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] withdraw his motion?

Mr. BURNES. No, sir; I insist upon it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] moves that the House now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of general appropriation bills.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. BLOUNT in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering general appropriation bills. The Clerk will report the title of the bill under consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, and for other purposes.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to amendment 58, on page 20 of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment 58, page 20: After line 11 insert "Senate: to enable the Secretary of the Senate to pay E. C. Goodwin, clerk to the Select Committee on the Centennial of the Constitution and the Discovery of America, for services as such clerk from the 13th to the 19th day of December, 1888, inclusive, $42."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] asks unanimous consent to return to this amendment.

There was no objection.

Mr. BURNES. I now ask unanimous consent to change the action of the committee from non-concurrence to concurrence, with an amendment which I have sent to the Clerk's desk, and which I ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Concur, with an amendment as follows: On page 20 of the bill, after line 12, insert "for salary of O. O. Stealy, clerk to the Speaker, from December 1, 1887, to June 30, 1888, at the rate of $1,600 per annum, $935."

Mr. ADAMS. Will the gentleman from Missouri tell me in what sense this is a deficiency at all, an appropriation to pay the salary of a clerk for a period ending next December?

Mr. BURNES. That is the amendment of the Senate.

Mr. ADAMS. I am aware of that; and you now propose to amend it, but I ask with what propriety is this Senate amendment in a deficiency bill?

Mr. BURNES. Well, it is a deficiency for the reason that it is an expenditure incurred by one of the bodies of Congress, and is due.

Mr. ADAMS. But the provision is for services as such clerk from the 13th to the 19th day of "December, 1888."

Mr. BURNES. That is a typographical error.

The CHAIRMAN. Unless there is objection, the Senate amendment will be concurred in, with the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES].

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment which was under consideration when the committee rose yesterday.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee recommend non-concurrence in amendment numbered 63, as follows:

"Insert in section 5 of the bill the following: For reimbursement to the State of Texas expenses incurred in repelling invasions and suppressing Indian hostilities found due under the act of June 27, 1882, certified to Congress by the Secretary of the Treasury in a letter to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, March 14, 1888, $927,177.40."

Mr. BURNES. I ask unanimous consent that further debate on this provision be limited to fifteen minutes.

There being no objection, it was so ordered.

Mr. BURNES. I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM].

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, I send to the Clerk's desk, to be read as part of my remarks, the letter from the Secretary of the Treasury transmitting to the Speaker of the House the estimate of appropriation for the payment of this claim of the State of Texas.

The Clerk read as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 14, 1888.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith an estimate for the payment of the amount found due by the accounting officers of the Treasury to the State of Texas under the act of June 27, 1882 (22 Stats., page 111), providing for reimbursement to certain States and Territories for expenses incurred in repelling invasions and suppressing Indian hostilities, $927,177.40.

Respectfully, yours,

C. S. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Estimates for the payment of claims received and examined by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department under act of June 27, 1882, providing for reimbursement as stated below.

No. of certificate or claim.	Name of claimant.	Appropriation from which payable.	Fiscal year in which the expenditure was incurred.	Amount.
1182	State of Texas.....	Reimbursement to certain States and Territories for expenses incurred in repelling invasions and suppressing Indian hostilities (act June 27, 1882).	1866 to 1882	$927,177.40

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, having lived for many years on what was once the frontier of Texas, and having resided there at the time of the accrual of this claim on the part of that State, I feel prepared, in a measure, to bear testimony to the merits, the justice, and the honesty of the claim. I had some opportunity for practical observation as to the necessities which compelled the expenditures for the reimbursement of which this claim is made.

None but a Western man can appreciate fully the conditions with which the frontier had to contend during the predatory warfare which was for a long time waged against our border people. The privation and peril, the woe and waste, the death and desolation which abounded will never be forgotten by those whose lot it was to be situated within the region afflicted by Indian invasions and savage hostilities. By the act of June 27, 1882, it was provided, among other things, that the Secretary of the Treasury, with the aid and assistance of the Secretary of War, should cause to be examined and investigated this claim of the State of Texas for moneys alleged to have been expended and for indebtedness alleged to have been assumed by that State in organizing, arming, equipping, supplying, clothing, subsisting, transporting, and paying the volunteer and military forces of the State called into active service by the proper authority to repel invasions and Indian hostilities, including all proper expenses necessarily incurred on account of said forces having been so called into active service, and also all proper claims paid or assumed for horses and equipments actually lost by said forces while in the line of duty in active service. The act further provided that said accounts for and on behalf of the State of Texas should be confined to claims arising since the 20th day of October, 1865, and should include the necessary expenses of defense against Mexican raids or invasion, as well as those for defense against Indian hostilities.

Under the provisions of this act the claim has been referred to the Secretary of the Treasury; it has been carefully examined and considered, audited, and reported to this House. I desire to call attention to the concluding passage of the report of the board of examiners. They say:

In their investigation of these claims of Texas your examiners have found that they are for moneys paid out by the State and not for any assumed indebtedness.

They have found no evidence of reckless or extravagant expenditure of public money; on the contrary, they have noticed the observance by the officers of the State of a careful economy in organizing and maintaining troops. The full United States allowance of forage was rarely fed, and all the constituents of a Government ration were not always purchased.

Texas was at the disadvantage of having to purchase supplies for her troops in various localities of the State instead of at the commercial centers of the Union, and to pay for them with depreciated warrants.

The State submits no claim incident to the building of military posts, and her expenditures for camp and garrison equipage are surprisingly small.

So far as the evidence submitted shows, the forces for and on account of which the expenditures were made were called into service by the proper authorities of the State, the Legislatures and governors, and the presumption is that these authorities did not unnecessarily occasion such expenditures, but that the time and circumstances made them a necessity.

No evidence is found upon which to base an assumption that the authorities calling out the troops acted with the conviction that the expenses incident to their calls would be reimbursed eventually by the General Government.

The geographical position of Texas, the desperate character of the population on both sides of the Rio Grande, the presence of hostile Indians within and along her borders, made life and property insecure, and the active service of a military force necessary for their defense.

In conclusion, it is respectfully submitted that our examination of these claims has been a careful one; that upon points made by the claimant for which the proof was not clear we have leaned to doubt rather than to assurance; and that to the best of our belief our statement of these is a conscientious, just, and impartial one, under the provisions of the acts of Congress approved June 27, 1882, and August 4, 1886.

The oath provided for in section 2 of the act of August 4, 1886, was duly taken and subscribed by the examiners.

The examiners find that the State of Texas is entitled under the provisions of the act of Congress of June 27, 1882, to the amount of $927,242.30 of her claims for $1,867,259.13.

These examiners, who were sworn, carefully investigated all the vouchers and evidences of this claim. It has gone through all the machinery contemplated by the act of June 27, 1882, and the additional act of August 4, 1886; it has received the severe scrutiny and critical analysis of those whose special duty it was to examine it, and has been transmitted to this House in precisely the same manner that was observed in the similar claims of Kansas, Nebraska, and Nevada. There would seem to be no question, after a careful examination of their report, which is printed in full in this morning's RECORD, that the amounts of money for which this claim is made were actually expended by the State of Texas in the necessary defense of her frontier. The examiners declare "that upon points made by the claimant where the proof was not clear we have leaned to doubt rather than to assurance."

Mr. Chairman, I deem it appropriate to make brief mention of some of the circumstances under which this claim arose. The civil war had just closed; the State government was disturbed and unstable; the State treasury was exhausted; the frontier settlements were widely separated and defenseless; means of communication were exceedingly limited. We had a border of more than 1,000 miles in extent exposed to predatory incursions by Indians and Mexicans; the United States military posts along this border were distant from each other, and their garrisons wholly inadequate to afford the necessary protection; the homes of our people were being despoiled; the property of our citizens was being destroyed; our men, women, and children were being murdered; the very extremes of torture and outrage were of constant occurrence. It is simply impossible to overdraw the horrors and sufferings which obtained.

I quote from a letter of Hon. James W. Throckmorton, governor of the State of Texas in 1866, where, in writing to Secretary Stanton (September 29, 1866), he says:

The frontier is suffering great devastation; murder, rapine, and the most revolting outrages are of daily occurrence. Unless the Government will send sufficient and immediate protection, the State will be compelled to undertake it without a dollar in the State treasury to defray the necessary expenditures. * * * I also forward you memoranda of Indian depredations that have occurred in the last few months. The statements herein are only partial accounts, and by no means constitute the half of what has occurred within the last twelve months. I respectfully request that you will make these facts known to the President, in order that he may be fully advised as to the condition of our State.

In a telegram to President Johnson, Governor Throckmorton says:

Our frontiers are rapidly depopulating from Indian depredations.

Under date of August 24, 1875, Hon. RICHARD COKE, then governor of Texas, in a letter to the Texas delegation in Congress, speaking of Mexican invasions, says:

Our people have been plundered there until they ought not to submit to it any longer. * * * If the United States Government will not protect that border, the State must and will; but it is a burden which she ought not to bear. I do hope that you will leave nothing undone, no effort unmade, to procure the requisite relief.

In a special report of Adjutant-General King, of Texas, made in September, 1884, there is to be found a statement of depredations by Indians and Mexicans, which, though partial and incomplete, shows that from the year 1865 to 1882 there were four hundred and sixteen of our people killed, seventy-nine wounded, and eighty-one carried into captivity. No complete record of the casualties and cruelties which resulted from this border warfare can ever be made. The loss of life and property can never be estimated. The State of Texas was compelled to bear the burden of its own defense, and the efficiency of its troops is attested by General Reynolds, as shown in his letter of March 7, 1870, to the Adjutant-General, United States Army, printed in the record, where he says:

It seems impossible, without the hearty co-operation of the citizens, to operate effectually against small bands of Indians that of late have been committing depredations more frequently than usual within the frontier lines of Texas.

* * * * * * *

I am the more urgent in my request to pay civilian organizations because I believe it impossible to act effectively against small bands of Indians with regular troops alone.

Governor COKE, in the letter before referred to, says:

A police force, irregular troops, rather than strictly military organizations is required here. * * * They would do service such as the officers and men of the United States Army can not do. * * * None but Texas troops have ever checked the operations of these predatory bands.

Sir, it is fresh within my memory that seven men were murdered in 1871, within less than 20 miles of the military post at Fort Richardson, Tex., by Satanta and his band of savages. General Sherman, passing through the country on a tour of inspection, was at this post when the news of the murder was received, and it was through his orders that Satanta and Big Tree were sent back from the reservation at Fort Sill to Texas for trial.

It was made my duty to prosecute these Kiowa chiefs, the older of whom had signed a treaty of amity with his own hand, for this horrible murder of these unfortunate citizens of my State. I trust I may be indulged to reproduce a few words of my own utterance during that unique and remarkable trial, as illustrative of the conditions which then existed:

The testimony discloses that about the time indicated by the charge, the defendants with other chiefs, and a band of more than fifty warriors, were absent from their reservation. They were away about thirty days, a sufficient length of time to make this incursion and return; that upon their return they brought back their booty, the forty mules, guns, and pistols, and camp supplies of the deceased; that Satanta made a speech in the presence of the interpreter, Lowrie Tatem, the Indian agent at Fort Sill, and General Sherman, in which he boasted of having been down to Texas, and had a big fight, killing seven Tehannas (Texans), and capturing forty mules, guns, pistols, ammunition, sugar and coffee, and other supplies of the train; that he said if any other chief claimed the credit of the victory that he was a liar; that he, Satanta, with Big Tree and Satank, was entitled to all the glory.

Then we have the evidence of one of the surviving teamsters, who tells of the attack upon himself and comrades by a band of over fifty Indians; of the killing of seven of his comrades and the escape of four others with himself. Then we have the testimony of the orderly sergeant, who himself is an old Indian fighter, and familiar with the modes of attack and general conduct of the savages. He with a detachment of soldiers went out from Fort Richardson to the scene of blood to bury the dead. He describes how they were scalped, mutilated with tomahawks, and pierced with arrows; how the wagon-master was chained to the wheel and burned, evidently while living; of the revolting and horrible manner in which the dead bodies were mangled and disfigured, and how everything betokened the work and presence of Indians.

* * * * * * *

Federal munificence has fostered and nourished them, fed and clothed them; from their strongholds of protection they have come down upon us "like wolves on the fold;" treaties have been solemnly made with them, wherein they have been considered with all the formalities of quasi nationalities. Mistaken sympathy for these vile creatures has kindled the flames around the cabin of the pioneer and despoiled him of his hard earnings, murdered and scalped our people, and carried off our women into captivity worse than death. For many years predatory bands of these "pets of the Government" have waged the most relentless and heart-rending warfare upon our frontier, stealing our property and killing our citizens. We have cried aloud for help; deaf ears have been turned to our cries and the story of our wrongs has been discredited. Had it not been for General Sherman and his most opportune journey through this section it may well be doubted whether these brutes in human shape would ever have been brought to trial, for it is a fact well known in Texas that stolen property has been traced to the very doors of the reservation and there identified by our people to no purpose.

In the letter of General Reynolds is to be found this statement:

The citizens of Texas declare that their animals, identified by the brands, are found in the possession of Indians on the reservation north of Red River.

Numbers of reputable citizens of Texas can be found, many of whom I could mention by name, who would sustain the truth of this declaration. I can not do better in this connection than to quote the following language of Adjutant-General King in the report before mentioned, in order to show the duty of Texas to its people under these circumstances and the feeling of our people concerning this claim against the Federal Government:

For some reason Texas, like many other border States and Territories, was left by the General Government without adequate protection against those constantly occurring invasions and raids, and, as a matter of absolute and overpowering necessity, the State had to make some regular and systematic provision for affording protection and giving security, if possible, to her people; and to do this, unusual and extraordinary pecuniary burdens were necessarily laid upon the whole body of citizens, and those burdens, in varying amounts, have been kept up ever since. For years past, the State, through her Senators and Representatives in Congress, has been asking the General Government to reimburse her, in part at least, for the enormous sums of money expended in giving aid and protection to her people, which protection should have been given by the General Government and paid for out of the common Treasury.

The people of Texas believe this claim to be a just and proper one, and knowing, from long and frightful experience, the horrors and losses of this border warfare, and the painful and ever-present necessity for organized and armed resistance to these murderous raids, they feel that the State, in the absence of protection by the General Government, would have utterly failed in one of its highest and gravest duties if any hesitation had been manifested in meeting the demand for frontier protection to the utmost of its abilities. This state of things has been so prominent and painful a feature in the history of Texas for so many years that all citizens and every political party, every form of State government, military or civil, provisional or permanent, and at least one constitutional convention, have all recognized it, and made efforts to meet the demands of the people, and of justice, humanity, and of good government, on this question.

In response to the suggestion that this appropriation ought to be postponed for the general deficiency bill, I have to say that justice has already been long deferred. Ample data as to the foundation for the demand, with detailed statements of its varied items, are to be found in the RECORD. There can, I think, be no valid objection to its speedy settlement. My colleague [Mr. SAYERS], with his characteristic energy, has brought the matter to the attention of the Committee on Appropriations, for which he should and will receive the grateful recognition of his State. The committee have justly added it to the bill now under consideration, and I trust their action will be promptly approved and ratified. No man will deny that it is obligatory on the Federal Government "to repel invasion." That power is expressly conferred on Congress by the Constitution. Texas was, when this claim accrued, and is now, a component part of our great Union and entitled to its protection. The State in its corporate capacity will be the beneficiary of this appropriation. There are very many equally just and meritorious claims of private individuals on account of Indian depredations, not only in Texas, but elsewhere in the United States, which ought to, and I trust will, receive the earnest attention of Congress.

Mr. BURNES. I yield four minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HENDERSON].

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I have examined this claim with some care since its presentation. While I felt at the time it came before the committee that I would have preferred that the matter had undergone the usual investigation by a subcommittee, yet I am frank to say that from a careful reading of the report of the military board, consisting of Lieut. Col. James Biddle, Maj. Henry J. Farnsworth, Capt. Edward Hunter, and Capt. Frank West, who were engaged for twelve months in examining every one of the vouchers involved, examining every statement of the testimony and having the law before them, I have reached the conclusion that inasmuch as this matter is now before us, we are justified in treating it as we have similar claims in Congress.

I believe the claim is a just one and ought to be allowed, and as I recognize no distinction between States or individuals on this floor when their cause is just, I intend to support this proposition.

I find also in the allowance of claims made by this board they have invariably taken into account the cost at the military posts in that country, and that they have allowed these at a lower rate, as a rule, yet in nearly every case that the Government itself paid for rations and for similar expenses.

I find up to 1874 these troops were organized and ordered into the field by a Republican governor or war governor, so that it has been entirely non-political.

I find further in examining the report for the payment of these troops that there were altogether some eighty-one companies during this period enrolled in the service, and that they were only paid for the time they were actually employed in the service. That it stands thus: Texas is peculiarly situated between the Indians on the one side and the Mexicans on the other; that the people were constantly afflicted by raids from one or both quarters; but that most of these expenses were incurred in protecting our citizens against the raids, depredations, and murders of Indians.

I find the law of Congress justified this; that in every instance legislative action and gubernatorial action called for the organization of these troops; that they actually served where the charges have been made, and the cost has been less than for the General Government. And I can not detect one reason why these claims should not be allowed.

I will yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts for a question.

Mr. LONG. I wish to ask the gentleman from Iowa how much of the claim was disallowed?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I could not give as to that any accurate answer. I find, however, in one case, where a claim was made for two scouts and for several companies, the companies were disallowed because the evidence was not conclusive that they were actively employed, and allowance was only made for two scouts who were so employed, showing the discriminating care of the military board.

Mr. LONG. That is what I wished to bring out, that there was a large disallowance of items.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. There was large disallowances besides the one just referred to. I have reached the conclusion that this is just, and I shall vote for it without a single doubt in my own mind.

Mr. DUNHAM. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Yes, I will yield if I have the time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. BURNES. I move, by unanimous consent, that the debate be limited to five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], and five minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS], and one minute to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS].

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. DUNHAM. I ask that, by unanimous consent, I be allowed to ask the gentleman from Iowa a question.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Let the gentleman's colleague yield to him for that purpose.

Mr. CANNON. I am willing to yield to my colleague for half a minute. Or I ask that, by unanimous consent, my colleague be allowed a few minutes in which to ask a question.

Mr. DUNHAM. I do not take it in that way.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS] is entitled to one minute.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I desire to enter my protest against the manner in which this allowance of money is proposed to be voted by this House. Everything stated by the gentleman from Texas may be true of these claims. The gentleman from Iowa has stated that he has had an opportunity to look over these accounts and he is satisfied with them. I submit the privileges accorded to the gentleman from Texas and to the gentleman from Iowa have not been accorded to the other members of the House, or, as I understand, to the full Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. We had a full morning over it.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. A full morning to consider a million of money composed of I do not know how many items.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's minute has expired.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. I would like to have a little more time.

Mr. MILLS. I will yield to the gentleman one minute of my time.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. The bill, Mr. Chairman, which we are considering is an urgent deficiency bill. These items, which carry nearly a million of dollars, belong properly to the general deficiency bill. Now, I for one do not see that it is wise or proper legislation to tack upon this bill an amendment legislating away this vast amount of money, when there is a general deficiency bill to be considered later in the session, and in which it properly belongs. That is the reason why I enter my protest. This unseemly haste upon the part of the members from the State of Texas looks a little suspicious; for these items, if they are all they claim, can well wait to be put in the general deficiency bill and considered there, where they properly and legitimately belong.

Mr. LANHAM. Let me ask the gentleman if it is likely that any postponement will furnish additional information or evidence as to the obligation of the Government in this case other than that which now appears in the record.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Who in this House has had an opportunity of examining the data on which this claim is based? The opportunity has not been presented; and especially in view of the fact that this is an urgent deficiency bill I claim that it does not belong here.

Mr. LANHAM. Texas has been for years insisting upon this claim.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The gentleman from Texas has four minutes of his time remaining.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, it might have been better if this claim had been held back and placed upon the regular deficiency bill. Perhaps there would have been no objection raised on either side of the House if that course had been adopted with reference to it. But the claim is now before the House, on a favorable report from the Committee on Appropriations, and it is here for action. Being before us, I do not want to see a vote against it to-day because of the fact that it has not been held back to give a red-tape examination to it.

This is an old, familiar friend of mine. I am thoroughly acquainted with it in all of its details. I introduced bills, as did my colleagues upon this floor, years ago to pay the State of Texas the money which had been expended by that State in doing that which the Government of the United States ought to have done for her. I remember the time when the Representatives from Kansas, Nevada, and Nebraska and ourselves often met together for conference and with a view to helping each other to get the Congress of the United States to do justice to our people in recognizing these claims which had been standing so long.

We united our efforts and aided in the passage of the law of 1882. That law was passed for the purpose of providing a settlement for these claims, and under it all of the claims of this class were submitted, with the evidence to substantiate them, to a board of Army officers. They have been thoroughly, patiently, exhaustively examined through a careful process of inspection covering a long period of time, and have all been reported to Congress, and all have been passed except the claim of the State of Nevada, and she is now in this bill unchallenged, and the State of Texas, which asks admission for the same privileges.

There is no objection made to the payment of any of this class of claims upon the judgment of this board of officers, indorsed as it has been by the Treasury Department, except with regard to the claim of Texas; and the opposition, Mr. Chairman, is as unjust to the State of Texas as it would have been to the other States.

There is no gentleman who has challenged or will challenge the statement that not a single item has been questioned or can be pointed out in which a wrong judgment has been made by this board of officers.

But, sir, this appeal that is made here is all for delay. They say the case ought to have waited longer—as if it had not waited long enough already—and that it should have gone through some further and more patient examination; but they have not been able to point to a single item of all the items making up this sum of $927,000 which is not justly due to my State—not one of them.

Our claim is a little larger than the claim of the State of Kansas, because Kansas had a much smaller frontier, and had to guard only against the Indians, whereas we had both the Indians and the Mexicans. We had a border as long on the northern frontier of the State as the whole frontier line of the State of Kansas, and in addition to that we had all of that vast line from the thirty-second parallel of north latitude down to the Gulf of Mexico, making more than a thousand miles in addition. That is the reason why the claim of the State of Texas is larger.

Mr. LANHAM. Will my colleague not also state that during that time four hundred and sixteen of our people were killed and seventy-nine wounded?

Mr. MILLS. That has been stated before. My claim now is that Texas should stand equally with the other States and on the same footing as Kansas, Nevada, and Nebraska. Their claims have been paid because the officers appointed by the Government reported in their favor as in the case of the State of Texas; and now our State, standing on the same footing, only asks the same treatment.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I feel just a little embarrassment in submitting any further remarks to-day on this amendment. Perhaps I said enough on yesterday to cover my point. I did not on yesterday and do not to-day say that the claim is an unjust one. I simply said yesterday, and repeat it now, that it has not had that proper consideration that a claim carrying a million of dollars in round numbers demands, and that the rules of the House, ay, more, that the law itself, requires it should have before the appropriation is made. That is what I said, and I say it now.

Mr. ROGERS. May I ask a question for information?

Mr. CANNON. I have but five minutes, but if my friend will be brief——

Mr. ROGERS. Only a word. Is it the practice of the Appropriations Committee to take up these claims which have been audited and examine each claim and go into the evidence and all the details of the claim or not?

Mr. CANNON. Oh, certainly not, with all the vouchers. But it is the practice of the Committee on Appropriations to have jurisdiction of the bills it reports and the amendments.

It is the practice of that committee, especially where large amounts are involved, to look at a portion of the vouchers and give the claim all the examination it can. The committee has not done so in this case.

And I ask, why place this on the immediate deficiency bill? This amendment delays it. It must go back to the Senate and will probably be referred to the committee there; in the mean time the courts and hundreds of little claims for horses, back pay, and bounty must wait. This claim could go on the general deficiency bill.

Mr. SAYERS. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him just one question there? Why did he not postpone the Nevada claim?

Mr. CANNON. The Nevada claim is for, say, $30,000. This claim is for $1,000,000. The committee had jurisdiction of the Nevada claim, but did not have jurisdiction of this claim. Let us comply with our rules and the law in this and all other matters. There are many millions of dollars, deficiencies, that the committee has jurisdiction of that are not upon this bill, not urgent, and await the general deficiency bill. Take the judgment of the Court of Claims, for instance, the Choctaw judgment for about $3,000,000, it is not on this bill, although eighteen months have passed since it was rendered, and it has drawn over $200,000 interest. Again, I call attention to the direct-tax bill, which passed the Senate months ago and has not yet received the attention of this House.

Gentlemen will recollect that at the commencement of the late war a direct tax was apportioned among the States to maintain the Government. All the States North paid this tax. Most of the States South, among them Texas, never paid it. Up to a short time past this $1,000,000 to the State of Texas would have been set off against this direct tax not paid by Texas, but under a decision of the Supreme Court this can not now be done, and the $1,000,000 will go in cash to Texas, and Texas will still owe the direct tax that should have been paid twenty-seven years ago. Now the Senate has passed a bill to refund to the States this tax paid twenty-seven years ago, without interest, and that bill is pending in the House so far without consideration. Rumor says that it is the policy of some members on the other side of the House to see that this direct-tax bill shall not receive consideration during this Congress. As long as there is studied delay in this and other most just measures, of which the House and committees have jurisdiction, I ask, why this wonderful haste touching this claim of which the committee did not have jurisdiction?

Mr. ADAMS. We ought never to have an urgent deficiency if we can help it. When such a bill becomes necessary it ought to be so drawn as to pass with the least possible delay. No item should be put in an urgent deficiency which is not itself a deficiency. Everything which can be left out of that bill should be left out, so that the items which ought to be included may pass with the least possible delay.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair requests the attention of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES]. On yesterday the Clerk began to read the amendment numbered 63, and the gentleman from Missouri moved to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment. The Chair supposed there was a typographical error, but it turns out that that amendment includes pages 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, down to the conclusion of the bill. The Chair, therefore, will cause the balance of the amendment to be read.

Mr. BURNES. What has been stated by the Chair is correct, and the amendment should be read through unless some gentleman should move to dispense with the reading in full before the vote is taken.

The Clerk proceeded to read in full amendment numbered 63.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky (interrupting the reading). I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will complete the reading of the Senate amendment.

Mr. DUNHAM. I ask, what has become of the Texas claim?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has stated that, under the apprehension that the amendment had been read, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] rose and asked to concur with an amendment, the amendment which the gentleman from Illinois designates as the Texas amendment. Supposing that the whole of the Senate amendment had been read, the Chair permitted the debate. But it appears that the remainder of the bill is all included in the amendment numbered 63, and the Chair is causing the whole of it to be read.

Mr. CANNON. Why not dispense with the reading of the balance of the amendment?

Mr. BURNES. I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the remainder of that amendment.

There was no objection.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I ask the Clerk to read the amendment which I have sent up.

The Clerk read as follows:

To pay C. W. Buck, United States minister to Peru, the balance of salary due him for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1886, which has remained unpaid because of the exhaustion of the appropriation for salaries of ministers for that year, $1,190.28.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will first submit the motion of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

Mr. CANNON. If the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BRECKINRIDGE] is pending, I desire to reserve a point of order on it.

The question being taken on the motion to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment, there were—ayes 64, noes 39.

So (further count not being called for) the motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will again report the amendment of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BRECKINRIDGE].

The amendment was again read.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I believe I shall have to make a point of order on that.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CANNON. I think there is no law authorizing the expenditure, and I do not think we owe it.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. This is a part of the salary of the minister to Peru for the year 1886, which is certified by a letter from the First Assistant Secretary of State, from which I read an extract:

In compliance with your request, I inclose herewith a form of amendment in Mr. Buck's behalf. You will see that the amount named in it is about $50 less than the amount of the draft held by Mr. John W. Buck. This is because the draft is partly on account of a balance due the minister for contingent expenses. An appropriation, therefore, of $1,190.28 on account of salary will suffice to enable the Treasury to pay the whole draft, a balance of the contingent fund being still available to meet the remainder.

The facts are that the appropriation for salaries for 1886 was exhausted, and Mr. Buck, our minister to Peru, drew a draft for $1,240.28, which draft was protested from the want of funds to pay it, but the Assistant Secretary says the amount is due, and asks for an appropriation of a sum $50 less than the amount of the draft because the Department have a balance of the contingent fund remaining on hand from which to pay the $50. So that the case simply is this: Here is a draft drawn on the Government by our minister abroad for a part of the salary due for the years which expired June 30, 1886. We are now in March, 1888, and we are asked to pay this debt, which is certified by the Assistant Secretary of State, a debt which has been due since the time the draft was drawn.

Mr. CANNON. The Chair is familiar with the provisions of law which prohibit the making of an indebtedness on the part of the Government in the absence of an appropriation.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. But the gentleman is mistaken about this case. This is no indebtedness incurred in the absence of an appropriation. It is a part of the regular salary of the minister to Peru for the year named.

Mr. CANNON. Why was it not paid, then?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Because the appropriation for that year had been exhausted and there was not enough money to pay it. The salary was fixed in the bill, the money was appropriated for that and other salaries, but the amount appropriated did not turn out to be sufficient to pay the fixed salaries for that year. Therefore this is simply a case where the salary of a minister for the year 1886 has not been paid in full. That is the whole of it.

Mr. CANNON. In reply to the gentleman I will say that the Chair is quite familiar with the provisions of law touching claims of this class. First, the law provides that no obligation on the part of the Government shall be made unless there is an appropriation. I recollect that in 1886, I think, and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] will probably recollect it also, he placed in the appropriation bill some additional restrictions touching the contingent fund, which has been mentioned here. But the Chair is familiar also with the additional provision of law, that in a certain class of cases where the law calls for a service and there is no appropriation made after the lapse of two years, the accounting officers of the Treasury have to investigate and certify such claims to Congress for their consideration. Now this does not come here as a certified claim having passed through the Treasury, and from anything that I can see or anything that I know about it I am inclined to think it is not an obligation of the Government made in pursuance of law. But, Mr. Chairman, I make this point of order because there are a great many items of this kind pending in the estimates, and they ought to receive consideration by the regular committees of the House.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, this is a very plain and simple proposition. The case is not exactly the kind of claim to which my colleague on the committee [Mr. CANNON] alludes. Ordinarily the salary for a minister is appropriated expressly and there is no deficiency; but my friend knows that it frequently happens in the change of ministers, one retiring and another coming in, as was the fact in this case, that there is an interregnum during which a month or two's salary is lost, and these deficiencies are created in that way.

As I understand, this deficiency was created because of a change which was made by the appointment of a new minister.

Mr. CANNON. Does the gentleman understand that two men drew salary at the same time?

Mr. BURNES. I think that in these cases, under the regulations, and probably under the law, one officer holds until the other arrives; and it often happens that a newly appointed minister is upon salary before he starts for his post of duty and the retiring minister is paid up to the time of the arrival of the new appointee. In this way a deficiency for a few hundred dollars is of frequent occurrence. I think my friend from Illinois is wrong in this matter.

Mr. CANNON. I do not know whether I am or not. But why should this one case be picked out from a dozen just like it which have to bide their time?

Mr. BURNES. For the simple reason that the Representative from Kentucky——

Mr. RANDALL. I would like to ask the gentleman from Missouri whether in the act making appropriations for the diplomatic service for the fiscal year 1886 the full amount of salary was provided for the minister to Peru?

Mr. BURNES. I have no doubt the full salary was provided; but in this case there was one man in Peru drawing a salary, and another man who drew the salary from about the time of his appointment until he arrived in Peru to take the place of the retiring minister. This necessarily created a deficiency. There is a certain period allowed—I think forty days—for a minister to go from this country to his post of duty, during which time he is entitled to pay; and of course the officer whose place he is to take is paid until the arrival of the new appointee.

Mr. RANDALL. But if this were a case of that kind the deficiency would not aggregate $1,200.

Mr. BURNES. The salary being $10,000 a year, the amount due for forty days would be just about this sum.

In answer to the inquiry just made by my friend from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], I wish to say that there is nothing wrong or unusual in the presentation of this matter in this way. If any other member has a constituent in a similar situation, all he has to do is to get a proper official certification of the matter from the Secretary of State, and the claim would undoubtedly be recognized as a proper object of appropriation.

Mr. CANNON. Are there not a dozen just such cases in the estimates which we did not consider in this urgent deficiency bill?

Mr. BURNES. I think not.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Are there not some?

Mr. BURNES. There may be some cases of consuls or similar officers.

Mr. CANNON. Then we draw the line at ministers?

Mr. BURNES (referring to Mr. COX, who sat beside him). In such a presence I could not do otherwise. [Laughter.]

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. This is indubitably a debt which the Government owes and has owed for eighteen months.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to inquire whether the appropriation act for 1886 provided for the salary of the minister to Peru.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Yes, sir, it provided for the salary of the minister to Peru at the rate of $10,000 a year.

The CHAIRMAN. That act made appropriation for the sum claimed as the legal amount of the salary?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. It provided for the salary of $10,000 a year. But there was a change made by the appointment of a new minister, who obtained, as I understand, the entire salary for the year except the sum now asked.

The CHAIRMAN. At the rate of $10,000 a year?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. At that rate.

The CHAIRMAN. And this amendment is for unpaid salary to which it is claimed he was entitled under the law? Does the gentleman concede that the appropriation was in the exact amount which the prior law provided as the salary?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. The appropriation was the amount that the law required to be paid. This deficiency arose, I have no doubt, as the gentleman from Missouri has suggested, because forty days are allowed a newly-appointed minister to go from this country to his post of duty, during which time the minister who had not yet been relieved by the arrival of the new appointee was drawing salary. In some such way as this, I understand, the amount of the appropriation was exhausted and the draft for the sum which this amendment proposes to pay was dishonored.

The CHAIRMAN. The object of the inquiry on the part of the Chair was to ascertain whether this belonged to a class of cases where the appropriation bill appropriated as salary a less amount than the previous law provided for, and a claim is made for the difference. The Chair understands this is not such a case. The point of order is overruled.

The amendment of Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is now on concurring in the Senate amendment 63, with the several amendments which have been adopted thereto. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. COX. I ask unanimous consent that we recur to amendment 31, on page 33 of the bill. Last evening I entered a motion to reconsider the vote by which that amendment was non-concurred in. I have printed in this morning's RECORD data from the late Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Lamar, and from the present Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Vilas, which I think will justify the House in concurring in this amendment. I think there is a thorough acquiescence on the part of the committee.

Amendment 31 was read, as follows:

Insert the following:

"Reports of the Tenth Census: To complete the publication of the reports of the Tenth Census, $77,495.52."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks consent that the Committee of the Whole may recur to amendment 31, in order to rescind the action by which it was non-concurred in.

Mr. RANDALL. What is the object?

Mr. COX. The object is that the Senate amendment be concurred in. The communications published in the RECORD of this morning on the subject will, I think, satisfy the gentleman that such action ought to be taken.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York that the Committee of the Whole return to amendment 31, and that the amendment be concurred in? The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HOLMAN. I desire unanimous consent to go back to amendment 46, to which I ask to add the following two amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

For amount necessary for resurveying certain lands involved in suit against the Sierra Lumber Company in California, to be done under the direction of the Commissioner of the General Land Office at a per diem compensation to be fixed by him, $1,600.

For the survey of certain lands from which it is claimed the Montana Improvement Company have cut timber, now involved in suit, to be surveyed under the direction of the Commissioner of the General Land Office at a per diem compensation to be fixed by him, $2,500.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to state very briefly——

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOLMAN. There are pending in California important land suits connected with the public domain, one in the Territory of Montana involving millions of dollars. They are set for the month of May, and the Attorney-General says the actions can not be maintained without a survey of the lands, and so reports to the Secretary of the Interior. There is now no fund to be applied for that purpose. On account of the emergency I ask these two amendments be made.

Mr. RYAN. Why not made at the rates provided by law?

Mr. HOLMAN. There is a reason given in the communication which will fully explain the matter.

Mr. BIGGS. I ask that that communication be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT, GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 16, 1888.

SIR: I desire to submit as an amendment to the urgency deficiency bill the following items: For amount necessary for resurveying certain lands involved in suit against the Sierra Lumber Company in California, to be done under the direction of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, at a per diem compensation to be fixed by him, $1,600.

For the survey of certain lands from which it is claimed the Montana Improvement Company have cut timber, now involved in suit, to be surveyed under the direction of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, at a per diem compensation to be fixed by him, $2,500.

The necessity for the foregoing items is fully set forth in the copies of letters from the special agents of this office, and the suit against the Sierra Lumber Company in California involves about $2,000,000, and a like amount is involved in the suit against the Montana Improvement Company along the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad. Both of these suits are set for trial in May, and there is no fund available from which the surveys can be made.

The provisions of sections 2404 and 2405 of the Revised Statutes, allowing augmented rates in California, Oregon, and Washington Territory, were repealed or suspended by the last appropriation act, and the rates now provided by law are inadequate to cover the costs of the surveys required.

During the last year two attempts were made to have the lands along the Northern Pacific Railroad surveyed under the existing rates, but no bids were received under the advertisement of the surveyor-general of Montana for deputy surveyors to do the work.

Unless some provision is made by Congress these suits must either go by default, or be postponed indefinitely, which is equivalent to an abandonment of the prosecution, as it will be impossible to secure the attendance of the necessary witnesses after so long a delay.

I desire to urge upon your committee the vital necessity for the immediate appropriation of the sums herein asked for.

Very respectfully,

S. M. STOCKSLAGER,
Acting Commissioner.

Hon. S. J. RANDALL,
House of Representatives.

Mr. BIGGS. The amounts provided in the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana are not sufficient for the survey of these lands.

Mr. HOLMAN. The Commssioner of the General Land Office thinks it is enough.

Mr. BIGGS. Those surveys can not be made for that amount.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to state the letters from the Attorney-General to the Interior Department did not reach that Department in time to be sent to the Committee on Appropriations to be included by that committee in this bill. The letter is addressed to Mr. RANDALL, chairman of the committee, and was not presented to the committee itself because it was only received during the present session of the House.

Mr. BIGGS. I move to strike out "sixteen hundred" and insert "twenty-five hundred," because there are over two millions of dollars involved. This is a mountainous country where these lands are situated, and it will be impossible to have the surveys made for less than that amount. I have been in that country over and over again, and I know how it is. Those suits can not be settled until surveys have been made, and I say, without fear of successful contradiction on this floor, that it will take over $2,500 to make that survey. I move to strike out "sixteen hundred" and insert "twenty-five hundred."

Mr. FELTON. I will supplement the remarks of my friend, that in the event the survey should cost over sixteen hundred dollars the money will be paid to them, and in the event it does not the money will not be used. I do not see, therefore, that there can be any special objection to the advance proposed.

Mr. RANDALL. It is not usual to give more to a Department than it asks.

Mr. HOLMAN. It is the judgment of the Department that $1,600 will be enough.

Mr. BIGGS. I move to add the words "or so much thereof as may be necessary."

Mr. BUCHANAN. It seems, Mr. Chairman, to be the unanimous opinion on the part of gentlemen who are familiar with this country which is to be surveyed that $2,500 will be required, and the Attorney-General has told us that such a survey is necessary to maintain the suits. Therefore I am in favor of making the increase in the appropriation to that extent. There is no good reason why a sufficient sum should not be granted to carry on these suits successfully, and a proper survey seems to lie at the base of a successful prosecution. It is well known that we now have more money in the Treasury than is absolutely demanded for the ordinary purposes of the Government, and besides we have had formulated in some committee-room, I will not say where, or when, or by whom, a proposition which I learn is to be brought forward, the inevitable effect of which will be largely to increase the already large surplus revenue. As a part of my remarks I ask to read a remonstrance which I have here against that proposition, signed by 236 employés of the Greenwood Pottery Company, in Trenton, N. J. It is as follows:

TRENTON, N. J., March 6, 1888.

To the honorable Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

Whereas, we notice with alarm that a bill has been presented for consideration of your honorable committee which will greatly reduce the present duty on pottery-ware, which bill, if passed, will necessitate either a ruinous reduction of our wages or lead to the closing of the potteries: Therefore we, the undersigned, working people of the Greenwood Pottery Company's pottery, would respectfully urge your honorable body to so amend said bill as to remove the necessity of a reduction of our present rate of wages, and because so large a proportion of the cost of making pottery-ware is in the cost of labor.

Mr. Chairman, as I have said, this is signed by 236 working men and women in my city. I have similar remonstrances here as numerously signed, and I hence read this because it is the only way, under the circumstances, by which the voice of these people is allowed to reach the committee-room or to be heard in this House. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from California.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The amendment of Mr. HOLMAN was then adopted.

The motion to concur in the amendment of the Senate with an amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I now move that the committee rise and report the bill, with the various recommendations of the committee and the several amendments, to the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BLOUNT reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, having had under consideration the Senate amendments to the urgent deficiency appropriation bill, had directed him to report the same to the House with sundry recommendations and amendments.

The SPEAKER. Unless a separate vote is demanded on some particular amendment, the recommendations of the committee will be voted upon as a whole.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I would like to have a separate vote on the twenty-seventh amendment, increasing the dry-dock at New York.

The SPEAKER. That amendment will be excepted from the order, and, if there be no objection, the several recommendations of the Committee of the Whole with regard to the other Senate amendments will be considered as concurred in.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on non-concurring in the amendment of the Senate as recommended by the Committee of the Whole, on which a separate vote has been demanded by the gentleman from Maine.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I ask for the reading of the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

The amendment of the Senate is to strike out lines 16, 17, and 18, as follows: "For the purpose of making 100 feet longer the dry-dock, now under contract, to be built at the Brooklyn navy-yard, $100,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary."

The SPEAKER. The question is on non-concurring in the Senate amendment.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Would not a motion to concur take precedence?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it would.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Then I move to concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. BURNES. On that I demand the previous question.

Mr. RANDALL. The question is on agreeing to the report of the committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The Committee of the Whole recommended non-concurrence; but under the practice of the House a motion to concur has priority, which, if adopted, of course overrules the action of the committee. The gentleman from Missouri demands the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The question was taken on the motion of Mr. BOUTELLE to concur in the Senate amendment; and there were, on a division—ayes 64, noes 66.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 107, nays 143, not voting 74; as follows:

YEAS—107.

Adams,	Cheadle,	Kean,	Plumb,
Allen, Mass.	Conger,	Kelley,	Post,
Allen, Mich.	Cooper,	Kennedy,	Pugsley,
Anderson, Iowa	Crouse,	Kerr,	Romeis,
Anderson, Kans.	Cutcheon,	Laird,	Rowell,
Arnold,	Dalzell,	Lind,	Russell, Conn.
Atkinson,	Darlington,	Lodge,	Ryan,
Baker, N. Y.	Davis,	Long,	Scull,
Baker, Ill.	Dingley,	Lyman,	Sherman,
Bayne,	Dorsey,	Lynch,	Smith,
Bingham,	Dunham,	Mason,	Spooner,
Boothman,	Finley,	McCullogh,	Steele,
Boutelle,	Fuller,	McKenna,	Stephenson,
Bowden,	Gaines,	McKinley,	Stewart, Vt.
Bowen,	Gallinger,	Milliken	Symes,
Brewer,	Gear,	Moffitt,	Taylor, E. B., Ohio
Brower,	Gest,	Morrill,	Taylor, J. D., Ohio
Brown, Ohio.	Grosvenor,	Morrow,	Thomas, Ky.
Brown, J. R., Va.	Grout,	Nelson,	Thomas, Wis.
Brumm,	Haugen,	Nutting,	Turner, Kans.
Buchanan,	Henderson, Iowa.	Osborne,	Wade,
Buckalew,	Henderson, Ill.	Owen,	Warner,
Bunnell,	Hermann,	Patton,	Weber,
Burrows,	Holmes,	Payson,	Wickham,
Butler,	Hopkins, Ill.	Perkins,	Wilber,
Cannon,	Hovey,	Peters,	Williams.
Caswell,	Hunter,	Phelps,

NAYS—143.

Abbott,	Blanchard,	Campbell, F., N. Y.	Cockran,
Allen, Miss.	Bland,	Campbell, Ohio	Compton,
Anderson, Miss.	Blount,	Campbell, T. J., N. Y.	Cothran,
Anderson, Ill.	Breckinridge, Ark.	Carleton,	Cox,
Bacon,	Breckinridge, Ky.	Catchings,	Crisp,
Bankhead,	Bryce,	Chipman,	Cummings,
Barnes,	Burnes,	Clardy,	Dargan,
Belden,	Burnett,	Clements,	Davidson, Ala.
Biggs,	Bynum,	Cobb,	Davidson, Fla.

Dockery,	Johnston, N. C.	Newton,	Springer,
Dunn,	Ketcham,	Nichols,	Stahlnecker,
Elliott,	Kilgore,	Norwood,	Stewart, Tex.
Enloe,	Laffoon,	Oates,	Stewart, Ga.
Ermentrout,	Lagan,	O'Donnell,	Stockdale,
Felton,	Landes,	O'Ferrall,	Stone, Ky.
Fisher,	Lane,	O'Neall, Ind.	Stone, Mo.
Flood,	Lanham,	O'Neill, Mo.	Tarsney,
Ford,	Latham,	Outhwaite,	Taulbee,
Forney,	Lawler,	Parker,	Thompson, Cal.
French,	Lee,	Peel,	Tillman,
Gibson,	Macdonald,	Perry,	Tracey,
Glass,	Mahoney,	Pidcock,	Turner, Ga.
Greenman,	Maish,	Randall,	Vance,
Hall,	Mansur,	Rice,	Walker,
Hare,	Martin,	Richardson,	Washington,
Harmer,	McAdoo,	Rogers,	Weaver,
Hatch,	McClammy,	Rowland,	Wheeler,
Heard,	McCreary,	Rusk,	White, Ind.
Hemphill,	McKinney,	Sayers,	White, N. Y.
Henderson, N. C.	McRae,	Scott,	Whiting, Mich.
Herbert,	McShane,	Seney,	Whiting, Mass.
Hitt,	Mills,	Seymour,	Wilkins,
Holman,	Montgomery,	Shaw,	Wilkinson,
Hooker,	Moore,	Shively,	Wilson, W. Va.
Hopkins, Va.	Morse,	Simmons,	Yost.
Hopkins, N. Y.	Neal,	Sowden.

NOT VOTING—74.

Barry,	Farquhar,	Jackson,	Rockwell,
Belmont,	Fitch,	Johnston, Ind.	Russell, Mass.
Bliss,	Foran,	Jones,	Sawyer,
Bound,	Funston,	La Follette,	Snyder,
Browne, T. H. B., Va.	Gay,	Laidlaw,	Spinola,
Browne, Ind.	Glover,	Lehlbach,	Struble,
Butterworth,	Goff,	Maffett,	Thomas, Ill.
Candler,	Granger,	Matson,	Thompson, Ohio
Caruth,	Grimes,	McComas,	Townshend,
Clark,	Guenther,	McCormick.	Vandever,
Cogswell,	Hayden,	McMillin,	West,
Collins,	Hayes,	Merriman,	Whitthorne,
Cowles,	Hiestand,	Morgan,	Wilson, Minn.
Crain,	Hires,	O'Neill, Pa.	Wise.
Culberson,	Hogg,	Penington,	Woodburn,
Davenport,	Houk,	Phelan,	Yardley,
De Lano,	Howard,	Rayner,	Yoder.
Dibble,	Hudd,	Reed,
Dougherty,	Hutton,	Robertson,

So the motion to concur was rejected.

On motion of Mr. RANDALL, by unanimous consent, the reading of the names was dispensed with.

The following pairs were announced until further notice on all political questions:

Mr. TOWNSHEND with Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania.
Mr. MATSON with Mr. MAFFETT.
Mr. CARUTH with Mr. JACKSON.
Mr. GLOVER with Mr. GUENTHER.
Mr. COWLES with Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio.
Mr. MORGAN with Mr. YARDLEY.
Mr. HUTTON with Mr. COGSWELL.
Mr. COLLINS with Mr. FITCH.
Mr. JONES, of Alabama, with Mr. MCCORMICK.
Mr. CANDLER with Mr. DAVENPORT.
Mr. PENINGTON with Mr. HIESTAND.
Mr. GOFF with Mr. SNYDER.
Mr. HOWARD with Mr. DE LANO.
Mr. SPINOLA with Mr. THOMAS, of Illinois.
Mr. HUDD with Mr. CLARK.
Mr. GRANGER with Mr. ROCKWELL.
Mr. PHELAN with Mr. BUTLER.

The following were announced as being paired for this day:

Mr. CRAIN with Mr. HOUK.
Mr. WHITTHORNE with Mr. WEST.
Mr. WISE with Mr. T. H. B. BROWNE, of Virginia.
Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana, with Mr. MCMILLIN.
Mr. CULBERSON with Mr. STRUBLE.
Mr. DIBBLE with Mr. LEHLBACH.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. BURNES. I move that the House ask for a conference on the disagreeing votes between the two Houses.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri moves that a conference with the Senate be requested on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses. If there be no objection, that order will be made. The Chair hears none. The Chair appoints as conferees on the part of the House the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES], the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SAYERS], and the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MCCOMAS].

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. BURNES. In a hurried moment the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs reported what I have since learned was the Indian appropriation bill. I desire to reserve all points of order on the bill.

The SPEAKER. Points of order will be reserved.

PRIVATE CALENDAR.

Mr. LANHAM. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House for the purpose of considering bills on the Private Calendar.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House, Mr. HATCH in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering bills on the Private Calendar. The Clerk will report the first bill.

ALEXANDER MOFFITT.

Mr. LANHAM. When the committee rose on last Friday, the bill (H. R. 6347) for the relief of Alexander Moffitt was under consideration.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay to Alexander Moffitt, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $12,442.98, being amount due the said Alexander Moffitt for the use and occupation of the premises known as the National Race-Course, in the District of Columbia, from the 12th day of July, 1861, to the 12th day of June, 1865, by the United States forces, as found by the Court of Claims.

The CHAIRMAN. When the committee rose on Friday last this bill was under consideration, and the pending motion was that of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] that the bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that all after the enacting clause be stricken out. The committee was dividing upon that question, and the point was made by the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. COMPTON] that a quorum had not voted.

Mr. COMPTON. I ask unanimous consent, in view of the fact that few members were present when this bill was formerly under consideration, to be allowed to explain it briefly.

The CHAIRMAN. How much time does the gentleman desire?

Mr. COMPTON. Not more than five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlemen from Maryland asks unanimous consent that he be allowed five minutes for debate.

Mr. PERKINS. Let it be ten minutes, five on each side.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request that ten minutes be allowed for debate, five minutes on each side? The Chair hears none.

Mr. COMPTON. This is a claim for rent and for damages to the property of a loyal citizen.

The claim, as I formerly stated, has been through the ordeal of the Committee on War Claims twice. It obtained the approval of the Committee on War Claims of the Forty-ninth Congress. It has passed through the Court of Claims, and the facts have been found and the claim favorably considered by that court. Having been referred to the Committee on War Claims of the present House, it has been favorably reported to the House.

In the discussion one week ago those gentlemen who opposed this bill opposed it in spite of what I have just stated, on three grounds: First, that the claimant in this bill had signed a receipt in full to the Quartermaster's Department for damages claimed; secondly, that the amount was extravagant; and, thirdly, I believe, gentlemen opposed it on general principles.

Now, Mr. Chairman, as to the point made on the other side, that this party is barred because of his having signed a receipt, the Court of Claims in their report to this House state distinctly and unqualifiedly that he signed that receipt with the express understanding that it should not debar him from the privilege of making a future claim on the Government for damages; and in the brief submitted by the attorney who presented his case to the Court of Claims there are references to eleven decisions of various courts in this country to the effect that where a party signed a receipt in full, and where there was oral testimony that he signed that receipt upon compulsion or condition, that receipt did not debar him from the privilege of making a further claim for damages to his property. There can be nothing in that proposition.

A gentleman on this floor, a distinguished lawyer, took issue with the gentleman who raised that point at the time, and said he was willing to risk his reputation as a lawyer on the proposition that that did not debar this claimant from claiming further damages from the Government.

One other point. Gentlemen seem to lay no stress on the fact that the Court of Claims had found in favor of the claimant. They seek to know what the testimony was on which the court based its finding. Let me say to the gentlemen making such a cavil, that the findings of the court as to the rent were based on testimony obtained by two persons appointed by the Quartermaster's Department to take testimony; and that the finding of the court upon the question of the destruction of property was based upon the testimony of a party appointed by General Augur himself to ascertain the amount of damages. So that this testimony taken by these three several agents of the Government, appointed by trusted officers of the Government, in connection with testimony by experts, builders, and others familiar with the value of the property destroyed, constitute the basis upon which the Court of Claims made its recommendations to this Congress.

I would like to ask gentlemen what better evidence could be obtained, what better proof could that court have obtained as to the real value of the rental or the value of the property destroyed than the actual testimony on which their report to this House was based?

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. GROSVENOR. It is a thankless undertaking to stand here and oppose the payment of claims of this character. Nevertheless I am satisfied it is a duty that is imposed upon somebody, and I might as well bear my proportion of the burden as anybody else.

So far as the question of this receipt is concerned, I think no lawyer and no man of intelligence who knows anything about law will differ as to what the law of this whole country is upon that point. A receipt is prima facie evidence of the settlement of the claim.

Mr. COMPTON. Nobody disputes that.

Mr. GROSVENOR. And it can be impeached and set aside only upon the ground either that it was obtained by duress, or by some fraudulent representation, or upon some misunderstanding by the party signing it. I say about this claim without hesitation that there is a total lack of any suggestion of either one of these grounds for setting aside the receipt. It looks to me exactly as though this claimant (and I am very sorry for this claimant) had concluded at one time to take what was about a fair amount for the rent of this property, and that then somebody told him that he was not bound by his receipt.

Mr. COMPTON. Will the gentleman let me ask him a question right there?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Certainly.

Mr. COMPTON. Who is that "somebody" but the Court of Claims?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I do not know.

Mr. COMPTON. Has not the Court of Claims told him so?

Mr. GROSVENOR. The claim would never have been in the Court of Claims if he had not asserted the right to recover after he had given a receipt in full.

Mr. COMPTON. Does not the Court of Claims say distinctly that that right does not debar him from recovering?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Everybody knows that it does not debar him if he can get rid of the force of it, but he has not done that by any one of the methods which the law recognizes.

My next proposition is that this is one of these indefinite claims. They do not tell us anything about this property. The committee will remember that they told us last Friday that they did not know in what part of the District of Columbia this race-track was located. I am not in favor of paying claims like that.

And now, Mr. Chairman, I am compelled to say that I am not willing to pay claims of this class. That is what the gentleman [Mr. COMPTON] says is "general principles." There is no "general principles" about it. That is a distinct doctrine of the law of this country which has been settled over and over again. There was not any contract here; it is not pretended that there was. It was in the nature of a violent seizure and occupation of this abandoned property; for I assume that it was abandoned. There is no pretense that it was being used for a race-track. It is stated that there were 52 acres of land and buildings and saloons, a grand-stand, etc., and I admit that there is a report from the Quartermaster-General which indicates the value of the property, but I am not content with that. I refer again to what I said the other day, that there is something left for Congress in these cases, or else we have not any jurisdiction. It is left to Congress to say, after the ascertainment of the Court of Claims, first, whether we will pay this class of claims at all, and, secondly, whether we will pay the amount that an ex parte examination has found to be due. I use the term ex parte with full understanding of its scope. I do not believe that any evidence has been called by the Government. I do not believe that any pains have been taken to ascertain the value of this property. That is all I desire to say.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would state to the gentleman that the time allowed for debate by unanimous consent has expired.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I ask unanimous consent to occupy about two minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, the other day, when this bill came before the House, without knowing anything about it except what was contained in the report, I antagonized it with some degree of violence. I know more of the claim now than I did then. I am not prepared to vote for its allowance, but I fear that if we entirely reject it some injustice may be done to this claimant. That he was indisputably and undoubtedly, at all times and under all circumstances, true to the Government is beyond question. I therefore suggested to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. COMPTON], and I suggest now to the committee, that if by vote or consent this claim can be recommitted to the committee for further inquiry and report the House may then be in a condition to do exact justice between the Government and this claimant. I should regret exceedingly to see a claim that ought not to be allowed paid, and I would regret perhaps more to have an honest claim defeated.

Mr. COMPTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to recommit this bill to the Committee on War Claims, with the understanding that it shall not lose its place on the Calendar.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I am willing that that condition shall be made.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Chairman, I am willing to have this bill withdrawn and re-referred to the Committee on War Claims for the purpose of ascertaining the circumstances under which this receipt was given, and also the actual value of the property. If that can be done, and my mind can be disabused of the views which I now hold, I will gladly support the bill.

Mr. COMPTON. I am willing to have the bill recommitted to the Committee on War Claims, in order that that committee may reopen and reinvestigate the case and report fully to this House, upon condition that the bill shall not lose its place on the Calendar.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I certainly have no objection to that.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. COMPTON] moves that this bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it be recommitted to the Committee on War Claims, and that when again reported it shall retain its original place on the Calendar.

Mr. LANHAM. I object to the last portion of the proposition.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I suggest to the gentleman from Texas that that would be the regular order anyhow——

Mr. PERKINS. Undoubtedly.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Because the bill under consideration is simply a substitute for this report from the Court of Claims, so that if the bill should be recommitted it would not interfere with the standing of the report from the court, which would be in exactly the same position.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks it is not competent for the Committee of the Whole by resolution to change the attitude which a bill would take upon the Calendar when it may be again reported. That would require unanimous consent.

Mr. DINGLEY. I was about to make that suggestion.

Mr. COMPTON. Very well; I will take my chances as to that.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. COMPTON] now moves that the bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it be recommitted to the Committee on War Claims.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I desire to withdraw my motion to strike out.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understood the gentleman to do that.

The motion of Mr. COMPTON was agreed to.

ELIZABETH MULVEHILL.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will now report the next bill on the Calendar.

The Clerk read the following:

A bill (H. R. 8339, Forty-ninth Congress) for the relief of Elizabeth Mulvehill.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Elizabeth Mulvehill the sum of $4,345.17, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, in full satisfaction for her claim for tobacco taken by the Army of the United States in Alleghany County, State of Virginia, in 1863, for Army use, as shown by the facts found in the Court of Claims in Congressional case No. 100.

Mr. O'FERRALL. There is a report in this case.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands the report was read on a previous day.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope it will be read again.

Mr. BAYNE. Would it not be best to read simply the finding of the Court of Claims?

Mr. O'FERRALL. That is embodied in the report of the committee.

The report of the Committee on War Claims of the Forty-ninth Congress was read, as follows:

The Committee on War Claims, to whom was referred the claim of Elizabeth Mulvehill, beg leave to report:

That the Committee on War Claims of the Forty-eighth Congress, not being clearly and fully advised of all the facts in the case, referred it to the Court of Claims for a finding, under the provisions of an act entitled "An act to afford assistance and relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the investigation of claims and demands against the Government," approved March 3, 1883.

Said claim has been returned by said Court of Claims to the committee with the following findings of fact, filed January 11, 1886, to wit:

"In the Court of Claims. December term, 1884. Elizabeth Mulvehill vs. The United States. Congressional case No. 100.

"FINDINGS OF FACT. FILED JANUARY 11, 1886.

"This case, referred to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives the 25th day of April, 1884, under the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. at L., 485), having been heard by the court, the Attorney-General by his assistants appearing for the defense and protection of the United States, as required by said act, the court upon the evidence finds the facts to be as follows:

"1. That this claim was referred to the Court of Claims by the Committee on War Claims, House of Representatives, under the first section of the act approved March 3, 1883, commonly called the 'Bowman act,' April 25, 1884.

"2. That the Court of Claims, on preliminary inquiry, as required by the fourth section of said act, found that the claimant did not give aid and comfort to the rebellion, but was throughout that war loyal to the Government of the United States, and that the Assistant Attorney-General of the United States appeared for the defense and protection of the interest of the United States in this pending investigation.

"3. That the claimant was residing with her husband, since deceased, at Greenbrier White Sulphur Springs, in the State now of West Virginia; that her husband was a railroad contractor at that place, and was engaged in railroad work with one Thomas K. McCann, late assistant quartermaster, United States Volunteers, brother of the claimant; that claimant and her husband went to Virginia in about 1857, and were natives of the State of Pennsylvania; that at the breaking out of the war claimant's brother left the State of Virginia for the North, and that some time in 1862 claimant's husband escaped in the night-time and went North, leaving his wife, the claimant, what ready money he had, she at the time having a young child, and could not go with him.

"4. That claimant afterwards applied to the Confederate military authorities for a pass to enable her to follow her husband to the Union lines, but was refused such pass; that she went to reside in the family of one John Waldron, a contractor and Union man, on the next section of the railroad, all the property of herself and husband having been confiscated after his escape.

"5. That she was informed that no person would be allowed to carry money through the Confederate lines, all persons being carefully searched.

"That she had managed to keep the money secreted up to this time.

"That at John Waldron's house she discussed with him what they should do with their money; they could not invest it in real estate, and could not carry the money away with them. They concluded to buy tobacco and secrete it. She accordingly employed Mr. Waldron and furnished him the money to purchase the tobacco, which was purchased at Lynchburgh, Va., at different times in 1863, and stored, with other tobacco belonging to Waldron, at Sweet Chalybeate Springs, Alleghany County, Virginia, with one John Kelly, proprietor of said springs.

"That about 126 boxes and packages were stored at that place, of which the following belonged to claimant, namely:

1 boxes Julia Dean, 633 pounds, at 95 cents	$601.35
10 boxes Rough and Ready, 985 pounds, at $1	985.00
62 boxes J. W. North, 1,294 pounds, at 80 cents	1,035.20
2 boxes W. S. Dodd, 188 pounds, at 87½ cents	164.50
4 boxes Simpson, 395½ pounds, at 75 cents	296.62
5 boxes Horseshoe, 527 pounds, at $1.25	658.75
6 boxes Julia Dean, 629 pounds, at $1.15	723.35
Total	4,464.77
Deduct one box lost, 104 pounds, at $1.15	119.60
	4,345.17

"6. That the bills of purchase were shown to her at the time, but claimant could not keep the bills or have the tobacco stored in her own name for fear of confiscation.

"7. That the tobacco was all in good condition when stored; none of the boxes or packages were broken; it was stored in a safe place, where it remained until on or about November 15, 1863, when the same was taken by the troops under the command of General Averell, of the United States Army, at that place, in the daytime, and carried away, together with the tobacco belonging to Waldron, in all amounting to about 126 boxes and packages.

"8. That all of said tobacco was in good order when stored with said John Kelly for safe-keeping by said Waldron, and remained securely stored and locked and was in good order at the time the same was taken by the command of General Averell, as shown in finding 7; that the prices charged were reasonable and just for the time and place, and that claimant has never received pay or compensation therefor from any source or for any part thereof, but that the same is still unpaid, and that reasonable value of the tobacco so taken from claimant was $4,345.17.

"9. That claimant's husband died in 1873; that his estate was settled and his debts all paid, and that the money used in the purchase of the tobacco, which is the subject-matter of this claim, was left with claimant by her husband, and was accumulated by him in the course of his business prior to the war.

"ORDER OF THE COURT.

"Ordered, That a copy of the foregoing findings of fact, duly certified, be reported to the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives, together with a copy of this order.

"By the court.

"A true transcript of record.

"Test, this 13th day of March, 1886.

"[SEAL.] JOHN RANDOLPH,

"Assistant Clerk Court of Claims."

Your committee therefore report a bill herewith providing for the payment of the amount found by said Court of Claims, and recommend that it do pass.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall this bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it pass?

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, to make the statement of this case very brief, it is entirely clear, I think, from the findings of the court, that this claimant was loyal. It seems that money belonging either to this claimant or her husband—and it makes no difference which—was invested in tobacco, which was stored in a place supposed at the time to be safe. The army of the United States, under the command of General Averell, came along and carried the tobacco away—appropriated it to its own use in some way or other. I think there is no doubt about the facts in the case.

The first question that occurs to me is whether under any circumstances tobacco can be regarded as either quartermaster's or commissary stores. Then there is the question, in the second place, whether there is anything in the findings of the court or in the evidence in the case which even tends to show that this tobacco was taken by the order of General Averell, or any other officer in command of those troops. It is true that at one place in the findings of the court it is stated that the tobacco was taken by the command of General Averell, but this simply meant (as is clearly shown in a preceding finding of the court) that the tobacco was taken by troops of, or under the command of, General Averell.

The question I wish to submit to the Committee of the Whole is whether the United States Government is prepared to assume payment for damages done by its soldiery in time of war to the property of a loyal citizen by a mere act of trespass, or to pay for the conversion by the Army to its own use of goods which can under no conceivable circumstances be regarded as army supplies belonging either to quartermaster's or commissary stores. Certainly the Government is no more liable in this case than if these troops had gone through that country and with the torch set fire to this warehouse and consumed it and the tobacco together.

I do not care to say anything further. The committee, I think, will understand fully just what this case is. If members are prepared to vote for the payment of the claim, the responsibility is with them.

Mr. O'FERRALL rose.

Mr. PERKINS. Before the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. O'FERRALL] proceeds, I would like to ascertain whether any committee of this House has reported upon this bill. The report just read by the Clerk was made in the Forty-ninth Congress. I think this bill was passed over last Friday because of the fact that no report had been made upon the claim at this session of Congress. I make the inquiry now in order to ascertain whether a report has been made since.

Mr. O'FERRALL. In answer to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PERKINS], I will say that the Committee on War Claims of this House has made a report upon a bill introduced at this session similar to the one introduced and reported upon at the last session. The report made at this session is identical with the report just read. I have it in my hand.

Mr. WARNER. Will the gentleman give the number of the bill and report for this session?

Mr. O'FERRALL. The bill is No. 8002, and the report No. 1122.

Now, Mr. Chairman, as stated by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BROWNE] there can not be any question as to the loyalty of the claimant in this case. According to the testimony she and her husband came to Virginia about 1857 to reside. The war came on. Her husband, being a loyal man, disposed of what property he had, went North and became a soldier in the Federal Army. His wife, having an infant at the time, was not able to go with him, and afterward was constantly prevented from leaving by the extension of the Confederate lines. The little money that she had she invested in tobacco, that being, as she supposed and was advised, the safest investment she could make. That tobacco was stored in Alleghany County, Virginia. There it remained until 1863, when General Averell's cavalry came and took it.

I have in my possession here, which I shall send to the Clerk's desk to be read directly, an affidavit which has been taken since the testimony which was before the Court of Claims, and which is not what a lawyer would regard as first class testimony, but which certainly is persuasive. It is the testimony of a gentleman living in my district at this time and whose integrity and reliability I am ready to vouch for anywhere, who swears the officer who took this tobacco told him he took it by direction of General Averell, and that it was for the use of the troops.

I admit there was no war regulation and there was none during the war which made tobacco a ration; but, unless I am very much mistaken, from 1776 down to this hour tobacco has always been regarded as a commissary supply. And I think there is a war regulation now which authorizes and directs the commissaries of the Army to keep tobacco on hand to be furnished to the enlisted men at prime cost, adding only transportation, but not to be furnished in greater quantity to each soldier than 16 ounces in thirty days. Not a ration, sir, but a commissary supply; but if it was not used by the soldiers as rations it must have been taken and given out by the commissary of General Averell's command as commissary stores, and the Federal soldiers in that way paid the United States Government for this tobacco, and the United States Government is holding the money to-day which belongs to this lady.

Mr. WARNER. Let me inquire of the gentleman from Virginia if there is any evidence that this tobacco was issued to the troops? The gentleman has said that it was issued to the troops, for which the troops paid, and in this way the money came into the hands of the Government. My question is, is there any evidence that money was received for this tobacco?

Mr. O'FERRALL. I can not say money was received for this tobacco, but what I say is this: I said, sir, that while tobacco was not a ration, yet it had been regarded, I think, since 1776, as a commissary supply, and there is a war regulation now, which I have here at my desk, which authorizes and directs commissaries to keep on hand tobacco and furnish it to soldiers at prime cost, not exceeding 16 ounces to each a month. And if it is furnished to soldiers at prime cost it is necessarily taken out of the wages of the soldiers when they are paid, and the Government is getting something from the soldiers for the tobacco and not the Government.

Mr. WARNER. I ask the gentleman whether there is any evidence or not that this tobacco was ever issued to the soldiers?

Mr. O'FERRALL. The finding of the Court of Claims does not go that far; but as I said a moment ago I have here in my hand an affidavit, which the gentleman from Missouri will not regard as first-class testimony, but which is the persuasive testimony of a man who was told by the quartermaster who took it that it was taken for the use of the Army and taken by the direction of General Averell, and that he promised to give him a certificate to that effect, but never did so. I ask the affidavit to be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, ss:

Personally appeared before me, the undersigned, a notary public in and for the District of Columbia, T. K. McCann, who, being by me duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he resides at Steubenville, Ohio, which is also his post-office address; that he is the identical T. K. McCann who was captain and acting quartermaster, United States Volunteers, in the war of 1861; that he was personally well acquainted with one Michael E. Mulvehill, deceased, late an employé in the Quartermaster's Department, United States Army; that deponent was personally well acquainted with said Mulvehill previous to the war and up to the time of the death of said Mulvehill, who was burned in his hotel at Warrensburgh, Mo., in November, 1873. Deponent knows that said Mulvehill was a Union man and loyal and devoted to the cause of the Government of the United States previous to and throughout the war. Deponent says this from his own personal knowledge and from his intimate acquaintance with the said Mulvehill. Deponent further says that said Mulvehill was in the employ of the War Department, Quartermaster-General's Department, that is, under the immediate command of this deponent or of one Captain Pinkard, till the close of the war.

Deponent further says that he was personally well acquainted with one Capt. William H. Brown, since deceased, of General Averell's staff; that deponent met said Brown at the village of Martinsburgh, W. Va., early in 1861, and that this deponent talked with said Brown about the taking and use of certain tobacco which was stored at Red Sweet Springs, Alleghany County, Virginia, belonging to the said Mulvehill; that the said Brown told this deponent that he (Brown) seized and took possession and removed the said tobacco on General Averell's order, on the raid to Salem in about December, 1863.

Deponent further says that said Brown promised said Mulvehill that he (Brown) would give Mulvehill a certificate of seizure, as the property had been taken on account of the United States and for the benefit thereof.

T. K. McCANN.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 14th day of June, A. D. 1878.

[SEAL.[GEORGE F. GRAHAM, Notary Public.

Mr. O'FERRALL. I yield now five minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WHITE].

Mr. WHITE, of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, in regard to this bill there are one or two features to which I wish to direct the attention of the House, and which ought to govern the action, as I conceive, of the members of the House upon the bill as to whether it should be paid or not. In the first place, the report in this case clearly shows the fact that this woman, who is now the claimant on behalf of her dead husband's estate, was a loyal woman, and also that her husband was a loyal man. This point, it seems, can not be gainsaid in any manner.

Now, it is not disputed, and I take it it will not be by any member of this House, that the Government of the United States is not in a position and can not undertake to shirk the payment of any just debt due to a loyal citizen.. Neither can it be said that because Virginia took the part she did in secession there were no loyal people there. In fact, some of the most loyal people we had during the great struggle were found in the border States, in Virginia, Kentucky, and Missouri; people who suffered more, with the armies surrounding them, than people in the North did, because they were between the fires and the struggles of both armies.

To my mind this case is so clear that I would be in favor of paying the claim on this ground alone, especially when it is accompanied by the fact that the party was loyal and the evidence is clear that the property was taken. It makes no difference how it was done—whether by General Averell's order, or whether he commanded the troops or not; it is only a question whether or not it was taken by the United States troops. Neither does it make much difference whether they used it or not. If it was taken and used or taken and destroyed by their order or by their act, and was the property of a loyal citizen, then the owner ought to be recompensed.

And further, Mr. Chairman, there is another feature which has weight in determining my views of this question: that is, that a court of this country has already passed upon the merits of the claim.

Now, I understand this court is constituted to relieve the Congress of the United States from the investigation of just this class of claims. It would be almost impossible for the business of the Government to go on if the various claims were to be brought in here and examined with every strip of evidence that was necessary to establish them. It would be impossible for Congress, if devoting the whole of its session to the consideration of such claims, to get through with them. They are worked out in the Court of Claims, the evidence sifted carefully, I understand, by a court composed of honorable judges, men who hear the evidence and the petition of the party, who consider the question presented, not as a one-sided case, for, I believe, the United States attorney appears in every case, takes the evidence, examines it, and defends the United States against such claims.

Therefore when a case reaches a stage such that it has passed the action of these judges, who report that it is a proper one to be paid, it would be very difficult and require considerable evidence to persuade me that it should not be paid. Therefore I am in favor of paying the claim here, on the ground that I believe it to be a just claim, fairly made out, and establishing both the loss of the property and the loyalty of the claimant.

Mr. O'FERRALL. I now yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PERKINS].

Mr. PERKINS. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that there is but one theory upon which the House can accept the claim, and that is the theory suggested in the affidavit which the gentleman from Virginia sent to the desk and caused to be read a few moments ago. If we accept that as evidence in the case, in my judgment the claim can be honored by the House without hesitation, and we can make the appropriation; but unless that is accepted as testimony, it seems to me that, upon principle, the claim must be rejected.

From the first presentation of this claim until the present moment it has been the theory and practice of Congress to deny claims arising from the wanton acts of the soldiers; in other words, the Government of the United States never presumed to stand responsible for the wanton destruction or seizure of property that was not authorized; and it seems to me that the Court of Claims finds here only that the soldiers, or a soldier, under the command of or constituting a part of the command of General Averell, wantonly took the property, this tobacco, and appropriated it to his or their own use or purposes.

Mr. WHITE, of Indiana. Will the gentleman let me ask him a question?

Mr. PERKINS. Certainly.

Mr. WHITE, of Indiana. Was it any worse for this claimant if this property was taken by an order of General Averell, or if it was taken or destroyed by the wanton acts of the soldiers without orders?

Mr. PERKINS. The loss to the claimant might be no greater in either case; but the principle, so far as the indebtedness of the United States Government is concerned, is widely different. Congress at all times has absolutely refused to recognize the idea that the Government of the United States is responsible for the wanton destruction of property by its soldiers; and unless it can be made to appear to the satisfaction of the House that this property was taken for the use of the Army, and by some officer having authority to represent the Government in that particular, then this demand must be rejected.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Let me ask the gentleman a question. If these are not ordinary army supplies, would the fact that the officer directed their taking make any difference as far as the liability of the Government is concerned?

Mr. PERKINS. Technically it would, but it would make no difference with me. I am not inclined to take the technical view of these claims that some members seem inclined to take. I know the difficulties existing in the Southern country during the war, and how difficult it would be for a man to be able to show that his property was taken by an officer who had the authority of the United States Government back of him to warrant its taking. Hence I do not insist upon that strict rule of proof.

But it must be made to appear, before Congress should pass one of these claims for damages, or make compensation to parties for losses sustained, that the property was actually taken for army purposes. When that is made to appear to my satisfaction, I will not require that the claimant shall produce additional proof to show that the property was taken by authority of the Government. I know our commands in the Southern States went out and appropriated horses and commissary stores, and took all that could contribute to our success in that conflict; and if it is made to appear by competent testimony that the property was taken and actually used by the Army in its efforts to suppress treason and rebellion, that is sufficient for me. But it is not sufficient to show that it was wantonly destroyed by some soldiers in some officer's command.

Hence it appears to me this affidavit is a very important one if we accept it as competent proof. If it is not, we are establishing a precedent that will involve us in claims leading to fearful consequences.

Mr. TAULBEE. I ask the gentleman, does he not think the rule already established is a little rigid, which requires the claimant to show not only the taking of the property, but the consumption and use of the property for the uses of the Army?

Mr. PERKINS. I think the claimant should show not only the taking of the property, but that it was taken by order of some commanding officer. But when the claimant has shown that, I think he has gone as far as any claimant should be required to go.

Mr. TAULBEE. I understand the gentleman to say that he is willing to waive the proof that the property was taken by order of the regular commanding officer in this case.

Mr. PERKINS. We have no evidence as to that except this affidavit, which is important in my judgment. If we accept it, there is evidence that the property was taken by the authority of one of the officers representing General Averell, in command of the United States forces.

Mr. WARNER. I desire to ask the gentleman from Kansas a question. I am not opposing this claim and am inclined to be liberal, and I am willing to go further perhaps than the gentleman from Kansas. When the gentleman speaks of the property being taken by the order of a commanding officer, does he go back to the corps commander, the division commander, the regiment commander, the company commander, or the commander of a squad?

Mr. PERKINS. I am inclined to be liberal, also, in regard to that feature of a claim. But I think it should be made to appear whether the property was taken here by the troops constituting the command of General Averell. To hold the Government of the United States responsible for the taking of that property I think it should be made to appear that it was taken by the orders of General Averell, or of some one representing him; and this affidavit presumes to speak for General Averell.

Mr. LYMAN. Does the gentleman deem this affidavit competent testimony?

Mr. PERKINS. I should not consider it competent in a court of justice. I do not know what this House might consider it.

Mr. O'FERRALL. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CUTCHEON].

Mr. CUTCHEON. I take it this claim is of that nature which every gentleman on this floor would desire to vote for provided he considered it a safe thing to do. It is a claim which every one would favor if it was in nowise dangerous.

This question of the seizure of tobacco is not altogether a new question. It is one that has been passed upon by the officers of the Government and by the claims commissioners. In this case there are certain things that appear to be well established. The first is that the decedent was the owner of this tobacco. The second is that the decedent was a loyal man. The third is that this tobacco was seized by the officers of the Government, and for the purposes of the Government. We perhaps can not decide whether this tobacco was seized as an army supply and issued to the troops for their use, or whether it was seized for purposes of destruction simply to destroy property within the enemy's country.

I take it if the former supposition be true, that this was seized as an army supply for the purposes of the Government and used by the troops of the Government, then we have ample precedent for the payment for this tobacco.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Does the gentleman insist there is precedent for the payment of property taken not for the purpose of army supplies?

Mr. CUTCHEON. I will give my authority in a moment, found in a very exhaustive report made in the Forty-third Congress, by Mr. Lawrence, late First Comptroller of the Treasury. In this report, numbered 262, of that Congress, we have a very exhaustive discussion of this matter of war claims. At page 15 of that report occurs the following:

Tobacco and other property was also an element of strength, and by the laws of war might equally, with cotton, and upon the same principles, be destroyed.

Then in a note we find the following:

The Commissioners of Claims, under the act of March 3, 1871, in their third annual report, of December 8, 1873, House Miscellaneous Document No. 23, first session Forty-first Congress, page 3, say:

"As we now for the first time present reports allowing for tobacco taken for army use, we desire to state the reasons for such allowances.

"Tobacco was by law never made an army supply till the act of March 3, 1865, provided that it might be furnished at cost to those who desired it, and at their expense. All the claims for tobacco which have been examined by us are for tobacco taken before that date.

"After the capture of Atlanta, in September, 1864, General Sherman found that he was short of rations for his army, and that the soldiers were subject to many privations. To make his army contented, and as far as possible to make up to them for their usual rations, of which they were for the time deprived, he issued an order on the 8th of September, 1864, authorizing the chief commissary of subsistence to take possession of and issue to the troops all the tobacco in Atlanta, and give certificates thereof to the owners, to be accounted for in accordance with existing orders.

"Pursuant to this order tobacco belonging to George J. Stubblefield was taken, and upon his making claim for payment the Commissary Department recommended, 'as this tobacco was taken by order of General Sherman and issued to the troops in lieu of other rations, and as the loyalty of the claimant is clearly established,' that payment should be made. This was approved by the Secretary of War, Mr. Stanton, and the claim was paid.

"The payment stands upon the ground that when an army is deprived of its usual rations the commanding general can, in his judgment, authorize an article not a supply to be taken and used for the time being as a supply and in lieu of other rations; and in such case the Government is bound to pay for it. We have strictly followed this precedent, and have not allowed for tobacco except when taken under this order."—Third General Report Commissioners of Claims, article 6, page 3.

The committee rose informally to receive a message from the Senate.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, informed the House that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. Res. 117) to enable the Secretary of the Interior to utilize the hot water now running to waste on the permanent reservation at Hot Springs, Ark., and for other purposes.

ELIZABETH MULVEHILL.

The Committee of the Whole resumed its session, Mr. Hatch in the chair.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Mr. Chairman, the only open question in this case is whether this tobacco was taken by order and taken in lieu of an Army supply. Now, I do not suppose that any gentleman upon this floor believes for a moment that this tobacco was taken simply for the purpose of destroying it. There is no sort of doubt in my mind, especially in view of the affidavit which has been read, that this tobacco was taken by a staff officer of General Averell for the benefit of the troops. Every man knows how essential it was to the troops in the field, especially when undergoing hardships and privations, to have the solace of that weed around the camp-fires. Wherever we could get our hands on it we took it, and we took it for the use of the troops. I have known cotton to be destroyed again and again, but I never knew any tobacco to be destroyed, and whenever we could put our hands upon it we did put them upon it for the benefit of the boys in blue, to stiffen them on the march and comfort them in the camp. Believing, then, that this tobacco was taken by a staff officer of General Averell as a supply for the use of his troops, I shall willingly and gladly vote for this bill, but I draw the line there. It is because the tobacco was taken for use and not for destruction that I am willing to vote for the claim.

Mr. O'FERRALL. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Allen].

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. I wish to ask the gentleman from Virginia a question. Did I understand him correctly when I understood him to say that the husband of this claimant was a Union soldier?

Mr. O'FERRALL. You understood me correctly, sir. He was a Union soldier. He left Virginia and went North and became a Union soldier, and was in the Quartermaster's Department of the Federal Army.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, in the presence of the fact that this soldier was a Union soldier going from Virginia, which had seceded, and in the presence of the other fact that his wife sought in vain to pass through the Confederate lines in order that she might join her husband in the North, I feel that I have ample justification for sweeping away in this case all legal cobwebs. I am free to say I know of no similar instance, and for this Congress to say that a man who was himself a Union soldier and whose wife remained loyal among those who were not loyal should suffer here by reason of technicalities would be an insult to every Union soldier in this country. This claim ought to have been paid long ago upon the proofs that are here. No man can say, of course, that the affidavit which has been read as a part of the remarks of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. O'Ferrall] would be sufficient in a court of law, but this House rises at times above law, and, in the atmosphere of equity, undertakes to do exact justice between man and man. No one can claim for a moment that so large an amount of tobacco could be surreptitiously taken and concealed by the soldiers.

The officers must necessarily have known of the capture of this tobacco. It could not be carried away in the pockets of the troops, and from the statement made in that affidavit I have not the slightest doubt that this tobacco was taken with the knowledge and by the direction of the commanding officer, and that, whether we ever paid a bill like this before or not, the only just thing to do in this case is to pay this claim. I think such cases must be exceedingly scarce, and I do not think the Congress of the United States would be willing to say that while a man was fighting on the side of the Union his tobacco could be taken for the use of the Union troops, and payment be now refused to his widow. I do not want to put myself on record in that shape. I want to vote for this bill. It ought to be passed unanimously, for several reasons: first, because the man himself, though living in Virginia, was loyal to the nation. In the next place, because there can be no reasonable doubt that the Union soldiers had the benefit of the tobacco; and, in the third place, because, while the evidence is not, perhaps, sufficient in a court of law, the fact is, in the mind of every man here, that morally and equitably we not only have the right but that it is our bounden duty to pay this claim.

Why, sir, I would rather vote for a million such claims as this than vote to pay a single dollar of claims similar to that of the man Jones from Mobile who was upon neither side of the question.

We need not be afraid of making mistakes, Mr. Chairman, where the Union soldier is involved, as he is here. And, by and by, we shall ask you to go further and to do justice to those ex-soldiers of the Union, or their widows or children, who in every county of the North are suffering for the necessaries of life, the soldiers having lost their lives or had their constitutions impaired by reason of their services in putting down the rebellion.

Mr. O'FERRALL. I move that this bill be now laid aside to be favorably reported to the House.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, where a claim has any elements of merit——

Mr. O'FERRALL. Let me understand whether I am entitled to the floor, or whether it belongs to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Holman].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. O'Ferrall] has fifteen minutes of his time remaining.

Mr. O'FERRALL. How much time does the gentleman from Indiana wish?

Mr. HOLMAN. I will take the floor after the gentleman gets through.

Mr. O'FERRALL. Then I reserve the residue of my time.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, where there are elements of merit in a claim, and the precedent proposed to be established is not a dangerous one, I always resolve any fair doubts in favor of the claim. Here there is the circumstance that the husband of the claimant was a Union soldier. I submit that is to be taken into account. I take it into account myself involuntarily. This man and his wife were natives of Pennsylvania, who, before the war began, moved into West Virginia.

Mr. O'FERRALL. Virginia.

Mr. HOLMAN. It was Virginia before the formation of the State of West Virginia. Undoubtedly these were both loyal people. If I have understood some of the papers which were read, the husband afterward became connected with the Quartermaster Department——

Mr. O'FERRALL. He was in the Federal Army.

Mr. HOLMAN. And in that capacity was in the Army. That he was in the Union Army I assume to be a fact. The finding of the court, that portion of it which is material to the case, is:

That all of said tobacco was in good order when stored with said John Kelly.

The property was placed in the hands of John Kelly and stood in his name to protect it from confiscation by the Confederate government. I infer, therefore, that John Kelly was in sympathy with the Confederacy.

Mr. O'FERRALL. Allow me to interrupt the gentleman right there.

Mr. HOLMAN. That point is unimportant, however.

Mr. O'FERRALL. But the gentleman has mentioned it, and his statement, if uncorrected, may prejudice this case. John Kelly was a Union man, and this Congress has already passed a bill for his relief.

Mr. HOLMAN. I thank the gentleman for that information.

That the bills of purchase were shown to her at the time, but claimant could not keep the bills or have the tobacco stored in her own name for fear of confiscation.

I can not see how the tobacco would have been any safer in the hands of any other Union person than in her own hands. Hence I inferred that John Kelly was a Confederate. But that is unimportant; it does not touch the merits of the case. I need not have mentioned it.

That all of said tobacco was in good order when stored with said John Kelly for safe-keeping by said Waldron—

A friend of this lady—and remained securely stored and locked, and was in good order at the time the same was taken by the command of General Averell, as shown in finding 7; that the prices charged were reasonable and just for the time and place, and that claimant has never received pay or compensation therefor from any source or for any part thereof.

Now, General Averell, I believe, is still living. If the report refers to General Averill of the volunteer forces, I know he is living; and I believe General Averell who belonged to the regular service is also alive.

Mr. DORSEY and others. Yes, sir.

Mr. O'FERRALL. There was but one General Averell that I ever heard of.

Mr. HOLMAN. If General Averill of Minnesota is the officer referred to, he was in the volunteer service.

Mr. MACDONALD. He is not the man; he was not down there.

Mr. HOLMAN. Now, does the affidavit presented here throw any important light on this case? That affidavit alleges that affiant had a conversation with the quartermaster who made the seizure of this tobacco, who told him that the seizure was made by order of General Averell and that the tobacco was appropriated to the use of the Army. That is the substance of the affidavit, if I understand it correctly. Now, I do not believe that any member of the House who has long served upon the Committee on Claims attaches any special importance to these ex parte affidavits. We do not do it as lawyers in our current practice, and I know as a general rule that sort of testimony is not reliable here any more than elsewhere. It is not, indeed, evidence at all; and I do not see how the House or the committee, no matter how anxious to do a favor to this lady, can attach any importance to that affidavit.

In the first place, tobacco was not a ration. It has always been kept, I believe, as commissary stores, just as multitudes of other things were sold by the Commissary Department. Now, there is no testimony tending to show——

Mr. O'FERRALL. The gentleman will allow me to remind him that some days ago various claims, embraced in what was known as the "omnibus bill," were passed here; some of those claims were for whisky, some for ladies' shoes; and those claims were voted for by the distinguished gentleman from Indiana. Those articles were not rations, and they were not army supplies.

Mr. HOLMAN. I am very glad the gentleman has furnished me with his testimony to a fact, of which I was not conscious before—that I voted for those claims. I was anxious to vote for that bill if I could do so. Some of the claims were good claims, and some were bad; but I was not able to vote for it. In my judgment there were many items in it which ought to have been excluded. That shows the want of value in reports which we are receiving from time to time from the Court of Claims. That court pays no attention to the legislation of July 4, 1865. Reports come in such form as to lay plausible ground for a claim, but without proof that is satisfactory the property taken was used for the Army, except incidentally, and then paid for by our soldiers, as is always done. If it were shown this property was taken by order of the commanding general and actually applied to the use of the Army, divided up amongst the soldiers, and they used the tobacco, it would be a persuasive case, although it is a claim the Government should not be held liable for. There is not a district on the border, or anywhere south of the border, where cases did not occur where the Army passing through villages appropriated the property within their reach, and for these acts of spoliation I never knew claims were allowed by Congress. I have known nothing of that sort. Over my own district, and over other districts on the border where instances of that kind have occurred, the Government has never held itself responsible for the mere taking of the property of citizens at the seat of war, or connected with military operations. I do not think any government has ever done so.

This property was taken and used by the Army under the order of a commanding general who is still living here, and there ought to be abundant proof to establish that fact? Why should presumptions be indulged at the expense of the Government?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Is it not a fact that General Averell is still living in this city?

Mr. HOLMAN. I understand that to be so.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Is there anything in the record of this claim to show her husband was a Union soldier?

Mr. HOLMAN. It has been said by the gentleman from Virginia that he was.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Does it not show that he was an employé of the Quartermaster's Department?

Mr. HOLMAN. There is evidence he was such employé. I have assumed in behalf of this claimant that he was in the Union service, but I can not see upon what ground a claim can rest. I would like, if I could satisfactorily to my own conscience, to vote for it, but I am compelled to vote against it.

It would be carrying war claims to too great a length and there would be no limit to the demand which might be made upon the Government if we recognize a claim like this as being sufficiently proved. Here we have a large body of tobacco taken possession of, alleged to have been by the order of the commanding general, and yet no proof has been presented from that officer, although that officer is living almost within the sound of my voice. There is no testimony to enable the committee to reach a satisfactory conclusion, and while I would prefer to vote for the bill, I am compelled to vote against it. It is a lady, a widow woman, a loyal widow woman, too, whose husband was in the employment of the Quartermaster's Department. I should like to vote for this claim, but I can not do it unless claims of every character without a shadow of testimony to establish them are to be paid out of the public Treasury. I am compelled, therefore, to cast my vote against this claim.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation?

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 78, noes 21.

Mr. HOLMAN. Reserving the question of no quorum, as this is a pioneer claim of its class, I think a record should be made of the vote upon it; and with the understanding there shall be a yea-and-nay vote in the House, I cheerfully withhold the question of no quorum.

There was no objection; and it was agreed by unanimous consent that a vote by yeas and nays should be taken on the bill in the House.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

WILLIAM LAVERY.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 610) for the relief of William Lavery.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay William Lavery, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $438.75, being the value of quartermaster's stores taken from the said William Lavery by the United States forces during the late war and appropriated to their use, as found by the Court of Claims.

The report of the committee (by Mr. STONE, of Kentucky) was read, as follows:

The Committee on War Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 610) for the relief of William Lavery, report as follows:

The facts out of which this bill for relief arises will be found stated in House report from the Committee on War Claims of the Forty-ninth Congress, a copy of which is hereto appended and made a part of this report.

Your committee adopt the said report as their own, and report back the bill and recommend its passage.

[House Report No. 2788, Forty-ninth Congress, first session.]

The Committee on War Claims, to whom was referred the claim of William Lavery, beg leave to report:

The Committee on War Claims of the Forty-eighth Congress, not being clearly and fully advised of all the facts in the case, referred it to the Court of Claims for findings, under the provisions of an act entitled "An act to afford assistance and relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the investigation of claims and demands against the Government," approved March 3, 1883.

Said claim has been returned by said Court of Claims to the committee with the following findings of fact, filed March 29, 1886, to wit:

"Court of Claims. Congressional case No. 45. William Lavery vs. The United States."

"FINDINGS OF FACT. MARCH 29, 1886.

"The claim in the above-entitled suit having been transmitted to this court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 3d day of March, 1884, and the Attorney-General having appeared for the defendant, and the suit having been brought to a hearing on the 2d day of March, 1886, the court, upon the proofs and evidence, and after hearing P. E. Dye, esq., of counsel for the claimant, and Heber J. May, esq., of counsel for the defendant, finds the following facts:

"I.

"During the years 1862, 1863, 1864, and 1865, and part of 1866, the claimant was residing in Virginia upon a farm known as 'Oakland farm,' in Warwick County. Said farm was reputed to have been then owned by James W. Custis, a member of the Virginia legislature and disloyal to the United States Government. The legal title to said farm is not proved.

"II.

"March 11, 1863, there were received from the claimant and appropriated for the use of the Union Army six head of beef cattle, worth $256.75, and a receipt for the same was given to him, as follows:

"'Received from the estate of James W. Custis, now a member of the Virginia rebel legislature, and occupied by William Lavery, late his overseer, six head of beef cattle, weighing net 1,975 pounds. I have taken the above beef up on my returns for March, 1863, and have not paid the account.

"'Yorktown, Va., March 11, 1863.

"'E. W. COFFIN, Captain and C. S.'

"Said cattle were the property of the claimant and not of said Custis, and have not been paid for.

"There were also taken from the claimant in May, 1862, and used for the Army, four head of beef cattle belonging to him, of the value of $182, which have not been paid for.

"It does not appear that any other supplies or stores of the claimant were taken by or furnished to any part of the military forces of the United States for their use which have not been paid for.

"III.

"The 'Bureau for the Relief of Freedmen and Refugees,' established by the act of March 3, 1865, (chap. 90, 13 Stat. L., 507), having taken possession of said farm as land supposed to be abandoned by its reputed owner (James W. Custis), leased the same to the claimant at a rental of $175 a year. The claimant continued to use and occupy said farm under lease from said bureau for two years, and voluntarily paid rent therefor during that time to officers or agents of said bureau to the amount of $350.

"I certify that the foregoing two pages are a true copy of the original findings of the facts filed by the court.

"ARCHIBALD HOPKINS, Chief Clerk."

Your committee therefore report a bill herewith, providing for the payment of the amount found by said Court of Claims, and recommend that it do pass.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that the second finding of the Court of Claims in that case be again read. It was not distinctly understood here.

The report was again read by the Clerk.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. What is the name of the claimant in this case?

Mr. BOWDEN. His name is William Lavery.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. It appears from the report that he was occupying this farm in some capacity, as tenant or lessee.

Mr. HOLMAN. As the overseer.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. What is the report of the court as to the loyalty of the claimant?

Mr. HOLMAN. I did not hear, in reference to the loyalty of the claimant, anything in the report.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I think there is no finding in that regard.

If I understand this aright, this property was taken in the State of Virginia, the seat of war, from the plantation of a gentleman who was serving in the Virginia Confederate legislature, from his overseer or some other person in charge.

Mr. BOWDEN. Will the gentleman permit me a moment? I will state first that I know nothing whatever of the facts of this claim, except such as are embodied in the report which has been read. I do know old man Lavery, however, and he has always been regarded as one of the few Union men residing in this part of Virginia at that time.

He was, in ante bellum times, the overseer of Mr. Custis, the owner of this plantation mentioned here. During the war it seems that he occupied this plantation, afterwards renting it from the Freedmen's Bureau, and while in custody this property was taken for commissary subsistence and for the use of the Army. This old gentleman has been here for twenty years prosecuting the claim, and he has prosecuted it with such success that he is now an inmate of the almshouse.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. The only point I made was as to the loyalty of the claimant, the circumstances under which the property was taken creating a doubt on that point.

Mr. BOWDEN. As I understand the Bowman act, the question of loyalty is a jurisdictional fact which is to be first determined by the Court of Claims before the matter can be considered at all. It comes down as tradition to me that this old gentleman was one of the few Union men of the State at that time.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I am sure the gentleman can not complain that I raised the question under the circumstances of this report.

Mr. BREWER. If I understood the reading of this report correctly, the receipt which was given by the captain was for the property as belonging to Custis, and not to Mr. Lavery.

Mr. BOWDEN. The Court of Claims determined that it was the property of Mr. Lavery, that it belonged to him, and they expressly so state if the gentleman will observe the reading of the report:

That said cattle were the property of the claimant and not of said Custis, and have not been paid for.

I move that the bill be laid aside and favorably reported to the House.

The motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next business on the Private Calendar.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 6348) for the relief of Mrs. Ellen P. Malloy.

Mr. LANHAM. I move that the Committee do now rise for the purpose of taking action in the House upon the bills considered in the committee.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. STONE, of Missouri, reported that the Committee of the Whole House having had under consideration the Private Calendar, had directed him to report sundry bills with various recommendations.

RECOMMITTAL OF A BILL.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the first bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 6347) for the relief of Alexander Moffitt.

The SPEAKER. This bill is reported from the committee with the recommendation that it be recommitted to the Committee on War Claims.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

ELIZABETH MULVEHILL.

The next business reported from the Committee of the Whole with favorable recommendation was the bill (H. R. 8002) for the relief of Elizabeth Mulvehill.

Mr. LANHAM. It was agreed that there should be a yea-and-nay vote in the House on this bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that the agreement in committee can not bind the House.

Mr. LANHAM. I understand that; but such was the understanding in committee, and I presume the House will assent to it.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that this bill has not yet been engrossed and read the third time.

Mr. LANHAM. The real meaning of the understanding in committee was that the vote should be taken upon the final passage of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Then, if there be no objection, this bill will be considered as ordered to be engrossed and read the third time, and the question will be on its passage.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The question was taken on the passage of the bill; and there were—yeas 117, nays 52, not voting 155; as follows:

YEAS—117.

Allen, Mich.	Finley,	McComas,	Stewart, Ga.
Anderson, Miss.	Flood,	McCreary,	Stockdale,
Arnold,	Ford,	McKenna,	Stone, Ky.
Atkinson,	Forney,	McKinney,	Taulbee,
Baker, Ill.	Funston,	Montgomery,	Thomas, Ky.
Bland,	Gallinger,	Moore,	Thomas, Wis.
Bliss,	Gibson,	Morrill,	Tracey,
Boutelle,	Glass,	Morrow,	Turner, Ga.
Bowden,	Grimes,	Neal,	Vance,
Breckinridge, Ky.	Hatch,	Nelson,	Wade,
Browne, T. H. B., Va.	Haugen,	Newton,	Walker,
Brown, Ohio	Hayes,	Nichols,	Warner,
Brumm,	Herbert,	O'Donnell,	Washington,
Buchanan,	Hermann,	O'Ferrall,	Weber,
Bunnell,	Hires,	O'Neall, Ind.	West,
Catchings,	Hooker,	Osborne,	Wheeler,
Cheadle,	Hunter,	Outhwaite,	White, Ind.
Chipman,	Kean,	Owen,	White, N. Y.
Cothran,	Kerr,	Parker,	Whiting, Mich.
Crisp,	Laird,	Peel,	Whitthorne,
Dalzell,	Landes,	Post,	Wilkinson,
Dargan,	Lawler,	Richardson,	Williams,
Davidson, Fla.	Lee,	Rogers,	Wilson, Minn.
Dorsey,	Lind,	Rowell,	Wilson, W. Va.
Dougherty,	Long,	Rowland,	Wise,
Elliott,	Macdonald,	Russell, Conn.	Yoder,
Enloe,	Maish,	Rusk,	Yost.
Ermentrout,	Mansur,	Sawyer,
Farquhar,	Mason,	Shively,
Felton,	McClammy,	Spooner,

NAYS—52.

Abbott,	Browne, Ind.	Hovey,	Payson,
Adams,	Buckalew,	Johnston, N. C.	Perkins,
Allen, Mass.	Burrows,	Ketcham,	Peters,
Allen, Miss.	Bynum,	Kilgore,	Sayers,
Anderson, Iowa	Caswell,	Lane,	Smith,
Anderson, Ill.	Conger,	Lanham,	Sowden,
Anderson, Kans.	Culberson,	Lyman,	Springer,
Bacon,	Dunham,	McKinley,	Steele,
Bankhead,	Fuller,	McRae,	Stephenson,
Belden,	Greenman,	Mills,	Stone, Mo.
Blount,	Grosvenor,	Moffitt,	Thompson, Ohio
Breckinridge, Ark.	Henderson, Ill.	Nutting,	Weaver,
Brewer,	Holman,	Oates,	Wilkins.

NOT VOTING—155.

Baker, N. Y.	Cutcheon,	Howard,	Pugsley,
Barnes,	Darlington,	Hudd,	Randall,
Barry,	Davenport,	Hutton,	Rayner,
Bayne,	Davidson, Ala.	Jackson,	Reed,
Belmont,	Davis,	Johnston, Ind.	Rice,
Biggs,	De Lano,	Jones,	Robertson,
Bingham,	Dibble	Kelley,	Rockwell,
Blanchard,	Dingley,	Kennedy,	Romeis,
Boothman,	Dockery,	Laffoon,	Russell, Mass.
Bound,	Dunn,	La Follette,	Ryan,
Bowen,	Fisher,	Lagan,	Scott,
Brower,	Fitch,	Laidlaw,	Scull,
Brown, J. R., Va.	Foran,	Latham,	Seney,
Bryce,	French,	Lehlbach,	Seymour,
Burnes,	Gaines,	Lodge,	Shaw,
Burnett,	Gay,	Lynch,	Sherman,
Butler,	Gear,	Maffett,	Simmons,
Butterworth,	Gest,	Mahoney,	Snyder,
Campbell, F., N. Y.	Glover,	Martin,	Spinola,
Campbell, Ohio	Goff,	Matson,	Stahlnecker,
Campbell, T. J., N. Y.	Granger,	McAdoo,	Stewart, Tex.
Candler,	Grout,	McCormick	Stewart, Vt.
Cannon,	Guenther,	McCullogh,	Struble,
Carlton,	Hall,	McMillin,	Symes,
Caruth,	Hare,	McShane,	Tarsney,
Clardy,	Harmer,	Merriman,	Taylor, E. B., Ohio
Clark,	Hayden,	Milliken,	Taylor, J. D., Ohio
Clements,	Heard,	Morgan,	Thomas, Ill.
Cobb,	Hemphill,	Morse,	Thompson, Cal.
Cockran,	Henderson, Iowa	Norwood,	Tillman,
Cogswell,	Henderson, N. C.	O'Neill, Pa.	Townshend,
Collins,	Hiestand,	O'Neill, Mo.	Turner, Kans.
Compton,	Hitt,	Patton,	Vandever,
Cooper,	Hogg,	Penington,	Whiting, Mass.
Cowles,	Holmes,	Perry,	Wickham,
Cox,	Hopkins, Ill.	Phelan,	Wilber,
Crain,	Hopkins, Va.	Phelps,	Woodburn,
Crouse,	Hopkins, N. Y.	Pidcock,	Yardley.
Cummings,	Houk,	Plumb,

So the bill was passed.

During the roll-call,

The SPEAKER said: It appears that the House on this roll-call may find itself without a quorum. The Chair will remind gentlemen that those who are paired have the right to vote to make a quorum.

On motion of Mr. O'FERRALL, by unanimous consent, the reading of the names was dispensed with.

The following additional pairs were announced:

For the rest of this day:

Mr. STEWART, of Texas, with Mr. LODGE;

Mr. DUNN with Mr. WOODBURN;

Mr. HEARD with Mr. BAYNE;

Mr. SHAW with Mr. RYAN;

Mr. ROBERTSON with Mr. MCCULLOGH;

Mr. COCKRAN with Mr. BAKER, of New York;

Mr. HENDERSON, of North Carolina, with Mr. HOPKINS, of New York;

Mr. BRYCE with Mr. LA FOLLETTE;

Mr. HARE with Mr. HOLMES;

Mr. CUMMINGS with Mr. CANNON;

Mr. PIDCOCK with Mr. DINGLEY;

Mr. SENEY with Mr. KELLEY; and

Mr. STAHLNECKER with Mr. KENNEDY.

The result of the vote was then announced, as above stated.

Mr. O'FERRALL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. FISHER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found duly enrolled a bill of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (S. 1027) to fix the charge for passports at $1.

WILLIAM LAVERY.

The next bill reported from the Committee of the Whole with a favorable recommendation was the bill (H. R. 610) for the relief of William Lavery.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. BOWDEN moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SPRINGER. There are two bills at the head of the Calendar which I think the House might as well pass: one for the relief of John F. Cadwallader and the other for the relief of Dr. F. O. St. Clair. They are the first bills on the Private Calendar proper of bills reported at this session, and should have been reached some weeks ago. The amount in one bill is $400 and in the other a little over $90.

Mr. ROGERS. I ask the gentleman to yield to me to make a privileged report, which will only occupy two or three minutes. After that is disposed of I will not object to his request. The committee having charge of the joint resolution (H. Res. 117) have agreed on a report in the form of a substitute for the Senate amendment.

HOT SPRINGS, ARK.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the report of the committee of conference.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the joint resolution of the House, No. 117, to enable the Secretary of the Interior to utilize the hot water now running to waste on the permanent reservation at Hot Springs, Ark., and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"Provided, That the new bath-houses which may be so erected shall not be owned or controlled by any person, company, or corporation which may be the owner or interested in any other bath-house on or near the Hot Springs reservation; and if the ownership or control of any such bath-house be transferred to any such person or corporation owning or interested in any other bath-house on or near said reservation the Secretary of the Interior shall for that cause deprive said bath-house of the hot water and also any other bath-house in which any such owner or corporation shall be interested, and shall cancel any lease from the United States which any such person or corporation may hold or be interested in."

And the Senate agree to the same.

J. H. BANKHEAD,
J. H. ROGERS,
W. H. WADE,
Managers on the part of the House.

H. M. TELLER,
A. S. PADDOCK,
E. C. WALTHALL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. ROGERS moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

JOHN F. CADWALLADER.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask unanimous consent to discharge the Committee of the Whole House from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 742) for the relief of John F. Cadwallader, and that it be now considered in the House.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to John F. Cadwallader, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $462.75, for services rendered in writing up back records of the district court of the United States for the southern district of Illinois.

Mr. SPRINGER. This gentleman was ordered by the judge of the United States district court of Southern Illinois to write up some records which had not been written up by his deceased predecessor. The Attorney-General recommended the payment, but the Comptroller found there was no appropriation covering the amount. It was sent to Congress as part of a deficiency estimate. It passed the Committee on Claims of the last Congress, and is recommended by the Committee on Claims of this Congress.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. SPRINGER moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

JOHN D. MAXTED AND OTHERS.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I ask unanimous consent to take from the Private Calendar for present consideration the bill (H. R. 878) for the relief of John D. Maxted and Robert J. B. Newcombe.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to pay to John D. Maxted and Robert J. B. Newcombe, of Manistee, Mich., the sum of $636, the same being for extra excavation performed by them under the direction of the United States superintendent in the construction of the Sturgeon Bay life-saving station, in the State of Wisconsin; and the amount aforesaid is hereby appropriated for the purpose aforesaid, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. TAULBEE. Will the gentleman from Michigan give some explanation of this bill?

Mr. CUTCHEON. These claimants took the contract for building the life-saving station at Sturgeon Bay Canal, Wisconsin. In the construction they were ordered by the superintendent to do an amount of excavation which was not included in the specifications of the contract. The engineer in charge approved and accepted the work. The claim has been before the Department of Justice, and that Department, in a letter before the Committee on Claims, says it is a just claim and ought to be allowed by Congress.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CUTCHEON moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CHARLES M. KENNERLY.

Mr. ENLOE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the House Calendar and put upon its passage the bill (H. R. 1050) for the relief of Charles M. Kennerly.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury of the United States pay to Charles M. Kennerly, of Henry County, Tennessee, the sum of $900, in full for property taken or seized by the United States officers belonging to the said Charles M. Kennerly, on or about the 15th day of March, 1874, and said sum of $900 is hereby appropriated for that purpose out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The Committee on War Claims recommended an amendment in line 5, striking out the word "nine" and substituting the word "six," and a like amendment in line 9.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Let us have the report read.

Mr. ENLOE. I think I can make a brief statement which will save the reading of the report. Mr. Kennerly was engaged in manufacturing and dealing in tobacco, and the United States Government seized his wagon and his tobacco and condemned it. He was tried for a violation of the internal-revenue laws, and the certificate of the judge before whom he was tried states that he was found not guilty, and that at the time the offense was charged his wagon had become submerged in crossing a creek, and he had taken the tobacco out of the wagon to dry it. Under these circumstances the committee recommend the payment of $600 to him for the property taken and seized.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ENLOE moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

JAMES GASTER.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 5984) for the relief of James Gaster.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay to James Gaster, late postmaster of Galva, in the county of Henry and State of Illinois, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $232.72, to indemnify him for loss of postal funds sustained by him and caused by robbery of the post-office at said town of Galva on the 29th day of September, 1886, while postmaster; and also the further sum of $36, expenses incurred by him in an effort to ferret out and apprehend the burglars, in connection with a post-office inspector.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Illinois. There is a unanimous report of the Committee on Claims in favor of this bill.

Mr. TAULBEE. Is the report long?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Illinois. No; it is very short. It is the unanimous report of the committee.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the report, subject to the right to object.

Mr. TAULBEE. I do not ask for the reading of the report, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

There was no objection.

The committee recommended an amendment striking out all after the word "postmaster" in line 11.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Illinois, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

JAMES L. HENDERSON.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 314) authorizing the Secretary of War to place the name of James L. Henderson on the roll of Company B, Sixteenth Kentucky Volunteers.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOOKER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a privileged motion. I move that when the House adjourns to-night it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. This is pension night.

Mr. HOOKER. My motion would not interfere with pensions.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I hope that motion will not be adopted. We are very anxious to take up the homestead bill to-morrow, which is a very important measure.

Mr. HOOKER. Has to-morrow been assigned for it?

Mr. HOLMAN. It has not been assigned for it, but notice has been given that we would take it up; and the committee has a right to report at any time.

The question was taken on the motion of Mr. HOOKER; and there were—ayes 58, noes 23.

Mr. HOLMAN. No quorum.

The SPEAKER. The point being made that no quorum has voted, the Chair will appoint to act as tellers the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN].

Mr. HOOKER. Mr. Speaker, if the motion leads to discussion I will withdraw it and let the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STONE] proceed with his bill.

JAMES L. HENDERSON.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole be discharged from further consideration of the bill H. R. 314, the title of which has been read.

There was no objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of James L. Henderson on the roll of Company B, Sixteenth Kentucky Volunteers, as having been mustered into said company as a private of date ——, that being the date of his enlistment in said company.

Mr. STEELE. Let the report be read.

The Clerk proceeded to read the report.

The SPEAKER. The hour of 5 o'clock having arrived, the House, under the order, will take a recess until half past 7 o'clock this evening.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House reassembled at half past 7 o'clock p. m. The Clerk called the House to order, and submitted the following communication; which was read:

SPEAKER'S ROOM, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, March 16, 1885.

SIR: Hon. J. D. RICHARDSON, of Tennessee, is designated to preside as Speaker pro tempore at the session of the House this evening.

JOHN G. CARLISLE.

Hon. JOHN B. CLARK,
Clerk House of Representatives.

Mr. RICHARDSON accordingly took the chair as Speaker pro tempore.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of bills under the special order.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. DOCKERY in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole under the special order. The Clerk will report the first bill.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to take up the bill which I send to the desk.

Mr. MORRILL. I shall have to insist on the regular order, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Chairman, I want to say to gentlemen that if they have the regular order one pension night they had better have it the next night also, so as to give fair play all round. At the last pension session there was no regular order; and not only that, but we were gravely told that we could pass only so many bills.

Mr. MORRILL. The gentleman is very much mistaken. We had the regular order at last Friday evening's session until about 9 o'clock, and then gentlemen were allowed to call up bills by unanimous consent. I think it is desirable to carry out the same order this evening.

Mr. NELSON. I have only this to say, Mr. Chairman, that it will be one thing or the other to-night while I am here.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I would like to say in behalf of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] that on last Friday night I spoke with the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MORRILL], who was desirous, for what were to me excellent reasons, that the committee should rise. At that time the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] was entitled to the floor, and virtually had it, but he at once withdrew his bill and put it in his pocket. Therefore I think that to-night it is no more than fair that the regular order should be waived in his behalf because he made a sacrifice to that extent. It will also save the question of departing from the regular order later, which will be a great convenience to many members.

Mr. NELSON. I want to say, Mr. Chairman, that I am not a mendicant just now.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I think it is for the best interests of the soldiers and all applicants for pensions that we should insist upon the regular order and have the reports read, and I shall do so.

JACOB CRAMER.

The CHAIRMAN. The regular order is demanded. The Clerk will report the title of the first bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 855) for the relief of the heirs of Jacob Cramer.

The bill was read.

Mr. TAULBEE. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against that bill that it is not included within the special order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is informed that it is a report from the Committee on Pensions, but it is clearly not within the special order, which is for bills reported from the Committee on Pensions or the Committee on Invalid Pensions granting pensions. The Clerk will report the next bill.

ALONZO HIGLEY.

The next pension business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 2498) granting a pension to Alonzo Higley.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to place on the pension-roll the name of Alonzo Higley, formerly of the Tenth Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, and that he be granted a pension commensurate with his present disability.

Mr. TAULBEE. Let the report be read.

The report (by Mr. CHIPMAN) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2498) granting a pension to Alonzo Higley, have had the same under consideration, and submit the following report:

This soldier applied for pension March 23, 1885, and his claim was rejected solely upon the ground that he was never mustered into the military service of the United States. While this is true, and by reason of which, under the law, he could not be pensioned by the Department, yet we submit that the circumstances in this case call for the intervention of Congress. It is in evidence that when the late war broke out claimant was a physician with good practice and unimpaired health. In response to the call for troops he freely gave his time, money, and services in enlisting men in the city of Pittsburgh, Pa.

A little later he went to Ohio, and, at the request of Governor Tod, continued in this work until he was requested by the governor to go to camp at Mansfield, Ohio, and help organize the 7,000 drafted men who were encamped there.

On the 4th day of October, 1862, he enlisted in the Tenth Regiment Ohio Cavalry, but was soon after stricken with congestion of the brain of a severe type, as testified to by Post Surgeon Craig, resulting in disease of brain, nervous system, throat, lungs, kidneys, and spine, and at the time his regiment was sworn in he lay unconscious and could not be mustered; and this is the reason his name does not appear upon the roll of the regiment.

Post Surg. J. W. Craig, of Camp Mansfield, Ohio, under date of October 27, 1862, certified that the claimant "is unfit for military duty on account of spinal irritation and congestion of the base of the brain of a severe type, and he will perhaps be unfit for military duty in the future."

The affidavits of four physicians who have attended him through all the years since testify to his great sufferings, and that his sickness has been congestion and irritation of spinal column, with all the train of suffering and disease that would grow out of that, until claimant is, at the present time, a complete wreck.

The board of examining surgeons at Kalamazoo, Mich., under date of June 24, 1885, says: "Great suffering and complication of troubles as result of disease of brain, and report claimant entitled, in their opinion, to 'total second grade.'"

Although told by Governor Tod and the State treasurer of Ohio that he (claimant) should be reimbursed for all moneys expended in enlisting men, he never received any compensation for such service nor desired any return, cheerfully contributing of his means for the support of the Government, and not until his own private fortune was exhausted did he apply for a pension.

In view of all the circumstances in this case your committee report back the bill with a recommendation that all the words after the word "laws," in the sixth line, be stricken out, and that the bill as amended do pass.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a recommendation that it do pass.

DAVID STRUNK.

The next pension business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 417) granting a pension to David Strunk.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of David Strunk, late private in the Eighteenth Battery of New York Light Artillery.

The report (by Mr. CHIPMAN) was read, as follows:

David Strunk, the claimant in this case, was a private in the Eighteenth Battery of New York Light Artillery, and enlisted August 23, 1862, and was discharged July 20, 1865. He swears that on the 5th day of November, 1864, he was injured in the right testicle by the jumping of his horse, whereby he was thrown forward upon the pommel of his saddle, forcing his right testicle into his right groin, which injury has caused much swelling and pain and disabled him from labor and exertion; that he was thrown from his horse, and afterwards assisted upon his horse again, and remained with his command; that he was not treated while in the service by a surgeon, because the nature of the injury was such that it could not be relieved by treatment; that from or by reason of the injury the cords of the testicle have contracted until the same has caused a hernia; that such injury occurred at the time stated at Baton Rouge, La. A. G. Mock, captain of the battery, testified, in 1878, that while in line of duty and at drill-work at Baton Rouge in 1864 the claimant was violently thrown forward upon the pommel of his saddle, injuring his right testicle; that he was assisted to his horse again and remained with his command, fully confirming the statement of claimant.

John S. Wisner and several other persons swear that they knew the claimant from the time he came out of the service in 1865, and that he was then suffering from the alleged injury, preventing him from the performance of hard labor, and often confining him to his house. These persons, according to their statement, seem to have been in a position to know the facts stated by them, and their evidence is in no way controverted or impeached.

Under the orders of the Pension Department the claimant was examined in 1877 by Dr. De Witt C. Wade, an examining surgeon of the bureau, residing at Holly, Mich., who made his report as to claimant's injuries. He says: "Injury to right testicle and right oblique inguinal hernia; objectively, right testicle lies in inguinal canal; can not readily be pressed down to scrotum, but pressure reveals its presence at external ring; hernia reducible; not scrotal, and quite large; subjectively, hernia has appeared gradually and without attracting much attention, until fully produced; testicle has been retracted more than twelve years; labor produces pain."

Claim was rejected in Pension Office because there was no medical proof or evidence showing that injury was contracted in the service.

After a careful review of the evidence in this case, and the consideration thereof, we are clearly satisfied that the evidence sustains the claim of David Strunk, and that he received the injury as alleged by him.

We therefore report the bill back to the House, and recommend that the same do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

REBECCA H. CLARK.

The next pension business on the Private Calendar was a bill (H. R. 183) granting a pension to Rebecca H. Clark.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension law, the name of Rebecca H. Clark, widow of William Clark, late a private in Company C, of the Fortieth Regiment of Indiana, and to pay her a pension from and after the passage of this act.

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to the minor children of William Clark."

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 183) granting a pension to Rebecca H. Clark, have had the same under consideration, and now submit the following report:

Willis Clark was a private soldier of Company C, Fortieth Indiana Volunteers. He died February 11, 1882, and was a pensioner by reason of a gunshot wound of the right knee. Rebecca H. Clark applied for a pension as his widow, alleging that he died of inflammatory rheumatism of the heart, the result of the wound for which he was pensioned. The claim was rejected by the Commissioner of Pensions on the ground, as the medical referee stated, that it was not medically proven that his death was the result of his army service. The case was appealed to the Secretary of the Interior, and the following statement appears in his report:

"When the soldier died February 11, 1882, he was a pensioner by reason of a gunshot wound of the right knee. April 21, 1882, the appellant applied for a pension as his widow, alleging that he died of inflammatory rheumatism of the heart, a result of the wound for which he was pensioned. The claim was rejected January 12, 1883, on the ground that the soldier's death was not due to his military service, from which action the appeal is taken.

"J. R. McGee, examining surgeon, September 7, 1875: 'I find two scars, one 1½ inches above the other, just below the knee in front, entrance and exit of the ball as he states, the leg being firmly flexed on the thigh when he was wounded. The knee is larger and the leg longer and smaller than the left. There is anchylosis between the outer edge of the patella and femur. Friction is plainly felt by placing the fingers under the joint while moving it.'

"September 6, 1877, Dr. Keegan, about same as above, and further: 'I find the internal condyle was fractured and has united in such a way as to leave a small projection of bone at its lower border. The cicatrix at the point of entrance is quite tender. I would recommend that his pension be continued at total, or $8 per month.'

"Charles H. Davis, examining surgeon, November 21, 1879, same as above, and further: 'I find at present time that the leg is very much emaciated and the knee-joint partially anchylosed; the muscles of leg are soft. Soldier states that in the winter he is troubled with rheumatism in knee-joint; also, that joint is painful at all times. He also states there is increased emaciation and anchylosis of said joint. Disability permanent, and he is entitled to an increase of $2, making $10 per month.'

"December 6, 1882, Dr. I. McKenzie testifies that the immediate cause of soldier's death was 'embolism of the heart, usually termed heart-clot, induced by the septic condition of the blood as a direct result of a gunshot wound said to have been received in the service.'

"September 27, 1883, Dr. S. J. Ensley testifies: 'First saw soldier January, 1877, at Rock Creek, Kans. He was suffering from a gunshot wound in right knee, causing locomotor ataxia, with atrophy of entire muscular system in said limb and the whole of right side. Actual cause of death, septic poison from wound. Wholly disabled; confined to his bed considerable portion of the time.'

"Affiant treated him at various times until his death. His disability was total, his whole right side having shrunken and become useless. He died under affiant's care February 11, 1882, from cause before stated.

"August 3, 1885, Dr. E. says: 'I have treated soldier before and during his last illness, and that the cause of his death was from rheumatism of the heart and general heart-clot, produced by gunshot wound, said to have been received while in the service of the United States, said wound being the cause of general rheumatism, which often affects the action of the heart, and was continuous from date of discharge.' And he further says that the said wound was a source of constant pain and other sympathetic trouble, which finally involved the heart's action.

"December 16, 1885, Dr. E. says about same as above, and further: 'The case was one of erysipelatous poisoning from reabsorptions from secretions from knee-joint, the hear-clot or embolism being the product of reabsorbed poisons, as the knee-joint or wound had been discharging continually since my first knowledge of the case, the same being of a highly inflammable character, and manifesting all the symptoms of chronic erysipelas, and, upon further research, do declare the probable cause of death to be from erysipelas poisoning from the knee-joint as wounded.'

"Medical reference August 1, 1884: Change of action is recommended.

"May 6, 1887, medical reference: Respectfully returned to chief law division.

"In view of the facts shown by the medical evidence on file, it is my opinion that the rejection of the widow's claim is correct from a medical standpoint. The Department having no higher medical authority to whom the case can be referred, your rejection is affirmed.

"Very respectfully,

"H. L. MULDROW, Acting Secretary."

Your committee are constrained to admit that it is not "medically proven" that the wound caused the death of the soldier, but the presumption is so strong that they unhesitatingly say that the claimant should have the benefit of the doubt; but the widow having remarried, they recommend that the bill be amended by striking out, in the fifth and sixth lines, the words "name of Rebecca H. Clark, widow," and inserting the words "minor children;" and also to strike out all after the word "Indiana," in line 7.

The amendments recommended by the Committee on Invalid Pensions were agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

WILLIAM F. RANDOLPH.

The next pension business on the Private Calendar was a bill (H. R. 5233) granting a pension to William F. Randolph.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William F. Randolph, late of Company E, Thirty-fifth Regiment New Jersey Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. PIDCOCK) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5233) granting a pension to William F. Randolph, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to submit the following report:

Randolph was drafted into Company H, One hundred and seventy-fourth Regiment Pennsylvania drafted militia, November 1, 1862, and served therein until discharged August 7, 1863, by reason of expiration of term of enlistment. On the 29th of said month he again entered the service as private in Company E, Thirty-fifth Regiment New Jersey Volunteers, from which organization he was discharged August 11, 1865. He filed his application for pension on account of disease of eyes November 3, 1871. This application was rejected in 1877, after an ex parte special examination, during which some statements were procured tending to show defective eyesight prior to enlistment.

Dr. Traill Green, a credible witness, who had a personal acquaintance with claimant for years prior to his service, and who examined claimant at his entry into the drafted militia, testifies in most positive terms to claimant's prior soundness. A large number of neighbors, persons of good character, corroborate the above-named witness. There is no record of treatment for alleged disability in the service, but the record does show that claimant was treated for an injury to back, and later for rheumatism. The existence of disease of eyes in the latter part of his second term of his service is shown by the testimony of a commissioned officer and enlisted men, who state that this condition of the eyes was caused by the smoke and steam to which claimant was exposed as company cook. The evidence in the case further shows that he came under medical treatment immediately after discharge, and that he has been disabled by reason of diseased eyes ever since. The certificate of the examining surgeon shows a disability at three-fourths of total from granular conjunctivitis in 1873.

Claimant is now seventy-eight years of age and without means.

A favorable report was made in this case by the Committee on Invalid Pensions of the Forty-ninth Congress, but failed of final action.

Upon the showing made, and the fact that claimant gave nearly three years' continuous service to the Government at an age at which he could have claimed exemption from military duty had not love for country prompted him otherwise, your committee are clearly of opinion that whatever doubts may exist in the case should be solved in favor of this old man, and therefore report favorably on the accompanying bill, and ask that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

JOHN GODSON.

The next pension business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5246) granting a pension to John Godson.

The bill and report were read.

Mr. ENLOE. It does not seem to me this is a proper bill to recommend for passage. It seems this case rests upon the statement of the hospital steward that this man was treated for this alleged injury, but he is not able to show from the evidence of any of his comrades he received such wound when such injury should have occurred. It seems to me the man is laboring under present disability; there is ample evidence of that fact; but how he received this injury which he claims entitles him to a pension is not shown. The evidence rests upon the statement of the hospital steward that this man was treated, stating that he received the injury in the way alleged, by the breaking of a rope, which resulted in piles and other disorders. I do not think this is a proper case to report with favorable recommendation, and I therefore object to it.

Mr. MORRILL. The gentleman who reported this case is not present, and I ask that it go over for the present.

The motion was agreed to; and the bill was passed over.

ELIZABETH BUFFINGTON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5388) granting a pension to Elizabeth Buffington.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Elizabeth Buffington, dependent mother of George Merrill, late of Company I, Twenty-first Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, now deceased, subject to the limitations of the general pension laws.

The report of the committee (by Mr. YODER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5388) granting a pension to Elizabeth Buffington, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to submit the following report:

Elizabeth Buffington is the mother of George Merrill, late of Company I, Twenty-first Regiment Ohio Volunteers, who died April 7, 1871, leaving neither widow nor minor child surviving him. Her claim for pension has been rejected because the evidence, in the opinion of the Pension Bureau, fails to show the immediate cause of the soldier's death.

George Merrill enlisted August 29, 1861, and served until mustered out July 25, 1865. The records of the War Department show that he received a gunshot wound of left thigh in action at Chickamauga, September 19, 1863, and also a wound of right thigh in action at Kenesaw Mountain, June 28, 1864. The records of the Surgeon-General further show that he was treated for fracture of head received in action January 5, 1865, and later for abscess (locality not stated), and still later for dropsy.

There is an abundance of evidence showing that soldier upon his return home was an invalid, and continued to ail with some disease of head until his death in 1871. He was under medical treatment during that entire period, but the death of the two attending physicians precludes the possibility of obtaining positive evidence as to the precise nature of the disease from which he suffered and which caused his death. It is shown, however, by the testimony procured during a special examination of the case, that soldier complained constantly of a ringing in his head, had spells of dizziness, and at the least exertion would become exhausted. There was also a nearly constant discharge from the ears. For more than a year prior to his death he was unable to perform any labor, and during the last six or more weeks of his life he was confined to his bed. It is also shown that his mind became seriously affected, and that this disease of the head became complicated with diabetes, as it would appear from lay testimony.

That the injury of head, shown by the record to have been received in action, was the principal cause of soldier's disability and death can hardly be questioned. But even were this connection clearly shown, pension to the mother would still be denied by the Pension Office, because said injury was not received in action, but under circumstances not strictly attributable to "line of duty" as that phrase is construed by that office. It appears from the evidence filed by the claimant and corroborated by the report of the special examiner that in January, 1865, while the command was on picket duty some of the men picked up a cannon-ball and amused themselves by throwing it over their heads. Soldier did not engage in this sport in any manner, but accidentally was hit on the head, when he fell senseless and was at once taken to the hospital. The injury having been received while on duty and without any fault on his part, it seems to your committee that "line of duty" should not be questioned.

That soldier contributed liberally to the support of the claimant, and that such contributions were needed because of her husband's physical disabilities, as well as his intemperate habits, is fully shown by the evidence on file.

The special examiner, referring to the claimant in the summary of his report, states that she is evidently honest and anxious to answer truthfully all questions. She is living in abject poverty, and on account of her generally pitiable condition has the sympathy of the entire community in which she resides. He further states that the testimony elicited by him is thoroughly reliable, and while it is not conclusive, yet he is impressed with the merits of the claim and submits it for admission.

The claimant's family was well represented in the Army. Three sons, a husband, and three step-sons served during the war, but one of whom is now surviving.

Your committee, after a careful examination of the evidence presented, are fully satisfied with the merits of the case, and regret that the general law and the rules enacted thereunder will not permit favorable action by the Pension Bureau, but unhesitatingly report favorably on the accompanying bill, and ask that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

LIZZIE F. REED.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4685) granting a pension to Lizzie F. Reed.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lizzie F. Reed, widow of Oliver H. Reed, late a private in Company A, Eighth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteers, at the rate of $12 per month.

The report of the committee (by Mr. GALLINGER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4685) granting a pension to Lizzie F. Reed, having considered the same, report as follows:

Oliver Reed was a private in Company A, Eighth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteers. It is fully established that he was a strong, healthy man at the date of enlistment, which was October 25, 1861. The evidence of his captain shows that he was taken suddenly ill at a place called Median Village, La., on the last day of February, 1863, his disability being sciatic rheumatism, the result of a severe cold, from being drenched with rain while on picket duty. Soldier entered the regimental hospital, where he remained until the removal of the regiment, when he was carried to Algiers, La. Afterwards he was taken to the marine hospital at New Orleans, where he remained until his discharge, on the 19th day of June, 1863. He was continuously in hospital nearly four months, all the time suffering severe pain, and, as his captain testifies, was almost entirely deprived of the use of his lower limbs in consequence of the disease contracted in the service.

Soldier promptly applied for a pension, which was granted in due time. His first medical examination was on September 15, 1863, and, in addition to rheumatism, the examining surgeon records the fact that "soldier is emaciated, has little strength, and can walk only a short distance." Between 1863 and 1874 soldier was examined by medical officers of the Government ten times, and in every instance the record reads that in addition to rheumatism he was emaciated and debilitated generally, and unable to perform much manual labor.

It will be noted that soldier's original disability was the result of severe cold from getting wet while on picket duty; that the acute attack took the form of so-called sciatic rheumatism; that from the day soldier was stricken down until his death he was a great sufferer, his constitution being so undermined as to produce marked emaciation and debility. It certainly does not require a great stretch of the imagination to conclude that the sixteen years of suffering which this man endured so weakened the system that it was unable to resist the fatal attack, which it is almost certain resulted from a chill or some necessary exposure, and which would not have resulted seriously had soldier's constitution been free from the disabilities due to army service.

Soldier died January 5, 1879. The records show that for some time previous he suffered from laryngeal cough and great debility. The attending physician's certificate is something of a curiosity, his opinion being that—

"The bronchitis, laryngitis, and consumption from which he suffered weakened his system, and the indirect cause of death was consumption, and the direct cause of death was pneumonia."

The widow's claim for pension was rejected on the ground that the evidence did not warrant the conclusion, from a medical standpoint, that soldier died from the disease or disabilities for which he was pensioned. It would be a fruitless task to undertake to prove to the contrary, as the limitations of human knowledge stop short of that, but certainly the picture of this emaciated and debilitated soldier, dragging a diseased body through the long period of sixteen years, improperly nourished and steadily growing weaker, is not inconsistent with the opinion that the fatal disease was due to the exposures and privations of army life. And this opinion is strengthened from the fact, as every medical man must admit, that the severe drenching and chill received on picket duty, and which resulted in an acute rheumatic attack, may have laid the foundation of disease of the chest which did not fully develop until years had elapsed.

Claimant is in ill health and extreme poverty. She is a soldier's daughter, a soldier's sister, and a soldier's widow, and hence deserving of the benefit that any reasonable doubt can give her.

Believing that the case is one of real merit, your committee report the bill back favorably and recommend its passage with an amendment striking out all after the word "volunteers."

The amendment of the committee was agreed to; and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

NANCY O. GRAY.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6586) granting a pension to Nancy O. Gray.

Mr. GALLINGER. That bill was ordered to be reported to the House last Friday with the recommendation that it do pass. The bill and report have already been printed in the RECORD, but it seems that it was not acted upon in the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The bill will be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

OLIVE WALLACE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4106) granting a pension to Olive Wallace.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be hereby authorized and directed to put upon the pension-roll the name of Olive Wallace, formerly Olive Burbank, mother of Charles H. Burbank, late of Company C, Third Regiment Vermont Volunteers, on account of whose death pension certificate No. 60800 was heretofore issued to her as dependent mother, but vacated on account of subsequent marriage.

The report of the committee (by Mr. GALLINGER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4106) granting a pension to Olive Wallace, having considered the same, report as follows:

Charles H. Burbank, private in Company C, Third Regiment Vermont Volunteers, was killed in action in the battle of the Wilderness. His mother, Olive Burbank, was pensioned as a dependent, but pension was discontinued on account of subsequent remarriage. Her second husband died in 1872, and she now asks to be again placed on the roll, and furnishes a large mass of testimony showing that she is extremely destitute, and has been totally blind for seven years.

The fact that the son was actually killed in battle, and that the mother is destitute and blind, makes this an exceptionally strong case of its class, and as there are various precedents for the passage of such bills, your committee report the bill back with a recommendation that it be amended by adding after the word "pension-roll," in the fourth line, the words "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws," and with this amendment recommend its passage.

The amendment of the committee was agreed to, and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

CHARLOTTE BROAD.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 816) granting a pension to Charlotte Broad.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charlotte Broad, of Troy, Me., mother of Frederick H. Leary, late of Company I, Second Regiment of Maine Cavalry.

The report of the committee (by Mr. GALLINGER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 816) granting a pension to Charlotte Broad, having considered the same, report as follows:

Frederick H. Learey enlisted November 25, 1863, in Company I, Second Regiment of Maine Cavalry, at the age of sixteen years, and died in the service at Barrancas, Fla., August 31, 1864, of chronic diarrhea.

Mrs. Charlotte Broad, of Troy, Me., made application for pension as dependent mother of soldier, but the claim was rejected on the ground that she was not his natural mother.

From an examination of the papers in the Pension Office it appears that Mrs. Broad took the child at the very moment of birth and adopted him, and that she did so because the natural mother threatened to destroy the child's life. It further appears that the foster-mother tenderly cared for the child up to the age of sixteen, when he enlisted in the Army. During his service soldier frequently sent his foster-mother money, as appears from letters on file, always addressing her as "mother" and exhibiting great solicitude for her comfort and welfare.

These facts are all so clearly established that unquestionably the pension would have been allowed through the regular channel had the claimant been the natural mother of the soldier, which the law requires. Inasmuch as she cared for the child from the moment of birth, and he knew no other mother but her, the case comes clearly within the scope of those recognized by Congress.

Claimant is nearly seventy years of age and utterly destitute.

A petition signed by 104 of the leading citizens of West Troy, Vt., is filed with the committee, setting forth all the essential facts in the claim and urgently praying that the relief be granted.

Your committee recommend that the bill be amended by inserting before the word "mother," in the sixth line, the word "foster," and, with this amendment, recommend its passage."

Mr. TAULBEE. I did not catch from the report of the committee as to the question of dependence, and I would like to hear from some gentleman on that point.

Mr. GALLINGER. There is no question that this foster-mother is absolutely dependent. The rejection of the Pension Office was because she was not the natural mother.

The amendment was agreed to, and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MEHITABLE WHEELOCK.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4110) granting a pension to Mehitable Wheelock.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to place upon the pension-list, subject to the limitations and restrictions of the pension laws, the name of Mehitable Wheelock, widow of Jacob E. Wheelock, late of Company C, First Vermont Cavalry.

The report of the committee (by Mr. GALLINGER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4110) granting a pension to Mehitable Wheelock, having considered the same, report as follows:

Jacob E. Wheelock, late of Company C, First Vermont Cavalry, alleged in his application for pension that at Winchester, Va., June 20, 1862, he was injured in his back and kidneys by being thrown from his horse, and also that he contracted measles, which resulted in total loss of hearing of right ear and stiff and painful neck. The claim for injury was not established before the Department, but soldier was pensioned for loss of hearing consequent upon measles.

The widow made application in due form for pension, which was rejected on the ground that soldier died from pneumonia, which could not in any satisfactory way be connected with his army service or pensionable disabilities.

If it were conclusively shown that soldier died from an ordinary uncomplicated attack of pneumonia there would be no merit in this claim, but the records do not show this fact.

Dr. Robert W. Lance, of South Woodbury, Vt., under oath says:

"I was well acquainted with Jacob E. Wheelock, of Calais, Vt., as I was his family physician. At my first acquaintance with him he was afflicted with chronic otorrhœa, the discharge being of an ichorous and cadaverous smelling nature. The same discharge existed from the right nostril, both of which continued until twenty-four hours before his death. On March 14, 1884, I was called to see Wheelock, and found him suffering with pneumonia. I visited him each day and called him doing nicely, as the fever had subsided, respiration easy, expectoration better, so much so that I omitted my visit on the 26th, and on the 27th found him still improving. Was to see him again on the 29th, but on the morning of the 28th I was summoned in great haste; found that at 3 a. m. he had had a violent chill, followed by a congestive headache, the discharges from his head having stopped. He became crazy, rolling and pounding his head, with contractions of the muscles of the neck. Had opisthotonus, followed by convulsions and death. Soldier was not a healthy man, but debilitated from disease of the head. Now, according to my best judgment, Mr. Wheelock, in his last sickness, was taken with pneumonia, from which he was improving, but owing to the diseased condition of his head, and perhaps a little cold, there set in cerebro-spinal meningitis, from which he died."

In an affidavit furnished your committee, dated December 20, 1887, Dr. Robert W. Lance says:

"There was pleurisy in right lung for two days, and none after that. From the 18th the expectoration was easy, there was no trouble with the bowels, but the whole complaint was in the head, and that was where the fever-heat seemed to be located. He had had a constant discharge from his right ear, and also from his nose, of a most offensive odo, rever since my acquaintance with him, which had been for about nine years, but at his last sickness these discharges all stopped, the right side of his head and face became swollen and of a purple color, and the mastoid portion of right temporal bone was badly swollen and distended. He could not have any cold about his head, hot applications being the only thing that seemed to relieve it. It is my opinion that had there not been chronic disease of the head he would have survived, for his lungs were improving, notwithstanding which he grew more delirious, with occasional rigors, dying in convulsions, which I believe were caused by cerebral involvement."

It is clearly evident from the above that, even if pneumonia was the indirect cause of death, a cerebral complication existed, probably the result of the disease of head for which soldier was pensioned, and the weight of testimony would seem to be strongly in favor of the view that soldier died directly and unquestionably from diseases associated with the disability for which he was pensioned. The medical referee suggests that brain symptoms are common in pneumonia. In so-called typhoid pneumonia that is true. But the progress of this case shows nothing that would justify the opinion that it was typhoid in character, while the leading symptoms, as enumerated by the medical attendant, present a perfect picture of cerebro-spinal irritation, which might clearly have resulted from the deep-seated affection of the ear, and especially from the suppression of the discharge, which had continued uninterruptedly from the date of army service to twenty-four hours previous to death.

Your committee report the bill back with a recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. TAULBEE. Is there any evidence of dependence?

Mr. MORRILL. It is a widow's case.

Mr. TAULBEE. I have no desire to discuss the merits of the case. [Laughter.]

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

HANNAH F. BROCK.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 2416) granting a pension to Mrs. Hannah F. Brock.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the pension laws, the name of Mrs. Hannah F. Brock, dependent step-mother of John M. Brock, deceased, late a private in Company H, Thirteenth Regiment Massachusetts Infantry Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. GALLINGER) was read, as follows:

John M. Brock was a Union soldier, and was killed on the battle-field at Gettysburgh. Robert M. Brock was pensioned as dependent father of said soldier, and has since died. The present applicant, Hannah F. Brock, is the step-mother of the dead soldier, and applies in her own behalf as a dependent.

Cases of this kind can not be allowed under the general law, but Congress has in many instances, where it could be shown that the step-mother had charge of the child from a tender age and had been dutiful to him, granted the desired relief.

In this case it appears that the applicant married Robert M. Brock, the father of the soldier, when the boy was ten years of age; that she turned in a little property of her own to the family, which was exhausted for their support; that she cared for the child as tenderly as if he had been her own; that she was for many years a devoted wife, caring for her husband when he was receiving a small pension as dependent father, at which time he was completely disabled by rheumatism. It further conclusively appears that the boy, while in the Army, contributed liberally of his pay to the family, and there is every reason to believe that had he lived he would have cared for his step-mother in her poverty and declining years, the evidence of present destitution being clearly shown.

Under all the circumstances your committee are of opinion that the bill should pass, and report it back with that recommendation.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask to offer an amendment to this bill, as it seems to be imperfect in its present form. I move to amend by adding "and to pay her a pension at the rate of $12 a month." The bill as it now stands would not give her any pension at all, there being no rating for a step-mother.

The amendment was adopted.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ISAIAH G. MAYO.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 824) granting a pension to Isaiah G. Mayo.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Isaiah G. Mayo, late of the United States Sanitary Commission service.

The report (by Mr. GALLINGER) was read, as follows:

This case was favorably reported by the Committee on Invalid Pensions of the Forty-ninth Congress, but was not reached for consideration. That report is as follows:

"In the early part of August, 1864, the United States Sanitary Commission's steamer S. E. Browne was fired upon from the river bank while she was proceeding up the James River from City Point. There were on board several of the commission's force, both male and female, together with convalescent soldiers. Of these, one man was instantly killed, one mortally wounded, and Mr. Mayo was shot through the hip and side, from the effects of which he has never recovered.

"Mr. Mayo was a duly accredited agent of the Sanitary Commission. His sworn statement, annexed to his report, is abundantly corroborated by evidence filed with the committee. Among the exhibits are certified copies of letters now in existence and deposited with the archives of the United States Sanitary Commission in the Astor Library in New York; also statements by several persons connected with him in the work of the commission, including Hon. JOHN A. ANDERSON, a member of this House.

"It is conclusively shown that the trip when the boat was assailed was not a pleasure excursion, but was under direction of the agent in charge, and partially for the purpose of visiting the gunboats stationed above City Point and supplying their needs so far as they came within the scope of the commission.

"The present disability of Mr. Mayo is shown by lay testimony, and also in the affidavit of Dr. Louis C. Ford, which is printed with this report.

"This man was not an employé of the Government, either civil or military, but was one of a noble corps of men and women whose services, while gratuitously rendered, were of inestimable value in ameliorating the sufferings of the sick and wounded, and were recognized as a most important adjunct of our armed forces.

"An exception to the rule of this committee against granting pensions to civil employés has been uniformly made in favor of those wounded in action. It seems to us that there are even stronger equities in the case of this man, who was shot down in the performance of duties rendered without money and without price to the Government."

Your committee adopt the report of the committee of the Forty-ninth Congress as above, and recommend that the bill do pass, amended as follows: Strike out the words "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws," and add, after the word "service," in the last line, the words "the rating to be the same as allowed for similar disability to an enlisted man in the United States military service."

"APPENDIX.

"I, Isaiah G. Mayo, residing in Milo, county of Piscataquis, State of Maine, forty-five years of age, on oath depose and say:

"That during the year of 1863 and a part of 1864 I was studying medicine at the Hygienic Institute, 15 Laight street, New York City, assisting to help defray my expenses. At the close of the term I had an offer of a situation as agent in the United States Sanitary Commission, and accepted, intending to return when I had fulfilled my engagement and continue my studies at Bellevue. About July 2, 1864, I was ordered to report to City Point, Va. When I arrived I was assigned to duty at the Cavalry Corps Hospital; a few days later was transferred to the Ninth Army Corps Hospital, at the station, under charge of Mr. Ezra Rounds, Hon. Frank P. Fay being superintendent. My duty was general sanitary work. The sick and wounded were brought in very rapidly, the heat was intense, the work very hard, and a large portion of the agents were feeling the effect; some died and some went home sick. Under these circumstances Dr. Parrish, acting as superintendent in the absence of Mr. Fay, who was home on a furlough, deemed it necessary that as many as could be spared should have a change for a few hours. Accordingly the sanitary supply steamer S. E. Brown was ordered to report to the hospital landing. She took on board as many of the agents as could be spared, some convalescent soldiers, and several ladies.

"We were to visit the gunboats, to ascertain if any supplies were needed. When about 8 miles from City Point, at Turkey Bend, we were fired on by rebel guerrillas on shore. The second engineer was instantly killed, a sanitary agent mortally wounded, and I received a dangerous wound, from the effects of which I have never recovered. Two gunboats came to our relief and shelled the shore, one guarding us back to City Point. Our wounds were dressed by Dr. Thomas Haight, formerly of the Sanitary Commission, and Dr. W. J. Swalm, formerly surgeon in the Nineteenth New York Volunteers. I was removed to Baltimore, to the Sanitary Hospital, Dr. Swalm accompanying me; afterwards removed to the Institute, at 15 Laight street, New York City, Mr. A. G. Potter taking charge of me to that place.

"I remained there until some time in the fall—October or November—when I left for my home in Maine. At this time two nurses, Mary and Sarah Holland, being about to come to their home in Auburn, I was sent along in their charge. I was so exhausted when we arrived there that they did not think it safe for me to go farther without resting, and I remained with them at their residence several days.

"I suffer continually from lameness in the back, and at times experience great difficulty in stooping or remaining long in one position, and often am obliged to lie down for an hour or more during the day, and within the last few years my suffering has increased.

"ISAIAH G. MAYO.

"STATE OF MAINE, Piscataquis, ss:

"DECEMBER 14, 1886.

"Personally appeared Isaiah G. Mayo and made oath to the truth of the foregoing by him signed.

"[SEAL.] HENRY B. FLINT,
"Clerk Superior Judicial Court."

"This certifies that I have examined the condition of Isaiah G. Mayo, of Milo, Me., with the following result:

"Inspection shows scar of gunshot wound of the back, the ball entering above the right sacro-iliac articulation about 2 inches from the median line, passing through the origin of the lumbar muscles and coming out through the crest of the left ilium 7 or 8 inches from the point of entrance. The spinous processes of the lumbar vertebræ in the track of the ball are injured, and there is much thickening and infiltration along the crest of the ilium from the spine to the point of the bullet's exit. The muscles of the back are very much weakened in consequence of this injury, and Mr. Mayo is unable to take long rides, to lift, or to perform heavy manual labor. And also from the injury to the spine, or from the thickening of the tissues around the roots of the spinal nerve, the sensation is impared in the lower extremities. He complains also of dullness and a feeling of weight in the head.

"I further certify that I have no interest in his application for pension.

"LOUIS C. FORD, M. D.

"MILO, ME., November 18, 1886."

"STATE OF MAINE, Piscataquis, ss:

"Personally appeared the within-named Louis C. Ford and made oath, that the within statement by him subscribed is true; and I certify that the within-named L. C. Ford is a regular practicing physician in good standing. I am disinterested.

"[SEAL.] GEO. W. HOWE,
"Justice of the Peace."

"STATE OF MAINE, Piscataquis, ss:

"I, Henry B. Flint, clerk of all the judicial courts in said county, certify that George W. Howe, esq., is, and was at the date of his certificate, an acting justice of the peace in and for said county, duly commissioned and qualified to act as such, and that the signature to the paper annexed, purporting to be his, is genuine, and that he is duly authorized and empowered, by the laws of said State, to administer oaths, to take depositions, acknowledgment of deeds, assignments, and powers of attorney, and that the annexed instrument is executed and acknowledged according to the laws of this State.

"In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the supreme judicial court for said State, this 7th day of December, in the year of our Lord 1886.

"[SEAL.] HENRY B. FLINT, Clerk."

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

HORATIO R. MARYMAN.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 807) for the relief of Horatio R. Maryman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Horatio R. Maryman, of the District of Columbia, father of Richard A. Maryman, late of Company B, Thirteenth Regiment New York Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. GALLINGER) was read, as follows:

The claimant under this bill asks to be placed on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, as the dependent parent of Richard A. Maryman, late of Company B, Thirteenth Regiment New York Volunteers. The claimant is about seventy-eight years of age; he resides in the city of Washington, and his proofs are made by neighbors and others who have known him from twenty to forty years. It is abundantly shown that he has always been a sober, temperate man; that he is by trade a carpenter, but that since 1861, owing to epileptic fits in that and succeeding years, he has been unable to earn his support. He was on the police force in Washington for some time prior to 1851, but has had no regular or salaried occupation since 1860. For some years after 1861 he was a constable and collector, and for three or four months a justice of the peace, but from these offices he derived a very precarious return, at no time sufficient for his comfortable support.

A very critical examination of the case reveals the fact that from 1861 to 1865 there was real estate assessed to claimant to the value of about $10,000, that he had an income therefrom by way of rents of $56 per month, and that he owned the house he lived in. Upon this state of facts the Pension Office concluded that he did not come within the meaning of the statute, and rejected the claim.

The proofs show that the son, borne on the rolls as Richard A. Morgan, enlisted on July 12, 1861, and died at Camp Butler, Newport News, Va., January 6, 1862. He was a mere lad at the time of enlistment, less than nineteen years of age, and is fully identified as the son of the claimant.

It further appears that the property assessed to claimant in 1862 and following years at $10,000 was not his own, but belonged to the Hazel estate, and that in due time he accounted for it to said estate. He did at that time and now does own the house he lives in, 231 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, but which has been since 1861 incumbered by a deed of trust, and to pay the accumulated taxes and the trust incumbrance leaves him but an equity in the property, the value of which is very small. In addition to this a number of judgments for divers amounts have been recorded against him, some of which have been discharged. At one time he also held certain unimproved real estate, but the proofs show that all of it was covered with deeds of trust to such an extent that when interest, taxes, insurance, etc., had been paid there was practically nothing left. His ill health compelled him to raise money by new mortgages to discharge the old ones as they matured, which of course involved additional expense, until finally the unimproved property was sold to discharge the incumbrance.

It is evident that claimant did not have any income from his property over and above costs, charges, interest, and insurance, and if he secured money at any time on his property it was only to add debt to debt for the purpose of holding it a while longer.

Claimant's health has been poor since 1861, and medical gentlemen in Washington, among them Dr. A. Y. P. Garnett, certify that they treated him in 1861 and following years, and that he was incapacitated for manual labor. Dr. Dexter certifies that he treated him for some years after 1863, and found him incapacitated for labor; that he treated him in the way of charity, besides giving him small sums of money from time to time with which to purchase provisions. It is abundantly shown that the dead son, from the age of fifteen years, had been a liberal contributor to the support of his father, and that claimant received the bounty due the son at the time of his enlistment.

Your committee are of the opinion that this is a meritorious case. There is no dispute as to the claimant's aged, helpless, and destitute condition. The weight of years is upon him. He has had a long period of hardships and ill health. Not many more years will pass before he will have no need of earthly aid. For these reasons, in addition to our belief that he is properly entitled to the relief asked, we recommend that the bill do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MILES S. SCRIBNER.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 822) granting a pension to Miles S. Scribner.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Miles S. Scribner, late a private in Company H of the Second Maine Regiment of Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. GALLINGER) was read, as follows:

Soldier enlisted for three years May 28, 1861, and was discharged September 19, 1861, the surgeon giving as a reason for his discharge that he was superannuated and had hip disease. On August 23, 1881, he filed a declaration for a pension, alleging that he received an injury to the right hip at Arlington Heights, Virginia, on or about the 20th of August, 1861, while in battalion drill, marching double-quick, by stepping on a piece of wet, slippery bark, and falling in such a manner as to seriously wrench and injure the right hip.

The claim was rejected on the ground that soldier had failed, after being afforded a special examination, to prove incurrence of the alleged injury in service, the decision of the medical officers being evidently influenced by the admission of the soldier, when asked if he had ever been injured prior to enlistment, that he did fall and injure his back eight years before entering the Army, claiming, however, that that injury was a trifling affair, and no proof was produced to make it appear otherwise. The presumption is formed that this injury was taken into account in deciding the case, for the reason that the record of rejection closes with the words, "he admits injury to back eight years prior to enlistment."

Soundness at enlistment was proved by overwhelming medical and lay testimony, and Dr. S. B. Morrison, late surgeon of the Second Maine Volunteers, testified that the hospital records showed that claimant was under treatment for inflammation of the tissues around the hip-joint in August, 1861, and for rheumatism in September, 1861.

Two comrades, John H. Sargent and Warren Day, testify that they were with soldier when he received the injury, and other comrades testify that it was a matter of general repute in the company that he had been injured as alleged. The reputation of the comrades who testified to personal knowledge was found to be good by the special examiner.

It is proper to say that there are some minor discrepancies between the statement of claimant and certain other members of his company, but when it is considered that he did not apply for pension until twenty years after the alleged injury this is not to be wondered at. When asked by the special examiner why he did not apply for pension sooner he promptly replied:

"Because I hated to do it. I had some personal pride, and didn't want to be a Government pauper."

The case was submitted to Special Examiner C. W. Kirkpatrick in September, 1884, who made an exhaustive investigation of the matter, calling many witnesses. He reported to the Department that he was satisfied claimant was sound prior to enlistment; that he in some way became lame while in service, and that he had been continuously lame ever since. He recommended that the claim be further investigated at Danforth, Me.

This further investigation was conducted by Special Examiner Z. R. Warner, and after hearing testimony he reported that "it is my opinion that the claim for injury to hip is made out." As a result of these two investigations Special Examiner Kirkpatrick made report to the Department as follows:

"I think the case for injury to hip has been made out. I recommend admission for injury to hip."

Notwithstanding this recommendation of the special examiner the claim was rejected, evidently largely from the fact that claimant himself admitted receiving an injury eight years before enlistment, but which injury was trifling and of little consequence.

Soldier is now seventy-six years of age. He says in a letter:

"I have exhausted my means in an effort to obtain what I believe to be my just dues from the Government. Had I been arraigned for murder, and as good proof of my guilt been furnished as I have furnished to substantiate my claim for a pension, I should have been consigned to prison for life or to the gallows."

He had three sons in the Army. One died in service and is buried at Arlington Heights, one died from wounds after reaching home, and the other had his health permanently destroyed by being confined in a rebel prison for ten months and a half.

The case certainly is one that deserves consideration at the hands of Congress, and your committee report the bill back favorably with a recommendation that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MORRIS T. MANTOR.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4663) granting a pension to Morris T. Mantor.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Morris T. Mantor, late a private in Company F of the Eighteenth Regiment Wisconsin Infantry Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. SAWYER) was read, as follows:

Mantor enlisted in Company F, Eighteenth Wisconsin Volunteers, February 25, 1864, and was discharged July 18, 1865. On July 3, 1880, he filed an application for pension, alleging that he contracted dropsy in the service, and had his eyes injured by the explosion of ammunition at Columbia, S. C., about February 18, 1865. The application was rejected by the Pension Office on the ground that disease of eyes existed prior to enlistment, and that the medical examination failed to show a ratable degree of disability from dropsy.

The rejection of the claim for diseased eyes was based upon a special examination of the case, during which it appeared that claimant some years prior to the war suffered for a short time from what was known in his region as "prairie sore eyes," a disease then very common on the prairies of the West. It is claimed, however, on the part of the soldier, and in this he is corroborated by a number of neighbors, that he had entirely recovered therefrom a long time before enlistment.

Capt. Joseph W. Roberts, of claimant's company, testifies that he refused a number of recruits, but was glad to get him because of his fine physical condition; saw him after the explosion at Columbia, when his eyes were sore and inflamed, and he complained of his side. Affiant heard the explosion; it shook the building he was in; many were wounded and some killed; noticed that claimant was bloated. Inasmuch as claimant was on detached service at the time of the injury, eye-witnesses thereto can not be procured.

Jacob Gore, a respectable citizen of Rock Elm, Wis., testifies that he was living in the same house with claimant prior to August, 1862; had been living there for two years, and knows that during that period he was a very strong, efficient man, free from any ailment, weakness, or complaint, dropsical or otherwise, with a capacity for manual labor very much above the average man; saw him next in November, 1864, on Sherman's march to Savannah, and also in December, 1864, when he appeared all right, well and sound in his eyes; saw him again in March, 1865, when his eyebrows were scorched and the eyes inflamed and sore, which he then attributed to the explosion at Columbia, S. C.; saw him next in July, 1865; his eyes were then sore and inflamed and his general health was poor.

The records of the War Department show treatment for malarial troubles prior to the alleged injury, and for debility and dropsy from venal disease subsequent thereto.

It is clearly shown by the evidence filed in the case and the testimony obtained by the special examiner that claimant at date of his return home was seriously afflicted with sore eyes and dropsy, and has been a sufferer therefrom ever since.

The last medical examination, March 21, 1883, finds one-half total for disease of eyes, but no physical signs of dropsy or disease of stomach.

The Senate passed a bill for the relief of this claimant during the last Congress, but it was not reached for action by the House.

While it is true that some adverse testimony was given before the special examiner, yet your committee are clearly of opinion that the weight of the evidence is strongly in favor of the claimant, and that he should receive a pension for disease of eyes and such other disabilities as may by another medical examination be found to be reasonably chargeable to the dropsical condition shown by the record to have existed during the latter part of his service.

The committee therefore return the accompanying bill and ask that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

JULIA A. GRIFFEN.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 2694) granting a pension to Julia A. Griffen.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Julia A. Griffen, and pay her a pension of $25 per month, for services as nurse in the late war of the rebellion.

The report (by Mr. SAWYER) was read, as follows:

Julia A. Griffen asks to be placed on the pension-roll for services rendered by her as hospital nurse during our late civil war. The evidence shows that Miss Griffen is a maiden lady of fifty-five years of age; she has no relatives living except one sister; she is now poor, with no property, and dependent upon others for her support. Before she entered upon her services as nurse she was a strong and healthy woman.

She received no pay while serving as nurse, and no compensation therefor since. In March, 1862, she reported as nurse to Miss Dorothy Dix at Washington, and was assigned to duty at the Union Hotel hospital at Winchester, Va., where she remained until she was transferred to the Academy hospital in the same place, where she remained until transferred to the hospital at Strasburgh, Va. She remained here until the Union army retreated to Winchester, Va., and she was sent back to the Academy hospital at that place. On the defeat of the Union forces at that place she was taken prisoner and released on her parole, but she remained in the hospital at this place, taking care of wounded and sick soldiers of both armies. Here she remained until the Union army retook possession of Winchester, and until the hospitals were removed to Harper's Ferry, when she was sent to Bolivar Heights hospital at that place. Here she remained until ordered to report to Miss Dix at the city of Washington, which she did.

In May, 1864, she was ordered by Surgeon-General Barnes to report to the surgeon in charge in the front, and she went to Belle Plain, Va. After the battle of the Wilderness she was detailed to duty upon the hospital-boats conveying the wounded from that point to Washington. After the battle of Cold Harbor she was detailed to like duty upon the hospital-boats.

That then she was detailed to duty upon the hospital-boats and in hospital-tents at City Point, Va., where she was engaged in caring for the wounded soldiers brought from Petersburgh.

While here she was exposed to rain and storms, frequently being all day exposed to rain, and often sleeping on the wet ground at night. Here, from that exposure, she contracted a severe cold, and she became so sick that she was compelled to leave the service and return home; that the result of this sickness was to produce asthma, from which she has suffered ever since.

The medical evidence shows clearly that she has suffered from that disease ever since she left the Army; that the disease is incurable, and totally disqualifies her from doing anything for her own support.

The high personal character of this woman is fully shown, and your committee believe that this worthy woman, who spent so much time without any compensation therefor in caring for our sick and wounded soldiers, now she is rendered helpless by disease contracted while in the service and dependent upon others for her support, is fairly entitled to a pension; and would therefore recommend the passage of the bill, with an amendment striking out the word "twenty-five," in sixth line thereof, and inserting therein the word "eighteen."

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MARGARET E. GRAVES.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6984) granting a pension to Margaret E. Graves.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Margaret E. Graves, the dependent mother of Pliny A. Graves, late of Company F, Fifth New York Cavalry.

The report (by Mr. SAWYER) was read, as follows:

Margaret E. Graves was the mother of Pliny A. Graves, who enlisted as a member of Company F, Fifth Regiment New York Cavalry, September 7, 1861, for three years. He was "killed in action" at Ely's Ford, January 22, 1864. He died, leaving no wife or descendant, but leaving the said Margaret, his mother, and Simeon Graves, his father.

Simeon Graves died in July, 1868.

The soldier before his enlistment lived at home, giving his parents the benefit of his labor and earnings. While in the service he sent them at different times quite a large sum of money, and that he was a kind and affectionate son. The husband during his life-time, although subject to attacks of sickness, did in fact support his wife. Mrs. Graves, in 1869, filed her claim for pension, and the same was rejected solely on the ground she failed to show that at the time of her son's death, in 1864, she was dependent upon him for support. Upon the settlement of her late husband's estate there was nothing left for the widow for her support.

It clearly appears that this widowed mother is now 64 years of age, that she has no property, real or personal, is dependent upon her own labor for her support, and is not in good health.

Your committee believe that this poor widow and mother, whose son, kind and affectionate to his mother, was killed in battle, and now in her old age and poor health is dependent upon her own labor for her support, is fairly entitled to the relief proposed by this bill, and would therefore recommend the passage of this bill.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

JOHN ROWE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 2518) granting an increase of pension to John Rowe.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Rowe, late a private in Company G, Eleventh Wisconsin Volunteers, at the rate of $12 per month.

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) was read, as follows:

The claimant, John Rowe, of Company G, Eleventh Wisconsin Volunteers, made application for an increase of pension June 16, 1884, on account of kidney complaint, incurred while in the line of duty, from being thrown from an ambulance while on the march from Pocahontas to Batesville, Ark.

The claim has been rejected on the ground there is no record as to the kidney disease having its origin in the service or of medical treatment therefor prior to his discharge. The record shows that in an old brief the claimant states he was not treated for kidney disease in the service, but the claimant furnishes the testimony of William L. Spencer, January 26, 1885, who states he has known the claimant thirty-two years and intimately since discharge, and knows that he has been suffering from kidney disease ever since he left the Army. This testimony is corroborated by other affiants.

Lieut. Nathan Downs, of Company G, Eleventh Wisconsin Volunteers, testifies that the claimant was sick while in the line of duty in May, 1862, at or near Pocahontas, and was unable to march, and while on the march from Pocahontas to Batesville, Ark., while riding in an ambulance, it was overturned, and he understood that the claimant had his back injured, and was suffering from said injury to the best of his knowledge. Dr. L. W. Babcock testifies, October 14, 1884, of the existence of kidney disease at that time; and Dr. H. J. Harding testifies that he treated the claimant from about July, 1879, to July, 1882, for chronic difficulty of liver and kidneys.

C. A. Crowell, examining surgeon, who made an examination January 3, 1883, states, in regard to kidney disease:

"I find by examination of urine that the quantity is large, the same is very clear, that it contains a small quantity of sugar, and would recommend one-half for disability for kidney disease."

The same surgeon made a special examination November 20, 1884, and states:

"He is in my opinion entitled to a three-fourths total disability for chronic diarrhea, and for that caused by disease of the kidneys a total disability."

Testimony has been filed to show that he was a sound man at the time of enlistment, and sufficient evidence has been submitted to show that the claimant has suffered from kidney disease since discharge and is disabled thereby, and that he is poor and unable to support his family.

In view of these facts the committee report the bill favorably, and recommend the passage of the accompanying substitute.

The committee recommend the amendment of the bill so as to read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to increase the pension of John Rowe, late a lieutenant in Company G, Eleventh Wisconsin Volunteers, so as to include disability from kidney disease.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MAXWELL CARROLL.

The next business on the Private Calender was the bill (H. R. 3603) to increase the pension of Maxwell Carroll.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to increase the pension of Maxwell Carroll from $24 per month to the amount allowed by law for the loss of a limb above the knee.

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) was read, as follows.

Claimant was first lieutenant of Company B, First Regiment of Virginia Cavalry. At the battle of Hanover, June 30, 1862, he received a severe gunshot wound of right hip, for which he is now receiving a pension of $24 per month. This bill proposes to increase the pension to the amount that he would be entitled to receive had the limb been amputated above the knee. The reports of the examining boards show that the bullet is still lodged in the hip; that the ball must have fractured the neck of the femur, the head and neck of which are becoming absorbed, causing a shortening of the limb of about 4 inches. The hip is also much shrunken, being 3 inches less in circumference than the other. There is also partial anchylosis of the hip joint, destroying the power of motion to a great extent. The examining board at Kansas City, Mo., report September 27, 1886, that "he is totally disabled from performing any manual labor, and requires the aid of another person in dressing."

Your committee are justly satisfied that the disability is equal to the loss of a limb at the knee, and therefore recommend the passage of the bill with an amendment inserting after the word "Carroll," in line 4, the words "late first lieutenant of Company B, First Virginia Cavalry."

Mr. TAULBEE. I would like to inquire whether or not the pension drawn by this soldier was rated as an equivalent prior to the passage of the act by the Forty-ninth Congress increasing the rate of pension for the loss of a limb?

Mr. MORRILL. As I recollect the case, it was equivalent to the loss of a foot, which was $24; but that act did not contain a clause providing for an equivalent, and so he could not be increased in the office.

Mr. TAULBEE. I understand the Forty-ninth Congress failed to make an equivalent provision for equivalent disability for the loss of a limb; but I fail to see from the reading of the report any good reason why the pension in this case should be increased above the rate now authorized for the loss of a foot, since the diagnosis had by the Pension Office seems to place this soldier in that way. The medical board seems to find that this soldier is disabled in a degree to correspond with the loss of a foot, and the bill proposes to give a pension at a rate corresponding with the loss of a limb above the knee.

Mr. MORRILL. I would suggest to the gentleman from Kentucky that the examining board in their last report have stated this man was totally disqualified from the performance of any manual labor and requires the assistance of another person even in dressing. The limb is 4 inches shorter than the other and is shrunken at the hip so that it is 3 inches less in circumference. The head and neck of the femur are becoming absorbed so that the limb is almost useless.

Mr. TAULBEE. I can not understand how it is that the board of examiners of the Pension Office should report that this claimant is disabled to an extent to correspond with the loss of a leg above the knee and yet only rate him in accordance with the acts passed prior to the Forty-ninth Congress for a disability equivalent to the loss of a foot.

I believe, so far as I am concerned, that there ought to be an amendment to the act of the Forty-ninth Congress providing for corresponding disabilities; but inasmuch as the act does not do that, of course we are called on to rate these pensioners at equivalent rates.

Mr. CHIPMAN. Does the gentleman from Kentucky object to this report?

Mr. TAULBEE. I do not object to the report. I simply want to know why it is this recommendation is made in the Pension Office, the disability being treated as equivalent to the loss of a foot, while the committee ask us to give a pension corresponding to the loss of a leg above the knee?

Mr. CHIPMAN. I understood the gentleman to say he was in favor of an amendment to the general act. Does he object to this specific report?

Mr. TAULBEE. I do not object to the report. But as I have said, I can not understand why it is a recommendation is made for a pension to correspond with a pension for the loss of the leg above the knee when the findings of the examining board on which this report is based rate this man according to the loss of a foot.

Mr. CHIPMAN. The report is based on the ground of total disability. I hope the gentleman from Kentucky notices that. That is the ground on which the recommendation is based—a total disability of his limb.

Mr. TAULBEE. So far as the total disability is concerned, I think it is well known to each member who has paid any attention to the pension laws that there are different kinds of total disability. One kind entitles the pensioner to a pension of $10 a month, while another entitles him to $72 a month. I would like to have the gentleman who has the bill in charge say to which kind this bill belongs.

Mr. CHIPMAN. I have not the bill in charge, but am a member of the Committee on Invalid Pensions; and it appeared to me the gentleman from Kentucky had not listened to the reading of the report. He asked upon what ground the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MORRILL] had placed this claim for a pension. It struck me the report was full and ample. If the gentleman objects to the inefficiency of the pension laws in some respects, I will go hand in hand with him to amend them. If he objects simply because the laws are inefficient and takes the ground that where they are inefficent this body shall not grant relief, then I will not go hand in hand with him. I do not understand, and I wish the gentleman to understand me distinctly, that he is hostile to legislation of this kind.

Mr. TAULBEE. If the gentleman will pardon me, what am I to understand his last statement to be?

Mr. CHIPMAN. I do not understand the gentleman is hostile to legislation of this kind. I have understood that generally he was friendly to this kind of legislation, and that generally the criticisms he made were made in a fair spirit and in behalf of exact justice in regard to these claims. I wish the gentleman to understand me distinctly on that point.

But if the objection is simply this, that the Pension Office found a less degree of disability than actually existed, then, with all respect to the honorable gentleman, I must contend that this body is like a court for the correction of errors. The pension laws, of course, are general, and I have no doubt that in the enforcement and administration of those laws the present Commissioner of Pensions and the force under him are entirely just and entirely within the law.

What I desire to know is simply this, whether the objection of the gentleman from Kentucky is specifically to this case or whether his objection is to the pension laws generally. He spoke of an amendment to those laws. If the objection is to the pension laws, we cannot amend them here to-night. If the pension laws generally are so broad that they omit a meritorious case, then undoubtedly it is our duty here to-night to do what a court of equity according to Blackstone would do, and make the necessary correction where the law, by reason of its universality, is inefficient. This seems to me one of those cases where the general law may be deficient. And, in fact, every case brought to the Committee on Invalid Pensions which has been passed upon by the Pension Office presents the very aspect of this case; presents a case in which the law or the administration of the law is deficient. Now, does the gentleman object to this particular case or does he object to the law generally?

Mr. TAULBEE. I do not believe that the pension laws are sufficient to answer the emergencies on the subject of rating soldiers who have lost limbs. I had the honor to join in the report on the bill providing for an increase of rating for the loss of a limb, which bill failed to provide for an equivalent disability. I would be in favor of increasing the pensions of those soldiers who have disabilities of limbs to correspond with the loss, and in favor of giving them a rating commensurate with that provided in the general law for loss of limbs. As the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CHIPMAN] has well said, we could not amend that general law to-night, because we can not pass any general legislation at these sessions; but my criticism on this bill is that the committee bases its report for a fixed rating on the findings of the medical examining board of the Pension Office. According to this report it places this soldier as having a disability equivalent to the loss of a foot, while this bill proposes to fix a specific rating for a disability to correspond with the loss of a leg above the knee——

Mr. FULLER. I think the gentleman is mistaken as to the report.

Mr. TAULBEE. If I am I shall be glad to be corrected.

Mr. FULLER. The examining board report that he is totally disabled from performing any manual labor, and requires the aid of another person to dress him; but it is the committee who say that they are satisfied that the disability is equal to the loss of a limb at the knee.

Mr. TAULBEE. I do not think the gentleman has convinced the House that I am mistaken in what I said, because of the simple fact that the Pension Office has once by its finding rated this claimant at $24 per month, basing that upon the disability which the board finds him to be laboring under corresponding with the loss of a foot, if I understood the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MORRILL] correctly.

Mr. MORRILL. That was the rating.

Mr. FULLER. But this is a later rating.

Mr. TAULBEE. Then, upon the report of a subsequent examining board the remedy lies in the Pension Office, as everybody knows, and it is not the prerogative of Congress to rate pensions when a fair and equitable rating can be had in the Pension Office.

Mr. PAYSON. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. TAULBEE. Yes, sir.

Mr. PAYSON. We have listened here with a good deal of pleasure to the observations of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE], but we are utterly at a loss to know whether he thinks this bill gives this soldier too much or too little money. We will all cheerfully vote for an amendment giving him something more.

Mr. TAULBEE. According to the disability as found in the Pension Office, I think this soldier should now have a pension to correspond with that of other soldiers who are laboring under the same degree of disability. If the Pension Office find that his disability is equivalent to the loss of a foot, then let us give him a pension according to the rating of that disability.

Mr. PAYSON. But if the gentleman will permit me to make one observation, the report in this case shows that the limb is withered, and——

Mr. TAULBEE (interposing). I understand that, but the gentleman will remember that the Pension Office has a system by which it arrives at these amounts.

Now, in addition to that, if the Pension Office, or the board of examiners, or, for that matter, any other reliable board of physicians, find on proper examination that this claimant is laboring under a disability equivalent to the loss of a limb above the knee, then I say I am willing to give him a pension according to the rating fixed for those who have lost a limb above the knee.

Mr. PAYSON. Offer that amendment and we will all vote for it.

Mr. FUNSTON. I ask the gentleman from Kentucky to yield to me for a few minutes.

Mr. TAULBEE. Yes, sir; I will yield you whatever time you want.

Mr. FUNSTON. Mr. Chairman, this is one of the bills that I introduced, and therefore I feel a special interest in it, and I am very thankful to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] for the opportunity he gives me. I do not understand that the gentleman especially objects to this report or to the recommendation of the committee. I understand, though, that he thinks the law is defective. That is probably true. The law is defective, but we can not amend it to-night. But the difference in opinion as to the degree of disability, as I understand, between the medical board and the committee is the ground upon which the recommendation of the committee is made.

Now, the medical board report that this gentleman's right limb is 4 inches shorter than it should be, that the hip joint is shrunken 3 inches, and that the ball still remains in the joint. The medical board rate that as equivalent to the loss of a foot. As I understand it, the committee say that if the limb is 4 inches too short, and the hip joint shrunken 3 inches, and the ball still in the joint, and the man totally disabled from supporting himself, that is a greater disability than the loss of a foot, and amounts to the disability of the loss of a leg at the knee. They base their finding on the facts. The medical board admit the facts, and the committee say that if those facts be established then the man is not receiving sufficient pension. Now, Mr. Chairman, I desire still further to say that I know this gentleman, and I know that the statements made by the committee and by the medical board are correct. I know that this claimant's right limb is much shorter than the other, that the muscles are withered, and that he walks not even with the sprightliness that a man with a cork leg or any sort of artificial limb would have. I know further that he is absolutely disabled from supporting himself, at least by manual labor. I call for a vote.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

CHLOE QUIGGLE.

The next pension business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4550) granting a pension to Chloe Quiggle, widow of Philip Quiggle.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Chloe Quiggle, widow of Philip Quiggle, late a private in Company I, First Minnesota Heavy Artillery.

SEC. 2. That this act shall be in force from and after its approval by the President.

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4550) granting a pension to Chloe Quiggle, widow of Philip Quiggle, beg leave to report:

This claimant is the widow of Philip Quiggle, a private in Company I, First Minnesota Heavy Artillery, who enlisted February 11, 1865, and was discharged September 28, 1865. At the time of his death his application for pension was pending, in which he alleged that he contracted rheumatism, chronic diarrhea, and kidney disease. The evidence submitted, including that of the captain and the lieutenant of the company, shows that the soldier at the time of enlistment, though above the age required by law, was a strong, robust man; that claimant received a sunstroke on the march from Chattanooga to Nashville; that at time of discharge and ever since the soldier suffered from kidney disease until his death, and that the cause of his death was from that disease.

The widow's claim was rejected because it was not shown satisfactorily that the disease originated in the service. It seems to be clearly shown that at time of enlistment the soldier was a vigorous, robust man; that he came out of the service a wreck; that from his discharge till the date of his death he was a constant sufferer from disease of the kidneys, and that his death was caused by that disease. The widow is seventy-six years of age, feeble in body and mind, and in destitute circumstances.

Your committee recommend the passage of the bill.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. PAYSON. I ask unanimous consent to take up House bill 2078 for present consideration. I know that it is out of order, but the House has had some twenty-odd bills——

Mr. FINLEY. I shall be compelled to object, Mr. Chairman. There are three bills on the Calendar in which the chairman of my committee is interested, and, as he is absent, I desire to have them reached and disposed of.

A MEMBER. After three more we can have unanimous consent.

Mr. PETERS. I shall have to object, Mr. Chairman.

JOAB M. HALEY.

The next pension business on the Private Calendar was a bill (H. R. 2259) to grant a pension to Joab M. Haley.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized, and hereby directed, to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Joab M. Haley, late a first lieutenant of Company E, Tenth Iowa Regiment of Infantry Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2259) granting a pension to Joab M. Haley, have had the same under consideration, and now submit the following report:

In this case the papers in the office of the Commissioner of Pensions disclose the following facts.

Joab M. Haley enlisted in Company E, Tenth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, September, 1861, and was sworn in on the 6th of that month, and honorably discharged in August, 1865. His application alleges that he was injured by the concussion of a cannon-ball in passing very close to his head, which knocked him down and caused him to lose hearing in the right ear, and resulting in partial paralysis of left shoulder, neck, etc. The chief examiner of the west division, in submitting the case says:

"The claim for deafness is unquestionably primafacially established, but there is no testimony on file showing existence of paralysis or affection of neck at any time during service or since discharge.

"The captain of his company and three of his comrades testify that at the battle of Corinth, Miss., October 3, 1862, a shell passed so near him that it knocked him down, blackened his face, and made him deaf in his right ear; that he was free from deafness at enlistment, but has been deaf in the right ear ever since that battle.

"Dr. G. B. Richards testifies that he treated claimant for deafness of right ear and injury to lower right jaw from his discharge until 1872.

"A number of witnesses testify that claimant's health has been bad since his discharge; that he has continuously complained of injury to right shoulder, neck, and arm, and is almost totally unable to perform manual labor.

"A special examination was ordered by the Pension Department, at which a number of his neighbors testified that they had known him many years, that the soldier was a man of good character, but they did not know that he was deaf in the right ear."

The committee are of the opinion that the preponderance of testimony is in favor of the applicant, and that deafness resulted as alleged from the concussion of a cannon-ball at the battle of Corinth, Miss., October 3, 1862, and that the relief asked for in the bill ought to be granted.

The committee therefore submit a favorable report, and recommend the passage of the bill.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MRS. EMILY M. WYMAN.

The next pension business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4672) granting an increase of pension to Mrs. Emily M. Wyman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Emily M. Wyman, widow of the late Rear-Admiral Robert H. Wyman, United States Navy, and pay her a pension, from and after the passage of this act, at the rate of $50 per month, in lieu of her present pension.

The report (by Mr. BLISS) was read in part.

On motion of Mr. MORRILL, its further reading was dispensed with, and it was ordered to be printed in the RECORD.

The report is as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4672) granting a pension to Mrs. Emily M. Wyman, have examined the same, and report as follows:

The claimant is the widow of Robert Harris Wyman, late rear-admiral, United States Navy. She was pensioned April 17, 1883, at $30 per month, from February 1, 1883, the date of filing her application. A bill has been introduced to increase this amount to $50 per month, in compliance with the following letter from the Secretary of the Navy, addressed to the chairman of this committee:

"NAVY DEPARTMENT, December 20, 1883.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a draught of a bill granting an increase of pension to Mrs. Emily M. Wyman, widow of the late Rear-Admiral Robert H. Wyman, United States Navy. In view of the long and honorable service of the late Rear-Admiral Wyman in the Navy, and of the statements to the Department by his widow in regard to her necessitous circumstances, I have to request that the proposed bill may be introduced for her relief.

"Very respectfully,

"W. E. CHANDLER,
"Secretary of the Navy."

The following statement or abstract of the service of Rear-Admiral Wyman has been furnished by the Secretary of the Navy:

"Robert H. Wyman was appointed a midshipman in the Navy March 11, 1837, and ordered the same month to the Independence, where he remained until June, 1840, when he was detached and granted three months' leave; September, 1840, ordered to the West India squadron, and served on board the Levant, Concord, and Potomac until August, 1842, when he was detached from the last-named vessel and granted three months' leave; August, 1842, ordered to the Naval School at Philadelphia; May, 1843, ordered to examination for promotion.

